Senator Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware, had a long private interview with General Hancock a few days ago. During a subsequent conversation with a reporter, Senator Bayard said: "The prospects of the democracy are very promising. One of the remarkable features of the canvass is the acceptance of General Hancock's nomination. It is acceptance positive and complete. The action of the Cincinnati convention has restored harmony in the party, and invigorated it for the approaching contest. The entire organization is pervaded by a feeling of the utmost confidence in the result of the election. The party enters the canvass under the most favorable auspices. Our candidate for president combines the qualities necessary to success at the polls and in the administration. General Hancock is a man of singleness of purpose, of firmness and determination in the discharge of his duty, and of exalted and responsible character. His hands are perfectly clean, he has never been compromised by political or official scandal. His election is as certain as anything can be in politics. General Hancock has caught the tide of popular favor at a most favorable time. There is a universal demand among the people for something better and higher in the administration of their government. They are tired of the bickerings and heart-burnings of the twenty years past, and they desire an era of good feeling and brotherly fellowship, the natural tendency of the American citizen toward friendship with his fellow-citizen. He is adverse to doing an injury or entertaining ill towards any one, and especially his countrymen. This feeling is daily becoming more widespread among both republicans and democrats. They want a change and the change is imminent."

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Life of General Winfield Scott Hancock.

We are glad to know that the well known publishing house of Hubbard Bros., of Chicago, have in preparation and will soon issue the "Life of Gen. Hancock," written by his old friend, Hon. John W. Forney. The career of the brilliant soldier who is soon to be transferred to the White House furnishes material for a volume which, in deep and thrilling interest, has rarely been equaled in the annals of American biography. It is fortunate that its preparation has been assigned to Col. Forney, who for twenty-five years has been as one of the ablest editors and most brilliant writers in America. His known ability, and his personal intimacy with Gen. Hancock, are a sufficient guaranty that the book will be full, complete and authoritative—a volume of permanent value, and in this respect widely different from ordinary campaign literature. It will be sold only by subscription, and must meet with a very large sale.

Importing Negro Voters into Indiana.

A Courier-Journal special from Fairfield, Ky., says: On Thursday morning last another party of five negroes, headed by Dave Constantine, of this place, and the other four from off Cox's Creek, left for Mitchell, Ind., and of course, will vote for Porter and Garfield if possible. Some of the other party which left here a few weeks ago have written back persuading other negroes to come out there; that they can get plenty of employment at $18 per month. It has set the darkies all crazy, and another party will follow in a few days. Negro labor is getting scarce in this part of Nelson county.

A Sample Letter.

Here is a sample of the letters received daily by General Hancock and the democratic national committee:

CASHTON, MONROE COUNTY, WIS.,
July 20, 1880.

General W. S. Hancock:

DEAR SIR—As a Grant republican I can't vote for the Chicago nominees. I have always been an uncompromising republican, but now I will go back to my old nest, because I know you are to be trusted. There is a great field for labor here. I think that almost every Grant man will take you as second choice. We won't vote for Garfield. We never saw a democratic printed ticket at our polls, but I will pledge you a majority for Hancock if you will give me a chance to go for them.

HORACE BAKER.

More Dignified.

[Pittsburg Post.]

It would be more in accordance with the fitness of things if Secretary Schurz should decide to charge the republican committee $329 for each political speech, and call the payment "a loan." So much more dignified than to be a mere hireling.

A Hint to General Grant.

Says the London Truth: I hear that General Grant contemplates another trip to Europe. He met with great attention throughout his last tour, but the general may remember the lamentable experience of Mrs. Beecher-Stowe when she tried to be a "lion" a second time. There are some admirable remarks on the subject in Lord Macaulay's diary, which the general might study with advantage if he desires to avoid disappointment.

A Cure for Hydrophobia.

(Albany (N. Y.) Argus).

A lady handed a reporter of the Argus the other day a slip of paper, asking him if he would not publish it for the benefit of the public. It was found to be a simple but effective cure for that dog-day terror, hydropobia, and it is herewith given the many thousands of readers of the Sunday Argus, every one of whom should preserve it to act upon in case of an emergency that is likely to happen to any one. The cure, which great experience has proved to be infallible, is nothing more than the root of a common weed known as elecampane, steeped in milk. Elecampane grows in great profusion along many country roads in this and Rensselaer counties. It has powerful medical qualities, and milk is well known to be a specific for many poisons. The manner of administering the antidote will be learned by a perusal of the following history of this simple but wonderful cure:

"In Chester county, Pa., lived a German named Joseph Emery, who used to be sent for, far and wide, when any one had been bitten by a rabid animal. He went to his patient, carrying something understood to be a root, which he himself dug in the woods. He milked a pint of milk fresh form the cow, put the root into it, boiled it, gave it to the patient, fasting; made him fast after taking it; gave a second and third dose on alternate days, and never failed in effecting a cure. In some way his secret transpired, and the root was known to be elecampane.

A ten-year old, whose legs were recently cut off by a train of cars at Dubuque, Iowa, was too plucky to make any fuss over the incident. When the little fellow was taken home his legs hung limp, but he did not complain. Not a tear stood in his eyes, but the tender look he gave to those who stood by his side told plainly that he was suffering great agony. After the doctor had dressed his wounds he called his parents, sisters and brothers to his bedside, kissed one and all farewell, and left a tear upon their cheeks. A second time he called his mother to his side, placed his little arms around her neck, and said: "Mother, I am going to die in a few minutes. Please forgive me for not minding you?" With this the little fellow fell back, and as the mother said, "Yes, my angel," and took another look at his face, she found him dead, and beyond all pain and suffering.

A correspondent wants to know if we can recall the rest of that beautiful poem commencing—

> A farmer sat in his easy chair
> Smoking his pipe of clay,
> While his hale old wife with busy care
> Was clearing the dinner away;
> A sweet little girl with fine blue eyes
> On her grandfather's knee was catching flies.

It gives us great pleasure to say we cannot. In the first place no man ever found an easy chair on a farm. Secondly, no farmer ever left any dinner for his hale old wife to clear away. Thirdly, there never was a child that could catch flies—we used to try it. When you come to analyze one of these sentimental poems it never fails to turn out a mass of prettily worded lies.

A singular coincidence: There are twenty letters each in James Abraham Garfield, in Chester Absalom Arthur, and Winfield Scott Hancock, and the next president, whoever he may be, will be the twentieth of the United States.

OUR state elections will occur as follows this year: Arkansas, first Monday in September; Alabama, first Monday in August; Vermont, first Tuesday in September; Colorado, first Tuesday in October; Maine, second Monday in September, Indiana, West Virginia and Ohio, second Tuesday in October; Connecticut, California, Delaware, Florida, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, November 2d; Georgia, November 3d.

GEN. HANCOCK'S letter to General Sherman is not the kind of campaign literature the republican organ-grinders are looking for.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE republicans are making a desperate effort to carry Maine, but the leading spirits of the democratic party in that state are sanguine of success next September.

THE immaculate Henry Ward Beecher has declared for Garfield. This is perfectly proper. Mr. Beecher stands before the American people as a purjurer himself.

HON. S. S. COX, in a recent speech, said: "It is said that congressmen who were on Oakes Ames' memorandum had good intentions. Hell is paved with them—and De Golyer had the contract.

THE New York Tribune and many other papers, are persistent in the charge that Judge Black wrote Hancock's order No. 40. Judge Black, who is pretty good authority as to the accuracy of this statement, in a letter from Paris, dated July 30, says: "I could not have written Hancock's No. 40—not because I pretend to be dumb or altogether unskilled in the use of English words, but because if I had undertaken to write it the chances are ninty-nine in a hundred that my argumentation would have marred its majestic simplicity and greatly diminished its power. When a public man, especially a military man, meets a grave responsibility, saying no more nor less than just the thing he ought, but saying that with unequivocal clearness, you may be sure he is the interpreter of his own thoughts."

GEN. JOHN MCDONALD, who languished 17 months in jail for his complicity in the great whiskey-ring frauds, will shortly issue a book, giving a complete exposition of the whole affair. He says he refused to turn states evidence on the trial of the conspirators only upon the definite promise that Grant would at once pardon him; he "demanded his pardon under threats of exposure if it were not immediately granted, and was released at once." He gives as a reason for exposing this republican conspiracy against the revenue, that he wishes to prevent Grant from ever again disturbing the politics of the country. Gen. McDonald promises in this book to supply the missing links in the chain of evidence of James A. Garfield's implication in the De Golyer pavement contract. This book will prove mighty interesting reading for the American people just at this time.

GENERAL HANCOCK wrote to a friend in 1868, as follows: "I never aspired to the presidency on account of myself. I never sought its doubtful honors and certain labors and responsibilities merely for the position. My own wish was to promote, if I could, the good of the country, and to rebuke the spirit of revolution which had invaded every sacred precinct of liberty. When, therefore, you pronounced the statements in question false, you did exactly right. Principles, and not men, is the motto for the rugged crisis in which we are now struggling. Had I been made the presidential nominance, I should have considered it a tribute not to me, but to the principles which I had proclaimed and practiced. But shall I cease to revere those principles because, by mutual political friends, another has been appointed to put them into execution? Never! Never!

THE democrats never had brighter prospects of victory than now. Every mail brings the news that republicans of all conditions and ranks, from every state in the Union are flocking to the support of Hancock. Among the recent accession, are Judge Long, of St. Louis, a warm friend of Gen. Grant, Potter Palmer, of Chicago, Col. Hays, a wealthy coal operator of Pennsylvania, George Wilkes, a prominent journalist, Col. L. W. Bradley, of Hudson, New York, who distinguished himself during the war as a member of the gallant 64th regiment of New York, and many others of prominence. This deflection from their ranks is demoralizing to republicans, and is significant. They say that, as honest republicans, they cannot give support to Mr. Garfield. He stands before the American people convicted of perjury and fraud, by sworn testimony before a congressional committee. This is proven as conclusively as any fact could be proven, and is now a matter of record. He is a corrupt leader of a corrupt party. Whatever the republican party may have been in days past, it has outlived its usefulness, and is now a party without principles, save the loaves and fishes, and is now making its death struggle. The democratic party on the other hand, is gaining new strength and becoming more cemented every day, and with General Hancock as their leader, the democrats have reason to feel certain of victory.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c.

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

WM. ELLERY.
WALTHAM, MASS.

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,
Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains,
Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

On the thirty-third day of his fast, Dr. Tanner was reported as greatly improved, the apparent symptoms of weakening exhibited on the previous day having partially disappeared. He walked twenty-five laps around the inclosure in the hall—about two-thirds of a mile—in eighteen minutes. His gait was free and steady. A letter was received from Mary J. Fenton, of Milwaukee, Wis., offering the doctor "her hand and heart." The letter greatly amused him.

Dr. Tanner began the thirty-fifth day of his fast in a worse condition than he has exhibited at any time since the start. Nausea and vomiting were frequent, and the faster was so enfeebled that he was unable to dress himself. Pulse 78; temperature, 98½; respiration, 15.

There was a bull-fight in New York, the other day, under the management of Henry Bergh. There were several active steers and a good deal of red cloak and agility, but no gore. When Mr. Bergh grew tired of the thing he stopped it. The toredors were unarmed.

The beginning of the thirty-seventh day of Dr. Tanner's fast found his condition but little changed from the preceding half dozen days. He was still troubled with nausea and occasional spells of vomiting. He was naturally quite feeble, and during the day walked about occasionally, and affected not to feel his weakness. The pulse was recorded 74; temperature, 98.6°; respiration, 14; weight, 126¾ pounds. The doctor was examined by auscultation, and the heart and lungs pronounced to be in excellent condition.

The condition of Dr. Tanner at the beginning of the thirty-eighth day of his fast was about the same as on the preceding two or three days. His features were no more haggard or pinched, and he affected to be in good spirits and confident of success. His pulse was 78; temperature, 99 1-5; respiration, 15; dynamometric tests, 84 kilometers in the right hand and 80 in the left.

THE WEST.

Dispatches from Los Pinos Indian Agency report that "forty-eight chiefs and head men of the Uncompahgre Utes have signed the treaty. The success of the commission is assured beyond doubt. Ouray assured the commission that no trouble will be experienced in getting the White River and Southern Utes to sign, now that the Uncompahgres have agreed to the treaty."....The census of Arizona gives a population of 41,580, including 1,600 Chinese and 4,545 Indians, but excluding the Reservation and Pueblo Indians not taken in the census.

According to the dispatches from Fremont, Neb., there is scarcely any doubt that the old man and woman recently arrested there are members of the Bender family, on whose farm in Kansas the remains of Senator York and ten other bodies were discovered in 1873. The woman of the party says that she will confess all about the murders, and insists that, although she is not a Bender, the old man is, and that she knows everything concerning the murders. A resident of Fremont, who lived near the Benders, recognizes the old man. It appears from the woman's statement that the Benders fled from their place in 1873, when it became apparent that the relatives and friends of Senator York began to suspect them of having been instrumental in his taking-off. They have since lived among the Indians, and have encountered such great hardships that they determined on returning East, one of the objects being to obtain some money hid away on the Bender farm.

A railroad war in Peoria, between the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and Peoria and Jacksonville roads, over some elevator approaches, culminated in the arrest of over 200 men, who were tearing up the latter's track, after they had torn up about 600 feet of track, smashed up six box-cars and injured four men.

A fire at Red Bluff, Tehama county, Cal., destroyed $100,000 worth of property....An ordinance has been introduced into the Chicago City Council providing that all telegraph wires laid for the future within the city limits shall be placed underground.

Col. Grierson telegraphs that he struck Victoria's band of bad Indians on the 31st ult., and fought them four hours. He killed several Indians and lost one man. At last accounts this formidable band of savages was hemmed in between the Mexican and United States troops, and Col. Grierson was confident that they would soon have to surrender.

Dispatches from Los Pinos, Col., state that the Utes now appear to be satisfied with the Ouray treaty, and that the prospect is that all the Indians will be off the reservation by next spring.

A train on the Wabash road ran through an open switch at Clark Station, near Moberly, Mo., ditching the locomotive and mail and baggage cars. The fireman was killed and the engineer was dangerously scalded....Two female acquaintances of Mrs. Kelly, of Poplar Bluffs, Mo., entered her house during her husband's absence and revenged themselves of an old grudge by killing her. The murderesses, who were dressed in men's clothes, have been arrested.....Careful estimates of the Minnesota wheat yield place the total crop at 50,000,000 bushels. The quality of wheat is good.

THE SOUTH.

The population of Kentucky is estimated at 1,734,331, which is an increase of 413,321 over the population in 1870. The estimate is based on official returns from forty-two counties in the State.

By the falling of a tree near Stoneville, N. C., two men were fatally injured and a third person so seriously wounded that it is feared he will die. A fourth was slightly hurt.

Seven men arrested for murderously assaulting a colored family at Jonesboro, Ga., were removed from that place to Atlanta for safe-keeping. A large number of negroes gathered in the place, and, as they were excited and turbulent beyond measure, further violence was apprehended. The white people were greatly alarmed, and at their request the Governor of the State ordered a company of militia to Jonesboro. All is quiet again.

GENERAL.

The jury in the case of the steamer Seawanahaka, recently burned on Long Island sound, have returned a verdict exonerating the United States Steamboat Inspectors from all blame, as they find that the boat was provided with all appurtenances required by law. They severely censure the crew for their want of discipline and want of concert.

Edison is still experimenting with various materials for perfecting his electric light, and is confident of ultimate triumph. He keeps adding to the improvement of his electric railroad motor, by which he expects to attain a speed of 200 miles per hour....Mrs. Zelda Seguin, the well-known contralto, after ten months' widowhood, has married Mr. David Wallace, of Indianapolis....The Chicago Club continues to lead in the race for the base-ball championship.

Over $300,000 worth of timber has been destroyed by forest fires in New Brunswick....During the year ending June 30, 1880, more than 70,000 Canadians, who declared their intention of becoming permanent residents of the United States, crossed over from the Dominion at Sarnia.

POLITICAL.

An election was held in Alabama on the 2d of August for Governor and other State officers, members of the Legislature and county officers. The Republicans ran no candidates for State offices, but generally supported the nominees of the Greenback party. Dispatches from Montgomery report that the Democrats made a clean sweep, the candidates of that party on the State ticket being elected by majorities ranging from 40,000 to 50,000. The dispatches add that the election passed off quietly.

State elections will occur this year as follows:

Arkansas	First Monday in September.
Vermont	First Tuesday in September.
Maine	Second Monday in September.
Colorado	First Tuesday in October.
Indiana	Second Tuesday in October.
Ohio	" "
West Virginia	" "
Connecticut	First Tuesday in November.
Delaware	" "
Florida	" "
Illinois	" "
Iowa	" "
Kansas	" "
Kentucky	" "
Louisiana	" "
Maryland	" "
Massachusetts	" "
Michigan	" "
Minnesota	" "
Mississippi	" "
Missouri	" "
Nebraska	" "
Nevada	" "
New Hampshire	" "
New Jersey	" "
New York	" "
North Carolina	" "
Pennsylvania	" "
South Carolina	" "
Tennessee	" "
Texas	" "
Virginia	" "
Georgia	First Wednesday in November.

The general election for President and Vice President occurs in all the States on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

WASHINGTON.

The following is the condition of the public debt, as reported on the 1st inst.:

Six per cent. bonds		$235,221,050
Five per cents		484,129,550
Four and one-half per cents		250,000,000
Four per cents		1,380,180,450
Refunding certificates		1,167,350
Navy pension fund		14,000,000
Total coin bonds		$1,722,628,500
Matured debt	$6,841,115
Legal tenders	346,741,931
Certificates of deposit	15,535,000
Fractional currency	7,205,710
Gold and silver certificates	20,573,890
Total without interest		390,056,531
Total debt		$2,119,508,646
Total interest		15,890,600
Cash in treasury		198,890,405
Debt less cash in treasury		$1,936,508,241
Decrease during July		5,570,053
Current liabilities—
Interest due and unpaid		$3,489,470
Debt on which interest has ceased		6,841,115
Interest thereon		731,135
Gold and silver certificates		290,573,890
United States notes held for redemption of certificates of deposit		15,535,000
Cash balance available		151,659,793
Total		$198,890,405
Available assets—
Cash in treasury		$198,890,405
Bonds issued to Pacific railway companies, interest payable in lawful money, principal outstanding		64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid		323,117
Interest paid by United States		45,589,861
Interest repaid by transportation of mails		13,642,084
By cash payments of 5 per cent. of net earnings		655,198
Balance of interest paid by the United States		33,291,777

The various mints of the country coined $4,276,500 during the month of July. ....First Comptroller of the Treasury Lawrence decides that Government employes are entitled to pay for public holidays.

A man-of-war has been ordered to proceed to Cuban waters and patrol the coast. Members of the Cabinet believe that the presence of an armed American vessel will have a restraining influence on the Spanish ironclads.

FOREIGN.

Heavy and continuous rain-storms in several counties of England have laid hundreds of acres of grain and caused irreparable damage.....Contagious pleuro-pneumonia has again made its appearance in some of the English counties.....England is straining every nerve to repair, at the earliest possible moment, the defeat of Gen. Burrows in Afghanistan, and large reinforcements are being sent thither.

French journals of all parties warn the Government not to allow itself to be drawn into an armed interference in the Turkish question. France will probably take no part in the approaching naval demonstration....An English missionary and his two servants have been murdered at Ismidt, Asia Minor, near Constantinople.

Later advices from Afghanistan indicate that Burrows' defeat by Ayoob Kahn, near Candahar, was somewhat less disastrous than at first reported. The native reports are now to the effect that Burrows' force was lured into an ambuscade and suffered heavy loss, but effected a retreat, and later advices announce his arrival, with a large portion of his command, at Candahar.

The Turks greatly rejoice over the British defeat in Afghanistan....The last of the Cuban insurgent chiefs have signified to the Government of the island their intention to leave it, if permitted. They will be allowed to go.

Gen. Roberts is marching to the relief of Candahar, at the head of 10,000 men.... The election for members of Councils General in France has resulted in a great Republican triumph....The Chilian transport Loa was blown up by a torpedo in Callao bay on the 20th of July. The torpedo contained about 300 pounds of dynamite. The vessel was lifted quite out of the water. About 150 men perished. Every house in Callao was shaken by the explosion.

A doctor at Lyons, France, has undertaken, on a wager, to go fifteen days without food....Ex-Empress Eugenie intends to quit Chiselhurst. She will take with her the remains of the Prince Imperial. Her destination is not mentioned......All accounts go to show that the Chilians have conducted the war against Peru after the most barbarous and brutal fashion. At Tacna the Chilians spared neither age nor sex. After having obtained possession of the town, they killed all the inhabitants. After the capture of Arica they butchered 1,200 non-combatants in cold blood.

Lady Travelers.

"A Ride in Petticoats and Slippers" is the title of Capt. H. E. Colvile's new book of travels in Morocco, the novel feature of which is that the author's wife accompanied him. The Saturday Review says:

"It might have been thought that the presence of a lady must have been a great embarrassment. And so it undoubtedly might have proved in many cases; but Mrs. Colvile, like Lady Anne Blunt, Lady Baker, and some others of her sex, seems to have been born to enjoy adventurous travel. From the moment of her landing in Africa, as her husband tells us, she took kindly to handling firearms, and carried a revolver, with a pair of 'Deringers.' Till she began to be familiarized with the strange incidents of night-bivouacs under canvas in the wilderness, she was always ready to mount guard over her husband and their property at a moment's notice. In reality, the chance of an onslaught by robbers, which was probable enough in most of the country they traveled through, must have been sufficiently trying to the nerves of a lady. But her husband found that her companionship was actually of service to him. And, considering the contemptuous manner in which the Moors treat their own womenkind, the courtesy with which they behaved to Mrs. Colvile was remarkable. The dignitaries everywhere dressed their faces in smiles when they came into her presence; and even the rude camp-followers consulted her comfort obsequiously, and invariably addressed her in the most respectful language."

Story About Artemus Ward.

There are yet living in Pottsville, Pa., several gentlemen who never hear the name of Artemus Ward without a smiling recollection of a pleasant night spent with that droll genius. In the winter of one of the earlier years of the war Artemus Ward was advertised to deliver his famous lecture on the Mormons in the Town Hall at Pottsville. Much curiosity was excited by the announcement of his coming, and there was every reason to expect that the hall would be crowded on the evening of the lecture. But one of the fiercest snow-storms that ever visited the town raged without intermission all day, and the night was wildly stormy when the lecturer was driven to the hall. He found awaiting him there only five men who had defied the storm. Advancing to the front of the stage, and becking with his finger as if to a single individual, Artemus said, in an ordinary conversational tone, "Come up closer." Not knowing precisely what to do, the audience of five compromised with their embarrassment by doing nothing. Artemus changed his tone to that used by one who wishes to coax, and said: "Please come up closer and be sociable; I want to speak to you about a little matter I have thought of."

Having succeeded in getting his audience to move up nearer the stage, the humorist said: "I move that we do not have any lecture here this evening, and I propose instead that we adjourn to the restaurant beneath and have a good time." He then put the motion, voted on it himself, declared it carried, and, to give no appeal from the chair, at once led the way to the restaurant. There he introduced himself to his intended auditors, and spent several hours in their company, richly compensating them for disappointment in the matter of the lecture by the wit and humor of the stories and anecdotes without number that he told. And that is how Artemus Ward lectured in Pottsville.

A Fasting Lunatic.

There was years ago in the Blockley almshouse a man named Thomas Wiggins, who persisted in declaring that he was Jesus Christ, and started out to imitate the Savior by fasting forty days and nights. He succeeded in doing without food for thirty-five days, when his reason gave out, and the process of restoration was begun; but nature had been overtaxed, and he lived but forty-eight hours. The first seven days of his fast he existed on a small bottle of porter, with a few swallows of water. The porter he finally gave up, taking only water. When he died he was very much emaciated. A post-mortem examination showed that all his vital organs were very much contracted—his heart weighed six ounces, his stomach was one-third the normal size and bloodless; in the right lung there was a tuberculous cavity considerably larger than a goose egg; there were also tubercles scattered through the left lung. From the start he began losing flesh, and, despite the exertions of the attendants, declined to partake of food, saying he was Christ. Wiggins was a native of Boone county, Ky., and, aside from his peculiar hallucination, was intelligent and rational, and was a general favorite with the attendants.

The Strange Will of Baron Steuben.

In 1860 or 1861 a copy of the will of Baron Steuben was published either in the Louisville Courier or the Louisville Democrat, and he makes this strange provision in his will: He devised a goodly portion of what estate he had at the time of his death to two of his favorite house servants, on the explicit condition that the said house servants should carry away his body and bury it in some secret place, where no one can ever find it. How he was buried the writer does not know, nor does he know how it happened that said will was recorded in the will-book of the Court of Appeals in Kentucky; for I find by reference to Chambers' Encyclopedia, volume nine, that Frederick William Augustus Steuben died on his estate, near Utica, N. Y., on Nov. 28, 1794. He was born at Madgeburg, Prussia, Nov. 15, 1730, and was educated at the Jesuit College at Niesse and Breslau. But why this will was recorded in this State the writer of this is not advised. He only knows that it was. Probably the original will was recorded in the proper office in Utica, N. Y. If not so, then there is no record of such will, as the will-book in the Court of Appeals office at Frankfort was burned up when that office was destroyed by fire in 1860.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Late Census.

Nearly complete census returns have been received from twenty States and three Territories, and the approximate results are as follows:

	1880.	1870.
Alabama	1,150,000	996,992
Arkansas	750,000	484,471
California	800,000	560,247
Delaware	145,000	125,015
Illinois	3,200,000	2,539,891
Kentucky	1,734,331	1,413,321
Kansas	994,561	364,399
Maine	625,000	626,915
Michigan	1,600,000	1,184,059
Minnesota	780,032	439,706
Missouri	2,295,000	1,721,295
Nebraska	500,000	123,015
New Jersey	1,100,000	906,096
New Hampshire	347,311	318,300
New York	5,080,000	4,382,759
Ohio	3,100,000	2,665,260
Pennsylvania	4,225,000	3,521,951
Rhode Island	276,710	217,353
Texas	1,800,000	818,579
Virginia	1,600,000	1,225,163
Wisconsin	1,300,000	1,054,670
Utah	144,000	86,786
Arizona	41,580	9,658
Montana	38,000	20,595
Total	33,562,562	24,797,474

Increase in twenty States and three Territories, 8,765,088.

THE SINEWS OF WAR.

Appointment of a Finance Committee by the Democratic National Committee.

The Democratic National Committee has appointed the following campaign Finance Committee:

Alabama—Levi M. Lawler and William L. Lanier.

Arkansas—John I. Sumpter and Zeb Ward.

California—L. M. Patterson.

Colorado—William A. H. Loveland and Gen. B. M. Hughes.

Connecticut—William H. Barnum, Gen. W. B. Franklin, E. S. Cleveland, James E. English and Nathaniel Wheeler.

Delaware—Ignatius C. Grubb and E. L. Martin.

Florida—Samuel Pasco and Wilkinson Call.

Georgia—George C. Barnes, Gen. A. R. Lowton, Gen. Jos. Brown, E. P. Howell and P. M. B. Young.

Illinois—William C. Goudy, Cyrus H. McCormick, Perry H. Smith and P. H. Cable.

Indiana—Austin H. Brown, William Henderson and Joseph E. McDonald.

Iowa—M. M. Ham and George H. Parker.

Kansas—Charles W. Blair and Isaac E. Eaton.

Kentucky—Henry D. McHenry, Henry Watterson, E. D. Standiford and John W. Stevenson.

Louisiana—B. F. Jonas, Charles Macready, Gen. J. L. Brett, Victor Meyer and I. W. Patton.

Maine—Edmund Wilson, Joseph P. Bass and Darius Allen.

Maryland—O. Horsey, Arthur P. Gorman, Ferdinand G. Latrobe, James Sloan, Jr., and Robert Garrett.

Massachusetts—F. O. Prince, Leopold Morse, George Gill, Edward Avery and Josiah G. Abbott.

Michigan—Edward Kanter, W. B. Moran and O. M. Barnes.

Minnesota—P. H. Kelly and H. T. Wells.

Mississippi—W. T. Martin, Edward Richardson and W. S. Featherston.

Missouri—John G. Prather, Oliver D. Filley, Wm. Hyde and John C. Priest.

Nebraska—J. Sterling Morton and George L. Miller.

New Hampshire—Alvah W. Sulloway, Frank Jones and Daniel Marcy.

New Jersey—Orestes Cleveland, Henry C. Kelsey and Ashbel Green.

New York—Abram S. Hewitt, Henry Hilton, Samuel Smith, Samuel D. Babcock, Augustus Schell, William C. Whitney, August Belmont, Austin Corbin, Michael Nolan, Erastus Corning, Smith M. Weed, Norvin Green, William R. Garrison, O. B. Potter, Franklin Edson, Edward Cooper, William R. Travers, William H. Wickham, E. S. Sandford and Charles S. Marshall.

North Carolina—M. W. Ransom, Wm. Johnston and Zebulon Vance.

Ohio—Wm. W. Armstrong, Col. Oliver H. Payne, John G. Thompson, George Hoadley and Thomas Ewing.

Pennsylvania—William L. Scott, St. Clair A. Mulholland, R. M. Boyer, W. A. Wallace, Lewis C. Cassidy and Malcolm Hay.

Rhode Island—Abner J. Barnaby add Nicholas Van Slyck.

South Carolina—F. W. Dawson and John D. Kennedy.

Tennessee—Thomas O'Connor, John G. Harris and W. B. Bate.

Texas—F. S. Stockdale, Richard B. Hubbard and J. W. Throckmorton.

Vermont—Bradley B. Smalley and Hiram Atkins.

Virginia—Robert Coghill.

West Virginia—Alexander Campbell, Henry G. Davis and Chas. J. Faulkner.

Wisconsin—Wm. F. Vilas, Alexander Mitchell and James G. Jenkins.

A Campaign Lie Nailed.

The Republican journals have been giving free circulation to the charge that Hon. William H. English contributed the small sum of $1 to the sufferers by the great Chicago fire of 1871. The following statements, made at the time this silly story was first started, stamp it as a malicious falsehood. These statements were sent out by the Associated Press to correct the misstatement now going the rounds of the Republican press. The first is from Judge E. B. Martindale, until recently editor and proprietor of the Indianapolis Journal, the leading Republican paper of Indiana:

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 16, 1871.

To the Press:

A statement purporting to be a telegram from this city, published in some newspaper west of St. Louis, and perhaps elsewhere, to the effect that W. G. English, the wealthiest man in Indianapolis, contributed but $1 to the Chicago relief fund, is not correct. There is no wealthy man of that name in Indianapolis. W. H. English contributed $100, which is the amount generally contributed by our more wealthy citizens.

E. B. MARTINDALE,
Chairman Chicago Relief Committee.

To this, at the same time, another member of the committee added the following testimony:

About noon of the 10th of October Mr. W. H. English called at the Chamber of Commerce and handed the Chicago Relief Committee a donation of $100, and I will add he was one of the first who paid. He, at the same time, subscribed $100 in the name of John C. New. This was the morning after the meeting was held at the Chamber of Commerce to inaugurate measures for the relief of the Chicago sufferers.

C. W. BROUSE,
Member of Committee.

Republican Harmony.

We present the following to our readers, merely to show that "the greatest harmony prevails among the Republicans." It is a beautiful exhibition of brotherly affection:

Some of the third-termers go so far as to say that they would "rather have Hancock than another Hayes," and they want assurances that Garfield will not follow in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessor. We presume the truth will make them free to vote for Garfield.—Cincinnati Commercial (Rep.).

If this means anything, it means that Garfield's administration is to be mortgaged in advance to the machine which was smashed and broken in Chicago. If any such bargain is made, Garfield will stand a lively chance of defeat at the hands of the independent voters, and deserve to.—Springfield Republican (Rep.).

If Gen. Garfield has any influence over the so-called "Reformers," he should exert it to keep them from such exhibitions of idiocy as the above. The "machine" represents 95 per cent. of the party. It will vote for Garfield to a man, and anybody who thinks it will then quietly allow itself to be thrust aside in favor of a lot of sneaks and hypocrites is a great simpleton—that's all. One experience of that kind is quite enough.—Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

Arthur as a Civil-Service Reformer.

Here is what Hayes and John Sherman said of Chester A. Arthur not long since. It is Republican testimony, and should not be questioned by Republicans:

With a deep sense of my obligations under the constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you in order that the office may be honestly administered.—R. B. Hayes to Collector Arthur, Jan. 31, 1879.

Gross abuses of administration have continued and increased during your incumbency. —Sherman to Collector Arthur, Jan. 31, 1879.

Persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no service; the expenses of your office have increased, while its receipts have diminished. Brites, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in several branches of the Custom House, and you have in no case supported the effort to correct these abuses.—Secretary Sherman to Collector Arthur, Jan. 31, 1879.

A Horrible Story of Frenzied Anger and Death.

The horrible tragedy enacted in Lyons, N. Y., conveys several morals which people would do well to study. It seems that one Solomon H. Easterly, a farmer of that place, was wrought up to such a pitch of frenzy by the high temper and quarrelsome disposition of his wife and her mother that he slaughtered them both with an ax as a butcher would a bullock, then harnessed up his horse, and drove to a convenient spot on the banks of the Canandaigua outlet, where he completed the hideous drama by drowning himself. It is said that the chief cause of the differences between the couple arose from the intervention of the mother-in-law. Every time she visited her daughter trouble arose between the man and his wife.

Much has been said of mothers-in-law, and the trouble they produce in the families of their children, when, from necessity or choice, they take up their residence there. They should learn that, when they leave their own homes to abide with their children, they at the same time abdicate the scepter of domestic government, and that, instead of coming into the dwelling as a ruler, they are there only as guests. We can readily imagine that "when the gray mare is the better horse"—as is the homely phrase where the wife usurps authority and arrogates to herself arbitrary power over the household and its surroundings —if she be aided, abetted and re-enforced by a mother, it is not in human nature for the hen-pecked husband to submit without a struggle. If Mrs. Easterly had carefully studied the scriptures (especially Proverbs xiv. 1), she would have known that the mother who deliberately instigated discord between her husband and her was no true friend.

But the actors in this terrible drama have passed beyond human jurisdiction, and only the lesson remains that, "As coals are to burning coals and wood to fire, so is a contentious man to kindle strife." (Proverbs, xxvi. 21.) It is never wise to enter into a discussion with any one who is afflicted with the infirmities of temper, and, as this unhappy family were all so constituted, it would have been far better had Mrs. Geer made her visits to the Easterly mansion few and far between. By her inability to keep from meddling with the affairs of her married children, three lives have been sacrificed, while the orphaned children have had their young lives blighted by the ungovernable passion and the dreadful crimes of their exasperated and maddened parent.—Albany Evening Times.

Narrow Escapes.

Sometimes, when I look back over my life, I am amazed to see how the pages of its record are dotted with hair-breadth escapes. I escaped the dangers and hardships of the Revolutionary war by waiting until the war had been over about sixty years before I got born. When the Brooklyn Theater burned I was in Burlington. When the yellow fever broke out in New Orleans I was in Minnesota, and immediately skipped out for Canada. When I was a boy, at school, one day all the boys in school were flogged all 'round for robbing an apple orchard, and the flogging didn't do a bit of good, for every beggar of them had the cholera morbus all that night, just the same. And I? I was attending another school, twenty-three miles distant. When all of my brothers and sisters were down with the scarlet fever I was down South in the army, and when I read the letters from home I laughed aloud to think of my great good fortune, and that I would only have to be shot at once or twice a week instead of having to take medicine three times a day. When a man comes to the office with a little bill, nine times out of ten I am out. And if, by some astonishing blunder, I am in, then indeed I am more unfortunate, but the man is in no better luck than before.—Burdette, in the Hawk-Eye.

A Just Tribute.

A just tribute is paid to women in the well-known play "Under the Gaslight," and it is as true as gospel. It is worth preserving and runs in this wise: "Let the woman you look upon be wise or vain, beautiful or homely, she has but one thing she can give or refuse, and that is her heart. Her beauty, her wit, she may sell you, but her love is the treasure without money and without price. She can only ask in return that when you look upon her your eyes shall speak a mute devotion; when you address her your voice shall be gentle and kind. That you shall not despise her because she cannot all at once understand your vigorous thoughts and ambitious plans, for when misfortune and evil have defeated your greatest purpose—her love remains to console you. You look upon the tree of strength and grandeur; do not despise the flowers because their fragrance is all they have to give. Remember love is the only thing she can give."

Employ Good Teachers.

Don't try to get "something for nothing." It can't be done.

Good things command a price in this world. If you are a farmer and your wheat is extra, it commands an extra price.

If you have superior stock it commands an extra price.

If you are a good School Director and you get a good teacher, he is worth more than a common "school-keeper." Pay them enough to secure the best talent, and to enable them to improve themselves as well as the children.

So, too, of school supplies. Buy the best. They are the most durable, and in the end the cheapest, though they cost a trifle more to start with. In other words, don't try to get something for nothing, simply because you occupy a public position.—American Journal of Education.

Thomas Normington, of Erie, Pa., aged 85, blind of one eye, lame in one limb, and married to his fourth wife, has papers to show his military service under George III., George IV., William IV., and Queen Victoria. His back is seamed all over with the scars of a fearful flogging he received for absenting himself four days without leave.

What Sorts of Invalids Had Better Go to Colorado.

Persons suffering from any of the following diseases will be greatly relieved, if not permanently cured, by a sojourn here, especially if they will subject themselves to judicious medical treatment suitable to the climate and their changed condition. The iron and soda springs at Manitou, five miles distant, with which there is almost hourly communication by rail and coach, will prove reliable adjuncts in the good work:

General debility, nervous or otherwise, arising from malarial causes or overwork, mental or physical.

Consumption in its earlier stages; diseases of the liver, stomach, spleen, bladder, and of an uterine nature. Bronchitis and asthma, organic and functional scrofula in all its protean forms, nasal and pharyngeal catarrh, especially when contracted in damp localities, and chronic malaria poison and its many complications.

I know that bronchitis will be relieved, if not entirely cured. Have a case in my own family. Mrs. C. had been afflicted with it for several years before we came here. Three months' residence has nearly entirely relieved her.

I had determined to advise no one to come here, either for health or fortune, but the certainty of finding relief from bronchitis and asthma is so clearly manifested in the case of Mrs. C. and others that for once I break my resolution, and urge all persons afflicted with these distempers to come.

Insomnious persons will be greatly benefited by this climate. I cannot give the reason. Some attribute it to an unusual amount of ozone in the atmosphere. I speak from personal experience on this subject. In no other land have I ever found sleep so gentle, so sweet, and so refreshing. The sleep of adults is as profound and as calm as that of infants, and there is no courting of the charmer. She comes unsought, like a good angel, and spreads her oblivious mantle over wearied soul and body, and you know nothing till next morning, when your first perception will be the unspeakable glory of Cheyenne as you gaze on its purple sides through the chamber window.

There is another class that may rely on finding relief—the obese. If there be any unhappy wight who desires to lose some of his avoirdupois, let him come. One singular feature in our population is, there are no fat people here. If the Prince of Wales had only known this in his day, he would have avoided Beau Brummel's heartless inquiry. People afflicted with consumption and Bright's disease in the advanced stage, or laboring under organic disease of the brain or heart, or nervous affection depending on organic lesion, had better remain away.

In the case of consumption in an advanced stage, however, this much can be said: The patient's pathway to the tomb is smoothed by an almost utter absence of physical suffering. Death generally ensues suddenly and without pain, life simply going out like a candle. —Letter from Colorado Springs, Col

Emigration from Germany.

Statistics relating to emigration from Germany have been recently submitted to the German Parliament. The numbers of emigrants during the past eight years are given as follows: 1872, 125,650; 1873, 103,638; 1874, 45,112; 1875, 30,773; 1876, 28,368; 1877, 21,964; 1878, 24,217; 1879, 33,327. Important as was the increase marked by last year, as compared with the years immediately preceding, the numbers given for the two years following the Franco-German war have never since been anything like reached. The 33,327 registered for 1879 consisted of 20,106 males and 13,221 females. No less than 21,150 were from Prussia. North America was the goal of 30,808, Brazil of 1,630, and Australia of 274.

A fond mother wants to learn how her son will turn out. That's easily done. If he's wanted to go out and weed the garden, he will turn out slowly and reluctantly and be two hours dressing. If he's called to see a circus procession go by he'll probably turn out quick and hurt himself trying to come down stairs and put a boot on at the same time.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$7 00	@	10 00
Hogs	4 85	@	5 15
Cotton	11½	@	11¾
Flour—Superfine	3 80	@	4 50
Wheat—No. 2	1 04	@	1 10
Corn—Western Mixed	43	@	49
Oats—Mixed	34	@	40
Rye—Western	82	@	83
Pork—Mess	14 50	@	14 75
Lard	7⅝	@	7¾
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@	4 85
Cows and Heifers	2 50	@	3 75
Medium to Fair	4 10	@	4 25
Hogs	3 50	@	5 00
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50	@	6 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 25	@	5 00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	90	@	92
No. 3 Spring	82	@	84
Corn—No. 2	35	@	36
Oats—No. 2	22	@	24
Rye—No. 2	65	@	67
Barley—No. 2	73	@	74
Butter—Choice Creamery	25	@	26
Eggs—Fresh	12½	@	14
Pork—Mess	15 75	@	16 00
Lard	7⅛	@	7¼
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 03	@	1 12
No. 2	94	@	96
Corn—No. 2	35	@	36
Oats—No. 2	23	@	24
Rye—No. 1	64	@	65
Barley—No. 2	71	@	72
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	91	@	92
Corn—Mixed	34	@	35
Oats—No. 2	21	@	23
Rye	58	@	59
Pork—Mess	15 00	@	15 25
Lard	7	@	7¼
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	92	@	96
Corn	39	@	40
Oats	29	@	33
Rye	69	@	70
Pork—Mess	14 25	@	14 50
Lard	7	@	7¼
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 00	@	1 03
No. 2 Red	95	@	1 00
Corn—No. 2	40	@	41
Oats—No. 2	25	@	26
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	4 75	@	5 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 04	@	1 10
Corn—No. 1	42	@	43
Oats—Mixed	32	@	33
Barley (per cental)	1 70	@	1 75
Pork—Mess	15 50	@	15 75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	91	@	92
Corn	35	@	36
Oats	23	@	25
Pork—Clear	15 00	@	16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 75	@	5 00
Fair	4 00	@	4 50
Common	3 00	@	3 75
Hogs	4 60	@	5 00
Sheep	3 50	@	4 60

AUBURN COURIER.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

Their Admirable Letters of Acceptance.

Words of Wisdom, Concisely Put, That Will Command Thoughtful Consideration.

HANCOCK.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, NEW YORK CITY, }
July 29, 1880. }

To Hon. John W. Stevenson, President of the Convention; Hon. John P. Stockton, Chairman; and others of the Committee of the National Democratic Convention:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 13, 1880, apprising me formally of my nomination to the office of President of the United States by the National Democratic Convention lately assembled in Cincinnati. I accept the nomination with the grateful appreciation of the confidence reposed in me.

The principles enunciated by the convention are those I have cherished in the past and shall endeavor to maintain in the future. The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war for the Union, are inviolable. If called to the Presidency I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the constitution, which in every article, section and amendment is the supreme law of the land. The constitution forms the basis of the Government of the United States. The powers granted by it to the legislative, executive, and judicial departments define and limit the authority of the General Government. Powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution nor prohibited by it to the States belong to the States respectively, or to the people. The general and State Governments, each acting in its own sphere, without trenching upon the lawful jurisdiction of the other, constitute the Union. This Union, comprising a General Government with general powers, and State Governments with State powers for purposes local to the States, is a polity the foundations of which were laid in the profoundest wisdom. This is the Union our fathers made, and which has been so respected abroad and so beneficent at home. Tried by blood and fire, it stands to-day a model form of free popular government; a political system which, rightly administered, has been, and will continue to be, the admiration of the world. May we not say nearly in the words of Washington: "The unity of Government which constitutes one people is justly dear to us; it is the main pillar in the edifice of our real independence, the support of our peace, safety, and prosperity, and of that liberty we so highly prize, and intend at every hazard to preserve."

But no form of government, however carefully devised—no principles, however sound—will protect the rights of the people unless its administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. When fraud, violence, or incompetence controls, the noblest constitutions and wisest laws are useless.

The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes for freemen. It is only by a full vote, free ballot and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our Government. Take this foundation away and the whole structure falls.

Public office is a trust, not a bounty bestowed upon the holder. No incompetent or dishonest person should ever be intrusted with it, or, if appointed, they should promptly be ejected.

Our material interests, varied and progressive, demand our constant and united efforts. A sedulous and scrupulous care of the public credit, together with a wise and economical management of our Governmental expenditures, should be maintained, in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their right to the fruits of their own industry.

The time has come to enjoy the substantial benefits of reconciliation. As one people, we have common interests. Let us encourage harmony and generous rivalry among our own industries, which will revive our languishing merchant-marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, assist our merchants, manufacturers, and producers to develop our vast national resources and increase the prosperity and happiness of our people.

If elected, I shall, with Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the Union and see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to administer rightly the functions of government is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen. I am very respectfully yours,

W. S. HANCOCK.

ENGLISH.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 30.

To the Hon. John W. Stevenson, President of the Convention; the Hon. John H. Stockton, Chairman, and other members of the Committee of Notification.

GENTLEMEN: I have now the honor to reply to your letter of the 13th inst., informing me that I was unanimously nominated for the office of Vice President of the United States by the late Democratic National Convention which assembled at Cincinnati. As foreshadowed in the verbal remarks made by me at the time of the delivery of your letter, I have now to say that I accept the trust with a realizing sense of the responsibility, and am profoundly grateful for the honor conferred.

I accept the nomination upon the platform of principles adopted by the convention, which I cordially approve, and I accept it quite as much because of my faith in the wisdom and patriotism of the great statesman and soldier nominated on the same ticket for President of the United States. His eminent services to his country, his fidelity to the constitution, the Union, and the laws, his clear perception of the correct principles of Government as taught by Jefferson, his scrupulous care to keep the military in strict subordination to the civil authority, his high regard for civil liberty, personal rights, and rights of property, his acknowledged ability in civil as well as military affairs, and his pure and blameless life, all point to him as a man worthy the confidence of the people. Not only a brave soldier, a great commander, a wise statesman and a pure patriot, but a prudent, painstaking, practical man of unquestioned honesty, trusted often with important public duties, faithful to every trust, and in the full meridian of ripe and vigorous manhood, he is in my judgment eminently fitted for the highest office on earth, the Presidency of the United States. Not only is he the right man for the place, but the time has come when the best interests of the country require that the party which has monopolized the Executive Department of the General Government for the last twenty years should be retired. The continuance of that party in power four years longer would not be beneficial to the public or in accordance with the spirit of our republican institutions. The laws of entail have not been favored in our system of government. The perpetuation of property or place in one family or set of men has never been encouraged in this country, and the great and good men who formed our republican Government and its traditions wisely limited the tenure of office, and in many ways showed their disapproval of long leases of power. Twenty years of continuous power is long enough, and has already led to irregularities and corruptions which are not likely to be properly exposed under the same party that perpetrated them.

Besides, it should not be forgotten that the last four years of power held by that party were secured by discreditable means and held in defiance of the wishes of the majority of the people. It was a grevious wrong to every voter and to our system of self-government which should never be forgotten or forgiven. Many of the men now in office were put there because of corrupt partisan services in thus defeating the fairly and legally expressed will of the majority, and the hypocrisy of the professions of that party in favor of civil-service reform is shown by placing such men in office, and turning the whole brood of Federal officeholders loose to influence the elections. The money of the people, taken out of the public treasury by these men for services often poorly performed, or not performed at all, is being used in vast sums with the knowledge and presumed sanction of the administration to control the elections, and even the members of the Cabinet are strolling about the country making partisan speeches instead of being in their departments at Washington discharging the public duties for which they are paid by the people; but, with all their cleverness and ability, a discriminating public will no doubt read between the lines of their speeches that their paramount hope and aim is to keep themselves or their satellites four years longer in office. Perpetuating the power of chronic Federal officeholders four years longer will not benefit the millions of men and women who hold no office, but earn their daily bread by honest industry. This the same discriminating public will, no doubt, fully understand, as they will also that it is because of their own industry and economy and God's bountiful harvests that the country is comparatively prosperous, and not because of anything done by these Federal officeholders. The country is comparatively prosperous, not because of them, but in spite of them. This contest is, in fact, between the people endeavoring to gain the political power which rightfully belongs to them, and to restore the pure, simple, economical constitutional Government of our fathers on the one side, and 100,000 Federal officeholders and their backers, pampered with place and power, and determined to retain them at all hazards, on the other. Hence the constant assumption of new and dangerous powers by the General Government under the rule of the Republican party; the effort to build up what they call a strong Government; the interference with home rule and with the administration of justice in the courts of the several States; the interference with the elections through the medium of paid partisan Federal officeholders interested in keeping their party in power, and caring more for that than fairness in elections; in fact, the constant encroachments which have been made by that party upon the clearly-reserved rights of the people and the States will, if not checked, subvert the liberties of the people and the Government of the limited powers created by the fathers, and end in a great consolidated, concentrated Government, strong indeed for evil and the overthrow of republican institutions. The wise men who framed our constitution knew the evils of a strong Government and the long continuance of political power in the same hands. They knew there was a tendency in this direction in Governments, and consequent danger to republican institutions from that cause, and took pains to guard against it. The machinery of a strong centralized General Government can be used to perpetuate the same set of men in power from term to term until it ceases to be a republic, or as such only in name, and the tendency of the party now in power is in that direction, as shown in various ways. Besides the willingness recently manifested by a large number of that party to elect a President for an unlimited number of terms is quite apparent, and must satisfy thinking people that the time has come when it will be safest and best for that party to be retired.

But in resisting the encroachments of the General Government upon the reserved rights of the people and the States, I wish to be distinctly understood as favoring the proper exercise by the General Government of the powers rightfully belonging to it under the constitution. Encroachments upon the constitutional rights of the General Government, or interference with the proper exercise of its powers, must be carefully avoided. The union of the States under the constitution must be maintained, and it is well known that this has always been the position of both the candidates on the Democratic Presidential ticket. It is acquiesced in everywhere now, and finally and forever settled as one of the results of the war. It is certain beyond all question that the legitimate results of the war for the Union will not be overthrown or impaired should the Democratic ticket be elected. In that event proper protection will be given in every legitimate way to every citizen, native or adopted, in every section of the republic in the enjoyment of all the rights guaranteed by the constitution and its amendments.

A sound currency of honest money, of a value and purchasing power corresponding substantially with the standard recognized by the commercial world, and consisting of gold and silver, and paper convertible into coin, will be maintained.

The labor and manufacturing, commercial and business interests of the country will be favored and encouraged in every legitimate way. The toiling of our own people will be protected from the destructive competition of the Chinese, and to that end their immigration to our shores will be properly restricted. The public credit will be scrupulously maintained and strengthened by rigid economy in public expenditures, and the liberties of the people will be protected by a Government of law and order administered strictly in the interests of all the people, and not of corporations and privileged classes.

I do not doubt the discriminating justice of the people and their capacity for intelligent self-government, and therefore do not doubt the success of the Democratic ticket. Its success would bury beyond resurrection the sectional jealousies and hatred which have so long been the chief stock in trade of pestiferous demagogues, and in no other way can this be so effectually accomplished. It would restore harmony and good feeling between all the sections, and make us in fact, as well as in name, one people. The only rivalry then would be in the race for the development of material prosperity, the elevation of labor, the enlargement of human rights, the promotion of education, morality, religion, liberty, order, and all that would tend to make us the foremost nation of the earth in the grand march of human progress. I am, with great respect, very truly yours,

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

Many Able-Bodied Editorials Spoiled.

Gen. Sherman's declaration that he has "no recollection of ever hearing anything from Gen. Hancock about taking orders from Mr. Tilden" knocks the wind out of many able-bodied editorials. The report was, it will be remembered, that in response to an inquiry from Gen. Sherman, during the electoral troubles of 1877, Gen. Hancock wrote to the former that, believing Mr. Tildon elected, he should look to him for orders if Congress declared him the President of the United States. Asked if this report were true, Gen. Hancock simply referred his interrogators to Gen. Sherman, who, he said, was at liberty to print every letter that had ever passed between them. The whole thing was a mare's nest. It makes no difference whether Gen. Hancock wrote such a letter or not, provided his superior officer asked his intentions; but the presumed state of facts has been the text of many columns of denunciation of Hancock as a traitor, and it is perhaps well that Sherman has spoken. Next!—Philadelphia Times (Independent Republican).

NOBLE WORDS.

That Famous Letter of Gen. Hancock to Gen. Sherman,

About Which So Many Dark and Mysterious Rumors Have Been Circulated by the Republican Organs.

"If This Be Treason, Then Make the Most of It."

CARONDELET POSTOFFICE, }
ST. LOUIS, MO., Dec. 28, 1876. }

MY DEAR GENERAL: Your favor of the 4th inst. reached me in New York on the 5th—the day before I left for the West. I intended to reply to it before leaving, but cares incident to departure interfered. Then, again, since my arrival here I have been so occupied with personal affairs of a business nature that I have deferred writing from day to day, until this morning, and now I find myself in debt to you another letter. In acknowledgment of your favor of 17th, received a few days since, I have concluded to leave here on the 29th (to-morrow afternoon), so that I may be in New York on the 31st inst. It has been cold and dreary since my arrival here. I have worked "like a Turk" (I presume that means hard work) in the country in making fences, cutting down trees, repairing buildings, etc., etc., and am at least able to say that St. Louis is the coldest place in the winter and it is the hottest in summer of any that I have encountered in a temperate zone. I have known St. Louis in December to have genial weather throughout the month. This December has been frigid, and the river has been frozen more solid that I have ever known it.

When I heard the rumor that I was ordered to the Pacific coast I thought it probably true, considering the past discussion on that subject. The possibilities seemed to me to point that way. Had it been true I should of course have presented no complaint nor made resistance of any kind. I would have gone quickly, if not prepared to go promptly. I certainly would have been relieved from the responsibilities and anxieties concerning Presidential matters, which may fall to those near to the throne or in authority within the next four months, as well as from other incidents or matters which I could not control, and action concerning which I might not approve. I was not exactly prepared to go to the Pacific, however, and I therefore felt relieved when I received your note informing me that there was no truth in the rumors. Then I did not wish to appear to be escaping from responsibilities and possible dangers which may cluster around military commands in the East, especially in the critical period fast approaching. All's well that ends well. The whole matter of the Presidency seems to me to be simple, and to admit of a peaceful solution. The machinery for such a contingency as threatens to present itself has been all carefully prepared. It only requires lubrication, owing to disuse. The army should have nothing to do with the election or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in a joint session who he is. We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only so far as they may be lawful. Our commissions express that. I like Jefferson's way of inauguration. It suits our system. He rode alone on horseback to the Capitol (I fear it was the "old Capitol"), tied his horse to a rail fence, entered and was duly sworn, then rode to the Executive Mansion and took possession. He inaugurated himself simply by taking the oath of office. There is no other legal inauguration in our system. The people or politicians may institute parades in honor of the event, and public officials may add to the pageant by assembling troops and banners, but all that only comes properly after the inauguration, not before, and it is not a part of it. Our system does not provide that one President should inaugurate another. There might be danger in that, and it was studiously left out of the charter. But you are placed in an exceptionally important position in connection with coming events. The capital is in my jurisdiction, also, but I am a subordinate and not on the spot, and if I were so also would be my superior in authority, for there is the station of the General-in-Chief. On the principle that a regularly-elected President's term of office expires with the 3d of March (of which I have not the slightest doubt), and which the laws bearing on the subject uniformly recognize, and in consideration of the possibility that the lawfully-elected President may not appear until the 5th of March, a great deal of responsibility may necessarily fall upon you. You hold over. You will have power and prestige to support you. The Secretary of War, too, probably holds over, but if no President appears he may not be able to exercise functions in the name of a President, for his proper acts are those of a known superior—a lawful President. You act on your own responsibility, and by virtue of a commission only restricted by the law. The Secretary of War is the mouthpiece of the President. You are not. If neither candidate has a constitutional majority of the Electoral College, or the Senate and House, on the occasion of the count, do not unite, in declaring some person legally elected by the people, there is a lawful machinery already provided to meet that contingency and decide the question peacefully. It has not been recently used, no occasion presenting itself, but our forefathers provided it. It has been exercised and has been recognized and submitted to as lawful on every hand. That machinery would probably elect Mr. Tilden President and Mr. Wheeler Vice President. That would be right enough, for the law provides that, in a failure to elect by the people, the House shall immediately elect the President and the Senate the Vice President. Some tribunal must decide whether the people have duly elected a President. I presume, of course, that it is in the joint affirmative action of the Senate and House, or why are they present to witness the count if not to see that it is fair and just? If a failure to agree arises between the two, there can be no lawful affirmative decision that the people have elected a President, and the House proceeds to act, not the Senate. The Senate elects Vice Presidents, not Presidents. Doubtless, in case of failure by the House to elect a President by the 4th of March, the President of the Senate (if there be one) would be the appropriate person to exercise Presidential authority for the time being, or until the appearance of a lawful President, or for the time laid down in the constitution. Such courses would be peaceful, and I have a firm belief lawful.

I have no doubt Gov. Hayes would make an excellent President. I have met him and know of him. For a brief period he served under my command, but as the matter stands I can't see any likelihood of his being duly declared elected by the people unless the Senate and House come to be in accord as to that, and the House would of course not otherwise elect him. What the people want is a peaceful determination of this matter, as fair a determination as possible, and a lawful one. No other determination could stand the test. The country, if not plunged into revolution, would become poorer day by day; business would languish, and our bonds would come home to find a depreciated market.

I was not in favor of the military action in South Carolina recently, and if Gen. Ruger had telegraphed to me, or asked for advice, I would have advised him not, under any circumstances, to allow himself or his troops to determine who were the lawful members of a State Legislature. I could not have given him better advice than to refer him to the special message of the President in the case of Louisiana some time before. But in South Carolina he had had the question settled by a decision of the highest tribunal which acted on the question—so that his line of duty seemed even to be clearer than in the action in the Louisiana case. If the Federal Court had interfered and overruled the decision of the State Court, there might have been a doubt certainly, but the Federal Court only interfered to complicate, not to decide or overrule. Anyhow it is no business of the army to enter upon such questions, and, even if it might be so, in any event, if the civil authority is supreme, as the constitution declares it to be, the South Carolina case was one in which the army had a plain duty. Had Gen. Ruger asked me for advice, and if I had given it, I should, of course, have notified you of my action immediately, so that it could have been promptly overruled if it should have been deemed advisable by you or other superior in authority. Gen. Ruger did not ask for my advice, and I inferred from that and other facts that he did not desire it, or that, being in direct communication with my military superiors at the seat of Government, who were nearer to him in time and distance than I was, he deemed it unnecessary. As Gen. Ruger had the ultimate responsibility of action, and had really the greater danger to confront in the final action in the matter, I did not venture to embarrass him by suggestions. He was a department commander, and the lawful head of the military administration within the limits of the department; but, besides, I knew that he had been called to Washington for consultation before taking command, and was probably aware of the views of the administration as to civil affairs in his command. I knew that he was in direct communication with my superiors in authority in reference to the delicate subjects presented for his consideration, or had ideas of his own which he believed to be sufficiently in accord with the views of our common superiors to enable him to act intelligently, according to his judgment, and without suggestions from those not on the spot and not as fully acquainted with the facts as himself. He desired, too, to be free to act, as he had the eventual greater responsibility, and so the matter was governed as between him and myself.

As I have been writing thus freely to you, I may still further unbosom myself by stating that I have not thought it lawful or wise to use Federal troops in such matters as have transpired east of the Mississippi within the last few months, save so far as they may be brought into action under the article of the constitution which contemplates meeting armed resistance, or invasion of a State, more powerful than the State authorities can subdue by the ordinary processes, and then only when requested by the Legislature, or if it could not be convened in session, by the Governor; and when the President of the United States intervenes in that manner it is a state of war, not peace.

The army is laboring under disadvantages, and has been used unlawfully at times in the judgment of the people (in mine, certainly), and we have lost a great deal of the kindly feeling which the community at large once felt for us. "It is time to stop and unload." Officers in command of troops often find it difficult to act wisely and safely, when superiors in authority have different views of the law from theirs, and when legislation has sanctioned action seemingly in conflict with fundamental law, and they generally defer to the known judgment of their superiors; yet the superior officers of the army are so regarded in such great crisis and are held to such responsibility, especially those at or near the head of it, that it is necessary on such momentous occasions to dare to determine for themselves what is lawful and what is not lawful under our system. If the military authorities should be invoked, as might possibly be the case in such exceptional times, when there existed such divergent views as to the correct result, the army will suffer from its past action if it has acted wrongfully. Our regular army has little hold upon the affections of the people of to-day, and its superior officers should certainly, as far as lies in their power, legally and with righteous intent, aim to defend the right which to us is the law and the institution which they represent. It is a well-meaning institution, and it would be well if it should have an opportunity to be recognized as a bulwark in support of the rights of the people and of the law. I am truly yours,

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To Gen. W. T. Sherman, commanding army of the United States, Washington, D. C.

A Peculiar Defense.

It was reported several days ago that Mr. Justice Swayne, of the Supreme Court of the United States, had delivered an opinion from his judicial place in the matter of the De Golyer-Pavement-Garfield transaction. This is the language attributed to a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States:

The agreement with Gen. Garfield, a member of Congress, to pay him $5,000 as a contingent fee for procuring a contract which was itself made to depend upon a future appropriation by Congress, which appropriation could only come from a committee of which he was Chairman, was a sale of official influence which no veil can cover against the plainest principles of public policy. No counselor-at-law while holding high office has a right to put himself in a position of temptation, and, under pretense of making a legal argument, exert his official influence upon public officers dependent on his future actions. Certainly courts of justice will never lend themselves to enforce contracts obtained by such influence.

What is the defense against this statement? It is that some one else, and not Justice Swayne, said these things. It appears that Mr. Justice Swayne did not from his high official place, utter this indictment against Mr. Garfield. The defense is that some one else, and not Mr. Justice Swayne, made this statement. The defense is not that the statement is untrue. It matters little who made this declaration. If the Supreme Court of the United States should make this declaration, it being untrue, Garfield might yet face a frowning multitude of voters. But the defense made by the friends of Gen. Garfield is that these charges were not made by a Justice of the Supreme Court. The truth of the charges is not denied, and cannot successfully be denied. It matters little whether it was Mr. Swayne, a Republican Justice of the Supreme bench, or Mr. J. R. Doolittle, a Republican attorney of national renown, who made the statement we quote above. The emphatic and melancholy fact is that the allegation, by whomsoever made, is true.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Disappointment.

When compared with Gov. Hayes' letter of four years ago, Gen. Garfield's communication is a disappointment. The candidate rises no higher than the convention which put him in nomination. Mr. Hayes announced his advanced and specific policies of civil-service reform and national pacification at a time to gain leadership and inspire a personal following. These great issues which took hold upon the future formed the burden of his letter. Gen. Garfield now says nothing new and furnishes no inspiration to the campaign. The reforming element of the Republican party will accept Gen. Garfield's letter, but they will not especially glory in it. This is not the voice of a prophet of the future crying in the wilderness of politics.—Springfield Republican (Independent Republican).

Great Ratification Meeting in New York.

Not less than 50,000 people attended the Democratic ratification meeting in Union Square, New York city, on the evening of the 28th ult. Three great halls were filled, and there was speaking in the open air from three stands. Fire-works and illuminations made the scene a brilliant one, and brass bands and shouting throngs rendered the occasion noisy as well. Mr. Tilden presided at the Academy of Music and received such an ovation as is rarely given a public man. When the vast audience, which cheered until it literally exhausted itself, became quiet, the ex-Governor made a few remarks in an almost-inaudible voice, condemning the fraud of 1876, congratulating his party on the nomination of Hancock, and predicting success in November. He was followed by Speaker Randall and Gen. Ewing. Many other orators held forth to enthusiastic crowds at the other halls and in the square.

STILL THEY COME.

Recruits for the Hancock Grand Army.

COL. HENRY B. HAYS, OF PITTSBURGH, DECLARES FOR HANCOCK.

[Pittsburgh Telegram to Cincinnati Enquirer.]

To-day the announcement was made public that Col. Henry B. Hays, who has been a life-long Republican, had espoused the cause of Gen. Hancock. Col. Hays is one of the wealthiest coal operators in the Pennsylvania bituminous region, and is known at all points along the Ohio river as a man of great liberality. He has stood in the foremost rank of the Republican leaders in Allegheny county, and has always contributed largely of his means to insure the success of the Republican ticket in times past. He says, however, that he will open an extra barrel for the hero of Gettysburg.

He was at one time Secretary of the Legation to Denmark, and has a gallant war record. His change of political faith will have a great effect upon thousands of coal miners, who have always looked up to him as a leader and a guide in matters political.

The announcement of his allegiance to Gen. Hancock fell like a chilling frost on the Republican party here, and, as he is a man of irreproachable record and commands the respect of all classes, they have not presumed to express any opinion in the matter, but are waiting apathetically to see who the next convert will be.

GEN. HAMILTON, OF WISCONSIN, COMES OUT FOR THE HERO OF GETTYSBURG.

Gen. C. S. Hamilton, of Milwaukee, an old friend and West Point classmate of Gen. Grant, ex-United States Marshal and a stanch Republican, predicts the election of Hancock and English. He has just returned from New York, which State, he says, Hancock will probably carry by 40,000 majority. Gen. Hamilton was sorely disappointed over the defeat of Grant at Chicago. He will cast his first Democratic vote for Hancock and English.

THE OLD SECOND CORPS TO THE FRONT.

[From the New York World.]

Ever since his nomination Gen. Hancock has been receiving congratulatory letters from the soldiers of the Second corps pledging their fidelity to him in the Presidential campaign. The following is a copy of a letter he received yesterday, and is only a sample of the hundreds brought by every mail:

Major General W. S. Hancock:

DEAR SIR: I take the liberty of writing to you, as I am one of the old soldiers belonging to your Second army corps, Second division, Third brigade, Fourth Ohio Volunteers (Carroll's). I think I have a right to address you. My first vote I cast when in your command in front of Vicksburg, Va. I voted for Abraham Lincoln. I have voted for every Republican candidate from that day to this. I have had your photograph in my album for sixteen years, and, as soon as you received the nomination, I said I would never go back on my old commander. I will support you with all my heart, hoping you may pull through, as you often did in the days of 1863 and 1864, and that you may do as well as we did on the morning of May 12, 1864, at Spottsylvania Court House. "Carry the works." Yours respectfully,

CHARLES A. SMITH.

THE GERMANS DECLARING FOR HANCOCK.

The most influential German paper in Northern Ohio, the Cleveland Wachter am Erie, has abandoned the Republican party and come out for Hancock and English. So has the Pittsburgh Volksblatt. The German vote is the only thing which has saved Ohio to the Republicans for the last four or five years. Garfield's wobbling letter and tainted record, with the surrender to the machine on the question of civil service reform, have evidently convinced the Germans of Ohio that their best chance of contributing to administrative reform and public prosperity and harmony lies in supporting the Democratic ticket.

Enthusiasm and Confidence in Ohio.

The gathering of the Ohio Democracy at Cleveland gives happy and hopeful prophecy of Democratic victory in Ohio in October. The conditions are favorable. There is absolute harmony. The gentleman who heads the ticket is a man of high character, of fine abilities, and he was nominated by acclamation. There was no bitterness upon any question of candidacy, and there was scarcely a contest upon any question. The ticket is excellent. The cause it represents is made more gloriously hopeful by the harmonious action of the Democrats assembled at Cleveland yesterday. Harmony and enthusiasm characterized the proceedings of the Democrats who met at Cleveland, whether delegates to the convention or attendants upon it. Nothing was done to kindle animosities within the Ohio Democracy. Everything that was done was done with the plain and successful purpose to produce unity and good feeling. There is enthusiasm, expectation, confidence, among the Democrats of Ohio.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Dismal Failure.

The Chicago Daily News, an independent Republican paper, says of the Garfield and Arthur ratification meeting in that city:

> There were between 6,000 and 7,000 people present at the Garfield and Arthur ratification meeting on Saturday night, most of whom were attracted, like the June bugs, by the brilliancy of the electric lights. There was absolutely no enthusiasm. "John Brown" and "Old Shady" were rendered by a quartette, but they sounded like a requiem for the departed greatness of Republican meetings. The thing was altogether the most dismal failure in the way of a ratification meeting ever seen in Chicago. While Gen. Banks—the first speaker—was addressing the meeting, the crowd was reduced to less than 4,000. Before the meeting was well under way there were not more than 2,000 people present. It was pronounced by Republicans as well as Democrats the thinnest ratification meeting on record.

GEN. GARFIELD'S DEFENSE.

[From the Philadelphia Times, Independent Republican.]

A campaign life of Gen. Garfield, written by Col. Russell H. Connell, of Massachusetts, gives Gen. Garfield's defense of his Credit Mobilier business. Col. Connell spent some days at Gen. Garfield's residence gathering data for his campaign life of the Republican candidate for President, and, as the statement given about the Credit Mobilier transactions is in the first person, it may be accepted as Gen. Garfield's official answer to the grave accusations which have confronted him in his national contest.

We copy elsewhere the circumstantial statement made by Gen. Garfield, and there will be very common regret among fair-minded men of all parties that he has attempted any explanation if he could not offer one more satisfactory than that given through Col. Connell. It is plausible as far as it goes, but its fatal defect is in the fact that it omits the two most vital features of the charges he assumed to explain. He is entirely silent on the only documentary evidence that appears to sustain Mr. Ames, and condemn Gen. Garfield, and that is a memorandum presented to the committee by Mr. Ames, purporting to be in Gen. Garfield's own handwriting, claiming much more than he had received on his Credit Mobilier stock. If that memorandum was in Gen. Garfield's own handwriting, there is no escape for him from either the charge of purchasing the stock or the more serious charge of deliberately falsifying to exculpate himself from his error. The testimony of Mr. Ames on this point was given on the 29th of January, 1873, as follows:

Q. You may state whether, in conversation with you, Mr. Garfield claims, as he claimed before us, that the only transaction between you was borrowing $300. A. No, sir; he did not claim that with me.

Q. State all that occurred in conversation between you. A. I have had two or three interviews with Mr. Garfield. He wants to put it on the basis of a loan.

Q. Did he claim that it was, in fact, a loan? A. No, he did not.

Q. State all you know in reference to it. A. I told him he knew very well that that was a dividend. I made out a statement and showed it to him at the time. In one conversation he admitted it, and said, as near as I can remember, there was $2,400 due in stocks and bonds. He made a little memorandum of $1,000 and $1,400, and, as I recollect, there was $1,000 of Union Pacific railroad stock, $1,000 of Credit Mobilier stock, and $400 of stock or bonds, I do not recollect what.

Q. When was that memorandum made? A. It was made in my room. It was since this investigation commenced.

Q. Have you the memorandum that Mr. Garfield made? A. I have the figures that he made.

[Paper shown to the committee containing figures, as follows:]

$1,000
1,400

$2,400

Q. You say these figures were made by Mr. Garfield? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to retain that little stray memorandum? A. I do not know. I did not pay any attention to it at the time, until I found there was to be a conflict of testimony, and I thought it might be worth preserving.

Gen. Garfield never appeared before the committee after the foregoing testimony had been given by Mr. Ames, thus leaving the sworn statement that the memorandum was in his own handwriting uncontradicted. He subsequently issued an address to his constituents, many of whom had revolted against his re-election, in which he denied that he had purchased or agreed to purchase the stock, but he did not allude to the damaging memorandum, and now his formal defense presented for the Presidential campaign is also silent on the point. Until Gen. Garfield can deny the genuineness of the memorandum, which as yet is undisputed, all attempts at explanation of the Credit Mobilier transaction must be worse than failures.

Another strange omission in his defense is his failure to take any note of the unanimous finding of the Republican committee that reported to the House Feb. 18, 1873, through Judge Poland, as follows:

> The facts in regard to Mr. Garfield, as found by the committee, are that he agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the 80 per cent. dividend in bonds and sold them for 97 per cent., and also received the 60 per cent. cash dividend, which, together with the price of the stock and interest, left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was the balance of dividends after paying for the stock.

Gen. Garfield was then, as now, a member of the House, but he made no protest on the floor against the judgment of his political friends who thus condemned him. This report and the testimony of Mr. Ames in regard to Gen. Garfield's memorandum of Credit Mobilier profits due to him are the two apparently-conclusive facts against him, and they are the two points which he passes in silence in offering his defense to his countrymen.

Another strange omission in Gen. Garfield's defense must attract very general attention. In his explanation of the De Golyer fee of $5,000, paid him for presumed professional services, he is strangely silent on the solemn judicial decision of a high court distinctly condemning his fee as corrupt and illegal. In a suit brought in the Cook County Circuit Court of Illinois, to recover the full amount of the corruption fund for the Washington paving contracts, of which Gen. Garfield's fee was a part, the defense demurred on the ground that the money claimed was promised to insure the official action of Gen. Garfield, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, through whose official favor the fraudulent contracts had to be paid by Government appropriations. Judge Farwell sustained the demurrer because such contract with Gen. Garfield was corrupt and could not be legally enforced.

Gen. Garfield cannot be ignorant of the fact that the judicial records of one of our highest courts have stamped the De Golyer fee with infamy; and, if he had any explanation to offer on the subject, he should have met this fearful judicial deliverance against him.

Upon the whole, it would have been better for Gen. Garfield to be silent on all charges than to have attempted to answer them and yet be silent on the points which most conclusively condemn him.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., AUGUST 12, 1880

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District - JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM. P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

THE democratic senatorial convention for the counties of Steuben and DeKalb will meet at Waterloo, Friday, August 27, 1880.

A DISPATCH from New York, dated Tuesday, August 10, reports two prostrations and six deaths from the effects of that day's heat.

THE judicial convention for the nomination of a prosecuting attorney for the 35th judicial circuit, has been postponed to meet at Waterloo, Friday, August 27, '80.

AT the joint representative convention for the counties of DeKalb, Noble and Elkhart, held at Kendallville last Friday, Hon. Samuel S. Shutt, of DeKalb, was nominated by acclamation.

GENERAL HANCOCK is so well formed, physically, that some republican editors imagine he wears stays. Shouldn't wonder. In fact, come to think, they'll be apt to find him a first-class stayer.

CHANGES of that kind are so frequent that the inquiry has already become a customary one in some places—"Whom have you heard of coming over to Hancock within the last five minutes?"

WHATEVER else may be said about Dr. Tanner's long fast, he can at least be credited with having saved enough in the way of a board bill to obviate the necessity of his giving the clothing man a "stand-off" for his new winter overcoat.

IT seems that Jay Gould is convinced that General Hancock will be elected. He is reported as saying that while the democrats are thoroughly united, Arthur loads down the republican ticket. He said: "I have no hope of carrying New York, and I believe that as goes New York so will also go New Jersey, at least, and Connecticut probably."

THE annual fair of the Northern Indiana fair association, which begins in Fort Wayne Monday, September 6, and continues through the week, will be well worth attending. The management is doing all in its power to make this year's fair a glorious success, and the prospects are very flattering. Our readers should bear in mind the dates and make it a point to attend as often as possible.

THE Northern Indiana editorial association holds its annual convention to-day and to-morrow at Warsaw—the first day for business and the second for fun. It would be nice to be there, undoubtedly, and we have been pressed to go; but as this is "press-day" at home, the pressure is too great to admit. Our brother press members, however, will be often thought of that day, and we wish them an inex-press-ibly good time.

THE worthy democrats of Garrett have had some trouble erecting a hickory pole, the first two attempts having failed, owing to the breaking of the poles. They will make the third attempt to-day, and will put up a nice pole "if it takes all summer," notwithstanding the hoots and sneers of a squad of unprincipled republicans, led by such contemptible cusses as "Four-eyed DeKalb" (of DeKalb House memories) and another thing generally known as "Sour-mash Tub."

The Garfield Menagerie.

It was a singular collection, that assemblage of political hacks recently called together by candidate Garfield in New York. The motive and manner of its coming together is regarded by the independent and better class of republican papers as very questionable. The New York Herald, (independent), declares that, "since Andy Johnson swung around the circle, there has been nothing so verbose as Gen. Garfield's progress from Mentor to New York, unless it may be Hayes' almost forgotten southern tour at the beginning of his administration." The New York Post, (republican), hopes "that the present political excursion of the republican nominee will not become a similar exhibition of bad taste." The Chicago Times, (Ishmaelite), says of his return trip that he succeeds admirably in his many speeches en route in saying nothing. Of the list composing the gathering itself, the Post thus speaks authoritatively: "There are names in yesterday's list which might well have been omitted; but it is politically proverbial that whenever a carcass of actual or possible political spoils is exposed, the partisan vultures are sure to gather." There are the words, then, of the eminent republican limner of the Post. It was a carcass of "possible political spoils" that Garfield went on to exhibit; and there at his bidding—for they came by invitation—was the gathering of "partisan vultures." The object of the exhibition of the "carcass of possible political spoils" was to sharpen up the appetites of the vultures and induce them to whet up their beaks for the anticipated and necessary raid upon the people in order to compel them to make the "possible" carcass of spoils an "actual" one.

To this somewhat restricted menagerie of his own formation, Garfield, of course, must needs indicate the mode of training. And, to change the metaphor into reality and treat of the assemblage—though, according to this republican authority composed of vultures, yet as being of the genus human—what the order of their teaching? Instead of seeking as should the leaders of a great party to elevate the tone of political discussion and direct attention to the purification of the public service, he inspired the sentiment which seemed to animate all the harangues. To arouse anew every evil passion born of the war and inflame the north against the south and inaugurate anew a sectional strife upon the venom of which his party may feed and grow into new life seemed to be the ignoble purpose which Garfield and his coadjutors kept steadily in view. Very well. Hancock is for peace and unity. The people of the north, like those of the south, if they want prosperity, want also pacification and harmony. The role that General Garfield is now playing, is hardly as meritorious as that which he enacted when he threw up his commission in the face of the enemy to take civil office. According to Hayes, one who would do that should have been scalped. There may be a little scalping done at the polls. Men of DeKalb, what say you?

Nipped in The Bud.

Valparaiso has new gas works. She has also an Alumni association, if you please. The latter is connected with the normal school there. The former connects itself with the same. At a recent re-union of the association, Zimmerman, of the Messenger, who is so ready with his pen, was very appropriately assigned to speak in response to a toast to the press. Proceeding with great eloquence, he went thundering along, at break-neck speed, to tell what a mighty engine the press is, and what a power for good or evil; that it "lays the foundations of empires, elevates and dethrones kings and dynasties, disperses the darkness of ignorance with its beams of light, smooths out the wrinkles from the brow of care, dries up the tears of the widow and orphan, pays for the national debt, constructs railways, canals and turnpikes, imparts life and motion to the physical universe, gives potency to the germs of thought, erupts volcanoes, spreads famine, pestilence and malaria broadcast over the earth, and hurls the horrors of war and devastation over fertile fields and opulent cities." The audience being at this point raised to a high pitch of excitement, straining forward to hear the climax, by some fortuity, or purposed act of some "grim, ungainly, ghostly, gaunt, and ominous" fiend of "Nights Plutonian shore," the gas was suddenly turned off, and dump! went the audience back into their seats. They hope to get the "summit level" of the climax through the Messenger.

How do respectable republicans like to see a man like Orth swinging around the circle with their candidate for president?—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

Oh, first-rate. It's the "respectable" fellows, that is, the regular dyed-in-the-wool chaps, who assume to be leaders, who find such things just to their taste. The firm of C. Mobilier, D. Golyer, Venezuela & Co.—why not swing? Big thing! No investment except conscience; no loss, except that of the people; and who of that ilk care for the people?

Neighborhood Nippings.

The receipts of the Island Park assembly aggregated a little over $4,000, leaving a deficit of about $2,700.

The Indiana state camp meeting commenced in the city of Warsaw, August 6th, and continues for ten days. The attendance promises to be large.

Charley McDonald is clerking for Bettman, Bloom & Co.—Columbia City Post.

We bet, man, that the firm will be a bloomin' company, then.

The Columbia City Post says:

"'Tis Johnnie and the widow now who make the boys remark."

Then "Johnnie" and "the widow" must be getting up a spark!

Col. Wm. C. Williams, late greenback candidate for congress in the old 13th district, is enthusiastically for Hancock, and so are hundreds of those who voted for the colonel in 1878.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad company have just voted to increase their capital stock from $2,800,000 to $5,000,000 for the purpose of extending their line as far as the Straits of Mackinaw.

Levi Smith, a very wealthy and prominent resident of Elkhart prairie, dropped dead of apoplexy on last Monday evening. At the time his death occurred he was mowing weeds in front of his residence.—Elkhart Democrat.

Several buggy cushions and whips were one evening recently stolen from buggies hitched around the public square at Albion. It is suspected that the thieves hailed from Ligonier. Harvey Singrey's son was the heaviest loser. His loss is about $20.

Mr. Myers' drug store, at Collamer, was broken into Saturday night, the thieves being caught in the very act of pilfering the store by two gentlemen. One arrest has been made and the other two will soon be apprehended. Make it hot for them.—Columbia City Post.

Ought to have had a certain lady from Spencerville there. She would have warmed them!

We should like to know, from curiosity, just what the republican dictionary would term a "smirched candidate." Garfield stands convicted of perjury and bribe taking by a committee of his own party. Arthur is a removed custom house officer, discharged by his own party for "gross abuses, practical connivance, corruption and gross abuse and neglect of duty."—Lagrange Democrat.

The 'Busco boys claim they will have the largest and tallest Hancock and English pole in the county after Saturday next. They are making strong preparations for a big time next Saturday. Go in, gentlemen.—Columbia City Post, August 4.

And so, indeed, they did from all accounts. The "time" and the crowd were both huge, we understand, the speeches enthusiastically received and the pole literally "knocked the persimmon."

An exchange says:

"The greenbackers of Allen meet in convention August 14th for the purpose of placing a county ticket in the field."

What will they say to Mr. R. S. Taylor, who made the affectionate observation, in a speech printed in the Ft. Wayne Gazette, in 1878, that the fittest place for greenbackers was in a lunatic asylum? He was only repeating the gentle hint of his illustrious leader, though,—General Ben.

Speaking of the back pay steal which Garfield fathered in congress, the Colubus (O.) correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, republican, says: Garfield needed it and took it, but when the cow boys of Ashtabula began to howl on their milk routes and among the cheese mills, Garfield heard the voice of God in the voice of the people, and he dumped his grab down at the treasury door, and took a great big receipt for it on parchment, which he has been wearing as a liver pad ever since.—Lagrange Democrat.

A suit has been commenced against Columbia City for injury resulting from defective sidewalks. The Post says of it:

"The Post has no knowledge of the merits of her suit, but it does know that the tax-payers of the town are running a large risk every day for damages, owing to the way the streets and sidewalks are kept."

And we respectfully suggest whether the same may not be true in the many thriving towns of DeKalb county, namely: Butler, Corunna, Garrett, Spencerville, Waterloo, and even Auburn. What say the city dads respectively? Worth thinking of, eh?

The Ligonier Banner says:

The republicans of Noble county met in "mass" convention at Albion last Saturday. The question as to endorsing the action of the Noble county bar, [which had recommended S. E. Alvord for re-election to the clerkship—Ed. COURIER,] gave rise to an animated discussion. Messrs. Chapin and Prickett advocated no nomination, while C. O. Myers argued that it would be an act of cowardice not to nominate a candidate for that office. This opinion was plainly shared by a large majority, and was decisively affirmed by the convention. Considerable difficulty was experienced in finding a candidate for representative, about a half dozen individuals declining the honor of being defeated by Charley Inks.

We Endorse It.

In the Indianapolis Sentinel, of yesterday evening, appears the following account of the nomination of Hon. S. S. Shutt for joint representative from this district, which occurred at Kendallville last Friday. The letter is written from this place and says:

Yesterday a large and enthusiastic democratic convention was held at Kendallville to nominate a candidate for the joint representative district composed of Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb counties. Hon. S. S. Shutt, the present representative from DeKalb, was nominated by acclamation, and his selection gives universal satisfaction, as it will add at least one hundred votes in each county to the general ticket. Mr. Shutt has lived almost his entire life in our county. His large executive and administrative qualifications, as well as his legislative experience, will make him more than an ordinary useful member, and the people of Northern Indiana will feel proud in having him their representative, and will feel secure that their interests will be protected. His election is conceded by the republicans.

News Notes.

An epidemic of typhoid fever—produced by impure milk—has appeared in Bristol, England.

Some idea of the consumption of matches may be formed from the fact that a single factory at Oshkosh, Wis., cut up 2,000,000 feet of logs into matches, and used $800,000 worth of revenue stamps during 1879.

A gentleman of Elmira, New York, has authorized the editor of the Gazette to wager $100 that Hancock carries Pennsylvania, $100 that Hancock carries Connecticut, $100 that Hancock carries New Jersey, $100 that Hancock carries New York, $100 that he wins all the above bets, and $1,000 that Hancock will be elected.

The materialized spirit of Star Eye, an Indian maiden, laid her hands upon Mr. Hannah, in a San Francisco spiritual seance. Mr. Hannah, who is a hard-headed and hard-hearted skeptic, did not take the blessing reverently, but grabbed the spirit hands, yanked with all his might, and not only pulled Star Eye (the medium disguise) out of the cabinet, but also an assistant who was endeavoring to hold her in.

And another thing, General Hancock always puts out a kerosene lamp by blowing down the chimney. Now we ask—in all candor we ask—can the American people afford to take the chances on a president who is liable any night to blow himself up with a kerosene lamp? The act would be utterly destructive of presidential dignity; it would lower us in the esteem of other nations, to say nothing of the entire forfeiture of the insurance. Citizens of the republic, you are warned. —[Burlington Hawkeye.

THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.

Behold, a Much Greater than Barnum's is Coming.

For some time we have noticed the career of a new show, organized in New York and Philadelphia during the past winter by the consolidation of a dozen or more big shows, under one management, and known as the Inter-Ocean. Recently this has been still further augmented by the addition of one other large concern, known as Batcheller & Dorris' great railroad show which made a considerable stir in the amusement world last season. The concentration of so much wealth and talent into one enterprise, very naturally arouses the envy of all inferior concerns.

The master general of the advertising department of the Inter-Ocean, said to be the largest twelve combined railway shows on earth, requests us to announce that this mammoth new enterprise for patronage and recognition in the amusement world will exhibit in Columbia City, Saturday, August 14, and Butler on Monday, August 16, giving three grand full and complete performances on each day, morning, afternoon and evening. During the short space of time this big consolidation has been before the American public it has literally turned the world upside down. It is evident that the old show fogies who have rarely hit upon a new idea, or take pride enough in the profession to advance its interests or increase its attractions, must step down and out when the Great Inter-Ocean crosses their track.

The Kansas City Times, in speaking of this show, says:

"Taken as a whole, and in every detail, the Great Inter-Ocean Show is the finest ever seen in Kansas City, and the best appreciated."

The Burlington Hawkeye, in noticing this show, says:

"The Great Inter-Ocean circus has come and gone and it is the general expression of all that they were satisfied. * * * The management have put a big show in the field this season that is worthy of patronage, and the only wonder is how they can afford to give so much for so little money."

The Springfield (Ill.) State Journal, a paper that is not given to indiscriminate newspaper puffing, and which never notices a show that is not up to all that is claimed by the advertisement, says:

"For two weeks past the Journal has had occasion to make mention of the Great Inter-Ocean Show and Menagerie, and to mention the date of its arrival, and opening into the Capital City. Yesterday was the day appointed, and the exhibition took place as announced.

"At 10 o'clock the grand street procession took place, and was witnessed by thousands of Springfield and Sangamon county citizens. As the management announced in their advertisements, the entire show was not made on the outside, but the attractions presented in the parade ensured a large attendance at the morning and afternoon exhibition, and a still larger one in the evening, and every body was satisfied that there was at least one show on earth that was as promised. * * * So far as the Inter-Ocean Show is concerned, we hesitate not to pronounce it one of the best that ever visited Springfield, and we heartily commend it to our brethren of the press, as well as to the public at large."

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Matilda McClellan, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

ALPHEUS McCLELLAN, Administrator.
July 30th, 1880. 32-3w.

D. D. MOODY, Attorney.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county—In the DeKalb circuit court, October term, 1880.

James Tinney, is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce by Maggie Tinney, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 2d juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences October 1st, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 29th day of July, 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
32-3w. W. H. Dills, Deputy.

Administrator's Sale.

Notice is hereby given that I will sell at public auction on Saturday, the 21st day of August, 1880, at the late residence of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, about one mile southwest of Newville, the balance of the personal property belonging to his estate, consisting in part of some 500 or 600 bushels of wheat, oats, 20 head of cattle, three horses, farming implements, household goods and other articles too numerous to mention.

Terms: Three dollars or under, cash in hand; over three dollars, one year with 6 per cent. interest, waiving valuation laws with approve security. S. S. SHUTT, Administrator.
July 23d, 1880. 31-3w.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is hereby given, that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on Friday, August 20, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest and most responsible bidder, the construction of a Howe truss bridge 100 feet in length, across Cedar creek, in the town of Auburn, on the extension of Seventh street. Bids will be received for both iron and stone abutments; the contract for bridge and abutments will be let separately, letting to take place at site of bridge. Plans and specifications of said work can be seen at the county Auditor's office. Bidders will be required to give a bond according to law, the work to be paid for in county orders. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the board

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.
August 4th, 1880. 32-3w.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will on Friday, the 13th day of August, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m. let to the lowest and best responsible bidder the construction of a side-walk on the west side of the public square in the town of Auburn in said county, according to the following specifications:

Walk to be 8 feet wide, of pine planks dressed on one side to an even thickness; not more than twelve feet in length nor one foot in width and two inches thick, laid lengthwise on cross-ties of oak 3x6 inches in size, not more than four feet apart, and well spiked with spikes of sufficient size.

The work to be done to the acceptance of the said board of commissioners, and paid for in county orders. The board reserve the right to reject any or all bids. A bond will be required of the person taking the work. By order of the board. 32-2w.

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

Root & Company.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

HARDWARE!

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES FOR THE

NEXT THIRTY DAYS

Next Thirty Days

TO SAVE MOVING

OUR IMMENSE STOCK

TO OUR NEW BUILDING.

Call and Get a Bargain.

W. H. Kiblinger & Co.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows.
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

Another Good Time.

The young folks' party given at the residence of W. J. Austin last Thursday night, only served to substantiate the fact that it is one of the best places in Auburn to be nicely entertained. The music, supper and dancing—and the ice-cream, by-the-way, which was served also at a "second table"—was, in the words of a young lady participant, "perfectly ethereal." The writer has never, that he knows of, tasted any "ethereal" ice-cream but if there is any such, that was some of it, and he got enough to last him through the season. So did one other h. o. g.—which means, hearty old gentleman.

More Married Maidens.

Here are the boys and girls who negotiated for permits to splice during the month of July:

Jacob A. Grill and Mary Dove, Henry Shimp and Mary M. Niswinger, Maldine J. Scott and Eliza A. Wheeler, Ezra M. Hopkins and Sarah A. Hicks, George Grund and Zelpha McBride, Wm. H. Shatto and Hattie B. Hackethorn, David Dilgar and Clara I Shaffer, Jno. J. Fink and Margaret J. Zimmermann, Christian Miser and Mary Shoats, Henry H. Neidig and Emma L. Husselman, E. Thomas Musser and Rebecca A. Betts, John B. Tuttle and Aldora Vian, Thomas McCrum and Lovina Rohm, Henry Peckart and Minnie Lahmbeck, Samuel W. Tarney and Emma R. Galloway, Samuel E. Segner and Lillie Bruner.

Her Journey is Ended.

DIED—At her home on Jackson street, Thursday night, August 5, at 10 o'clock, Sarah J. Sprott, wife of Major S. W. Sprott, aged 56 years and 3 months.

The deceased was born near Smithville, Wayne county, Ohio, April 20, 1824, and was married in her 24th year, or August 6, 1848, to Major S. W. Sprott, at Savannah, Ohio. Immediately after her marriage she came with her husband to Auburn, where they have made a pleasant home and enjoyed life together for a period of over thirty years. She was a lady whose superior qualities of heart made affectionate friends of those in whom she confided, and she has lived a christain life, having been a faithful member of the Presbyterian church at this place for thirty years.

The remains were interred in the Auburn cemetery at 3 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, many sorrowing friends being there to bid farewell, forever on earth, to one whose memory was dear to them. An impressive funeral sermon was preached at 10½ o'clock, Sunday morning, by Rev. H. Johnson, and thus closed the last chapter in the life of one who has earned a crown of glory in the Great Hereafter.

Mischievous Meeks.

Two or three times the COURIER has had occasion to mention the maneuverings of William Meeks, of Newville, who, while afflicted with mental derangement, has made several attempts to murder his family and burn down his house. It will be remembered that he has twice been confined in the asylum at Indianapolis, from which he as many times escaped, and that he was again sent there some months since. About ten days ago, or perhaps two weeks, he again effected his release, and as soon as it became known steps were taken to recapture him, it being well known that he is a dangerous man, and that his wife, who is in constant fear of him, stood in daily peril. Last Monday B. F. Blair, assisted by several immediate neighbors, cornered him and concocted a scheme by which he was made a prisoner, though not without a desperate struggle, he being well aware of their intentions, as he is at most times apparently sane. He is now in the county jail awaiting the action of the commissioners, and, since it seems impossible for him to be retained at the state asylum, it is to be hoped that they will make some disposition of him by which his family and the neighbors may be relieved of their constant apprehensions of butchery.

Lubricated His Jaw.

The laugh is now on John Robbins, of the Pioneer hardware store, and he knows it; he is painfully aware that he has for several days past been made a common target for base jokers to shoot at—with their mouths. But listen to the mournful story: Last Monday evening, in the dusky twilight,—"or words to that effect"—Frank Culbertson went into the store and purchased some lard oil, the bottle in which he got it having originally been used for hop bitters. John Robbins stood at the desk when Frank came up from the rear of the store, and John, with that tact born in some people, discovered the bottle; he was familiar with hop bitters, having often used the same for medicinal purposes, and when he read the label on the bottle he longed for a drink. Frank placed the bottle on the desk for a moment, turning his back, and John "got onto" it; and before a single hand could be outstretched to save him he had whisked out the cork, and filled his mouth with—lard oil! To say that he was sorry hardly expresses it; he even went so far as to let go of the bottle and spit out the entire mouthful, knowing that it might make him sick to swallow it; and if anybody wants to see a well-lubricated jaw, let him go in and ask John for a bottle of hop bitters.

—Forepaugh Saturday.

—Abright, the jeweler, is rusticating in Ohio.

—No democratic speaking at Auburn next Saturday.

—Turn out to the pole-raising to-morrow evening.

—For a good cigar, call on Davenport, the druggist.

—These are dog-days. Don't go in swimming, or you may get dogs.

—Use Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, for sale by McQuiston & Ralston. 33-3w.

—Attention ladies! A new invoice of those choice perfumes, at Davenport's.

—Jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, 5 cents per bunch, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Work has again commenced on our artesian well. They are going toward China rapidly.

—Good heavy sheeting at 7½ 7¾ and 8 cents per yard, by the bolt, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Fruit-cans given away "show-day" —every can warranted tight—at B. Goodman's tin-shop.

—Frank Copper took his last Sunday in Chicago. He says it is a lively village and he had some fun.

—For a satisfactory nickel smoke, direct your steps to the postoffice and try some of Rainier's brands.

—Fleur De Mary, White Lilac, Frangipanni, India Bouquet and other choice perfumes, at Davenport's.

—There are now twelve men at the junction depot, clerks, agents and all, and they stand, politically, six and six.

—Frank P. Jones, of the firm of Fitch & Keegan, Fort Wayne, was in town Monday, endeavoring to sell some hats.

—Miss Lizzie Wood, of Angola, has been enjoying the society of her friends in the metropolis of the county this week.

—The Butler Record devoted its entire first and last pages to the shows, last week—the Inter-Ocean and Forepaugh's.

—Be sure and see Schaab, Beugnot & Co.'s stock of clothing before buying elsewhere, as they can give you special bargains. 33-2w

—Owing to the temporary absence of Rev. H. Johnson, there will be no services in the Presbyterian church until further notice.

—Call for sample dose Rinehart's Liver Pills. Only one for a dose. Warranted not to gripe or sicken. Ask your druggist for them.

—Dr. Humphrey, of the Physicians' drug-store, went to church in Fort Wayne last Sunday. At all events, he was there all day.

—To-day Sam. Pommert is cleaning his front windows, so as to be able to see the show procession when it passes there in a day or two.

—Married, Thursday, August 5, at the Lutheran parsonage, by Rev. L. Rice, John F. Kagey and Miss Sarah J. Ritter, both of DeKalb county.

—It is pretty well known that B. Goodman makes the best and cheapest fruit-cans that are offered for sale in this county. All he asks is a trial.

—It is said that the ladies at the prominent watering-places have now become so modest that they wear their finger-rings when they go in bathing.

—For shirtings, denims, ticks, brown and bleached muslin, table linen, and towlings, at lowest prices in the market, go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Go to Schaab, Beugnot & Co.'s for dry-goods, clothing, hats and groceries, as they have the largest assortment, at prices lower than the lowest. 33-2w

—Tom Scott has got his hands full this week—full of crossings. By Saturday night he will have laid down ten new cross-walks. Bully for the marshal.

—Young Albright, who was sent to the insane asylum from this county not long since, has been pronounced cured. Frank Leas brought him back this week.

—School commences one week from Monday, in consequence of which the girls are laying in a stock of gum and the boys are having their pants half-soled.

—Hats for children, boys and men. Boys' hats for 60 and 75 cents; men's hats for 60, 75 and $1.00; also a large line of fine fur hats, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Rev. H. Johnson is now finishing his vacation, having started Tuesday for Lakeside and a trip on the lakes. He has been a faithful laborer, and is entitled to a rest.

—Several of our society lads and lassies (or lasses) have received invitations and will attend a party to be given this evening by Misses Lillian and Lena Morse, at Angola.

—Get the new South Bend Chilled Plow at N. and G. Ensley's. The best chilled Plow in the world; sales increasing rapidly. They are boss. Also Red Jacket Plows, cheap.

—There will be an enormous crowd in town "show-day," and they are all wanted to examine the cheap fruit-cans at B. Goodman's. His cans are hard to beat in quality or price.

—The members of the Hancock and English club should each appoint himself a committee to raise recruits. The club is already large, but it can be doubled by active work.

—The Auburn Historical society will meet to-morrow (Friday) evening, at G. W. Gordon's art gallery. A full attendance is desired.

—Mrs. S. C. Clark has joined the army of ague sufferers this week, having had several hard chills. It is now Fred's turn to reciprocate the attentions he received last year.

—Sam. Pommert says he is thinking of buying a dray and horse, with which to earn his daily bread. Sam. would look nobby on a dray, but no ordinary horse could pull him around.

—To-morrow evening, at about five o'clock, a large Hancock and English pole will be erected on the corner of Main and Eighth streets, and a muscled crowd of democrats must be there.

—The democrats of DeKalb will please bear in mind that the speaking announced for next Saturday, at Auburn, will not take place, having been postponed on account of the show.

—Lafe J. Miller, our candidate for county treasurer, who has for two or three weeks been quite ill at his home in Corunna, has almost entirely recovered, and is again at work for the cause.

—Gertie May, baby daughter of Martin L. and Cora E. Hoffman, born April 22, 1880, died last Saturday, August 7. The funeral services were held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, at the Presbyterian church.

—The fair at Fort Wayne commences September 6. Among the many attractions are horse races, wheelbarrow races, a grand floral display, exhibition of fine stock, sack races, etc., including many novel features.

—Geo. C. Shiffer, four years ago agent at the junction for the B. & O. road, is again at his old post, having last Monday accepted a clerkship with J. J. Martin, the present agent. He is an efficient railroad man.

—Attention, Clover Threshers! N. and G. Ensley are agents for the celebrated Ashland Clover-Huller, the best in the world. They have ordered them by the car-load. Call and see them, east of public square, Auburn, Ind.

—Frank Culbertson has built a neat and substantial barn on his premises in the north end. He will otherwise improve the property from time to time and make it as nice a little place as north Jackson street can boast of.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have the largest and best selected stock of boys', youths' and men's clothing ever shown in DeKalb county, at prices fully 15 per cent. below any other house in Northern Indiana. Call and see them before buying. 33-2w

—The members and friends of the M. E. society are requested to meet at the lecture-room to-morrow (Friday) evening, for the purpose of making arrangements for a floral fair, which will be held in the near future. By order of the president.

—Standard granulated sugar, 11 cents per pound; good rice, 3 pounds for 25 cents; best Carolina rice, 10 cents per pound; No. 1 fine Saginaw salt, $1.20 per barrel; milk crocks, 85 cents per dozen; white fish, 7 cents per pound, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33 2w.

—The Garrett folks have thus far been unfortunate in their pole-raising, owing to mismanagement in attaching the ropes, it having broken down both Saturday evening and last evening. They are determined to put it up to-day, however, or "bust suthin' loose."

—As there will be a change of school readers the coming term, parents and guardians are requested before school commences, to exchange the old McGuffey reader for the new Appleton's, which exchange will be made at the store of Ensley & Co. without extra charge.

—The Sunday-schools of Richland township will have a basket picnic near the Pleasant Hill school-house, Saturday, August 21. Able speakers are invited. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Come with well-filled baskets and cheerful hearts.

L. W. TREESH, President.

—The Winifred club, of Waterloo, gave a delightful picnic and hop at Pleasant Lake yesterday afternoon and evening, for the benefit of the Waterloo Rifles. A large number were present from all points, several Auburn people amongst the number, and a happy time was the result.

—It is our purpose to make a full and complete settlement of our company book-accounts at least once every year, by cash or note, and one year of our co-partnership having now expired, a settlement with each of our patrons is respectfully solicited. Please call at once, and oblige

31-4t. DRS. CASEBEER & MATHENY.

—Farmers of DeKalb, look here! You can save money by insuring with the Ohio Farmers' insurance company, whose agent will wait on you as soon as possible and give you the safest and cheapest insurance in the United States. J. W. Swaysgood in north half of county, for F. M. Thompson, agent. 32-2w

—Now is your time to attend camp-meeting. There will be a great camp-meeting (D. V) near the village of Nappanee, Indiana, commencing August 5, and continuing eight days, held by the Free Methodist denomination. The B. & O. railroad will sell excursion tickets at two cents per mile, to accomodate those who desire to attend. Come one, come all! 33-2w.

Refuted in Full.

Hereto appended is a correspondence from Garrett, relative to a "special" sent last Sunday from that point to the Chicago Tribune. It explains itself:

GARRETT, Aug. 10, 1880.

EDITOR COURIER: In yesterday's Chicago Tribune I observe a telegram concerning the speaking and pole-raising, which took place Saturday evening last, in which it is stated that the whole thing was a failure, and winds up by saying that "the writer, who has been a life-long democrat, now declares himself a Garfield man." The truth of the whole matter is, that the meeting, aside from a mishap while the pole was being raised, was a success in every way, the speeches being enthusiastically received by those who attended. The author of that dispatch, however, is known, and his statements, both as to the meeting and his having been a democrat, are pure fabrications, and he will be exposed. TRUTH.

Sedan.

—Roads are dusty.

—All for Hancock and English.

—Farmers are busy plowing for wheat.

—Corn in this vicinity is suffering for the want of rain.

—The workmen have just finished painting the church.

—Sedan will give a large majority for Hancock and English.

—Mr. L. W. Treesh, who has been quite sick, is around again.

—At the last meeting of the Red Ribbon club J. W. Bateman was elected secretary, Mrs. Ella Grate resigning.

—If some of our streets were paved with De Golyer pavement, it would help the looks of the city. Can't some one recommend it to the city council? We cannot pay $5,000 for the recommendation, but you will have our thanks.

St. Joe.

—Green corn is having its usual effect here.

—The ague is cooling off some of the west-enders.

—L. S. Taylor, who has been on the sick list, is convalescing.

—Mrs. Wm. Volmer is seriously ill. Typhoid fever is the malady.

—The "Good Samaritan" pitched his tent amongst us last Saturday.

—James Sechler has the frame up for his new residence, and the workmen are busily engaged thereon.

—Rob. Bailey has returned and is engaged in pegging away. He has been wrestling for a few days with chills.

—J. S. France has sold his west-end property to Sol. Barney, who, it is rumored, will soon become a resident of St. Joe.

—The railroad company has 30 or 35 men in the gravel pit at this place, and they are taking out about 60 cars of gravel each day.

B. A. Woodcox has purchased a farm in the suburbs of Kingtown, consisting of twenty acres of the Milliman farm. Price, $600.

—S. Shilling is making everything lively hereabouts; he has entered the grain-buying business and will try and be "king bee" as usual.

—It is said that Bill Leighty found a dead man (dead drunk) on the overhead bridge, one night last week. Bill says a good shaking brought the "stiff" to life, so that he could do a good job of cussing.

—Sol. Barney and wife spent one day last week in St. Joe, and were engaged in cleaning up the store-room recently occupied by L. B. We judge from the way Mrs. Barney handles the scrubbing-brush that she is as proficient in the duties of the household as she is at shooting burglars. SPARTA.

Dandelion.

If you are afflicted with Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Headache, Dyspepsia, Fever and Ague, Rheumatism, Constipation of the Bowels, or any disorder of the Blood, use Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. It is purely vegetable, harmless as water, yet very thorough in its action. Pint bottles only one dollar, and every bottle warranted. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 33-2w

THE GREAT FOREPAUGH SHOW.

This Famous Combination of Menagerie, Museum, Circus, etc., is to exhibit here

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14TH.

Included among its menagerie wonders is a six-ton rhinoceros, a monster hippopotamus, sea-lions, and many other rare and costly animals. A leading attraction in the circus, and one which ought to attract crowds of sight-seers, is fifteen Asiatic, African and Ceylon elephants, all trained to perform a series of amusing and wonderful acts. Mons. Loyal, a French gymnast, will, at each exhibition, perform his famous act of permitting himself to be fired from a cannon, loaded with powder; he will be blown 60 feet through mid-air, and caught in the arms of a lady suspended head downward from a lofty trapeze, for Miss Ella Zuila is announced to appear and walk the high wire blindfolded, and cross it on a velocipede. A long list of equally sensational features are announced, any one of which is worth the admission fee to the entire exhibition.

THE VERY BEST.

The Washington Daily Critic, in which city Forepaugh recently exhibited his great show, commends it as follows:

"FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS.—It would be supposed that the mammoth spread of canvass which Forepaugh's Show is now performing and exhibiting under, would amply accommodate the largest audiences, but yesterday and last night gave evidence of the fact that extra additions are necessary in all future visits of this tremendous combination, aggregation and world's museum and bazaar, for as a matter of fact, hundreds of people were turned away, and many who gained admission were forced to stand during the entire performance. And such a performance! It would take several columns of the Critic to describe and to do full justice to the attractive features of the arena, they were of the most novel, startling and very best class, never before equaled in this city. In a word, that branch of the show presented, alone, more sights and wonders, for the one price of admission, than the majority of circuses exhibit in their combined attractions. The wonderful cannon feat, dashing slack wire feats, marvelously trained horses, gorgeous array of knights and ladies in courtly robes and glittering armors and sensational bare-back, pad and trick riding and thrilling trapeze and bar acts were witnessed, being presented in two rings by separate companies and enlivened by the funiest of funny clowns. The Menagerie and Museum are exactly as represented by the management. In fact, the entire show is far superior to what the bill boards and advertisements represent, and taken as a whole, we can say with the hearty indorsement of two-thirds of the population of Washington, that Forepaugh's Show is the best in every way that has yet exhibited in Washington. At the conclusion of this afternoon's performance a grand balloon ascension will be made by Mons. Phillippi."

This great show will exhibit at Auburn, Saturday August 14th, and the mammouth free for all procession will start from the show ground between 8 and 9 o'clock on the day of exhibition.

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O.31-tf

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

FAIR,
AT
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA, 1880.

EXTRAORDINARY ATTRACTIONS!

$8,000 in Premiums! $4,000 in Speed Ring!

Fair commences September 6, and continues through the week. Liberal arrangements made with all the railroads. Send to W. W. Rockhill, secretary, for programmes and premium list.

HAIL CLOTHING BUYERS!

To the Americans!
To the Germans!
To the Irish!
To the French!
To the Italians!
To the Citizens of all Nations!

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

And their Salesmen

GREET YOU!

Perhaps in our list of salesmen you may recognize an acquaintance. If not call and see us anyway. We will make a good impression on you (we hope).

FIRST OF ALL YOU WILL FIND

I. Lauferty and Alex. Lauferty,
Sam'l Morris and Harry Graff,
Wm. Stellhorn and Sam'l Arnold,
Amede Dodane and Frank Chapman,

Who can speak most any language, and can talk

CLOTHING,
HATS,
CAPS,
FURNISHING GOODS

In a way that will certainly interest you. As for stock we can safely say it is second to none in Indiana in point of Quantity, Quality and all other fine points.

OUR PRICES SELL THE GOODS!

One Price, Square Dealing always at

A. S. LAUFERTY & Co., C. O. D.,

NO. 9 EAST MAIN STREET,

Exactly Opposite the North Door of the Court House, with a large American Flag over the sidwalk.

New Goods Arriving Daily. Fort Wayne, Indiana. Open till 9 at Night.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Charles F. Mader deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent. 32-3w

GUST HELLMUTH, Administrator.

August 4th, 1880.

PINCHIN & BOYLE, Attorneys.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county,—In the DeKalb circuit court, October term, 1880.

George B. Tompson is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce, by Elisabeth A. Tompson, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 8th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences October, 1880.

Witness the clerk of said court, this 10th day of August 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.

33-3w. W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

The Unit Rule Applies Here!

BARGAINS

Neither Private Nor Confidential.

One Black Alpaca Coats, Men's........ 75c
Two Linen Dusters, Men's,........ 76c
Three White Duck Vests, New........ 75c
Four White Dress Shirts, Linen Bosom........ 75c
Five Blue Flannel Derby Suits........ $7.50

BOYS' SIZES IN PROPORTION.

SAM, PETE & MAX

Star Clothing House,

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

A SUMMER SHOWER.

BY HATTIE E. CRESSY.

What can be more reviving,
On a sultry August day,
Than a quiet little shower,
And the scent of new-mown hay?

How the laborer's spirits brighten,
And he whets his scythe anew,
Toiling with renovated vigor,
When the blessed shower is through.

Forth goes the whistling boy
To turn the dripping swath;
No fear of further showers—
The wind is from the north.

The water stands in pools
Along the muddy street,
The schoolboy wades it through,
With bare and tawny feet.

The trout are clearly seen
In the limpid meadow brook,
And the cunning angler's bait
Decoys them to his hook.

The flowers look up and smile,
And the fields of waving grain
Look fitter for the harvest
After the glorious rain.

The birds trill little snatches
From their songs of early June;
The bees swarm round the clover,
Buzzing a drowsy tune.

But the crickets, those foretellers
Of the summer's coming doom,
Set up their doleful music
In a corner of the room.

One listens just a moment,
And feels a twinge of pain,
Then dispels his saddened feelings,
Thinking of the summer rain.

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

ONE YEAR OF A GIRL'S LIFE.

"Let's leave this room just as it is, mamma. See, isn't it quaint? Jeannie, do look at this head of Beatrice and the frame—how elegant! This certainly must have been some girl's room."

Ethel Adams went prying curiously about the room as she spoke. It was a most unique and strange apartment, which seemed to have been hidden away from view for years, perhaps. Many things had been removed, but the window-hangings were still left—a massive walnut chair, a stool of embossed velvet, and many trinkets that make a room cozy and homelike as well as elegant. At one side was a mantel of stained marble, and above this hung that wonderful picture of which Ethel had spoken. The sad, mournful eyes seemed to plead for the absent owner of that room and to beg for the old silence and oblivion.

"Jeannie, I forgot to show you what I found, yesterday night, in this room, in the bottom of that bronze vase. I happened to tip the vase over, and this fell out. Edwin Dale was here at the time. See, it is set in garnets; isn't it a lovely face? I can't make out the engraving, only the last name, 'Kent,' and two letters, 's-e.'"

"A proud face, truly, and not one of a peasant's daughter," said Mrs. Adams, who was assisting the girls in deciding which rooms should be furnished for the summer.

The three bent their heads together, scrutinizing the small, olive face in its setting of gems.

"Kent, Kent, did you say, my dear? It seems I remember something about that name. We'll ask your father about it to-night."

"Oh, girls, is mamma up there?" called a voice from the foot of the stairs.

"Yes; come and see what I found."

"I want you all out on the west veranda. I've something to show you. Bring along your discovery, and we'll set up a curiosity shop," replied the voice below.

The group settled themselves in rustic chairs or reclined in swinging hammocks. The venerable and dignified Horatio Adams came down from his dusty office and joined the family, pushing his golden spectacles to the top of his forehead, and passing his fingers through the obstinate-curling white hair.

"Just see, papa and Owen, what I found!" And all the group bent together over the face that looked out at them so saucily, so defiantly, as though half angry at being inspected. "'Kent' is engraved on the back, and two other letters—part of a name, I think—'es.' See, there it is."

"I declare," said Horatio, drawing his chair closer to the rest of the party. "Can it be possible? Why, wife, you remember the Kents, don't you? This old mansion has been known as Castle Kent for a century, at least. It still belongs to some unknown heir—a Miss —, Miss —, let me see," running his fingers through and through his hair, grasping handfuls, as though the half-forgotten knowledge might be lurking among the thick clusters. "Miss Agnes Louise Kent—that's the name—only heir of Sir Gregory and Isabella Kent. I read an account of it not half a dozen days ago. The property amounts to something near three millions of money. A valuable estate, indeed—a moneyed estate. Quite a fortune—aye, in fact, a princely fortune."

Owen Adams gave a long, incredulous, though appreciative, whistle, at which the two girls exchanged knowing glances.

"What have you there, Owen?" questioned Ethel, the inquisitive.

"I hardly know myself. It's strange I should have forgotten it for so long," replied Owen Adams, the polished and elegant, fresh from the society of the elite of Paris and the continent. A purely English face, with its added charm of true refinement. He unlocked an ebony writing-desk, and took from it a small, handsomely-bound book. It was slightly discolored as though at some time it had been wet in some way. The back was of ivory, inlaid with pansies of mother-of-pearl. The lids were clasped with a single flower, mounted in gold. The whole was charmingly unique and beautiful. They all examined it closely while Owen told its history.

Passing through a street in Paris infected with an epidemic, he espied this book lying under the projecting slab of a stone step. He picked it up, but, not daring to enter the house or even to knock, he hastily slipped it into his pocket, thinking he'd advertise it the next morning. On reaching his hotel, he found the telegram calling him home, and, as the time was short, he threw this into his writing-desk and had never once remembered it until this afternoon.

"I think it must have fallen from a window, or else been dropped, in carrying out other goods; for, see, a part of this spray has been broken," said Owen.

Ethel, no longer able to restrain her curiosity, took the book into her hands and unclasped it.

"It's a girl's diary, as sure as I live!" she exclaimed, throwing up her hand, and pointing the front finger at the others—a fashion she had when deeply interested or excited—all the while running her eyes rapidly over the page.

"Read it aloud, Eth," spoke Jean, raising herself from her lazy position in the hammock. It took a great deal to excite her, for she was of that sluggish, luxurious temperament that little heeded mere passing excitements.

"Just listen," and Edith reads from the book:

ENGLAND, THURSDAY, Oct. 6, 18—.—As this is my last year at school, I shall keep a diary of any important events that may happen to me. I don't know what to say, as nothing has happened since my last visit to London. I don't believe I shall like this new business very much. But, as Cousin Rob says, "The practiced man maketh the perfect man." I wish I were a man; no, I don't either, for men are generally mean and selfish, and cruel. I only know two men I really like—one is Cousin Rob, and the other Prof. Huntington. I despise the rest——

"He, Monsieur Owen!" interrupted Jean.

If folks should read this book of mine they'd think it funny I didn't include that individual calling himself pater familias in my list of admired masculines, but I class him with all the abominable lot—and why? Louise Kent knoweth why.

"Heavens! Eth, is that name there, or are you fooling us?" asked Owen, coming up, and looking excitedly over her shoulder. All the group gathered round the girl to satisfy themselves that the reader had not played a joke on them. But Ethel's face told plainly that the revelation was as shocking to herself as to the others. Her excitable nature displayed itself in the short, tremulous breath and flushed cheek, as she pronounced the name, "Louise Kent."

"Marvelous coincidence," ejaculated the family sire.

"I fear it is some omen of evil," responded the slightly superstitious wife, who had learned from her Scottish grandams the fostered stories of witch and fairy.

"I remember now," continued Horatio Adams, "hearing once that there was some mystery in the family. Sir Gregory was killed almost instantly while on some wild expedition. He kept blooded horses and raced a great deal, I think."

"Read on, Ethel," spoke up the interested Jean; "see if she's the girl."

Ethel reads:

I guess I'll tear this leaf out and begin again, for mother might find it and then she'd cry, poor darling, and I'd feel awful. Mother is such a lady. Why did she marry that fox? I'm in a dark mood to-night, so I'll hide you away, little diary, and wait until some brighter day.

SUNDAY, Nov. 6.—It is another dark, damp day. I hate gloomy days. This old house, with its forest of trees everywhere, making such mournful sounds, seems like a prison. I'm sorry I wounded Prof. Huntington's feelings to-day. I'm always stumbling into somebody's tender feelings. I guess I am a serious mistake, as he whom I so hate has so often told me. I can see his steely eyes before me continually. Sometimes I wish he would never come home again.

I wish to goodness I could be like other girls or like my mother. I don't want to be a lamb, nor a bird, but I do hate to be a porcupine, so full of hatefulness I don't dare to be touched. I believe I'll write me out some resolutions and try to live to them:

Whereas, I, Louise Kent, or, rather, Agnes Louise Kent—

"The same girl, as I live!" exclaimed Owen.

"The very same; heir, sole heir, to $3,000,000 of money, a most magnificent estate," chimed in the father.

"I wonder if she's alive yet," said Jean.

"I feel awfully guilty at reading this book. It just seems I'm doing some mean, sneaking thing. Here, you read awhile, Owen," said the conscientious Ethel, laying the book on her brother's arm, and throwing herself back, as if half exhausted.

"We had best find out, if possible, if this is the true heir. Such an estate, so valuable and so extensive, ought not to get into anyone's hands on a mere pretense," remarked Horatio.

Owen reads:

Whereas, I, Louise Kent, or, rather, Agnes Louise Kent, am given to always doing those things I do most earnestly desire not to do, and ever leaving undone those things I desire most to do, and as I wish to correct—

"Here a blank has been left for two or three pages," said Owen, turning the leaves to another date.

SUNDAY, Jan. 8.—How the time has flown since I last wrote! Ah, me! it seems like ten years. Something dreadful has happened in our family. It makes my blood run cold to think of it now. But I believe I have no human heart when I think of him. How he has cursed us all. But when they carried him in, all mangled and bleeding, with his wild eyes staring at us with such a glassy stare, I did pity him. Yes, I almost forgave him. And to see mother, poor, dear, broken-hearted mother, after all he has done for her; after all the desolation he brought to her, to see her take his face in her hands and bend over him, whispering "my husband" as tenderly as though that same face, with its leers and taunts, had not crushed all the glad, joyous life out of her. Oh, it was all so dreadful! I wonder if God forgave him at the last. I'm glad I'm not God to judge men. I couldn't cry; even when I stood and looked into that cold, still face I could only say to myself that those close, white lips were never again to utter words that would sting me almost to madness. I could not shed a tear, even when I saw them bury him away forever. I felt only a deep sense of freedom. But my poor, dear mother; I must support her tenderly with all the strength I possess.

FRIDAY, Feb. 5.—I have given up my school, and shall do all I can for mother. She is drooping and failing every day. I must do something to brighten her life. She is my all! How I love her! All the love and devotion I might have given two are centered in my mother. I am changing. I can see it in myself. The careless, defiant Louise Kent is now a sober, almost a somber, woman. How circumstances change us. To-day I was 20. Twenty! I cannot realize it. Just one year ago to-night brother Mark and I rowed up the lake to see the old town by moonlight. How distinctly I remember the lonesome screech of the owl, and how cold and spectral he looked, outlined against the sky. As we dipped our oars silently along under a willow, a nightingale, startled by our gliding boat, sang out a long, wild, wailing song, as if his heart were breaking. I remember Mark sat so quietly as we came along, and I noticed as the moonlight fell across his face there was on it an unspeakable look of pain and sadness. As he lifted me from the boat, he bent so tenderly and kissed my hand, saying: "Your birthday kiss, Louie; recall this boat-ride, and the owl, the tower and the nightingale when this day returns again. I shall be far away, but I shall remember you." Oh, my darling brother! come back to your lonesome sister. Little did you dream that as far as earth is from heaven would you be separated from me to-night.

Here Owen coughed and curled his mustache; Jean had turned her face away; impulsive Ethel was sobbing, with her hands and face buried in her mother's lap; Mrs. Adams sighed sympathetically, and toyed caressingly with Ethel's brown curls; Horatio Adams leaned back in his chair, rubbing the eyes of his glasses most vigorously. After a moment of silence, in which no one spoke because the feeling was mutual, Owen read on:

The noble boy! Why was it all his bright dreams and ours must be broken in one short year? Why must he lie like a shattered shaft that was so beautiful, so fair, so shining? With his proud intellect that had flashed out before the world like a spotless saber. Sometimes when I think of the dear boy's death, and of all his hard fate and mine, I grow bitter against God, and man, and nature, and everything. In my insanity I clench my hands and shake them in the very face of heaven.

Can I be forgiven?
Crave I forgiveness?

THURSDAY, April 1.—Mother grows frailer. Sometimes I pray that she may be mine yet a little longer. She clings to me so tenaciously, depending on me in all things. The estate is settled. Everything is mother's and mine—even this prison-house. Cousin Rob writes me that our apartments in Paris are awaiting us. I think I shall have mother removed, before the warm days come on. I do not know whether I shall like Cousin Rob's new wife or not. Someway the Spanish women were always repulsive to me, but I have decided to receive her as gracefully as possible. Is it miserably selfish in me to wish that Cousin Rob had never married?

TUESDAY, June 11.—We are in Paris. I think mother has improved. Whom should I meet to-day but dear Prof. Huntington? I came near making myself foolish, but it was so like meeting something infinitely dear to one. He is so silent, so sober, so gentle, so gallant. His face seems to tell me of some history. I wonder what it is. I wonder if he has carried some secret in his heart until it has turned to stone, like mine? He is the same lone man.

WEDNESDAY, July 3.—Last night mother slept but little. I feel she is slowly slipping from me. She has been telling me to-day of the happy days of her girlhood when her proud old father, Lord Autly——

"Autly, did you say, my son?" asked Horatio Adams, starting from his seat like one half wild. All the group involuntarily started to their feet.

"Lord Autly," repeated Owen.

"That was my grandfather's name, Autly, Autly—yes, that's it, my mother's father. He had seven sons, one married a peasant's daughter and grandfather disinherited him. But I have heard that he was a shrewd fellow and became rich, enormously rich, in fact he owned a manor. He must be the one. Read on, my son, read on."

Owen continues:

How her father, Lord Autly, taught her to ride to the chase, and play at back-gammon, his favorite game. Then she told me of her betrothal to young Sir Gregory Kent, the dashing English heir, and of her great love for the poor peasant, Lee McHunt, for which my father never forgave her, neither did he fail to recall it though she has been to him all these years a loyal, tender, forbearing wife, never even allowing this old love a place in her memory. She told it to me to-day for the first time. Then she sank back on her pillow and closed her eyes, lying there so pale and silent I put my hand on her heart to see if it was throbbing. I firmly believe these years of silence, of waiting, of enduring, of persistently burying the past, have almost taken the spirit out of its frail vessel of clay. Prof. Huntington came to see us to-day. As he left, he asked me to drive out with him again to-morrow. If mother is strong enough to be left alone, I may go for a short time. I feel I must be near her every moment.

MONDAY, Aug. 5.—Last night we sat together, two friends. Kind and tender the ties that bind us. But how widely different our lives! His I knew but briefly. It was a lonely, lost life. A bitterness and a pain had entered it, a depth of sadness fathomed by no human creature. Yet, above it all, he smiles and puts back the hatefulness of many and soothes those about him with the winsome winning of his spirit. Why can I not love this man who has told me so passionately of his long, patient waiting for my love? He fulfills my highest ideals of manliness and manhood. Why is there no answering note to this pleading cry? Has my heart become granite that it is so icy still; so shut away and barred from human love? We sat alone—all alone as the darkness of the night settled down over Paris. It was that time of oppressive silence after one has been asked a question one dares not answer with loyalty to truth. The muteness seeming fittest, we sat in silence. Down in the busy street below us we watched together the passing panorama. Some boys played hide-and-seek among the trees and boxes; two lovers passed slowly by; an old man bent under his burden of years plodded home from his hard day's work with to-morrow's bread; two sober, thoughtful business men met, stopped, settled some point in daily work, wrung each other's hands and passed on, each to his own way; a carriage drove slowly up just across the way, and a short, white coffin was brought out and stowed away as though it already contained the spectral form of some mother's dead baby; a wood sawyer with his wife and dirty children came out of an alley and stole noiselessly down a narrow street. Some guards in uniform came tramping down the street with measured tread at the shouts of their Captain. On, on, they all swept, the multitude, the unthinking throng, each with his own burden, his own secret innerself a mystery still. We had noted all unconsciously almost. His eyes met mine. We were asking of each other the same question. He arose quickly, saying, "It grows late, I will see you to-morrow," and was gone.

SATURDAY, Sept. 12.—I must write but a word. My dear mother has been attacked by an epidemic fever. I greatly fear for her. I must be strong to meet anything. Prof. Huntington is untiring in his attentions.

TUESDAY, Oct. 6.—Mother is still very low. My head reels. My pulses throb so violently, I am almost beside myself. It is only because of the constant watching and care. I'll be better to-morrow. It is one year to-night since I wrote first in this little book. Oh life! Prof. Huntington has been smitten with the fever. I cannot write more to-night. What next shall I write, I wonder, and when, and where?

Owen Adams tossed the book into his mother's lap, and passed his hand over his eyes, for the strain of steady reading made them painful.

"Elegant!" Jean remarked, less languidly than was her usual wont. "That's as good as a novel, Eth. Let's have it published."

"Jean Adams, how could you!" reproachfully answered Ethel.

"Husband, I think you'd best advertise this book, had you not?"

"Yes, yes," answered Horatio Adams, rising and pacing back and forth with his hands behind him, "Yes, I'll attend to that to-morrow. Too valuable an estate to be lost to its owner. If the girl is dead, as may be possible, then I think the Sutleys fall joint heirs. Yes, yes," half soliloquizingly. "What's the last date? Oct. 6? Why, let me see; that's something over three months."

"Owen, we must see to this matter to-morrow."

Owen gives another prolonged whistle, and asks Jean for the picture set in garnets. Supper is announced. Louise Kent is discussed. The book is advertised, and all wait patiently, or impatiently, as the case may be, for some response.

And so, dear reader, must we.—Chicago Ledger.

THIS is an easy way of detecting the purity or adulteration of a sample of wine: Dip a small sponge into the wine to be tested. Place the sponge then in a saucer, the bottom of which is covered with a small quantity of water. If the wine is pure, it will take from a quarter to half an hour before the water in the saucer becomes colored, but if the wine is not pure, the coloring of the water takes place immediately.

BOOTH'S DEATH.

The Story Told by the Man in Whose Arms He Died.

The story of the death of the elder Booth, as told by Mr. James H. Simpson, who lives now in Salem, N. J., and who was a perfect stranger to him, is very graphic. He narrates the incident as follows:

I had taken passage on the steamer J. W. Chenoworth, from New Orleans to Cincinnati, at the same time that Booth did, though at the time unknown to me save by reputation. We had been one day out from New Orleans when I noticed a man walking back and forth in the saloon, with his hands behind him, his head bowed in deep thought. I sat observing him closely, trying to recollect when and where I had seen him, for that I had certainly seen that man I was fully convinced. A gentleman came to me and remarked: "That is the tragedian, Booth." I then remembered having seen him in his last play at the St. Charles Theater, New Orleans. The second day out he was absent from the saloon, and, on inquiry, I found that he was confined to his state-room very sick. Well knowing the careless regard strangers have on those boats for one that is sick, I at once visited his room, apologizing for my intrusion, and offered my services to him in any manner that might be useful. After scanning me with a look of penetration and surprise that I can never forget, he accepted the offer. On examining his room I found that he had been neglected. I immediately called the porter, had the room cleaned out, clean linen put on him and on the bed; ordered some gruel made for him, as he was too weak for stronger nourishment, but there was no medical attention at hand and he wasted away very fast. The third day after he was taken he could not turn over without help. I saw that he was getting in a hopeless condition, and, thinking to stimulate his energies, gave him some brandy and water, having to saturate a rag and place it between his teeth, his jaws having become rigid, but on tasting it he made an effort to remove it from his lips, and spoke with difficulty, "No more in this world." I saw that he had no hopes of living, and felt anxious in regard to his hope for the future; but, being a young man and an entire stranger, I felt it to be a very delicate situation for one of my experience, but, with a mental prayer thay I might be sustained, I commenced bt asking him if he had a wife. He answered with a look of astonishment and an emphatic "Certainly I have." I then asked if he had any message to send her, but I could not understand him; but he seemed to say, in his look and features, "Oh, that I could talk!" But, poor man, his power of utterance was so impaired that he could scarcely utter a word distinctly. He attempted to tell me of his travels in California, but I could understand nothing but that he had suffered a great deal and been exposed very much. On the fourth day after he was taken I asked him if I should read to him from my Testament. He seemed anxious that I should, when I selected an encouraging chapter and read, while he gave the deepest attention. I then asked him if I might pray for him. His eyes became dim with moisture and he signified his consent, while I knelt beside his bunk and besought the Great Father of us all, before whom he was so shortly to appear, to receive him, though at this late hour, for the sake of Him that died that sinners might trust in His mercy. He seemed very grateful, and attempted to put his arms around my neck as I bent over him to smooth his pillow.

On the fifth day, about 1 o'clock, he died. I was with him all the morning until the bell rang for dinner, when he repeated the words several times distinctly, "Pray, pray, pray!" accompanied by a beseeching look. We were then below Louisville, Ky., where, upon arriving, the Captain procured a metallic coffin and telegraphed to his wife in Baltimore to meet the corpse in Cincinnati, which she did, taking it to Baltimore for interment.

Extemporaneous Utterances.

We see that at the school commencement a favorite selection is Ingersoll's "The past rises before me like a dream." It is credited to his address to the soldiers at Indianapolis. The first time he delivered it was in this city at the unveiling of the soldiers' monument, several years before the celebration at Indianapolis was thought of. It was recognized then as a very fine effort, but the celebration was a local affair, and, although it was reported in the papers here and the speech given pretty fully, it attracted no special attention and in a short time was forgotten. When he delivered it in Indianapolis some of the Peoria people thought they recognized their old friend, and they went to the files of the papers, and there, sure enough, was "The past rises before me like a dream" in pretty much of its old coloring. He had brushed it up some, trimmed it down and made some verbal changes; but to all intents and purposes it was the same speech. Those who listened to him in Indianapolis thought it was the sudden inspiration of the moment. The fact of it is, the inspiration of the moment is quite as likely to make a fool of a man as it is to put him on his mettle. A man does his best work when he has the time to prepare it, and the better he prepares the better he does it as a general thing. A friend of Ingersoll in this city relates that four years ago before he went to Cincinnati to nominate Blaine, he went into Bob's office one afternoon and found Ingersoll walking the floor. As the other approached Bob turned around and said: "Like a plumed knight he entered the lists and tore the tongue of slander from the throat of treason." The friend did not know what he meant, but when Bob went to Cincinnati and nominated Blaine he saw that even then he was conning over in his mind what he should say. Those who saw him then fancied that he went up in the heat of the moment and uttered the first thing that came into his head. The fact was that on the top of all his study, the night before, E. C. Ingersoll, his brother, and R. H. Whiting insisted that he should carefully prepare himself. He sat down at a table in their room in the Burnett House. There he wrote the speech that is now historical, gathered up the sheets, read them over and left them. The late John T. Harper, who was present, put them in a place by themselves, intending to preserve them as a souvenir. While they were gone to the convention, however, the ubiquitous hired girl came into the room and "put it to right," and carried the papers away. This is about the way with all extemporaneous speeches, although Bob is a man who needs as little preparation as any one.—Peoria Journal.

PASSING SMILES.

A PHILADELPHIA girl who pads her bathing suit says it is the safest and surest way to reform.

A GREAT number of rheumatic people who object to the round dance like to be around when it is danced.

BEECHER professes to honor the man who slops over. He says if a man has a big bucket and only a pint of water he won't spill it.

AN Illinois lady writes that the mission of a widow in this life is to tell to her casual male acquaintances how elegant all other men are.

ELI PERKINS understands something about the distillation of wood ashes; but he says it is impossible to get a lie out of whole cloth.

WHEN the trunks of a society belle are driven into Saratoga the ancient inhabitants think that a lot of circus wagons are entering the village.

A LADY being asked how old she was replied: "I was married at eighteen; my husband was then thirty. Now he is twice as old—that makes me twice as old. I'm thirty-six.

On its death bed the Corry Daily Press exclaimed: "You might as well try to drive a railroad spike with a tack hammer as to run a nonpareil newspaper in a small pica town."

THE following explanation of a legal term is offered by a Teutonic member of the Canton Police force: "Ven I git me out a habeas scorpious I can chust as vell catch a man where he ain't as where he is."

"THE Lord loveth a cheerful giver," but it doesn't count for a man who puts twenty-five cents in the contribution box on Sunday, and then makes his wife economize on butter during the remainder of the week in order to make up for it.

WHEN a man fails to laugh at one of the King of Burmah's jokes, he is knocked down and traveled over and strewed about. And it's a great blessing that the King's jokes are always so funny that nobody ever seems able to help laughing at them.

JUST now the newspapers are teeming with the paragraph, "Don't drink ice-water when you are hot, "and it is one that should be regarded by all. The time to drink ice-water is along in the dead of winter, when it is a tight scratch to keep from freezing to death.

"THE concatenation of circumstances," said Evarts, "has not evolved out of my pre-eminent position in the administration any elements except such as were dissentaneous to a successful aspiration after a more elevated situation; all my strivings for a boom have resulted in a boomerang."—Puck.

"GOODS at half price," said the sign. "How much is that teapot?" asked the old lady who had been attracted by the announcement. "Fifty cents, mum." "I guess I'll take it, then," she said, throwing down a quarter. The dealer let her have the teapot, but took in his sign before another customer could come in.

THE Albany Argus relates that two Vassar College girls were on their way home over the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad the other day. "Maryland!" yelled the brakeman, as the train pulled up to a station. "What did he say?" asked one of the girls. "Maryland," replied the other. "Oh, let's get out!" exclaimed the first with sudden interest. But they were too late. The train had started.

A LADY had in her employment a young man from the country. On certain occasions he was instruced to inform any company who might ring at the door, that "Mrs. —— was not at home." One day John made this reply to a lady, who shortly went away, leaving a card and a promise to call again. As the card was handed to his mistress, she said: "John, what did you say to the lady?" "I told her that you were not at home." "Well, John, I hope you did not laugh." "Oh, no, ma'am," said John, "I never laugh when I tell a lie."

IT was a sad occasion. The doctors said the man couldn't live, and weeping friends surrounded his bedside. But he was not reconciled to depart. He was young and there was much to hold him to life. He struggled hard, mentally, to accept the situation, but he couldn't feel right about it. At length he opened his eyes and asked in a feeble whisper if the leader of the village band was at home. If so, he desired, as a last dying request, that the band be brought out and allowed to play one of their favorite airs—No. 6, he thought—under his window. The appeal was granted, and before the concluding strain was reached a submissive smile hovered about the shrunken lips of the departing one, as he murmured, "I'm resigned. Nothing—worse—can—happen—now." Then his light went out.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

THE materialized spirit of Star Eye, an Indian maiden, laid her hands upon Mr. Hannah, in a San Francisco spiritual seance. Mr. Hannah did not take the blessing reverently, but grabbed the spirit hands, yanked with all his might, and not only pulled Star Eye (the medium in disguise) out of the cabinet, but also an assistant who was endeavoring to hold her in.

DON'T RENT

BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.

$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!

Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.

HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.

These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.

Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

CENTAUR LINIMENT

KENTAYPOΣ

always Cures and never Disappoints. The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.
Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

THE Book for the Million

WOMEN (AND) MARRIAGE

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, Conjugal Duties, Confinement, Love and Courtship, Impediments to Marriage, [illegible] Single Life considered, Law of Marriage and Divorce, Legal rights of married women, etc., including Diseases peculiar to Women, their causes and treatment. A Book for private and considerate reading, of [illegible] pages, with full Plate Engravings, by mail, sealed, 50 cents.

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER"

On Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhœa, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible] Nervousness, Aversion to Society, Physical Decay, Dimness of Sight, Defective Memory, Loss of Sexual Power, etc., making marriage improper or unhappy, giving treatment, and a great many valuable receipts for the cure of all private diseases. [illegible] pages, over [illegible] plates, 50 cents.

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing [illegible] pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. The author is an experienced physician of many years practice, (as is well known), and the advice given, and rules for treatment laid down, will be found of great value to those suffering from impurities of the system, early errors, lost vigor, or any of the troubles coming under the head of "PRIVATE" or "CHRONIC" diseases.—Postage stamps taken in payment for books.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures chronic diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address

DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

TRADE MARK. Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons:

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 18, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

Mich., Jan. 25, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. That package stopped all apparent trouble, but there is a weakness yet, and I wish you would prepare this lot for the cure of that.

Iowa, Oct. 16th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. I am just twice as much of a man as I was before taking. I was on the verge of the grave, I thought, and there was no cure for me, but now I am in good hopes of a cure.

West Virginia, Aug. 28, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. Inclosed please find $5, for which please send me another box (No. 2) for a friend. You have done a great thing for me. I will send you all the orders I can.

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 26th, 1879.—Please forward me at once another box of the Pastilles. The patient on whom I have used most of one box, in addition to a sample box, is fast recovering, and I think another will set him all right.

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 2, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, and it has made a perfect cure of him. We have another customer now suffering in the same way, and wish by return mail one No. 2 box.

FARM NOTES.

A writer in the Indiana Farmer says that he has sold in eight months, from two cows, 537 pounds of butter, besides the amount used in his family.

The most approved method of catching a sheep is to wait until the animal gets behind and close to several other sheep, then make a dash at its left hind leg, catching hold of the leg with the right hand above the hock.

To cure the scab or scurvy legs in poultry, take lard and kerosene oil, equal parts, to which add sulphur sufficient to make a paste; rub the legs with the mixture till the scabs come away, then smear with a little olive oil.

The Lafayette (Ind.) Courier is authority for the statement that seventy-five acres of the farm of Levi Slayback, near Dayton, in that county, have yielded the present harvest the handsome quantity of 3,650 bushels as fine wheat as ever was placed on any market.

The army worm is causing much alarm in many parts of New Hampshire. Ditching proves to be the only effectual means of staying their progress. Heavy stone rollers, drawn by oxen, have been brought into requisition to crush the worms as they advanced.

Wheat is a very hardy plant, and it is a mistake to suppose that it is directly destroyed by the cold of our severest winters. Usually wheat is winter-killed by alternate freezing and thawing, snapping the main root above where the feeding roots have put forth.

A Vermonter writes in favor of Guinea hens as valuable in the way of guarding the other fowls from hawks by day, and polecats, cats, and human thieves at night. A slight disturbance about the premises sets these sentinels to giving the watchword, and it is not easy to quiet them until order is restored. They are easily reared, and are invaluable in this direction.

No animal is so badly abused as the pig. The hired man thought it a great hardship that we required him to clean their floor thoroughly twice a day. But he ultimately found it much the easiest, as each daily cleaning was a mere nothing. Pigs are naturally cleanly, if permitted to be so, and, when comfortably provided for, thrive better and fatten faster; and one would think the farmer would prefer to eat such pork to that taken out of a manure hole.—Country Gentleman.

A recent writer advises sowing orchard grass and clover in August. This is well if moist weather succeeds, so that the young clover becomes well established before winter. Otherwise, if small and backward the frost is likely to kill it. As the seasons are apt to be dry rather than moist, in the latter part of summer and the beginning of fall, the preferable way is to defer sowing clover seed until spring, putting it out as early as possible so as to get the benefit of what early moisture there may be. This is the safe way; the other, as has been sufficiently proved, is usually unsuccessful in the northern climate. Where clover is sowed with orchard grass, plaster should be applied to favor the clover, which otherwise, on strong ground, will be overcome by the grass, orchard grass being one of the strongest growers. —Chicago Times.

Every farmer, says the Country Gentleman, has noticed that about the time of wheat harvest, if the fowls are allowed the run of the fields and barn-yards, there is a material increase in the egg supply. I think the second fact is the natural result of the first. I have fed corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, flax and sunflower seeds, and have found nothing equal to the whole wheat as food for fowls. For young chicks it seems especially adapted. After two or three days of feeding on soft food the young chicks will pick up the whole wheat quite greedily; and will thrive on it as on nothing else. Growing chickens have a large demand for lime, and especially bone material, and this is more easily supplied in whole wheat than in any other grain. If wheat were $2 per bushel it would still be the cheapest food for young chicks. Farmers can, however, economize by feeding wheat screenings and damaged wheat, which, though unsaleable, is nearly as good for chicken feed.

A Texas Plan of Keeping Sweet Potatoes.—Go into the woods and cut a hollow tree, about six inches in diameter and five feet long. Cut holes in the side of this, and place one end in the ground. Lay straw all around the "pipe," and, on this lay potatoes, and pile them up in a pyramidal form to the top of the "pipe." Then get straw and lay over them, also corn stalks, pretty heavily, and throw on dirt until the pile is covered good—at least six inches. Do not cover the top of the "pipe" for two or three weeks, so that the steam arising from the potatoes can escape. At the first intimation of cold weather cover the "pipe," but always open it in good weather. To get into this "bank," as we call it, simply make a hole in the south side to put your hand in, but keep it covered also, "when not in use." By this method, a small family can, with very little trouble, keep all their potatoes through the winter.—Cor. to the Fruit Farm.

Killing Large Weeds.—Some weeds may be effectually exterminated by cutting off the stalks close to the ground with a scythe. The proper time to do this work is soon after they have attained their growth, but before the seeds have matured. The branches of some weeds are so close to the ground that they can only be severed from the roots by the use of a hoe, which should be very sharp in order to do the work well and with any considerable degree of ease. Weeds should be cut quite early in the season, in order to prevent the ripening of the seeds that would give trouble another year, if not the same season they grow. The seeds of some weeds are entirely ripe while the pedals of the blossoms are still fresh. The appearance of the plant affords no indication of the maturity of the seed, as in the case with grain. It requires considerable pains to destroy some large weeds, as burdocks, mullens and Canada thistles. The stalks must be cut several inches below the surface of the ground or they will throw up suckers in the same manner as trees and bushes. A sharp spade or a narrow steel blade fixed to a handle is the best implement to use for the purpose. After the stalk is cut and removed, it is well to drop a handful of salt on the stump that remains in the earth. A drop of sulphuric acid, applied with the end of a stick, is effectual in destroying the life of the roots of weeds. Strong lye, Paris green or London purple may also be employed for the same purpose with most excellent results. It is always best to make sure work with large and troublesome weeds.

HOUSEKEEPERS' HELPS.

Jelly molds should be greased with cold butter. When you wish to remove the jelly or pudding, plunge the mold into hot water, remove quickly, and the contents will come out in perfect form and without any trouble.

Put a quantity of elder flowers into a jug, pour boiling water on them, let the mixture stand for twenty-four hours, and strain through muslin. Wash the face every morning with the decoction. It will remove sunburn and freckles, and will beautify the skin.

Fire-Proof Cotton Fabrics.—If a teaspoonful of powdered borax is added to every pint of starch used in starching cotton goods, they can not be made to burn with a blaze. The borax can have no injurious effect upon the cloth or upon the wearer, and is so cheap that every one can afford it.

Cold Water Cake.—One teacupful of sugar, piece of butter the size of an egg, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar in a coffee-cupful of sifted flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of soda in one-half teacupful of water, whites of two eggs beaten to stiff froth, and put in last; flavor to taste.

Sponge Cake.—One tumbler of sugar, one tumbler of flour, five eggs—yolks of eggs beaten light, with sugar, whites to stiff froth—add flour, and stir as little as possible after the flour is put in; flavor with one teaspoonful of essence of lemon; bake in a pan, crease and brake, but do not cut.

Cucumber Pickle.—Put five hundred cucumbers in a tub with four quarts of salt; cover with boiling water, and let stand twenty-four hours; take them from the brine and put them in jars with three dozen onions and eight peppers; cover with boiling vinegar, in which you have put two tablespoonfuls of cloves, alspice, and cinnamon, a lump of alum the size of an egg, and one pound of brown sugar.

Troy Rolls.—One pint of milk, one half cup of butter, one-quarter cake of compressed yeast, two quarts of flour. Heat the milk and butter until the butter is melted; add the yeast, pour the mixture in the middle of the flour, stir a little. If mixed at 9 A. M., mold at 1 P. M., without adding any more flour. Four hours later, or one before baking, mold into rolls. Bake twenty minutes.

Beef Stewed with Snap Beans.—Take four pounds of rather fat brisket, two finely-chopped onions, a tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of white pepper, as much cayenne pepper as you can take on the point of a pen-knife, six cloves and a quart of water; have the water boiling before putting in your beef and seasoning; let it come to a boil after putting them in, then set it back on the stove to simmer for three hours, skimming occasionally; keep your pot closely covered, and be careful not to let it stop stewing; string and split lengthwise cross the seed two quarts of beans; put them in with your beef, adding a tablespoonful of sugar and a gill of vinegar, and let them boil for half an hour.

Stories of the Dumas.

It was during the successful period of the drama of "Henry III.," one day, that Mlle. Mars was receiving friends and admirers, Dumas, the elder, presented her with a beautiful satin-bound copy of the drama, and an old doctor who was present exclaimed rather simply: "So you are a tragedy-maker, young man?" "Yes," replied Dumas, "just like you; the only difference is that you have yours bound in deal."

Dumas was a great friend of Vatout's, who was so devoted to Louis Philippe's family that he followed them into exile. On hearing of his death, "Poor fellow," said Dumas, "and how did that happen?" "At dinner; the water they had to drink was very bad; the Princes were all sick, but Vatout died." "The courtier!" said Dumas with a smile.

Being present one evening with Sand at the first performance of an execrable piece, he was conversing loudly with her, when a bourgeois, seated in front of them, turned around and sharply requested them to be quiet. "What," exclaimed Dumas; "you have the good luck to hear George Sand and Alexander Dumas conversing together, and you are not satisfied!"

Dumas was a very powerful man, and rather proud of his physical strength. His father, Gen. Dumas, Marquis de la Paillerie, notified his birth to Gen. Brune in the following terms: "My wife has just presented me with a boy, eighteen inches long and weighing ten pounds and a half. If he keeps like that at 25 he will be no pigmy." The father was also a man of great strength, whose feats were renowned in the records of the French army. An engraving of the time, now in the hands of Dumas, Jr., represents him alone on the Brixen bridge holding in check of body of Austrians, killing three, wounding eight, and causing the others to retreat. The Marquis was a mulatto; being one evening at the theater in a box with a lady, a young coxcomb entered, and offered to see her home after the play. "Thanks," said the lady, pointing to the General; "I am with this gentleman." "Indeed," exclaimed the young man, sneering, "I took him for your servant." He had no sooner uttered this piece of impertinence than the General took hold of him by the collar, and, lifting him like a feather, threw him on to the stage.

His grandson, the present academician, is a chip of the old block, of extraordinary physical strength, and most adroit in all athletic exercises, which, as every one knows, does not prevent him from being as witty as his father. Somebody speaking of Alexandre Dumas to his son was saying one day: "After all, your father has sometimes written inferior works, but he never wrote tiresome ones." "It was through selfishness," replied the son, "they would have bored him first."

An Enoch Arden at Mount Vernon, Ohio, is likely to get his wife back, for he returns with a fortune of $30,000, while the Philip Ray is a shiftless fellow, and has led the Annie Lee a miserable life for fourteen years.

CHICAGO.

What a Paris Paper Says About the Metropolis of the West.

[From the Parisian.]

The city of Chicago is a town which, according to Mr. John Bright, no public school-boy in England can point out on the map. The first Emperor Augustus erected in the forum at Rome a golden mile-stone. It stood as a symbol that there was the center of the world. From this golden point artificial highways extended throughout the empire, and hence arose the expression, "All roads lead to Rome." All railroads do not lead to Chicago, but a good many of them do. Of the 84,000 miles of lines in the United States, at least one-eighth are in roads centering in Chicago. No less than 2,000 locomotives enter and depart from that city every twenty-four hours. Chicago is now a young city, but it is a great and prosperous one. In 1854 the population was 55,872. It is believed that this year's census will show that the number has reached half a million souls. In 1839, one year after the city was organized, the first shipment of wheat was made eastward by the lakes. The amount was seventy-eight bushels. The total receipts of cereals twenty-five years later were 13,000,000 bushels. In 1879 there were 138,000,000 bushels, with a value, all told, of $78,080,000. Last year the number of hogs received was 6,588,000, and cattle 1,215,700. The total value of the live stock handled was over $107,000,000. It will not be surprising to learn that about one-half the pork-packing of the United States is done in Chicago, when it is known that the slaughter-houses of the packing district can handle about 80,000 hogs per day, when run at their full capacity. About three-tenths of the Bessemer steel produced in the United States is manufactured in Chicago, one establishment alone employing 4,000 men, and a capital of $5,000,000. The largest ready-made clothing house in America is located at Chicago, employing 3,800 men and women all the year round. The aggregate of the wholesale trade last year was $341,000,000. The aggregate of the entire railroad business of the city for 1879 foots up $764,000,000, a gain of about 17½ per cent. on the previous year. The location of Chicago is geographically correct for a great city. Is is the commercial capital of a great agricultural region which makes so rich several of the Northwestern States of America. The growth of these imperial Western States is, we think, without a parallel elsewhere in history. The population of America has increased with giant strides, but in no part of the country more so than in the Northwest. Sixty-two years ago Illinois was admitted into the Union, and took its place at the foot of the list of States. It stands now third in rank in point of population, being exceeded only by Pennsylvania and New-York. Other States skirting the Mississippi and "the freshwater-seas" have grown almost with similar rapidity. And yet the development of this vast central region has only begun. Within a radius of 1,000 miles of which Chicago is the center, and sweeping from the Territory of New Mexico in the southwest to the British possessions in the north, we have a country penetrated with railroads, out of which almost a dozen republics the size of France could be made. In all this vast section there is not as much waste land by mountain and morass, all told, as there is in the single little kingdom of Italy. In Iowa alone—that wonderful State of grace and plenty—there are at least 10,000,000 acres of arable land as yet untouched by the plow. Necessarily Chicago participates in all this growth and prospective greatness, and the time is not far distant when it will take its place among the few great cities of the globe.

Cats and Proverbs.

The Spaniard, says a writer, like the Italian, plays the cat when he dissimulates, but it is not a dead one. He says the cat would be a good friend if it did not scratch, and he thinks a cat which mews is not a good mouser. An Italian says one had better be the head of a cat than the tail of a lion; a wary German goes like a cat round hot broth, and believes it too late to drive the cat away when the cheese is eaten. Many believe that a good cat often loses a mouse, that no cat is too small to scratch, and that you cannot keep away the cat when it has tasted cream. The Russian thinks that play for cats means tears for the mice; the Arab says that when the cats and mice are on good terms the provisions suffer; the Turk tells us that two cats can hold their own against one lion. Another Turkish saying is, "It is fast day to-day, as the cat said when it could not get at the liver." The Englishman fancies that some people have as many lives as a cat—that a cat, in fact, has nine lives; yet he holds that care will kill a cat, and that May kittens should be drowned. He is scarcely alone in thinking that the more you stroke a cat's back the higher she raises her tail. In other words, that flattery feeds vanity. He lets the cat out of the bag; but so do others, and they all agree that it is in the nature of a cat always to fall on its feet. Only he talks of turning cat in pan, and of raining cats and dogs, or sees folks dance like a cat on hot bricks.

Postal Cats.

So engrossing is the partiality of the domestic cat for its home—so vehement its yearning to return thither when circumstances over which it has no control have resulted in its transfer to unfamiliar localities—that certain Dutch naturalists have come to the sage conclusion that Grimalkin may be utilized as a letter-carrier with considerable advantage to the public interests. These worthies propose to organize a service of post-cats, and are at present engaged, by a series of ingenious experiments, in testing pussy's capacities for delivering the mails. Selecting Luik for their headquarters, they thence dispatch a number of cats, securely tied up in woolen bags, to the neighboring villages, where they are freed from confinement and turned loose, with neat packets of letters firmly strapped to their backs. At once their domestic instincts come into full play, and they swiftly flee homeward with unswerving directness. Of thirty-seven cats, thus constrained to serve their country, not one has hitherto failed to fulfil its postal function with excellent punctuality. It is feared, however, that when a double service shall be arranged, difficulties and delays may arise from the meetings of post cats on the high road. If the feline postmen can be inspired with a high sense of duty, overriding personal impulse, all will be well. Failing this, we apprehend that irregularity in delivery will take place.—London Telegraph.

ALL SORTS.

Texas is to have a State convention of wool-growers.

The Princess of Wales dances lightly and gracefully.

A tree near Nashville is ninety-two inches in diameter.

Newark, N. J., last year, manufactured 100,000 kegs of beer.

A. Bronson Alcott has not touched animal food for fifty years.

A negro in Harris county, Georgia, pulls the plow while one son holds the handles and another drops the cotton seed.

A bill providing that grand and petit jurors must be able to read and write has passed the Kentucky Senate by a vote of 19 to 12.

Of 100 patents issued from the Government office in Washington, ninety-eight never pay back the amount of the fee to the owners.

Bret Harte continues to serve his country by lecturing in what the London papers call "the quaint unemotional American tone."

William M. Evarts seems to be composed of will and steel; he is never ill; he never shows signs of fatigue; and the amount of labor daily performed by him is prodigious.

An Illinois girl with a breach-of-promise suit testified that it was the usual thing for girls to show their love-letters to fifteen or twenty other girls, in order to make them jealous.

Three men caught poaching on Mr. Gladstone's grounds at Hawarden were sentenced to two months' imprisonment with hard labor. The only game in their possession was ten rabbits.

Estimates are made for a rice crop of 250,000 barrels in Louisiana, this year, being double the production last year, and the quality also promises to be superior.

A miner was accidentally thrown out of a bucket at the top of a California shaft. He clutched wildly at the jagged rock, and by chance his wrist caught in a crack. During ten minutes he was thus suspended at a height of 200 feet.

"You couldn't hit the side of a barn with that pistol," said Warren tauntingly to Jones, at Hillsboro, N. C. "But I can hit the side of you," retorted Jones, and he fired at Warren, inflicting a mortal wound.

The bullet with which Hiram C. Briggs shot Erskine Wood at Coeymans, N. Y., the other day, passed directly through the heart, yet Wood was able to run a half mile and to live fifty-eight hours after the tragedy.

The bodies of fully 200 persons drowned in Cayuga lake within forty years have never been recovered. Various explanatory theories have been advanced, a late one being that the rocky bottom of the lake has many cavities, in which the remains lodge.

By a recent decision the old New Jersey law denying the right of liquor-dealers when sued for violation of local ordinances to demand a jury has been repealed. Several dealers of Passaic City tested the question, and the long-standing decision of the Supreme Court was set aside.

Philip Stevens shot John Green at Meriden, Ct., in 1861. The wound healed quickly, though the bullet was left in the body. Green accepted $130 in settlement of the affair, on condition that Stevens should enlist in the army. Now, after nineteen years, the long imbedded bullet has caused death.

A colored man named Henderson Brown, in Newberry county, South Carolina, is said to go without sleep frequently for a week or more at a time. He says that four years ago he went seven months without sleep. His health is good, except that he is quite thin and emaciated, though active and a hard and constant worker. He is 48 years old.

Parkersburg, in West Virginia, has a 10-year-old hero. He plunged into a river to save a drowning playfellow, came very near losing his own life through the clinging of his terrified companion, and dragged him up a steep bank, where both lay a while, completely exhausted. Then the rescued one insensibly rolled back into the water, and the brave little fellow again performed the difficult feat of getting him out.

John W. Brewer and his brother went to the house of Ezekiel Stewart, in Liberty township, about twelve miles south of Marion, the other night, and called him outside the house. Brewer had a revolver and seemed bent on mischief. They soon were engaged in an altercation, and a fight was progressing finely, until Stewart broke loose and ran back into his house. Brewer followed to the door, and was warned by Stewart not to enter. Disregarding the warning, Brewer stepped across the threshold, when Stewart seized a rifle and shot him through the right breast, fatally wounding him.

Without Pain.

Before the days of chloroform there was a quack in San Francisco who advertised tooth-drawing without pain. The patient was placed in a chair, and the instrument applied to his tooth with a wrench, followed by a roar from the unpleasantly surprised sufferer. "Stop," cried the dentist. "Compose yourself. I told you I would give you no pain; I only just gave you the twinge as a specimen, to show you Cartwright's method of operating." Again the instrument was applied—another tug, another roar. "Now, don't be impatient; that is Dumerge's way; be seated and be calm; you will now be sensible of the superiority of my method." Another application—another tug, another roar. "Pray be quiet; this is Parkinson's mode, and you don't like it; no wonder." By this time the tooth hung by a thread, and whipping it out the operator exultingly exclaimed: "This is my mode of tooth-drawing without pain, and you are now enabled to compare it with the operations of Cartwright, Dumerge, and Parkinson."

INDIANA NEWS.

The State Prison, North, has 575 prisoners within its walls.

Indianapolis has $49,070,115 worth of taxable property.

Simeon K. Wolfe has been appointed Judge of the New Albany circuit, vice John S. Davis, deceased.

The census of Brookston and township, as reported by the enumerator, foots up 2,144 inhabitants.

The population of Floyd county, including New Albany, is 4,612, an increase of 1,312 in ten years.

The State House Commissioners have decided to have the corner stone of the Capitol laid on the 28th of September.

The glass-works at Jeffersonville turn out ready for shipment an average of 1,000 feet of finished plate glass per day.

The population of Adams county is 15,300, a gain of about 4,000 since 1870. Population of Decatur, 1,905, a gain of 1,060 since 1870.

The New Albany woolen-mills and hosiery works have closed a contract with the Government for $100,000 worth of kerseys and socks.

The new steamer H. T. Dexter, of the Evansville and Cairo Packet Company, burned off Jeffersonville a few days ago. Loss, $25,000; insured for $15,000.

An incendiary fire at Fort Wayne destroyed the barns of Charles Becker and John Hamilton, on West Washington street. Loss, $8,000; partially insured.

The Evansville pacer, Sorrel Dan, has been sold to a St. Louis man for $12,000. He was raised in Porter county, and cost his late owner less than $1,500 eight months ago.

The census returns of 1880 give Gibson county a population of 22,840. In 1870 it had a population of 17,371, showing an increase in ten years of 5,469, or nearly 33 per cent.

Hon. Henry C. Hanna, Judge of the Circuit Court for the district, died very suddenly, one morning last week, at the home of his mother near Fairfield, Franklin county.

There lives at this time in Patoka township, Crawford county, an honored citizen named John Brock, who is now 88 years old, who participated in the battle of New Orleans in 1815.

The census of Marshall county shows that in 1840 there were 1,651 inhabitants; in 1850, 5,348; in 1860, 12,722; in 1870, 20,211, and in 1880, 23,374, making an increase of 3,163 in the last ten years.

Mt. Vernon boasts of fourteen persons in that corporation who average 86 years of age, and twenty others who are between 70 and 80. So says the Republican in one issue, while in the next is the following: "Two out of Mt. Vernon's octogenarians have died during the past week, viz.: Mr. Adolph Brinkman, aged 88 years and 2 months, and Mrs. Margaret Noel, aged 88 years and 26 days."

The New State Assessment.

The following is the total value of taxable property for 1880, by counties, in Indiana as reported by the County Auditors to the State Board of Equalization. The list is complete, with the single exception of Floyd county, which is given at the figures of last year:

Counties.	Valuation.
Adams	$ 3,446,526
Allen	16,090,485
Bartholomew	9,779,622
Benton	5,241,303
Blackford	2,058,410
Boone	9,805,290
Brown	1,544,780
Carroll	7,286,768
Cass	9,123,862
Clark	7,670,671
Clay	5,104,541
Clinton	7,717,066
Crawford	11,344,114
Daviess	5,337,199
Dearborn	8,147,040
Decatur	9,245,787
De Kalb	5,750,934
Delaware	8,543,290
Dubois	2,880,004
Elkhart	12,390,667
Fayette	6,841,182
Floyd	9,645,585
Fountain	7,283,107
Franklin	7,510,215
Fulton	4,882,356
Gibson	9,210,851
Grant	7,372,100
Greene	5,080,033
Hamilton	8,077,305
Hancock	7,478,475
Harrison	3,031,776
Hendricks	10,178,942
Henry	11,404,028
Howard	6,061,341
Huntington	7,064,095
Jackson	5,705,925
Jasper	2,678,814
Jay	3,686,539
Jefferson	8,340,639
Jennings	2,952,231
Johnson	9,805,010
Knox	10,099,255
Kosciusko	9,522,997
Lagrange	5,344,685
Lake	4,702,185
Laporte	12,195,570
Lawrence	5,743,200
Madison	9,382,220
Marion	66,759,285
Marshall	6,479,771
Martin	1,801,801
Miami	6,634,737
Monroe	5,158,985
Montgomery	10,492,005
Morgan	7,186,010
Newton	2,808,005
Noble	7,366,322
Ohio	1,702,480
Orange	3,437,135
Owen	4,941,555
Parke	9,198,467
Perry	2,232,110
Pike	3,472,814
Porter	6,348,950
Posey	7,164,340
Pulaski	2,534,171
Putnam	11,027,830
Randolph	10,792,025
Ripley	9,837,710
Rush	11,352,830
Scott	1,457,431
Shelby	13,071,400
Spencer	4,261,361
Starke	993,714
St. Joseph	[illegible]
Steuben	3,746,145
Sullivan	6,410,840
Switzerland	3,164,745
Tippecanoe	19,037,585
Tipton	3,450,990
Union	5,023,410
Vanderburg	20,003,105
Vermillion	5,689,099
Vigo	21,062,050
Wabash	10,079,215
Warren	5,802,020
Warrick	4,495,675
Washington	5,530,847
Wayne	24,093,242
Wells	5,758,145
White	4,721,749
Whitley	5,094,341

The value of real estate and lots without improvements, as reported by the County Auditors, has been increased by the Board of Equalization as follows: Benton, 10 per cent.; Daviess, 5 per cent.; Green, 8 per cent.; Hendricks, 5 per cent.; Henry, 5 per cent.; Miami, 5 per cent.; Newton, 10 per cent.; Warren, 6 per cent. Decreased, as follows: Fulton, 5 per cent.; Huntington, 5 per cent.; Pulaski, 10 per cent.; Starke, 10 per cent.; Sullivan, 5 per cent.; Wells, 5 per cent.; Whitley, 10 per cent. All were acted upon except Marion and Floyd.

The decrease of taxable property in Indiana since the year 1875 is $[illegible]0,047,788. Thirteen and two-thirds per cent. of this was on lands without improvement, 10 per cent. decrease on improvements, on unimproved lots 17 per cent.; improvements on lots, 9 per cent.; personal, 20 per cent., making an average on the total of 15¼ per cent.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
[illegible]
INDISCRETION—EXPOSURE
[illegible]
YOUNG MEN
[illegible]
PATIENTS TREATED
[illegible]
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster street, New York. Circulars free.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box.
Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport & J. R. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases. [illegible]
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
[illegible]
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
[illegible]
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
[illegible]
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE SAFE DIABETES CURE SAFE BITTERS SAFE NERVINE SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THIS
H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

IN USE SINCE 1855
MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS
A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.
[illegible]
NOT A BEVERAGE
[illegible]
THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH
[illegible]
THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO. Lancaster, Pa.
We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. [illegible] Price, 25 cents.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED!

MAKE NO MISTAKE.

Only Trained Giraffes in the World

To be seen only in the Great Forepaugh Show.

The Largest on Earth!

THE GREAT FOREPAUGH SHOW

Is Coming with its

TIDAL WAVE OF WONDERS!

And Will Exhibit at Auburn, nd., Afternoon and Evening,

SATURDAY, 14TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1880.

15 TRAINED ELEPHANTS

A HUMAN BEING SHOT FROM A MONSTER CANNON

Thousands Everywhere flocking to see the Wonderful Awe-Inspiring, Marvelous, Grand and Majestic and Miracle of the 19th Century.

An Entire New Show!

But no change of ownership! No change in the Unalterable Adherence of the Proprietor always to EXHIBIT ALL HE ADVERTISES!

16th Annual Tour of the World-Famed, Time-tried and Universally admitted

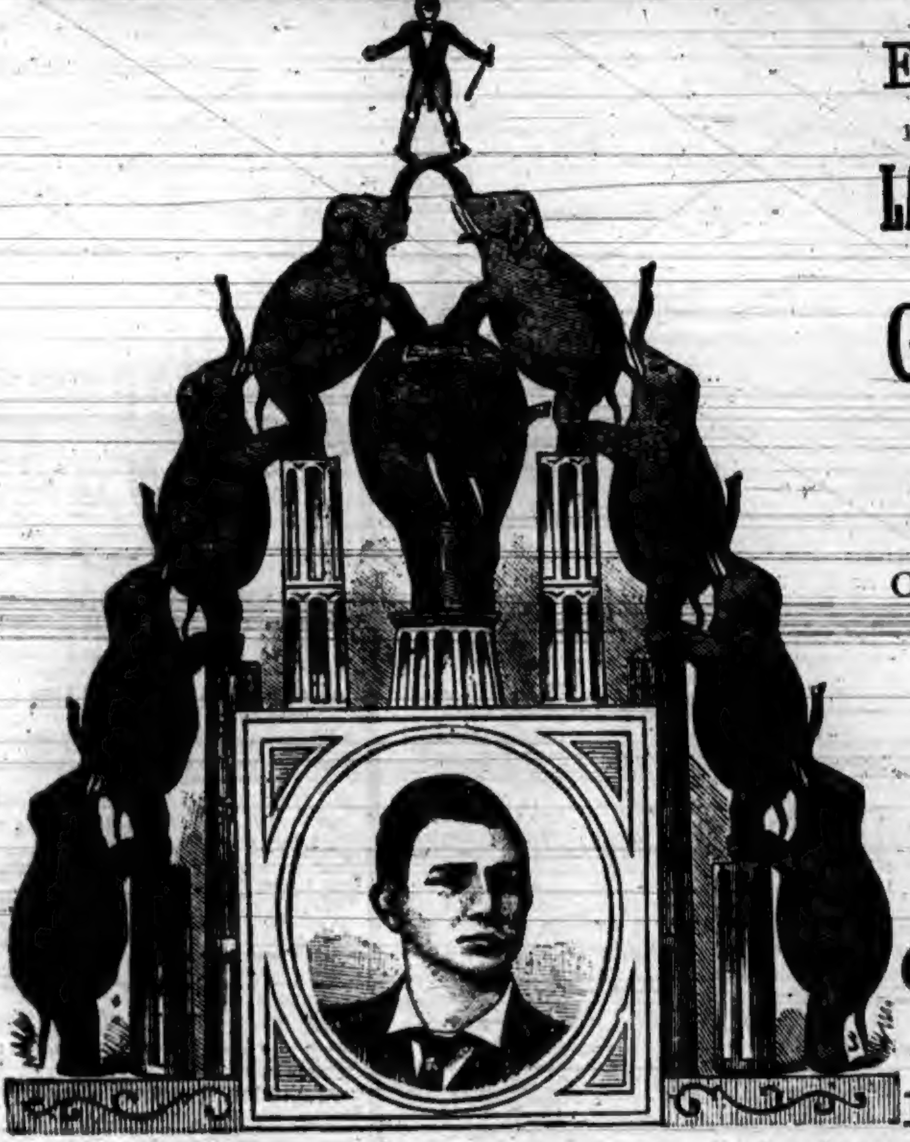
LARGEST EXHIBITION IN THE WORLD!

THE

Great Forepaugh Shows

A Mastodonic Consolidation of

20 Distinct Exhibitions



Owned by me during the past 16 years, and now massed into one colossal confederation, representing a cash investment of Two Millions of Dollars, all for a Single Holiday.

THE MOST

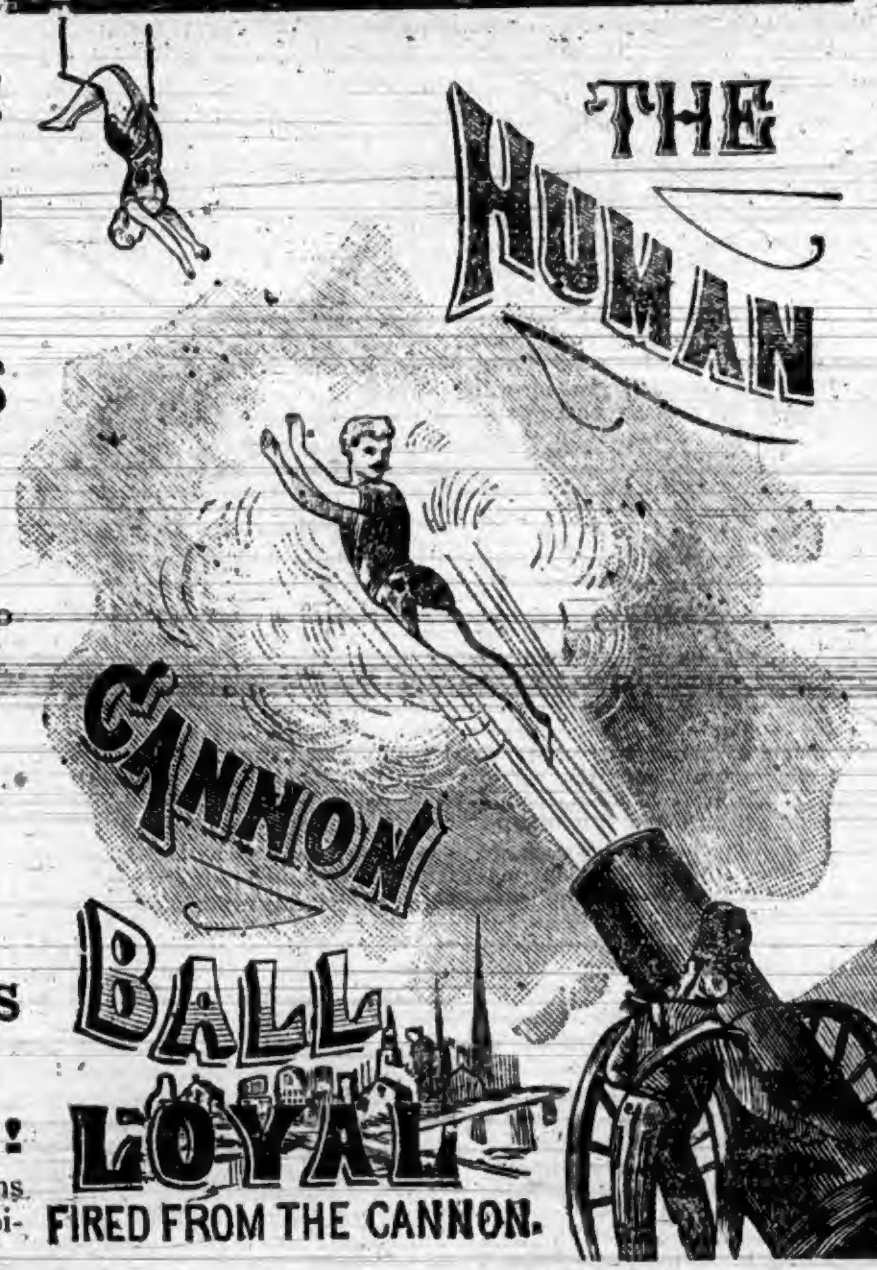
Stupendous Wild Beast Show

in the World. The only

Great Circus in Two Rings

Ever organized, with

100 Great Actors!



FIRED FROM THE CANNON.

Exhibits more startling and novel features, more Zoological novelties, spreads more canvas, owns morecars, horses, and more of everything, and is the oldest individually owned tented exhibi-tionın the world. The only exhibition that ever owned and introduced

15 PERFORMING ELEPHANTS!

In Addition to

1,500 WILD BEASTS!

Birds, Reptiles, and Marine Wonders, Leviathan Hippopotamus, Monster Rhinoceros, Sea Lions, Performing Lions, Tigers, Bovines, Bisons, Carrier Pigeons, Discipline Moose, Great Troupe of 15 Trained Arabian Horses!

The first and only Performing Giraffe ever seen on this continent, in the Colossal Circus, in addition to 40 male and female Riders; 25 Famous Acrobats; 20 Distinguished Gymnasts; 15 Ideal Clowns, Pantomimists and Jesters: Trained Horses Leaping through Fire; Living Wonders from everywhere; Indian Kaffirs and Hottentots! A Human Being Fired From a Cannon loaded with powder, and sent whirling through space and caught by a lady hanging head downward on the lofty trapeze. This wonder-moving feat performed at each exhibition by Mons. Loyal, the "human-cannon ball." First appearance of the only Art Female Blondin, M'lle Ella Zuila, who crosses the high wire 60 feet above the heads of the audience, blindfolded and with her feet encased in sacks, and crosses it carrying a man upon her back. These famous aerialists appear for the first time before the public of this country, engaged in Europe for the Great Forepaugh Show, at a salary of $2,000 per week. The only exhibition using the new and wonderful EDISON ELECTRIC LIGHT, requiring a 50-horse high-pressure engine to produce the same. Mammoth pavilions holding 10,000 spectators. The Entire Show transported on my own three great railway trains. Behold the monster free for all Street Procession! By this we prove that the Great Forepaugh Show is the greatest of all great shows. It starts from the show grounds every exhibition day, between 9 and 10 o'clock a. m. Admission 50 cents; children under 9 years, 25 cents. Two exhibitions each day, first at 2:30, second at 8 p. m.; pavilions open 1 hour previous. Excursion trains and reduced rates on all railroads on the day of exhibition. See bills for details.

Adam Forepaugh, Sole Prop'r.

DO NOT FORGET---SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1880.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, AUGUST 19, 1880. Number 34.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $[illegible] per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. T. [illegible] HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN & SURGEON AUBURN.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Halston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 28 1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gansenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and [illegible] Auburn.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

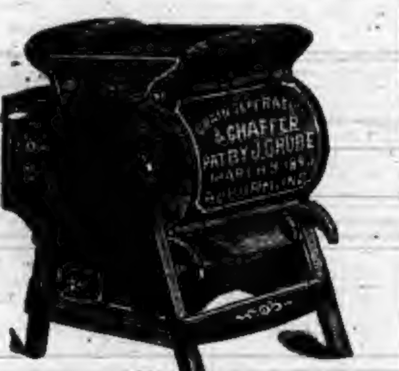
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn, Indiana. 38-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

DAVID DAVIS FOR HANCOCK,

Whom He Considers One of the Wisest Men.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., August 4.

MY DEAR SIR: The training and the habits of my life naturally lead me to prefer civilians to soldiers for the great civil trust, but as parties are organized voters must choose between the candidates they present or must stand aloof, indifferent or neutral, which no good citizen ought to do at a presidential election. I have no hesitation in supporting General Hancock for the best of all reasons to my mind; because his election will put an end to a sectional strife and sectional parties, and will revive a patriotic sentiment over the land, which political leaders and factions for sinister ends have sought to prevent. There can be no permanent prosperity without pacification. Great as were the achievements of General Hancock in war his conduct in peace when in command of Louisiana and Texas, in 1867, was still greater, and justly commends him to the confidence of the country. That was a time when passion ruled in the public councils and military power was exerted to silence civil authority. Temptation was strong to sail with the rushing current for an inflamed, partisan opinion, was too ready to condone excesses and to applaud oppression. General Hancock's order No. 40, in assuming charge of the fifth military district, announced that the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be respected. These principles are the basis of free government, and the proclamation of them by General Hancock stands out in striking contrast with the action of his superior, who soon after rebuked and drove him from that command for uttering sentiments worthy of a soldier. The soldier, clothed with extraordinary power, voluntarily uncovered before the civil authority, sheathed his sword, testified his fidelity to the constitution and set an example of obedience to law, which will pass into history as his soundest claim to distinction. [illegible] gloomy period, was cool enough to see his duty clearly and courageous enough to execute it firmly, may well be trusted in any crisis. His letter to General Sherman, recently brought to light, lifts General Hancock far above the past appreciation of his civil ability. It marks him as one of the wisest men of his time, with a statesmanlike grasp of mind and the integrity of a patriot, whom no sense of expediency could swerve from his honest convictions. A long and unchecked position of power by any party leads to extravagance, corruption and loose practices. After twenty years of domination by the republicans, chronic abuses have become fastened on the public service like barnacles on the bottom of a stranded ship. There is no hope of reform by leaders who have created a system of maladministration, and who are interested in perpetuating its evils. Nothing short of the sternest remedy gives promise of effective reform, and the first step towards it is in a change of rules. The government must be got out of the ruts in which it has too long been run. New blood must be infused into the management of public affairs before relief can be expected. The people demand a change, and being in earnest are likely to be gratified. Very sincerely.

[Signed] DAVID DAVIS.

To Hon. JAMES E. HARVEY,
Washington City.

Harmony in New York.

[Albany Times, Kelly Organ.]

There has never been any doubt of the thorough harmony of the democracy of this state in support of Hancock and English. The withdrawal of the anti-Tilden electoral ticket was a matter of course, as soon as Mr Tilden ceased to be a candidate. There being no Tilden ticket, the reason for an anti-Tilden ticket no longer existed; and the electors nominated on that ticket have very cheerfully and very properly withdrawn, so there may be but one set of democratic electors in the field. The presidential electors headed by Abram S. Hewitt are now Hancock and English electors, and as such will receive the votes of all the democrats in the state of New York. It will not be the fault of that wing of the democracy which the Evening Times represents if the electoral ticket which we place at the head of our columns today shall not be elected by 50,000 majority. We shall all exert ourselves to the utmost to make the majority for Hancock and English as large as possible. And we hope to see a union democratic state convention which will perfect the same harmony in other respects as is now assured in regard to the national issue.

Apropos of recent correspondence between Assitant-Quartermaster Hutchings and an Indiana general, we produce herewith two letters, which tell their own story. They have been rescued from oblivion by a skilled antiquarian. The correspondence was suppressed at the time, or it would probably have prevented the re-election of President Washington. The letters are as follows:

BOSTON, July 1, 1792.

DEAR GENERAL:—Now that President Washington's re-election is spoken of, I wish to see if I am right in recollecting a conversation with you, just after the battle of Brandywine. Didn't you say to me that General Washington, on the night before that battle, came into your tent, and after we had taken five or six tumblers of whisky, declared that he should not fight much to-morrow, because the young Frenchman, Lafayette, would get all the glory? I so recollect the statement, and I know we observed that G. W. did not try to fight, when the engagement came on. I never mentioned this, nor have I thought of it till now, and this shows what an impression it made on me, for now I recollect it distinctly. I am respectfully your obedient servant.

V. D. CILLERY.

To the Hon. A. N. A. Nyass, Esq., General, etc.

ROARBACK, July 15, 1792.

MY DEAR CORPORAL:—Your esteemed favor revives my recollection. Although many years have passed, and although I doubted at first whether I said it, and whether I said it to you, or whether we were in condition to recollect, I now entertain no doubt that General Washington did make the remark attributed to him at the time and place in the presence of twelve or fifteen persons. I remember his remarking that he did not support the marquis as he ought. The war might have been ended if G. W. had done his duty that day.

I remain, dear corporal,
Yours in the cause of truth.
A. N. A. NYASS.

P. S.—I hear General Wayne is talking up Washington. Wayne was the greatest coward I ever knew for a soldier. He got his name of "Mad Anthony," because he was so mad when he was ordered to attack Stony Point.

Truly. A. N. A. N.

WHAT BALDWIN SAID.

The Republican Candidate for Attorney General on Mr. Garfield.

[Kokomo Dispatch.]

The Logansport Journal, one of the leading republican papers of the state, owned and controlled by Hon. D. P. Baldwin—republican nominee for state attorney general—said in its issue of March 26, 1873:

> Hon. J. A. Garfield's republican constituents of Trumbull county, Ohio, in convention assembled, have requested him to resign, declaring that by voting for the salary grab he has forfeited their confidence. That's the talk. Repudiate all of them, promptly and unequivocally.

In its issue of February 8, 1873, the Journal said:

> Public opinion acquits Senator Wilson and Representative Dawes of all blame in connection with the Credit Mobilier. Garfield, Bingham and Kelly have the stock, have drawn dividends, and will have to bear the consequences; which, so long as their votes are not connected with the stock, will not be so dreadfully serious, perhaps, but still it won't pay them a large per cent. in the long run.

One week later the same high republican source said:

> The Pattersons, Pomeroys and Camerons of the party cannot check its high mission. The Wilsons, Colfaxes, Binghams, Dawes and Garfield of the party are not essential to its existence, and if they are left by the wayside, scorched by the fiery trial of investigation, other leaders, without the smell of its smoke upon their garments, will take their place.

When the Journal was uttering the above virtuous protests against General James A. Garfield, it did not dream that he would one day be the party's choice for president. But, now, since by an accident of politics, Garfield is placed at the head of the republican ticket, the Journal is confronted with its own recorded condemnation of the man its party has chosen its leader. Without denying or recanting its former utterances the Journal is shocked that democratic journals should quote its own words against Garfield, and let off its indignation, in its issue of July 16, as follows:

> The party that could resort to such vile slanders to break down a man who has served his country with such distinguished gallantry as General Garfield has done, is unworthy the support of the American people, and deserves and will receive their condemnation.

This verifies the assertion of the Dispatch of recent date. When a democrat criticises Garfield's civil record, the republican organs yell out: "Garfield is a soldier." And when Hancock's military achievements are touched on these same radical sheets shout: "Garfield is a statesman." The Journal is unable to swallow itself on the matter of Garfield's record.

FOR FIFTY CENTS

—THE—

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL

Hon. Henry Watterson editor, will be found, as usual, at the front in the present presidential canvass. As the representative southern paper and a leading organ of the democratic party in the United States, it will be a guide to democrats throughout the land, valuable to the fair-minded everywhere and full of instructive points to republicans. As a family newspaper it will continue, as now, to be filled with attractive features for the home and family circle. Fifty cents will secure the Weekly Courier-Journal until January 1st, 1881, from time subscription is received, or eleven copies for five dollars.

The regular yearly subscription price of Weekly Courier-Journal will remain the same—$2 a year, with a premium, to be selected by subscribers from our premium lists, or $1.50 a year without premium. For clubs of five and over, $1.25 each a year. Address

W. N. HALDEMAN,
President Courier-Journal Co., Louisville, Ky.

Still They Come.

Col. Henry B. Hayes, of Pittsburgh, who has espoused the cause of Hancock, has been a life-long republican, and one of the most energetic ones in Allegheny county. He is one of the wealthiest coal-operators in the valley, and has always contributed largely of his means to insure the success of the republican ticket in times past. He was at one time secretary of the legation to Denmark, and has a gallant war record. His change of political faith will have a great effect upon thousands of coal miners, who have always looked up to him as a leader and a guide in political matters. The announcement of his allegiance to Gen. Hancock fell like a chilling frost on the republican party of Allegheny county, and as he is a man of irreproachable record, and commands the respect of all classes, they have not presumed to express any open opinion in the matter, but are waiting apathetically to see who the next convert will be

Disappearance of Ira W. Nash.

The local papers say that on last Thursday morning Mr. Ira W. Nash left Goshen without a word of warning to anybody, and up to this time nothing has been heard of his whereabouts, except a letter received the next day from him at Chicago, in which he stated that he did not know when he would return. He had been cashier of the First National Bank of that city for the last ten or fifteen years, and his relations with that institution have always been of the most satisfactory character, and we are informed that nothing has yet been developed to compromise his honor with the financial affairs of the bank. There are all kinds of rumors in regard to his continued absence, but it is hoped by his many friends that he will soon put in an appearance and clear the matter up. His wife and child have been absent for three or four weeks on a visit to her parents in Lagrange county, but whether she knows anything of his wanderings we have not been able to

Removed!

The undersigned having just completed their commodious building on the corner of Seventh and Main streets,--built especially for the hardware trade---are now placing the largest stock of

HARDWARE!

Ever shown in DeKalb county. The stock is complete in every particular, including

STOVES, TINWARE, WOODENWARE, BAR - IRON,

WOOD AND IRON PUMPS.

GAS PIPE, PAINTS, OILS, PAINT,

WHITEWASH AND HORSE BRUSHES,

Belting, Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

CARPENTERS' TOOLS, GRINDSTONES, CORDAGE,

From a fish-line up to the heaviest cable,

WHIPS, HUNTERS' Supplies, CROSSCUT SAWS, CUTLERY

And an endless assortment of Shelf goods. Our facilities for handling light and heavy hardware enable us to offer bargains in every branch of our trade, and wo are bound to sell at

VERY LOW PRICES.

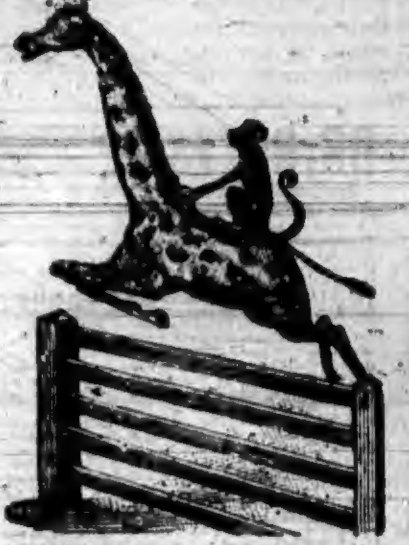
We are thankful for past patronage, and hope to meet our many old customers at our new quarters. Come and see our new store and immense stock.

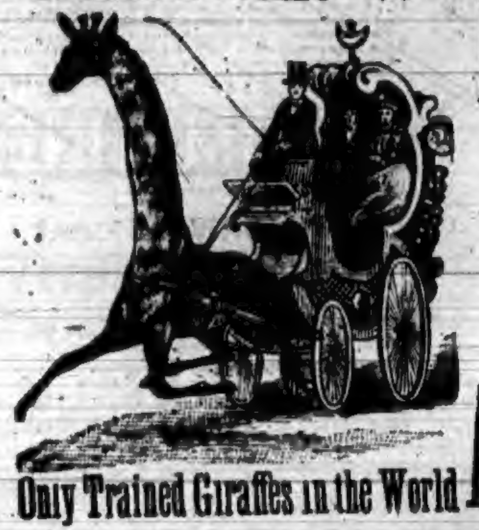
Auburn, Ind., Aug. 7th, 1880. W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED!

MAKE NO MISTAKE.

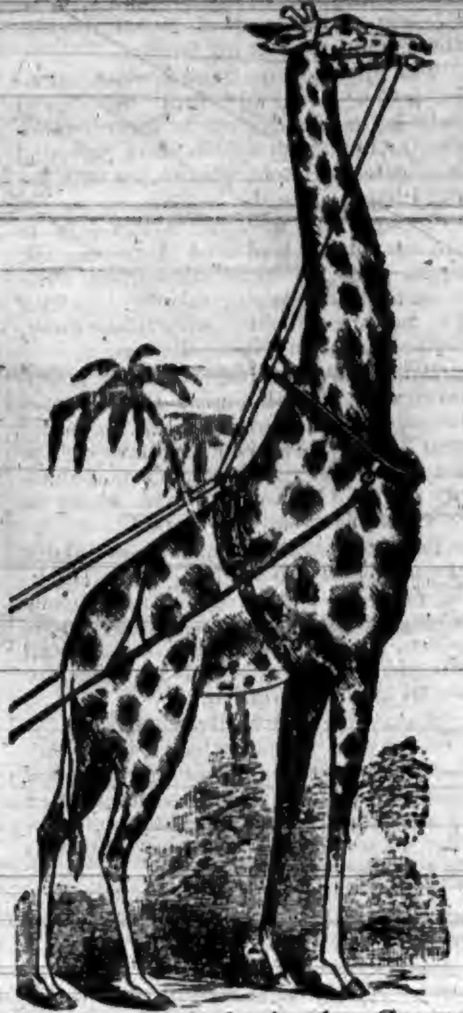
The Largest on Earth!





Only Trained Giraffes in the World

THE GREAT FOREPAUGH SHOW



To be seen only in the Great Forepaugh Show.

Is Coming with its

TIDAL WAVE OF WONDERS!

And Will Exhibit at Auburn, nd., Afternoon and Evening,

SATURDAY, 14TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1880.

15 TRAINED ELEPHANTS

Thousands Everywhere flocking to see the Wonderful Awe-Inspiring, Marvelous, Grand and Majestic and Miracle of the 19th Century.

A HUMAN BEING SHOT FROM A MONSTER CANNON

An Entire New Show!

But no change of ownership! No change in the Unalterable Adherence of the Proprietor always to EXHIBIT ALL HE ADVERTISES!

16th Annual Tour of the World-Famed, Time-tried and Universally admitted

LARGEST EXHIBITION IN THE WORLD!

THE

Great Forepaugh Shows

A Mastodonic Consolidation of

20 Distinct Exhibitions

Owned by me during the past 16 years, and now massed into one colossal confederation, representing a cash investment of Two Millions of Dollars, all for a Single Holiday.

THE MOST

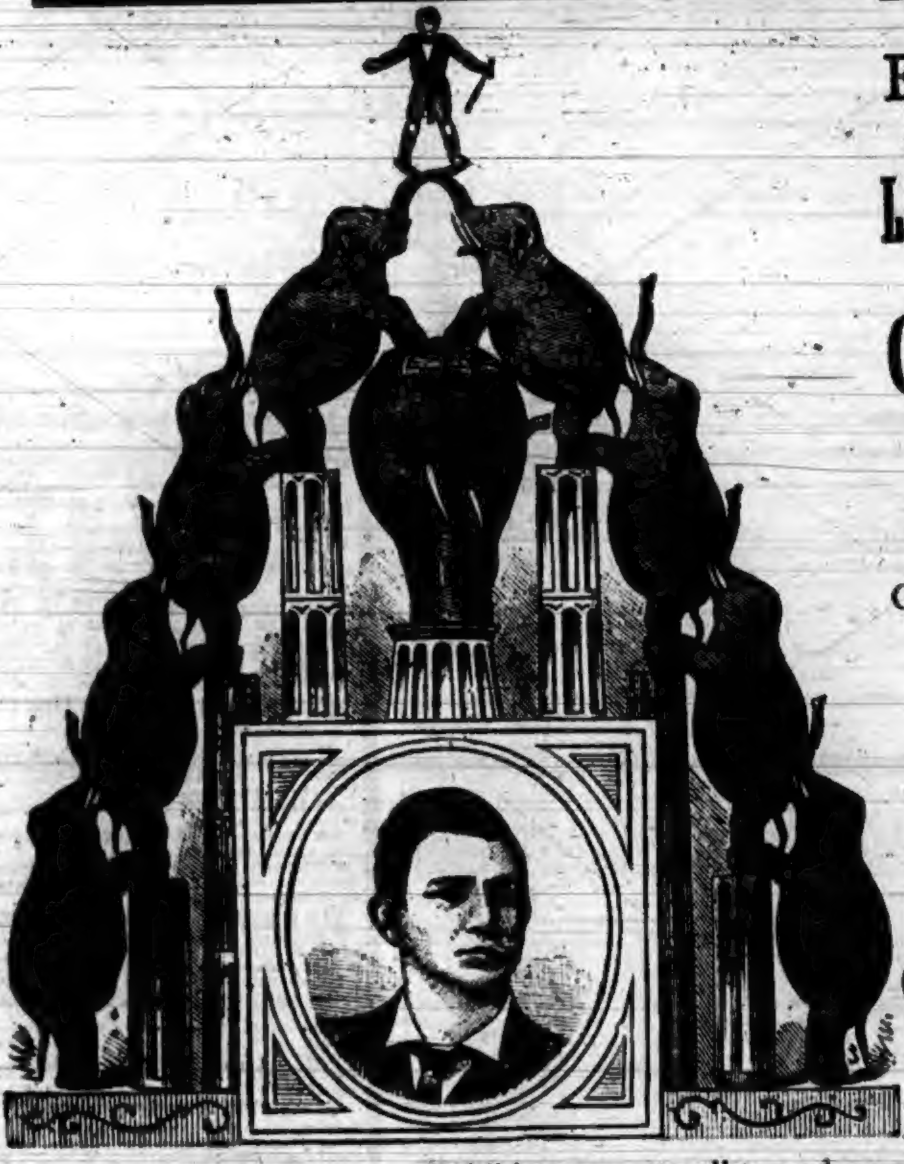
Stupendous Wild Beast Show

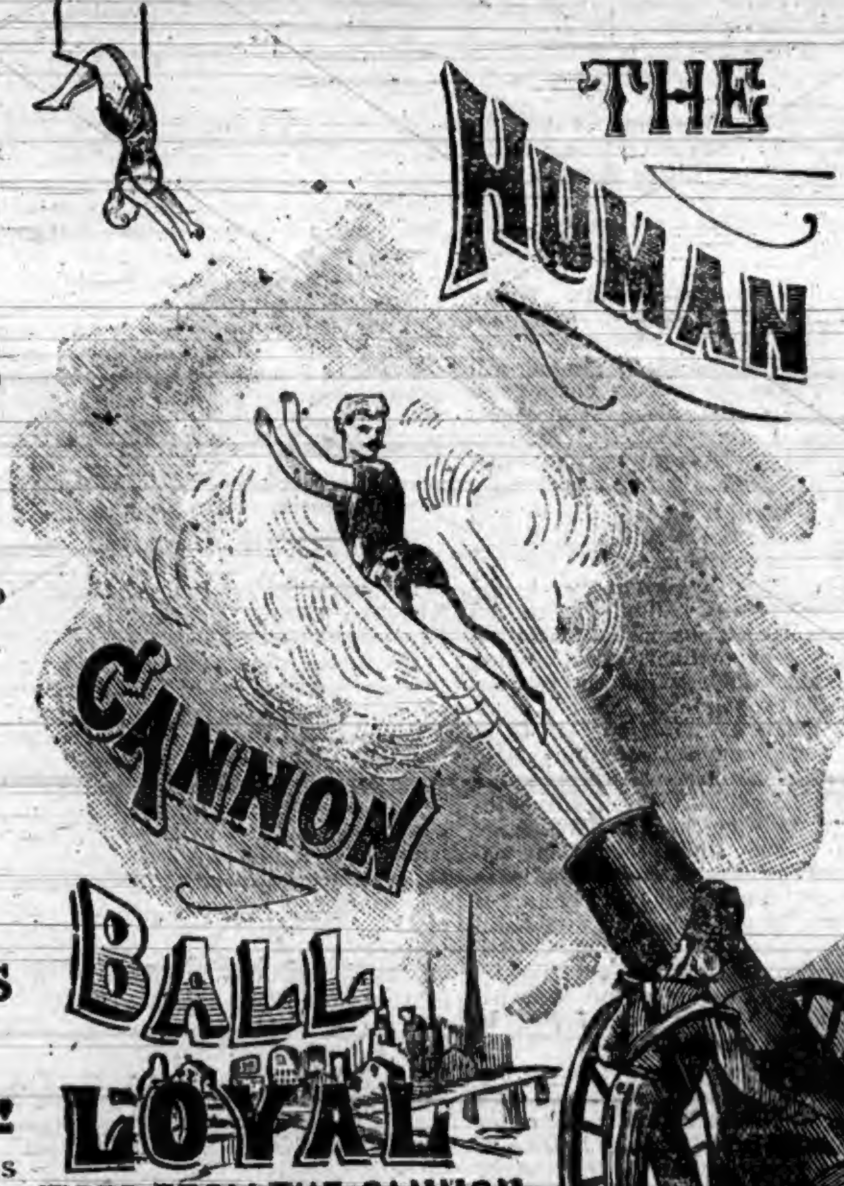
in the World. The only

Great Circus in Two Rings

Ever organized, with

100 Great Actors!



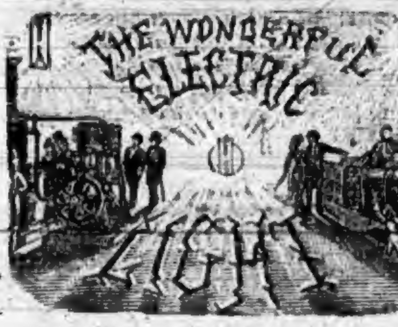


THE HUMAN CANNON BALL LOYAL

FIRED FROM THE CANNON.

Exhibits more startling and novel features, more Zoological novelties, spreads more canvas, owns more cars, horses, and more of everything, and is the oldest individually owned tented exhibition in the world. The only exhibition that ever owned and introduced

15 PERFORMING ELEPHANTS!



In Addition to

1,500 WILD BEASTS!

Birds, Reptiles, and Marine Wonders, Leviathan Hippopotamus, Monster Rhinoceros, Sea Lions, Performing Lions, Tigers, Bovines, Bisons, Carrier Pigeons, Discipline Moose, Great Troupe of 15 Trained Arabian Horses!

The first and only Performing Giraffe ever seen on this continent, in the Colossal Circus, in addition to 40 male and female Riders; 25 Famous Acrobats; 20 Distinguished Gymnasts; 15 Ideal Clowns, Pantomimists and Jesters: Trained Horses Leaping through Fire; Living Wonders from everywhere; Indian Kaffirs and Hottentots! A Human Being Fired
From a Cannon loaded with powder, and sent whirling through space and caught by a lady hanging head downward on the lofty trapeze. This wonder-moving feat performed at each exhibition by Mons. Loyal, the "human cannon ball."
First appearance of the only Art Female Blondin, M'lle Ella Zuila, who crosses the high wire 60 feet above the heads of the audience, blindfolded and with her feet encased in sacks, and crosses it carrying a man upon her back. These famous aerialists appear for the first time before the public of this country, engaged in Europe for the Great Forepaugh Show, at a salary of $2,000 per week. The only exhibition using the new and wonderful EDISON ELECTRIC LIGHT, requiring a 50-horse high-pressure engine to produce the same. Mammoth pavilions holding 10,000 spectators.
The Entire Show transported on my own three great railway trains. Behold the monster free for all Street Procession! By this we prove that the Great Forepaugh Show is the greatest of all great shows. It starts from the show grounds every exhibition day, between 9 and 10 o'clock a. m. Admission 50 cents; children under 9 years, 25 cents. Two exhibitions each day, first at 2:30, second at 8 p. m.; pavilions open 1 hour previous. Excursion trains and reduced rates on all railroads on the day of exhibition. See bills for details.

Adam Forepaugh, Sole Prop'r.

DO NOT FORGET---SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1880.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, AUGUST 19, 1880. Number 34.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

[illegible] HOMEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN & SURGEON AUBURN

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Halston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 28 1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn, Indiana. 38-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R. tf Auburn Ind.

& CHAFFER
PAT. BY J. GRUBE

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

DAVID DAVIS FOR HANCOCK,

Whom He Considers One of the Wisest Men.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., August 4.

MY DEAR SIR: The training and the habits of my life naturally lead me to prefer civilians to soldiers for the great civil trust, but as parties are organized voters must choose between the candidates they present or must stand aloof, indifferent or neutral, which no good citizen ought to do at a presidential election. I have no hesitation in supporting General Hancock for the best of all reasons to my mind; because his election will put an end to a sectional strife and sectional parties, and will revive a patriotic sentiment over the land, which political leaders and factions for sinister ends have sought to prevent. There can be no permanent prosperity without pacification. Great as were the achievements of General Hancock in war his conduct in peace when in command of Louisiana and Texas, in 1867, was still greater, and justly commends him to the confidence of the country. That was a time when passion ruled in the public councils and military power was exerted to silence civil authority. Temptation was strong to sail with the rushing current for an inflamed, partisan opinion, was too ready to condone excesses and to applaud oppression. General Hancock's order No. 40, in assuming charge of the fifth military district, announced that the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be respected. These principles are the basis of free government, and the proclamation of them by General Hancock stands out in striking contrast with the action of his superior, who soon after rebuked and drove him from that command for uttering sentiments worthy of a soldier. The soldier, clothed with extraordinary power, voluntarily uncovered before the civil authority, sheathed his sword, testified his fidelity to the constitution and set an example of obedience to law, which will pass into history as his soundest claim to distinction. The man who, in the midst of the excitements of that gloomy period, was cool enough to see his duty clearly and courageous enough to execute it firmly, may well be trusted in any crisis. His letter to General Sherman, recently brought to light, lifts General Hancock far above the past appreciation of his civil ability. It marks him as one of the wisest men of his time, with a statesmanlike grasp of mind and the integrity of a patriot, whom no sense of expediency could swerve from his honest convictions. A long and unchecked position of power by any party leads to extravagance, corruption and loose practices. After twenty years of domination by the republicans, chronic abuses have become fastened on the public service like barnacles on the bottom of a stranded ship. There is no hope of reform by leaders who have created a system of maladministration, and who are interested in perpetuating its evils. Nothing short of the sternest remedy gives promise of effective reform, and the first step towards it is in a change of rules. The government must be got out of the ruts in which it has too long been run. New blood must be infused into the management of public affairs before relief can be expected. The people demand a change, and being in earnest are likely to be gratified. Very sincerely.

[Signed] DAVID DAVIS.

To Hon. JAMES E. HARVEY,
Washington City.

Harmony in New York.

[Albany Times, Kelly Organ.]

There has never been any doubt of the thorough harmony of the democracy of this state in support of Hancock and English. The withdrawal of the anti-Tilden electoral ticket was a matter of course, as soon as Mr Tilden ceased to be a candidate. There being no Tilden ticket, the reason for an anti-Tilden ticket no longer existed; and the electors nominated on that ticket have very cheerfully and very properly withdrawn, so there may be but one set of democratic electors in the field. The presidential electors headed by Abram S. Hewitt are now Hancock and English electors, and as such will receive the votes of all the democrats in the state of New York. It will not be the fault of that wing of the democracy which the Evening Times represents if the electoral ticket which we place at the head of our columns today shall not be elected by 50,000 majority. We shall all exert ourselves to the utmost to make the majority for Hancock and English as large as possible. And we hope to see a union democratic state convention which will perfect the same harmony in other respects as is now assured in regard to the national issue.

Apropos of recent correspondence between Assitant-Quartermaster Hutchings and an Indiana general, we produce herewith two letters, which tell their own story. They have been rescued from oblivion by a skilled antiquarian. The correspondence was suppressed at the time, or it would probably have prevented the re-election of President Washington. The letters are as follows:

BOSTON, July 1, 1792.

DEAR GENERAL:—Now that President Washington's re-election is spoken of, I wish to see if I am right in recollecting a conversation with you, just after the battle of Brandywine. Didn't you say to me that General Washington, on the night before that battle, came into your tent, and after we had taken five or six tumblers of whisky, declared that he should not fight much to-morrow, because the young Frenchman, Lafayette, would get all the glory? I so recollect the statement, and I know we observed that G. W. did not try to fight, when the engagement came on. I never mentioned this, nor have I thought of it till now, and this shows what an impression it made on me, for now I recollect it distinctly. I am respectfully your obedient servant.

V. D. CILLERY.

To the Hon. A. N. A. Nyass, Esq., General, etc.

ROARBACK, July 15, 1792.

MY DEAR CORPORAL:—Your esteemed favor revives my recollection. Although many years have passed, and although I doubted at first whether I said it, and whether I said it to you, or whether we were in condition to recollect, I now entertain no doubt that General Washington did make the remark attributed to him at the time and place in the presence of twelve or fifteen persons. I remember his remarking that he did not support the marquis as he ought. The war might have been ended if G. W. had done his duty that day.

I remain, dear corporal,
Yours in the cause of truth.
A. N. A. NYASS.

P. S.—I hear General Wayne is talking up Washington. Wayne was the greatest coward I ever knew for a soldier. He got his name of "Mad Anthony," because he was so mad when he was ordered to attack Stony Point.

Truly. A. N. A. N.

WHAT BALDWIN SAID.

The Republican Candidate for Attorney General on Mr. Garfield.

[Kokomo Dispatch.]

The Logansport Journal, one of the leading republican papers of the state, owned and controlled by Hon. D. P. Baldwin—republican nominee for state attorney general—said in its issue of March 26, 1873:

> Hon. J. A. Garfield's republican constituents of Trumbull county, Ohio, in convention assembled, have requested him to resign, declaring that by voting for the salary grab he has forfeited their confidence. That's the talk. Repudiate all of them, promptly and unequivocally.

In its issue of February 8, 1873, the Journal said:

> Public opinion acquits Senator Wilson and Representative Dawes of all blame in connection with the Credit Mobilier. Garfield, Bingham and Kelly have the stock, have drawn dividends, and will have to bear the consequences; which, so long as their votes are not connected with the stock, will not be so dreadfully serious, perhaps, but still it won't pay them a large per cent. in the long run.

One week later the same high republican source said:

> The Pattersons, Pomeroys and Camerons of the party cannot check its high mission. The Wilsons, Colfaxes, Binghams, Dawes and Garfield of the party are not essential to its existence, and if they are left by the wayside, scorched by the fiery trial of investigation, other leaders, without the smell of its smoke upon their garments, will take their place.

When the Journal was uttering the above virtuous protests against General James A. Garfield, it did not dream that he would one day be the party's choice for president. But, now, since by an accident of politics, Garfield is placed at the head of the republican ticket, the Journal is confronted with its own recorded condemnation of the man its party has chosen its leader. Without denying or recanting its former utterances the Journal is shocked that democratic journals should quote its own words against Garfield, and let off its indignation, in its issue of July 16, as follows:

> The party that could resort to such vile slanders to break down a man who has served his country with such distinguished gallantry as General Garfield has done, is unworthy the support of the American people, and deserves and will receive their condemnation.

This verifies the assertion of the Dispatch of recent date. When a democrat criticises Garfield's civil record, the republican organs yell out: "Garfield is a soldier." And when Hancock's military achievements are touched on these same radical sheets shout: "Garfield is a statesman." The Journal is unable to swallow itself on the matter of Garfield's record.

FOR FIFTY CENTS

—THE—

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL

Hon. Henry Watterson editor, will be found, as usual, at the front in the present presidential canvass. As the representative southern paper and a leading organ of the democratic party in the United States, it will be a guide to democrats throughout the land, valuable to the fair-minded everywhere and full of instructive points to republicans. As a family newspaper it will continue, as now, to be filled with attractive features for the home and family circle. Fifty cents will secure the Weekly Courier-Journal until January 1st, 1881, from time subscription is received, or eleven copies for five dollars.

The regular yearly subscription price of Weekly Courier-Journal will remain the same—$2 a year, with a premium, to be selected by subscribers from our premium lists, or $1.50 a year without premium. For clubs of five and over, $1.25 each a year. Address

W. N. HALDEMAN,
President Courier-Journal Co., Louisville, Ky.

Still They Come.

Col. Henry B. Hayes, of Pittsburgh, who has espoused the cause of Hancock, has been a life-long republican, and one of the most energetic ones in Allegheny county. He is one of the wealthiest coal-operators in the valley, and has always contributed largely of his means to insure the success of the republican ticket in times past. He was at one time secretary of the legation to Denmark, and has a gallant war record. His change of political faith will have a great effect upon thousands of coal-miners, who have always looked up to him as a leader and a guide in political matters. The announcement of his allegiance to Gen. Hancock fell like a chilling frost on the republican party of Allegheny county, and as he is a man of irreproachable record, and commands the respect of all classes, they have not presumed to express any open opinion in the matter, but are waiting apathetically to see who the next convert will be

Disappearance of Ira W. Nash.

The local papers say that on last Thursday morning Mr. Ira W. Nash left Goshen without a word of warning to anybody, and up to this time nothing has been heard of his whereabouts, except a letter received the next day from him at Chicago, in which he stated that he did not know when he would return. He had been cashier of the First National Bank of that city for the last ten or fifteen years, and his relations with that institution have always been of the most satisfactory character, and we are informed that nothing has yet been developed to compromise his honor with the financial affairs of the bank. There are all kinds of rumors in regard to his continued absence, but it is hoped by his many friends that he will soon put in an appearance and clear the matter up. His wife and child have been absent for three or four weeks on a visit to her parents in Lagrange county, but whether she knows anything of his wanderings we have not been able to learn.

Removed!

The undersigned having just completed their commodious building on the corner of Seventh and Main streets,--built especially for the hardware trade---are now placing the largest stock of

HARDWARE!

Ever shown in DeKalb county. The stock is complete in every particular, including

STOVES, TINWARE, WOODENWARE, BAR - IRON,

WOOD AND IRON PUMPS,

GAS PIPE, PAINTS, OILS, PAINT,

WHITEWASH AND HORSE BRUSHES,

Belting, Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

CARPENTERS' TOOLS, GRINDSTONES, CORDAGE,

From a fish-line up to the heaviest cable,

WHIPS, HUNTERS' Supplies, CROSSCUT SAWS, CUTLERY

And an endless assortment of Shelf goods. Our facilities for handling light and heavy hardware enable us to offer bargains in every branch of our trade, and we are bound to sell at

VERY LOW PRICES.

We are thankful for past patronage, and hope to meet our many old customers at our new quarters. Come and see our new store and immense stock.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 7th, 1880. W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

Reese Owens, a prominent pork-packer at Pittsburgh, has failed. His liabilities are placed at $100,000. The available assets are said to be quite small.

Complete census returns show the population of Brooklyn, N. Y., to be 566,939, an increase of 84,446 over the census of 1870. ....An Italian wife-murderer named Pietro Balbo was hanged at New York Aug. 6. He expressed the utmost sorrow for his crime, and appeared to be resigned to his fate.

The large rolling-mill of Kimberly, Carnes & Co., at Greenville, Pa., has been destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000....Ex-Gov. Bigler, of Pennsylvania, is dead....Nelson Phelps, of East Shutesburg, Mass., was married three years ago, when 20, to a girl of 13. They did not live happily together, and separated. The other evening he sought her out and invited her to take a ride with him. He drove to a piece of woods, took her out of the carriage by force, and, drawing a revolver, shot her six times. Then, reloading his pistol, and lying down by the dead girl's side, he emptied the seven chambers into his lungs and stomach.

Tanner's remarkable digestive powers and rapid recuperation have caused as much wonderment as his unprecedented fast. In the seventy-eight hours following the conclusion of his forty days' abstinence from food he gained in weight nearly twenty pounds, or at the rate of four ounces an hour. During this period he ate voraciously, and at intervals of every hour or so, his diet consisting principally of beefsteak, potatoes, toast, milk, wine, watermelon and fruit. Dr. Work (one of his attendants) says the fact that Tanner has such a great appetite and such remarkable digestive powers shows conclusively that he was not reduced to the condition of inaction, even by forty days' abstinence from food, and that he could have gone on fasting several days longer.

Three attaches of the Bellevue Hospital, New York, were drowned by the capsizing of a boat on the Shrewsbury river....A fire at Hunter's Point, N. Y., destroyed a large quantity of lumber, many canal-boats, and a few vessels. The loss is approximated at $500,000....The Federal Grand Jury at New York, which has for some time been investigating the Seawanhaka disaster, has returned indictments for manslaughter against four Government inspectors of life-boats and boilers, and the Captain and engineer and the owners of the steamer....The population of Massachusetts is 1,783,812.

One section of an excursion train returning from Atlantic City to New York ran into the rear end of another section, killing two persons and injuring twenty-five....Burglars blew open a safe at Clarkville, Bergen county, N. J., and took therefrom railroad securities worth $25,000 belonging to Mr. J. Edgar Hunt.

The excursion train accident near Atlantic City turns out to have been a more serious affair than first reports indicated. The deaths already number fifteen at this writing, and others are expected to die. The following description of the scene at the time of the collision is telegraphed from Atlantic City: "Of the persons on the rear platform of the first train some jumped to the ground and then rushed panic-stricken back into the cars. The locomotive came bounding on and crashed into the rear car, still standing upon the bridge, and with such force that the engine fairly plowed a furrow half way into the car, and lifting the roof of the car over the smoke-stack. The shock broke one of the cylinders of the boiler, and instantly scalding water was poured upon the affrighted and helpless occupants of the car. Rain had been pouring down, and all the windows of the car were down, and, the steam filling it instantly, added to the horror of the occasion and suffering of the victims. From out of the concealing vapor came the shrieks of women, wails of children, and yells of men. The people on the first train ran pell mell from the cars or jumped through the windows, and it was some time before they became sufficiently composed to make earnest efforts to rescue the injured and relieve their sufferings."

THE WEST.

St. Aubrey Angelo, a correspondent of the Liverpool (Eng.) Courier, was run over by the cars on the Union Pacific road, near Cheyenne, a few nights ago, one arm and one leg being crushed. He was found dead the next morning, with a bullet-hole in his head and a revolver lying by his side. It is supposed that after the accident, despairing of recovery, he shot himself.

The population of California is 863,000, a gain of 303,000 since 1870. The population of Nebraska is 452,442.

It turns out that the old man and woman arrested in Nebraska on suspicion of being members of the notorious Bender gang are first-class frauds. They were taken, last week, to the scene of their supposed crimes in Kansas. Upon arriving at the county seat of Labette county, no one could identify the man as old Bender, or the woman as his wife, and when the train from Cherryvale reached that point the question was settled, and the two would-be Benders pronounced frauds. They refused to give any reason for assuming that they knew so much about the noted butchers and their perpetrations....By the explosion of the engine of a threshing machine on a farm near Lakeland, Minn., three men were killed, and seven others injured more or less seriously.

Col. Grierson reports several engagements with Victoria's Apaches in the vicinity of Snake springs. He killed four or five savages and lost one soldier....A portion of a freight train on the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis railway became detached near Crown Point, Ind., and ran backward down a grade, colliding with another freight. Several men were injured, three fatally.

Most of the Indians in Oregon and Idaho are said to be restless and ugly, but the season is so far advanced that active hostilities are not looked for this year....Two sons of C. H. Nason and a son of H. C. Manning, of Chillicothe, Mo., were drowned at that place while bathing.

Charles H. Tardy, President of the Colored Relief Board, in St. Louis, has advices that 10,000 negroes will emigrate from Mississippi and Louisiana within the next two months....The work of revising the census returns of St. Louis, under the superintendence of Special Agent Sawyer and a corps of special enumerators sent out from Washington, has been finished, and the census of the city, according to the corrected returns, is 333,577, or about 170,000 less than Chicago. ....The celebrated flyers St. Julien and Maud S. trotted against time at Rochester and each covered a mile in the extraordinary short space of two minutes eleven and three-quarter seconds, being one second less than the fastest previously recorded time.

THE SOUTH.

At a grand ball at the residence of a wealthy planter, near Dallas, Tex., a young man danced a revolver out of his trousers pocket. The weapon was discharged, the ball striking a young lady in the leg, and glancing off into the shank of an unsuspecting youth near by. Amputation will be necessary in the case of the latter....An organization whose object seems to be a filibustering expedition against Mexico has been formed in Texas, and is said to be quite extensive and formidable.

Mr. Cash, Jr., a member of the notorious South Carolina dueling family of that name, has been fatally shot in a duel with Mr. Blair, of the Camden (S. C.) Journal. Blair had published some severe strictures on the elder Cash. The duel with Blair was fought with Winchester rifles at twenty paces, and Cash was killed instantly....A Georgia woman named Mrs. Gunnells, living near Americus, administered morphia to herself and nine children in the absence of her husband. When he returned he found them all in a deathly sleep. The mother and three of the children died. The others will recover....Gen. William O. Butler has just died at his home at Carrollton, Ky., at the advanced age of 93 years. He was an officer of the army in the war of 1812, and participated in the battle of New Orleans. He was for several years thereafter a member of Congress, took part in the Mexican war, and was a candidate for Vice President in 1848 on the Democratic ticket with Gen. Lewis Cass.

At Newburg, W. Va., Mrs. Halbritter and Miss Halbritter were walking on the railroad track, when a train came along and struck both of them, killing Mrs. Halbritter instantly, and inflicting injuries upon Miss Halbritter from which she died in a few hours.

Relative to the charges of fraud in the census of the South, Superintendent Walker says he has received no evidence, as yet, of unfair practices in that section, but that if he does discover indications of a swindle he will order another enumeration by disinterested parties.

GENERAL.

A gentleman entered a Montreal bank for the purpose of depositing checks amounting to $5,000. He laid his book containing $1,600 in cash in front of the receiving teller and stepped to one side to another official to get the checks marked. On his return the bank-book and cash were gone.

A building containing 60,000 pounds of bran collapsed at Montreal, burying one man and twelve boys in the ruins. One of the latter was suffocated, and several others were severely injured.

The soldiers' reunion at Columbus, Ohio, last week, was a big affair, the attendance being estimated at 60,000. Addresses were delivered by President Hayes, Gens. Sherman and Hazen and others.

WASHINGTON.

The postal business last year is summarized as follows: Letters, 868,493,572; postal-cards, 276,446,716; newspapers to subscribers and newsagents, 695,175,624; magazines to subscribers and news agents, 53,472,276; books, circulars, and miscellaneous printed matter, 300,845,480; articles of merchandise, 22,634,456. Grand total, 2,215,168,124. The matter all originated in this country.

There is a large demand at present for silver dollars, and the Secretary of the Treasury has issued an order providing for their transmission through the mails, free of postage, at the risk of the purchaser.

POLITICAL.

The Republicans of Michigan have nominated the following candidates for State offices: For Governor, David H. Jerome; Lieutenant Governor, Moreau S. Crosby; Secretary of State, William Jenney (renominated); Treasurer, Benjamin D. Pritchard; Auditor General, W. J. Latimer; Commissioner of the Land Office, J. M. Neasmith; member of the Board of Education, Edgar Rexford; Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. Glower; Attorney General, J. J. Van Ripper; Electors at Large, C. B. Peck and S. Stephenson.

The Texas Democratic Convention nominated Gov. O. M. Roberts for re-election on the first ballot....The Republicans of Connecticut have nominated Mayor Bigelow, of New Haven, for Governor, and William H. Bulkley for Lieutenant Governor.

The Georgia Democratic Convention balloted a week in a vain effort to effect a nomination for Governor, on account of the prevalence of the two-thirds rule. Gov. Colquitt received a majority vote in every ballot, but, owing to the bitterness of the feeling against him, he was unable to secure the requisite two-thirds. It was finally decided to leave the matter to the people, a majority of the delegates recommending Gov. Colquitt. The remainder of the ticket and an electoral ticket were nominated, and the convention adjourned....The Greenbackers of Michigan have nominated David Woodman for Governor.

The Democracy of Michigan met in State Convention at Detroit, Aug. 12, and placed in nomination the following ticket: Governor, F. M. Halloway, Hillsdale; Lieutenant Governor, E. H. Thompson, Genesee; Attorney General, Henry P. Henderson; Treasurer, I. M. Aleston; Auditor General, Richard Moore, Clinton; Commissioner of the Land Office, James I. David, Wayne; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Z. Truesdale, Oakland; Member of the State Board of Education, Albert Crane, Washtenaw. Electors-at-Large—Archibald McDonnell, Bay City; Peter White, Marquette. District Electors—William Faxon, H. J. Beakes, James S. Upton, Germain H. Mason, Hiram B. Beck, Jerome Eddy, Wildman Mills, William R. Marsh, James Dempsey....The National Convention of the Liberal League will be held in Chicago on the 17th, 18th, and 19th of September. Among other important business to be transacted will be the nomination of a Presidential ticket or the indorsement of one of those now in the field ....The Republicans of Gen. Garfield's district have nominated Judge Ezra B. Taylor, of Trumbull county, Ohio, for Congress.... There are two Democratic candidates for Governor of Tennessee. The regular Democratic Convention, which favors the payment of the public debt, have nominated Judge Wright, while the debt-repudiators have placed in the field Hon. S. F. Wilson.

FOREIGN.

The British Cabinet has decided to send a large body of troops to Ireland, in anticipation of serious disturbances there....A bloodless duel has taken place in France between the editor of the Gaulois and the member of the Chamber of Deputies for Cherbourg.

Without counting recent additions, the total number of British and Indian troops occupied by the Afghan war is 60,000....Sir Hercules Robinson, the present Governor of New Zealand, has been appointed Governor of South Africa, vice Sir Bartle Frere, recalled.

Dispatches from Candahar, India, say that the British troops were provisioned for thirty days, and that their defensive works were considered proof against any attack....The discovery of another Nihilistic plot, followed by many arrests, is reported from St. Petersburg.... A Rome dispatch announces the formation of a new association for the collection of contributions for the relief of the necessities of the Pope. The daily tribute asked of all Catholics by the association is stated to be 1 centime per diem. ....An Italian who was sentenced to four years' imprisonment for some offense determined to starve himself to death, and died at the end of a thirty-days' fast.... A telegram from Aden, Arabia, reports that the steamer Jeddah, from Singapore, foundered off Guardanio with 953 pilgrims for Joddah. All on board perished except the Captain, his wife, the chief engineer and sixteen natives.

The report of the foundering of the British steamer Jeddah, in the Red sea, with 1,000 pilgrims on board, is unfounded....Seven persons were killed and twenty injured by a railroad accident on the Midland railway, in England, between Leeds and Lancaster.... Dispatches from various points in Ireland indicate that a rebellious movement of some magnitude is in progress....Greece is actively preparing for war with Turkey.

There are said to be now 170,000 Germans in London. An immense immigration has occurred since the war. The ruthless conscription and tyrannical Government of the Fatherland sends thousands of her sons abroad.

TANNER'S TRIUMPH.

Completion of the Most Marvelous Abstinence from Food Known to the World.

Dr. Tanner completed his marvelous forty days' fast at noon on Saturday, the 7th of August. We glean from the New York papers the following account of the closing scenes of the long fast: At high noon his time was up and his task finished. The crowd cheered Tanner enthusiastically. About 1,000 persons were in the hall, and an immense number of people on the sidewalk. The doctor drank a glass of milk and called for a Georgia watermelon. This he tapped, dug his hand into it, and ate heartily. When remonstrated with, he asked to be left alone, saying, "No, my lord; I am running this now." When he placed the glass of milk to his mouth he remarked, "Gentlemen, you don't believe that's good." The signal for the expiration of the fast was a whistle from the factory in the vicinity. When it blew Dr. Tanner had a peach in his hand, but before he could put it into his mouth somebody snatched it away. In response to the plaudits of the assemblage Tanner, who was sitting upon a chair placed on the table, waved his handkerchief over his head. At 12:15 Dr. Tanner got down from the table and left the hall in a coach in charge of Dr. Gunn, who took him to his own residence. Dr. Tanner weighed at the end of the fast 121½ pounds, a loss of thirty-six pounds in the forty days.

Just before noon the temperature of the doctor was 99; pulse, 92; respiration, 17. On leaving the hall the doctor walked unassisted down stairs with a slice of melon in his hand. He received an ovation from crowds in the streets, steps and windows, and exhibited much gratification at his hearty reception.

At 3:30 Dr. Tanner drank an ounce of light wine, after which he ate a small slice of watermelon. At 4:30 he was eating with great relish a piece of beefsteak. He did not swallow the fiber, but only partook of the juice of the meat. After 4 Dr. Tanner rested quietly. At 6 he asked for an apple, which he ate, and then asked for and received two more. At 7 he was given a beefsteak weighing half a pound, and partook of it. At 8 o'clock he drank one ounce of wine, and then slept until 10, when he awoke and chatted cheerfully.

The medical men were shown Dr. Tanner's blood as it appeared under the microscope. The blood corpuscles presented a very curious appearance. Instead of being rounded with the concavities plainly marked, they presented jagged or shriveled outlines and irregularity of form generally. Their color was also lighter, and they showed a tendency to collect together without forming the well-known "row of coins." The white corpuscles were greatly increased in number.

An affidavit detailing all the facts of the forty days' fast has been prepared. It is subscribed to by seventy physicians and others who were on watch during the fast. The following statistics are of interest: Total amount of water drank, 44½ pounds avoirdupois; highest pulse, 116; lowest pulse, 56; highest temperature, 100 4-5; lowest temperature, 97 4-5. The respiration varied from 13 to 18. The strength of his hands, as measured by the dynamometer, varied from 158 to 186 pounds with the right hand, and from 158 to 194 with the left hand.

Dr. Tanner spent Sunday, the 8th, at the residence of Dr. Gunn, and devoted the day solely to eating and sleeping. His diet consisted principally of beefsteak, potatoes, toast, watermelon, milk, wine, and ale. Of these he partook greedily about every hour or two. Eighteen hours after the close of his fast, the doctor weighed 130 pounds, a gain of nine pounds. The physicians are as much astonished at his rapid and easy recovery from the effects of his long fast as they were at the marvelous achievement itself.

Not to be Fooled With.

"G'wuffum heah, chile,—g'wuffm heah, I tole yer," was a caution given a boy vending Chinese torpedo-bombs on Madison street, yesterday, by an aged negro shuffling up from the Illinois Central depot; "doan' yer drop any mo' dem jimcracks roun' dis ole hoof of mine, or dere'll be a fune'l outen yo' house befo' sunup ter-morrower, shuah! Ise a talkin—yo'd better hoe anudder roe—g'wuffum heah!"

"Hi!" said the boy, derisively, improvising the symptoms of a tumor in his left cheek, and winking with offensive rapidity—"whose scare crow 're you, yer old knockemstiff—hey?" And with this he loaded up again and dropped the thing as near the venerable feet as caution and the length of the string would allow. "Who yer goin' to vote for?" he then inquired, jerking the bomb back.

"Whose scar' crow—whose—whose—looker heah, honey, I's a sour persimmon from de Yallabam—I'se a bull-dozer from the swamp—an' I'll frow whole gobs of sunlight froo yer in de cackle ob a spring pullet, if yer doan quit dat foolin' roun' my co'nfield." And with a movement as rapid as it was unexpected, the boy found himself in chancery between the patriarch's knees.

"Whoof!" he continued, laying down his grip-sack and spitting on his hands as a preliminary to active measures. "What'll yer gimme now ef I let yer off?"

In this exceedingly delicate strait, the boy's judgment came exceedingly into play, and his promises were brief, but golden.

"Now," said the ancient, lifting the boy up, and resuming his grip-sack in wonted serenity, "nex' time yer want ter fool roun' and get yo'self inter a muss, drappin' duffiggers on cullud toes, jes bar in min' ter keep well outen de reach of dis niggah's habees cappus—dat's all yer heah my ho'n?"

And then the "sour persimmon from the Yallabam" moved on.—Chicago Tribune.

Mormons in School.

Probably about one-third of the children are of Protestant parents and the others nearly equally divided between Mormons and Catholics. The poor little Mormons have the iniquity of their fathers visited upon them in the taunts of the other children. Sometimes they reply, "Well, my mother was the first wife, anyhow."

Sometimes they come to me almost broken-hearted, crying, "Miss Lawson, it isn't my fault that I'm a Mormon." I was talking with one of my oldest scholars about her home in Southern Utah, and asked her how many brothers and sisters she had; she answered, "Twenty-five." One man here has forty-four children, most of them living. Those who attend school are among the best scholars. One of his wives says all she wants to live for is to keep her daughters out of polygamy. She has two lovely little girls. The children talk and play a great deal about getting married. One boy about 10 years old told me he wanted more than anything else to get married and have a good home.

When school commenced not one of the children could repeat the Lord's prayer, much less the ten commandments. The "Old, old story" is new to them. I asked my Sunday-school class of large boys the meaning of "hallowed," as used in the Lord's prayer. They all thought it meant swearing. When I remembered they never heard the name in any other way it did not seem so strange. Last Sabbath the class thought Gethsemane was a city, and not one could tell which disciple betrayed his Master.—A teacher's letter in the Advance.

An Unwelcome Caller.

A Massachusetts census-taker thus describes the ungracious way he was sometimes received:

"My district was a portion of Dorchester, and on the streets allotted to me there resided the rich, the poor, and the middling classes. I was usually courteously treated, but here and there was obliged to fall back on my dignity as an officer of the Government before some of the more reticent ones would furnish the desired information." Mr. Dooley narrated several of his experiences, among them instances in which he was mistaken for a peddler, a book-agent, a tax-gatherer, and, not infrequently, a creditor's clerk, bent upon immediate settlement. As, for example:

Rings bell of a house on Cottage street. Woman thrusts her head out of a second-story window, and screams:

"What is it?"

"What is what, madam?"

"What do you want?"

"If you'll come down to the door, I'll tell you."

"I sha'n't subscribe for any magazine; you'd better go away."

"Madam, I am not a book-agent."

"What are you, then?"

"I said before I'd tell you at the door! My business is important, and my time brief!"

She came down, and, when she heard the object of his visit, remarked, apologetically, "I thought you were one of those everlasting book fellers that we can't get rid of after we once let them show us their trash."

A school-teacher, who didn't want to tell her age, replied, "Yes, I was here on the 1st day of June, but I didn't live here."

"Where did you live?"

"I have left all the particulars down at the school-house; you can get them there."

"I sha'n't go to the school-house, madam, except for the janitor's name."

"But suppose I don't give you any information?"

"Then, madam, I must compel you to talk!"

"How can you compel me to talk against my will?"

"I shall have to place you under arrest until my questions are answered!"

"But I have friends in this house who will protect me!"

"Madam, I am an officer of the United States Government, and these questions must be answered!"

She finally told her name in full, but refused to give her age. "Well, then," remarked the enumerator, "I shall have to set you down as 50."

"But I'm not 50. I am not a day over 39."

Down went thirty-nine on the list, which was, undoubtedly, in the vicinity of the spinster's age.

Arsenic in Colorings.

It is now well understood that arsenic is extensively used in the dyeing of cloth, and in the pigment of wall-papers, and that it has given rise to many instances of severe poisoning. In the former case the poison is mainly absorbed by the skin. In the latter, microscopic particles float in the air of the room and are inhaled. One effect of thus receiving it into the system is to destroy the red-blood corpuscles and thus diminish the nutrition of the nerve centers.

The following is a striking but typical case, and has additional interest from the glimpse it gives us of the considerate character of the present Queen of England:

A gentleman employed by the latter to do a piece of work was furnished a room in the palace. Though it was well warmed and every way comfortable, he found himself quite chilly after retiring, and at length his teeth began to chatter. Attempting to rise to get a large Spanish cloak to throw over him, he was unable to move, and he began to be affected with a severe and peculiar pain. He finally fell asleep from sheer exhaustion.

In the morning he noticed for the first time that the walls of the room were covered with a brilliant green paper. The truth at once flashed on his mind. On getting out of bed he staggered like a drunken man, and it was with difficulty he could dress. The fresh air soon restored him.

The Queen, on learning the state of the case, had a piece of the paper analyzed. It proved to be highly arsenical. At once she had the paper stripped from every room in the palace.—Youth's Companion.

The Leaning Tower of Pisa.

The leaning tower of Pisa was commenced in 1152, and was not finished till the fourteenth century. The cathedral to which this belongs was erected to celebrate a triumph of Pisans in the harbor of Palermo in 1063, when allied with the Normans to drive the Saracens out of Sicily. It is a circular building, 100 feet in diameter and 179 feet in extreme height, and has fine mosaic pavements, elaborately-carved columns and numerous bas-reliefs. The building is of white marble. The tower is divided into eight stories, each having an outside gallery of seven feet projection, and the topmost story overhangs the base about sixteen feet, though, as the center of gravity is still ten feet within the base, the building is perfectly safe. It has been supposed that this inclination was intentional; but the opinion that the foundation has sunk is no doubt correct. It is most likely that the defective foundation became perceptible before the tower had reached one-half its height, as at that elevation the unequal length of the columns exhibits an endeavor to restore the perpendicular, and at about the same place the walls are strengthened with iron bars.

Dr. Tanner Outdone by a Hog.

Seven months ago a straw shed belonging to John Patterson fell down on some hogs, turkeys and chickens, which, of course, all would suppose would be killed or die of starvation or want of air. A short time since Mr. Patterson was removing some of the straw, when, to his astonishment, one of the hogs was found to be still alive, but, as may be supposed, very thin in flesh. The hog would weigh at the time of its incarceration about 200 pounds, but on coming out of the straw it was nothing but skin and bones. In fact, it did not resemble a hog very much, but looked like some hideous monster. The above is true.—Cutler (Ill.) Cor. St. Louis Republican.

USEFUL INFORMATION.

Spirits of turpentine are good to take grease spots out of woolen clothes, to take spots of paint from mahogany furniture, and to cleanse white kid gloves. Cockroaches and all vermin have an aversion to spirits of turpentine.

Mix a half-pint of vinegar and a half-pint of milk. When they have formed a curd take the whites of five eggs and boil the whole together; sift into them sufficient quicklime to make the whole into a paste. It is a good cement to hold broken glass and crockery.

A beefsteak chopped up fine and baked with flour and yeast in the form of a "meat-bread" loaf is the latest dietetic sensation. It is asserted that meat thus treated entirely disappears during the process of purification, the nutritive principles becoming incorporated with the bread.

The best and most harmless hair-dye is made of litharge and lime in equal parts. Mix with water to make a thin paste. Care must be used in applying not to soil the skin, as it is almost indelible. When dry, rub the hair or beard to get out all the powder, and wash thoroughly. It will last for a long time. To make brown use more lime.

To remove stains: Dissolve one ounce of pure pearlash in a pint of spring water, and to the solution add a lemon cut in small slices; mix the ingredients well, keep the mixture in a warm state for two days, then strain it and bottle the clear liquid for use. A little of this poured on stains will remove them; as soon as they disappear the cloth should be washed in clear water.

White furs or ermine may be cleaned as follows: Lay the furs on a table and rub them well with bran made moist with warm water; rub until quite dry and afterward with dry bran. The wet bran should be put on with flannel and the dry with a piece of book muslin. The light furs, in addition to the above, should be well rubbed with magnesia or a piece of book muslin after the bran process. Dry flour may be used instead of wet bran. They should be rubbed against the way of the fur.

To wash towels with colored borders let them soak in a pailful of cold water containing one teaspoonful of sugar of lead; let them remain ten minutes before washing; to make the colors look clear and bright, use pulverized borax in wash water, very little soap and no soda. To wash red table linen, use tepid water, with a little powdered borax, which serves to set the color; wash the linen separately and quickly, using very little soap; rinse in tepid water, containing a little boiled starch; hang to dry in the shade, and iron when almost dry.

Remarkable Case.

Probably the most extensive case of skin-grafting ever attempted has been going on with gratifying success during the past year at Danielsonville, Ct. The patient, Jesse Morgan, 11 years old, fell into a vat of caustic potash on the last day of the year 1878. Both legs were immersed nearly to the hips, and the skin was so completely destroyed that a new growth was impossible. After some months of hopeless and excruciating pain, the older physicians of the place giving up the case as hopeless, a young man, Dr. George J. Ross, undertook to save the boy's life by skin-grafting. Over 2,000 grafts were used, the boy's mother, the family coachman, and many neighbors and friends contributing thereto. The process was begun in April, 1879, and, though the work is not yet complete, the legs are nearly restored to their natural functions. The boy is still weak, but can walk a very short distance without a crutch. The grafts are said to grow faster in the spring months

How Long a Base-Ball Pitcher Lasts.

Successful pitchers have very short lives in their positions, the most difficult at first to hit becoming easy game to the heavy hitters in about four years. Especially is this the case when he is put to pitch every game for a few seasons. Batters become familiar to his balls and his different motions in delivering them. Spalding retired in his glory, after a short period of six years. Mathews lasted seven years, but faced no heavy hitters lately for any length of time. Bond is now in his fifth successful season, but gets it hard occasionally this year, as does White, only in his third year. Nichols went out very suddenly, but did fine work for a few seasons after 1875. Cummings was great in the days of the lively ball. This chapter in pitchers' history teaches that the best pitcher will fail in about three years if played without relief. Two good pitchers will last a long time if changed every game.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Paper Rags—Advance in Price.

In the Chicago market the price of common print rags has advanced since July 1, forty cents per 100 pounds. Country-mixed rags are held firm at $2.65 per 100, being an increase of one-half a cent per pound above the price asked thirty days ago. The cause of this upward turn in the rag market is principally attributed to the scarcity of stock, which is the result of a thorough scouring of all sections of the country by rag gatherers since the boom in prices began nearly a year ago.

The rather sudden advance in rags has given a firm tone to the paper market, and manufacturers declare that they cannot make paper at present prices any longer. That there will soon be a general advance in the price of paper is very evident, if the manufacture of it is in any way affected by the price of rags.

The London Economist says hundreds of thousands of sheep, if not millions, have died of plague in England, and the Russian, Turkish, English and Afghanistan wars, as well as those of Turkey, Syria, Persia and the Tridan country, have caused tens of millions of sheep to be killed. In fact, wool-growing in Turkey, Russia, Persia and India has been almost given up, on account of the wars and the low prices current for the past five years.

Be bland in your manners and blind in your prejudice.

SPOTTED TAIL'S CHILDREN.

An Indian's Ideas of Corporeal Punishment in Schools.

[From a Washington Letter.]

The news that Spotted Tail, one of the Sioux chiefs, had taken his boys and girls away from the schools provided for them by the Government is no surprise to those who heard Spotted Tail, Red Cloud or others of the Sioux chiefs talk on that subject when they were here recently. Spotted Tail, with Red Cloud and others, paid a visit to the Indian school established at Carlisle, Pa., on the way here, and called there on their return to their Western homes. Spotted Tail, next to Red Cloud, is the finest-looking Indian who comes here. He was very much pleased with the things he saw at Carlisle, and so expressed himself. After talking to the Superintendent of the school and the teachers for a while he called his boys and had a talk with them privately. He learned from the boys that the rod was used when the boys did not do as they should, or when they sulked. Spotted Tail, after leaving, had a talk with the Superintendent, and he told him what he had heard. He asked if it was true. Upon being told that it was he answered, "Neither my boys or girls shall ever be whipped by any one with my consent. I will not leave them at a school, or any other place where the whip is used. A whipped boy is apt to grow up a whipped man. Unless he has some spirit or life in him it is better that he know nothing. A whipped man has neither spirit or life." He then turned to the Indian children and said to them in the natural tongue: "Don't let any one whip you, teacher or any one else. You have no master. Never allow any one to strike you a blow." An effort was made to satisfy Mr. Spotted Tail that the whipping administered at Carlisle was the same as at other schools and was only a slight affair. The idea of "sparing the rod and spoiling the child" was suggested to him, but he said he did not believe in whipping in any way; that any man who struck his child had better keep out of his way, and that he would soon draw his children from any place where they were liable to be whipped, it mattered not how slight. This withdrawal of his children is the result.

A Cure for Hydrophobia.

A lady handed a reporter the other day a slip of paper, asking him if he would not publish it for the benefit of the public. It was found to be a simple but effective cure for that dog-day terror, hydrophobia. The cure which experience has proven to be infallible is nothing more than the root of a common weed known as elecampane, steeped in milk. Elecampane grows in great profusion along many country roads in this and Rensselaer counties. It has powerful medicinal qualities, and milk is well known to be a specific for many poisons. The manner of administering the antidote will be learned by a perusal of the following history of this simple and wonderful cure:

In Chester county, Pa., lived a German named Joseph Emery, who used to be sent for far and wide, when any one had been bitten by a rabid animal. He went to his patient, carrying something understood to be a root, which he himself dug in the woods. He milked a pint of milk fresh from the cow, put the root into it, boiled it, gave it to the patient fasting; made him fast after taking it; gave a second and third dose on alternate days, and never failed in effecting a cure. In some way his secret transpired, and the root was known to be elecampane.

The story, current in the country, was that an old German made the discovery in the days of Penn, and applied to the Pennsylvania Legislature for a grant of $300 for making his secret public. His offer was treated with contempt, and he resolved that his secret should die with him, but a drunken son knew it, wrote out the recipe, making a number of copies, and tried to sell them at $1 apiece. He only succeeded in selling two, one of these to the man who made such effective use of it. So well did he establish the local reputation of his specific that in his neighborhood folks were not afraid of mad dogs. This man never failed to cure or prevent hydrophobia. In one case the spasms had begun before the first dose was given, and the patient recovered.—Albany Argus.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$7 00	@10 00
Hogs	4 65	@ 5 15
Cotton	11½	@ 11¾
Flour—Superfine	3 60	@ 4 25
Wheat—No. 1	1 06	@ 1 09
Corn—Western Mixed	46	@ 50
Oats—Mixed	39	@ 40
Rye—Western	82	@ 83
Pork—Mess	14 40	@14 50
Lard	7¾	@ 8
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@ 4 80
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	4 00	@ 4 20
Hogs	4 00	@ 5 35
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50	@ 6 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 25	@ 5 00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	88	@ 89
No. 3 Spring	80	@ 81
Corn—No. 2	35	@ 36
Oats—No. 2	23	@ 25
Rye—No. 2	65	@ 66
Barley—No. 2	74	@ 75
Butter—Choice Creamery	25	@ 26
Eggs—Fresh	12	@ 12½
Pork—Mess	15 75	@16 00
Lard	7½	@ 7¾
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 00	@ 1 01
No. 2	93	@ 94
Corn—No. 2	35	@ 36
Oats—No. 2	23	@ 24
Rye—No. 1	65	@ 66
Barley—No. 2	71	@ 72
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	93	@ 94
Corn—Mixed	33	@ 35
Oats—No. 2	22	@ 23
Rye	62	@ 63
Pork—Mess	15 25	@15 40
Lard	7¼	@ 7⅜
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	94	@ 98
Corn	39	@ 40
Oats	29	@ 30
Rye	70	@ 71
Pork—Mess	14 50	@14 75
Lard	7¼	@ 7⅜
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	95	@ 96
No. 2 Red	97	@ 98
Corn—No. 2	39	@ 40
Oats—No. 2	26	@ 27
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 00	@ 5 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	99	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 1	41	@ 42
Oats—Mixed	30	@ 31
Barley (per cental)	1 25	@ 1 75
Pork—Mess	15 50	@15 75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	92	@ 93
Corn	35	@ 36
Oats	25	@ 26
Pork—Clear	15 50	@16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 20	@ 4 75
Common	3 25	@ 3 80
Hogs	4 70	@ 5 25
Sheep	3 50	@ 4 60

AUBURN COURIER.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
Editor.

A LADY has just died at Delaware City, Del., who, for thirty-six days previous to dissolution, had not taken a morsel of food. She did not lose much flesh, and weighed shortly before her death 150 pounds.

THE Rev. De Witt Talmage, who has been lecturing out at Leadville, took in the dance-houses and gambling dens of that advanced town a few nights ago. At one place he declined the offer of a lively damsel to dance with him.

THE skies grow brighter for Ireland. The crops are said to be in a very satisfactory condition, and a large yield is promised. The money in the hands of the various relief committees will be quite sufficient to meet all pressing demands.

THE population of New Hampshire is 347,311, a gain of 29,011 in ten years. The chief cities are: Manchester, 32,458; Concord, 13,841; Nashua, 13,453; Dover, 11,693; Portsmouth, 9,732; Keene, 6,786. These six cities aggregate 77,963 inhabitants, and the gain in them has been 17,367.

MISS DORA YOUNG, a daughter of the late Brigham Young by his eighth wife, has left Utah, hating the doctrines of polygamy, and, with considerable money, will make her home in one of the States. She says the law against polygamy is a nullity, because the elders can arrange that no ceremony can be proved within two years, after which nothing can be done with offenders. Mormon women are working against the admission of Utah as a State until after polygamy is abolished.

THE late Sultan of Morocco was one day rowing on the lake with the ladies of his harem. The boat upset, and two men, at the peril of their lives, saved the whole party. "To have seen his Majesty in such an undignified position, and moreover with his ladies," writes Capt. Colville, "was a crime punishable only by death. The unfortunate men were accordingly walled up in a small room and left to starve or die of suffocation. Their skeletons were found while some repairs were being made in the palace on the present Sultan's accession.

THE following table shows the population of the principal cities of Ohio:

	1870.	1880.	Per cent. Increase.
Cincinnati	206,000	256,000	25
Cleveland	92,800	150,500	62
Columbus	31,274	51,300	64
Dayton	30,473	39,000	28
Springfield	12,652	20,500	65
Athens	10,006	16,100	60
Sandusky	13,000	15,000	15
Hamilton	11,081	12,300	11
Chillicothe	8,920	10,792	20
Newark	6,698	10,030	50
Ironton	5,686	9,000	60
Fremont	5,455	8,435	54
Tiffin	5,648	7,885	40
Urbana	4,266	6,308	48
Massillon	5,185	6,852	32
Wilmington	2,073	2,671	32
Wooster	5,419	5,900	16
Galion	3,523	5,634	60
Bucyrus	3,066	3,848	27
Van Wert	2,625	4,200	60

THE Lycoming Fire Insurance Company, of Pennsylvania, which started as a mutual insurance company in 1840, but which, by an addition to its charter in 1861, began to do business on the cash plan, is hopelessly bankrupt. The losses sustained through the Chicago fire crippled the company, and since then it has been doing a losing business. Since 1875 it has lost at the rate of $45,000 per annum, but by the peculiar tactics of its officers it managed to keep afloat. Its condition has been at length brought to light by an investigating committee. The management has been such as to warrant a criminal prosecution of the officers.

NOTWITHSTANDING the protests of friends and the fact that she will lose a large portion of her income by the operation, Baroness Burdett-Coutts persists in her determination to marry Ashmead Bartlett. Bartlett, who is an American, having been naturalized a short time since, is at present acting as secretary to the Baroness. He is 29 years of age and she is 66. In the will of the Duchess of St. Albans, who bequeathed her vast property to the Baroness, it is stipulated that if the latter shall marry an alien or a naturalized subject her interest in certain properties shall cease. It is estimated that her matrimonial venture will thus cost the Baroness £100,000 per annum.

A FEW days ago, while excavating for the foundations of a new store at the corner of Broadway and Grand streets, New York, an interesting relic of the old Whig party was dug up. At that spot, in the year 1838, stood the old Broadway House, which was widely known as the Henry Clay Headquarters. After the election of that year the Whigs erected a liberty-pole in honor of the success of William H. Seward. At the base of the pole, twelve feet below the present surface, was placed a square marble slab, upon which was chiseled the following inscription: "Erected by the Whigs and Conservatives to commemorate their glorious triumph in 1838. William H. Seward, Governor-elect, by 9,421 majority. New York, December 20, 1838." And this was the slab dug up the other day.

SOME of the most eminent scientific men now accept the view taken by Adhemar, namely, that continents have not been depressed, but overflowed by the ocean. Owing to the precession of the equinoxes, the mass of water is transferred from one hemisphere to the other once in 10,500 years, and the sun remains eight days longer in one hemisphere than in the other. At the present time the winters of the Southern pole are eight days longer than with us; the ice continent has consequently formed there, and the mass of ocean is to be found in the southern hemisphere, and the ice covers a space upon and around the South pole more than twice the area of all Europe. The extreme of cold at the Antarctic pole was reached about 600 years ago, since which time the climate has been becoming milder, while that north of the equator has been growing colder.

THE Washington correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial shows that the basis of Congressional representation has been changed after every census since 1790, as follows:

Year.	Basis.	Year.	Basis.
1790	30,000	1843	70,680
1793	33,000	1853	93,423
1813	35,000	1863	127,381
1823	40,000	1873	131,425
1833	47,700

A change in the basis will again become necessary, for it is estimated that, if the Congressional apportionment is not enlarged, the number of members to be elected in 1883 will be nearly 400, which would make an unwieldy body, and one which could not find accommodation in the present Chamber. The number of members is now 293, which makes a large assembly. It is estimated that if the basis were enlarged to about 170,000 the number of Representatives would be nearly the same. Continuing the present basis there would be about 380 members.

A FRUIT-PICKER is the latest invention. It is simply a ring or collar of sheet metal four or five inches high and the same in diameter, with the upper portion formed into half a dozen points like a crown, each point being covered with an indiarubber disk or shield to prevent the fruit from injury by contact. A socket in the side receives a light pole of any required length, and from the bottom of the ring or crown extends a light hose of cotton drilling, or other light material, to convey the fruit down to the hand of the operator, or into a basket, wagon, or wherever desired. Standing on the ground the operator reaches for the fruit, the points of the crown passing on each side of the stem, and a light upward shove easily detaches the fruit, and it drops down through the crown and hose. The operator can hold the pole in one hand and the hose in the other, or the hose can be hooked to a small, movable bracket placed on the pole for that purpose, thus allowing of handling the pole with both hands, or an assistant can manage the hose.

A Small Couple.

Germany can justifiably boast of having produced the smallest married couple that ever stood before an altar, in the persons of a miniature "Marquis" and "Marchioness," who have for some time past been exhibited on the Place du Theater, at Odessa. The "Marquis," a native of Kiet, is 30 years old and weighs only nineteen pounds, while his fairy-like consort, a young lady, born in Neumunster some 22 years ago, just turns the scale at thirteen pounds. At first glance this tiny pair, it is said, might be taken for a couple of scarcely-weaned babies, dressed up for a joke in the garb of adults, but on a closer examination the genuineness of their maturity becomes unmistakably apparent. A certain pleasant flavor of romance runs through the story of the circumstances that led to their union. Although they are both German-born wonders, leased by their parents to traveling showmen at an early age, they never happened to meet at the fairs and Kermessen of their native land; but a year ago, the "Marquis" being on exhibition at Moscow, while Fraulein Lilli was starring at St. Petersburg, they became aware of one another's existence through reading the newspaper notices of their respective characteristics, and entered into a correspondence, which soon led to a rendezvous and ultimately to the contraction of a matrimonial engagement. Now they take their professional rounds together, and are saving up their earnings with the object of retiring into private life in the Fatherland. Nuremburg could, doubtless, supply them with the most charming of dolls' houses, eminently suited to their minute domestic requirements.—London Telegraph.

Lime in the Tea-Kettle.

Every good housewife knows that an iron kettle used for heating water that holds lime in solution will in a short time become coated with that substance. This being a poor conductor of heat, it will of course take a longer time to heat the water than when the kettle is new. Copper or tin vessels do not become coated with lime. The reason is that iron has an affinity for lime, which the other metals have not. But this affinity can be overcome by coating the inner surface of the vessel with a compound of tannic acid and iron, which is soluble in water and will not precipitate lime. This is easily done. Take a new tea-kettle and put a handful of oak bark into it, fill with water, and keep it boiling for three or four hours, filling it up from time to time as the water boils away. The iron will get a jet-black coat of tannate of iron and will be proof against lime. Care must be taken that the kettle does not boil dry and become heated to redness. A heat a little below that point will destroy the coating. If the lime can be fully removed from an old tea-kettle, it can be coated in the same manner as a new one, but will require a longer time, and perhaps it will be necessary to repeat the boiling two or three times.—Exchange.

Drinks for the Sick.

The sick, especially those afflicted with fever, often suffer from intense thirst. The quenching of this without injuring the patient is a matter which requires knowledge and good judgment. Dr. H. H. Kane says that plain water, when taken beyond a certain amount, is very apt to disorder the stomach and bowels, especially in fevers, where much fluid and but little solid food is taken. Enough water to quench the thirst would certainly be enough, in most cases, to disorder digestion, or rather further disorder it, and so important is the little that remains of this function that we cannot afford to abuse it.

Small pieces of ice held in the mouth and allowed to dissolve sometimes answer the purpose, but not in the majority of cases.

Up to a certain point, the action of water taken internally, in fevers, is excellent. Aside from allaying irritation by quenching thirst, it flushes the kidneys, carrying off much of the effete material produced by the high temperature.

It has been found that the addition of certain substances to water greatly increases its powers to quench thirst.

This is especially the case with acids. One drachm of hydrochloric acid added to a quart of water will give it sufficient acidity to accomplish the desired purpose, while at the same time it adds to its pleasantness, and sometimes relieves nausea.

The use of acids in fevers is highly commended by some authors, and this is, I think, the best way in which to administer them. The same amount of sulphurous acid may be added to a quart of water when the bowels are loose or there is a tendency that way.

In these cases acidulated barley-water is pleasant and nourishing. The same may be said of toast-water.

In constipation, oatmeal water may be used in the same manner. A few tamarinds added to a glass of water will often assuage thirst and open the bowels gently.

Theory and experience both show that drinks made slightly bitter and somewhat acid slake thirst most effectually.

A weak infusion of cascarilla or orange peel, acidulated slightly with hydrochloric acid, was with Graves, of Dublin, a favorite thirst-allaying drink for fever patients.

Raspberry vinegar is a useful drink. Sucking ice is very grateful.

Sweet fruits, although at first agreeable and refreshing, must be taken with care and moderation, for they often give rise to a disagreeable taste, and are apt to produce flatulence and diarrhea.

Stanton and Jeff Davis.

An interesting and important scrap of history is published by the Toledo Journal, of what is alleged to have been Secretary Stanton's views about hanging Jeff Davis, on the authority of Gen. James B. Steedman as to a conversation with the Secretary on the subject. "The matter came up," says the Journal, "in a conversation about Horace Greeley being on Davis' bail bond. We give Gen. Steedman's words:

"'I have been very careful,' said he, 'not to make any public statement about it in all these years before, because I knew it would be denied, and I have no witness. It was the next day after Greeley had signed Davis' bond. I was standing outside of Willard's Hotel, and Secretary Stanton rode up in his carriage. Exchanging the compliments of the day, he asked me to take a ride "Where are you going?" I asked. He answered, "To Georgetown." I got in and we rode along, and the topic, then so exciting, was mentioned, and I said, "Stanton, when will Davis be tried?" "Steedman," he answered after a pause, "what do we want to try him for? All the questions of the war have now been settled by the arbitrament of the sword, and in our favor. Besides," after another pause, "we don't know how Chase would decide the question of State rights." Again, after another pause, as if thinking of the Southern leaders, the great man said, "Well, it was a bad place to put a man in. If he didn't secede with his State, his State would hang him; and, if he did, the Government would do the hanging." Then he added, reflectively, "No, we don't want to hang him."'

"Gen. Steedman then repeated," says the Journal, "that he had not spoken of this before, because he would be accused of slandering Stanton's memory."

An Ohio Woman.

Mrs. Prudence Glover, who lives with her daughter near Cincinnati, being one hundred years old recently, had a birthday party, to which many friends were invited. She showed few signs of having passed so far beyond the allotted age of man. She is perfectly erect, moves without support of cane or friendly arm, and would anywhere be taken for a woman of seventy-five. Her eyes are bright and her voice as clear as a girl's, and her laugh as merry. Her faculties are entirely unimpaired, with the exception of a slight deafness. She received her guests with cheerful greetings, welcoming old friends and making new ones at ease. The Rev. Mr. Hobbs made an address at supper, in the course of which he computed that Grandmother Glover's heart had kept time at least three and a half billion times to the march of life. "She has reached five score," he added, "with strength still firm, and vision clear enough to become a bride. And if any eligible centenarian of good looks and manly courage doubts it, let him pop the question. She might blush a little, I know, and appear somewhat coy, but, sir, press your suit, and there may be yet a sensation for the newspapers—a wedding in high life."

MRS. J. W. MACKAY, who has the distinction of being the richest American lady in Europe, has been subjected to a great deal of annoyance by the actions of a woman who personated her in Paris, and contracted large bills in her name.

SUFFERINGS FROM THIRST.

Experience of a Traveler Who Could Not Go Without Drink.

Dr. Tanner has found no particular difficulty in going for days without water. This fact has brought out all sorts of stories, and, in this connection, the experience of an Australian traveler is of interest. The story is related by J. E. Richter, in the Scientific American:

In 1864 I started alone on horseback over the stony plains in the vicinity of Lake Gardiner. The climate of this part of Australia is somewhat like that of the waterless, arid regions of New Mexico, Arizona and Lower California. It was in the middle of summer and the days were dreadfully hot. There was no grass or herbage, and the sun shone down upon the smooth, glassy stones with a glare and a recoil that were extremely irritating to the eyes. I took with me a canteen of water, besides my usual kit, traveled thirty miles till sunset, arriving at a lagoon which I had always supposed was a permanent water. It was all dried up. There was a pint of water in my canteen, which was divided between myself and horse. An irresistible drowsiness then came over me and I slept until midnight, when I was awakened by a chill. At daylight I started on my journey. I felt sure of finding water in twenty miles. After sunrise I began to feel the pangs of thirst. My horse hung his head nearly to the ground. Toward evening I suffered much. My tongue and lips began to stick together, although I had in my mouth two pebbles, and these are said to cause moisture. Time seemed to be very long over those weary, cheerless plains, and imagination led me to the belief that the sun stood for hours in one spot. A mirage appeared about noon and continued all the afternoon, inciting me to the hope that there was a lake of water in the distance, though I knew no lake existed in that direction. I was obliged to rest several times because of exhaustion. My skin began to shrivel up. I came to a lagoon formerly a mile long and wide. There were a few yards of shallow water, which could not be got at for the mud. I drove my horse to a well two miles away. I found rope, bucket and all gone. I passed a dreadful night. I could not sleep. Suddenly it occurred to me to kill my horse and make a well-rope of his hide. Then I found I had no knife. The next morning I managed to swallow a few mouthfuls of meat and sugar. I kept on my journey till mid-day, driving my horse before me, when I had to rest. I was then suffering from vertigo. My horse lay down and did not care to eat what was offered him. Six hours afterward I tried to eat, but could not swallow anything. I intended to open a vein of my horse and drink his blood, but I had no instrument. In the cool of the evening I started on again. Delirium seemed to be setting in. There was a constant ringing in my ears, my tongue was greatly swollen and I had an irrepressible desire to close my eyes. I traveled till midnight and there seemed always to be a dog at one side of me and a bird like an owl flying overhead. I cannot now say whether they were real or imaginary. I went to rest, but could not sleep. I seemed to dream with half-closed eyes of banquets. At daylight I saw hills a few miles off where I knew there was water, but I felt no inclination to go there. From this time to the time I drank the first draught of beautiful spring water in the hills I have no recollection whatever, nor did I know what became of my horse until I discovered his skeleton some time afterward. I do not know how long it took me to get over those three or four miles. My senses came to me when I drank water. My body was like a skeleton, though I was in full flesh four days previous. I could swallow with difficulty. After the first draught or two I drank moderately and took a little sugar. I never vomited. I drank about half a gill every few minutes for about twenty-six hours, when my thirst first gave signs of being satisfied. I think that I drank about a quart an hour during this period. It would have been very interesting to know what was my weight when I first arrived at the springs, and what it was forty hours afterward.

I was at least seventy hours without water—perhaps ninety hours, as I do not know how long I was delirious. As soon as my thirst was satisfied I became hungry and ate what I had left. Then, filling my canteen, I started across the hills, and reached a human habitation late in the day.

Errors of Letter-Writers.

The Dead Letter Office at Washington exists mainly because men and women are ignorant and careless. About ninety clerks are employed to correct the errors and supply the omissions of letter-writers. Thousands of letters are thrown, daily, into the office—some without stamps, and others with no address. A correspondent of the Boston Transcript suggests that once a month, fifteen minutes should be given to instructing the 8,000,000 scholars in the public schools in the A B C of correspondence. Upon the blackboard a few simple rules should be written, such as:

1. Date your letter, i. e., write place and State, day of month and year.
2. Name and address to whom letter is to be written.
3. Use Government-size envelope.
4. Address envelope plainly before letter is placed in envelope, giving town or city, State, county and number of street, if known.
5. Especially if any valuable is inclosed, indicate where letter should be returned, if not delivered.
6. Seal and stamp envelope.
7. When a parcel is to be mailed, other than letter, ask at postoffice the amount of postage required.

A Senator's Mother's Lonely Death.

The newspapers announce the death at Bethel, Me., of the mother of Gen. and Senator Grover, of Oregon. A Lawrence lady, who is spending a few weeks at Bethel, writes that the old lady had peculiar traits of character, and at the age of 88 years insisted upon living in a house in which there were no other occupants. She frequently said that her only concern was to live and die alone. She had her wish. She was last seen alive last Saturday, when she entered her house. That she was not seen Sunday was not strange, but, as there was no indication of activity Monday noon, two neighbors went to the house, whose entrance was fastened. They raised a window of her bedroom, and found the venerable lady on the bed, with her clothes on, and life departed. On the stove were a pot of tea and dishes of gruel and gingertea.—Lawrence (Mass.) American.

ALL SORTS.

THE late Dr. D. T. Coit, a graduate of Yale, class of '25, has left a bequest to that institution of $100,000.

IT is estimated that the money paid for Texas cattle during the past five years amounts to $180,000,000.

THERE is a Latin term for cod-liver oil, but none for the taste of it. The Latin races were not well up in profanity.

THERE was Paginini the fiddleist, and here's Campanini the tenor. Rather singular how many ninnies get into the musical ranks.

THE principal cotton ports of the South rank as follows in the receipts of the staple: New Orleans, Norfolk, Savannah, Galveston, and Mobile.

A CONSERVATIVE clergyman in England has chosen to omit the prayer for Parliament since the election, on the ground that "such a lot" are not worth praying for.

OF the discoverers and conquerors of the New World, Columbus died broken-hearted, Roldin and Bobadilla were drowned, Balboa was beheaded, Cortez was dishonored, and Pizarro was murdered.

THE St. Louis policeman who clubbed a man for replying, when asked what he was doing out late at night, "It's none of your business," has paid a fine of $50 and gone to the penitentiary for six months.

DR. Y. J. ALLEN, a missionary of the Methodist Church South, now at Shanghai, has been made a mandarin by the Chinese Government, the first instance on record of a foreigner being thus honored. This gives him great advantages.

SOME wood-choppers at Canton, Ill., sent a boy to the top of a tall tree, which they had cut almost through, to sway it in the direction in which they wished it to fall. The plan was successful, except that six bones of the boy were broken.

THE population of Charleston, S. C., consists of 24,005 whites and 25,994 blacks. Of the males more than 21 years of age 5,629 are white and 5,943 colored. The colored population of the city has decreased 213 in ten years.

WILLIAM PARISH was told by the Poormaster of South Toledo, Ohio, that he must take himself out of the town before nightfall, or he would be sent to the workhouse. "I'll do it," said Parish, and he swallowed a fatal dose of laudanum.

A DAIRY house at Christiana, Norway, has established an agency at St. Paul for the shipment of Minnesota butter, cheese and other food products to Norway. This is the result of a shipment to that country from Minnesota last spring, and it is thought may result in the establishment of a large trade.

AN Ottawa young man did not elope with the married woman with whom he had fallen in love, but went boldly to her husband and asked how much money would compensate him for the loss of his wife. The husband thought that $10 was about the right sum, and the lover paid it, taking the woman away.

IN the pleasant little Rhenish town of Biberich there lives a horse of preternatural sagacity, whose method of dealing with an inebriate master has achieved a well-merited celebrity. Whenever the latter appears incapable of finding his way from the wine-shop to his dwelling the horse watchfully follows him hard at heel, and, applying its forehead to his back whenever he is about to stagger out of his homeward path, gently thrusts him forward in the right direction, nor ceases its timely ministrations until it has succeeded in propelling him to his own door.

Evading a Fare.

The stealing of a pin is apparently a slight offense. Yet it may reveal character as clearly as the theft of $100. Some years ago there lived in New York a shrewd old merchant named Aymar. He used to receive cargoes of mahogany and logwood, which were sold at auction.

On one occasion a cargo was to be sold at Jersey City, and all hands started from the auctioneer's store to cross the ferry. When they were going through the gate, Mr. Aymar noticed one of the largest buyers slip through without paying the 5 cents fare. He told the auctioneer not to take a bid from that man.

"Why," said the auctioneer, with an expression of surprise, "I thought he was good."

"So did I," answered Mr. Aymar; "but I have changed my mind, and I will not trust him $1."

A few months proved the accuracy of the judgment of Mr. Aymar, for the slippery merchant failed, and did not pay 5 cents on the dollar. It does not by any means follow that business disaster will come as a retribution to a dishonest trader; but this is certain, that a man who will steal even so trifling a sum as would pay his fare in the horse-car or the ferry-boat will cheat you out of a larger sum if he finds a safe opportunity.

Amenities of Texan Life.

Mrs. Cannon, wife of Mr. Will Cannon, of the Robinsonville neighborhood, was on her way home from church on horseback last Friday evening, when she felt something stick her in the face, and, supposing it to be a limb of a tree, threw up her hand to ward it off. While undressing for bed, after her arrival at home, she was horrified to find a rattle-snake in the sleeve of her dress. The reptile dropped out on the floor and was killed. The lady had not previously felt much inconvenience from the slight abrasion on her face, but now it commenced swelling, and became so painful that a physician was called in to attend her. It is supposed that the snake had taken refuge in the tree, and that it bit her and transferred itself to her sleeve as she rode under it. When we last heard from Mrs. Cannon she was still suffering some pain, but it was hoped she would soon recover.—Waco (Texas) Examiner.

Children CRY FOR Pitcher's Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address
SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.
Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial "Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite— they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book for the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" on Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 500 pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures chronic diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. [illegible] For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons.

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. [illegible]

Missouri, Sept. 18, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. [illegible]

Mich., Jan. 29, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. [illegible]

Iowa, Oct. 18th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. [illegible]

West Virginia, Aug. 28, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. [illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 8th, 1879.—Please forward one of your [illegible]

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 3, 1879.—Last January we got from you [illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., AUGUST 19, 1880.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District - JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AESM. P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

JEFF. DAVIS is out for Garfield. Honorable Jeff. lives at Jeffersonville.

THE horses in the Wolf Lake neighborhood, Noble county, have got it bad—the epizootic.

FRANK BUTLER, the popular auditor of Whitley county, had an attack of apoplexy last week, from which, though serious, we are happy to say he recovered.

OUR modest contemporary, the Republican, and its miscellaneous editorial battalion, was sorely troubled last week about the editorial department of the COURIER. Too bad—too bad! Don't worry so, boys!

HON. W. G. COLERICK, our democratic candidate for congress, will address the people of DeKalb county as follows: Spencerville, August 23; Hamilton, 24; Newville, Wednesday 25; Corunna, Thursday 26; Garrett, Friday 27th.

THE report of the capture, in Nebraska, of the notorious Bender family, the head of a band of robbers and murderers who operated in Kansas some years ago, after having created a first-class sensation from one end of the Union to the other, turns out to be a hoax.

THE Columbia City Post says the democratic candidate for congress in this district, Mr. Colerick, is meeting with enthusiastic receptions in that county. He has been canvassing there and we believe goes next to Noble. Come to DeKalb early, Mr. Colerick, your constituents here will give you a hearty greeting.

AT the recent republican conference held in New York, J. H. Sypher, of Louisiana, created a sensation by declaring that the party had lost the negro vote of the south, and would not regain it. The negroes, he said, are now in the hands of the southern democrats, and it was doubtful if the vote of a single southern state could be gained for the republican cause.

A SPEAKER at the republican convention in Noble county abused the democrats, amongst other things, for drunkenness. During the same evening drunkards were more abundant than ever in Albion—many of them minors—and before the delegates got out of town there were three or four fights and several arrests. Oh! consistency, what a jewel thou art!

JUDGE BALDWIN, in his recent speech here, said: "General Garfield is the best and truest representative of republicanism in America." Yes, verily, this is a fact. The party that has furnished a Belknap, Blaine, Robeson, Colfax, and Orth, et al., has also furnished a Garfield, and as a bribe-taker, stock-dealer and perjurer, he is not excelled, if equalled, by any of them.

AN unfortunate occurrence at Goshen is that, of the disappearance, somewhat clandestinely, of Ira W. Nash, cashier of the First National bank. He left no explanation, but wrote back from Chicago that he did not know when he would return. Notwithstanding various rumors, nothing is made public as to any crookedness in his relations with the bank, though the books have been undergoing an investigation. His family was, and for some weeks previous had been, absent on a visit at his wife's father's—S. P. Williams, Esq., of Lima.

Joint Representative.

The standing of our candidate for joint representative is fully recognized abroad as well as at home. We have felt that nothing we could say of him would profit him here. That our readers may see what is thought of him in other portions of the district, we copy the following from the Ligonier Banner.

"There is no more useful legislator in the state than S. S. Shutt. So say all those who watched the doings of the late legislature."

"Sam Shutt, as he is familiarly called, ought to receive at least three hundred majority in Noble county. His own county, DeKalb, will give him that, and more, too."

"Every man who is desirous of seeing the interests of the state protected by an honest, upright and faithful guardian of the public treasury should give Hon. Samuel S. Shutt his cordial support. Mr. Shutt, as chairman of the committee on claims, earned the title of "watch-dog of the treasury," and in recognition of his valuable services ought to be returned to the legislature by 1,000 majority.

Let us, then, put our shoulders to the wheel and push on the column, not only for Hancock and English, and Landers and Gray, but for Colerick, Sam Shutt, Moody, Baxter, VanAuken and all the rest of the ticket. There is perhaps more truth than poetry in what is said by a local correspondent of the same paper from which we quote above. He says: "Democrats, there is entirely too much talking and blowing done about the success and not enough vigorous work. Remember the enemy is abroad and employing every means possible for success. When you vote the democratic ticket, you certainly do so believing the principles embodied in the democratic platform to be true and correct principles—the only means by which the rights of the people and a free government can be maintained. Then, if this be the case, why not work for your rights?" Right well said! Democrats of DeKalb, shall we be up and doing?

At the republican conference in New York it was determined not to abandon the campaign in the southern states. If an honest count could be secured, there would be no difficulty in carrying Mississippi, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Alabama, and Florida for Garfield. The if represents the great obsatcle to be overcome.—Kendallville Standard.

Yes, that "if" is the great obstacle. If the polls are not controlled by United States marshals, if republican bayonets are not used to drive away good citizens, and if the votes can be decided according to the forms of law, there will be an honest count, and it will send a wall of sorrow through the republican ranks. A republican talking about an honest count is just a little the cheekiest thing we ever heard of. If a government mule could read the above paragraph he would sneak away and hide his face in shame.

WITHOUT intending to do so, the editorial battalion of the Republican are fairly overwhelming the COURIER with compliments. They recognize in the labors of our editorial columns "the brains" of one of the ablest of our citizens; in the communication of a correspondent the experienced hand of a judicial functionary who has been twenty-five long years on the bench and a candidate for congress—whoever that may be—and credit our unpretentious hebdomadal with "numerous editors." Great conscience! Be just a little less perfunctory yourselves, Brothers Weamer, and dismiss your supernumeraries, or, at least, don't "measure our corn in your half-bushel."

The strongest speech that has been made in the state during this campaign thus far, in our estimation, was delivered at Seymour on last Wednesday by Hon. Franklin Landers, democratic candidate for governor. Its length precludes its publication in the Democrat, but we shall perhaps be able to furnish it in supplemental form.—Goshen Democrat.

You speak truly, good brother. It is the strongest kind of a speech. And when we lay it before our readers, as we hope also to do in full, we trust all our republican friends will give it a careful perusal. The more stalwart will swear it was delivered by somebody else, of course, but it will bottle up their frothy Porter all the same.

There is a pig at Jerseyville, Ill., with two distinct bodies, eight legs, and only one head. A horse at Granville, Ky., and a cat at Rochester, N. Y., have two perfect tails apiece. A dog at Milwaukee has six legs, and a calf at Omaha has no legs at all.—Ex.

And a couple of republican "suckers" are stumping it around in this part of Indiana on only a single "extremity" each. They call themselves, respectively, Baldwin and Taylor, and all they have to stand upon is the rickety cry of "solid south." Even that slender underpinning will be summarily knocked from under them next election.

Stop It!

One thing may as well be understood. Any Jackanapes can chatter in stereotyped phrase about democratic speakers indulging in profanity, vulgarity, etc. It don't require any brains to invent such lies. The facility with which it may be done will not justify the practice though. The falsity of local inventions of this sort are well known. There is a way of stopping them. They are getting entirely too stale. Take the hint, do ye?

JUDGE D. P. BALDWIN'S SPEECH.

He Shakes the Bloody Shirt in Auburn.

Last Monday evening, according to previous announcement, the Hon. D. P. Baldwin, of Logansport, republican nominee for attorney-general, delivered at this place one of the characteristic republican harangues. In opening his speech the gentleman paraded an air of great fairness. He earnestly requested that the people would display the same wisdom in choosing whom they would serve as their leader, that they did in their personal affairs—that the party which had been the truest to the interests of the country was the party which deserved their support. Warming with his subject, he shed his collar, rolled up his sleeves, and with an array of figures, which he says do not lie, proceeded to show that from the republican party came, directly, all the blessings which we, as a happy, united people enjoy, including the preservation of the Union, and, we suppose, the decalogue and the plan of salvation. The wisdom of Moses as a law-giver is as nothing compared to that which the party of God and morality has displayed in the administration of this government, according to that gentleman.

This comical apostle of republicanism, like all others of his party, having no issues to present, simply fills up his time by waving the ensanguined garment and outrageously misrepresenting the attitude of the south toward the Federal government. The solid south is held up as antagonistic to the Union. The 138 electoral votes of the south are solid for Hancock, and this fact don't seem to agree with these fire-eaters. Mr. Garfield himself says that the "man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support." Mr. Baldwin's speech was full of subterfuge, and many of his figures and declarations were notoriously false, showing that gentleman to be either woefully ignorant or contemptibly mean. Mr. Baldwin says that it is true that secession in the gray uniform is over, but that secession in citizens' clothes still exists in the south; and that the ku-klux, white-liners, robbers and murderers still stalk abroad at noontide, and that the colored man cries peace, peace, peace, but there is no peace. Mr. Baldwin's speech was full of many such villainous assertions as these, which will perhaps endear him to the stalwarts, but which justly merits for him the contempt of all intelligent, fair-minded citizens. He favored centralization and the use of the bayonets at the polls, objected to home rule in southern states, and viciously "went for" Hancock's order No. 40 because he declared therein that "peace reigned supreme" in Texas and Louisiana. The speaker regretted very much, and so did we, and so did many others, that he did not have time to discuss the charges of corruption against General Garfield. That is just what is the matter with all the republican orators, they have not got time to discuss Garfield's record, and it is probable that they will not find time between now and the election. It would be a good deal like taking issue on self-evident propositions, hence they strive to divert the public mind from these facts by waving the bloody shirt. He said that there was no more in these charges than there was in the yell that "old Tilden was elected to the presidency." This the people concede, that there is no more, no less. His proof that these charges are untrue, is that Mr. Garfield was seven times sent to congress, and each time was returned with increased majorities. This is a fair sample of Baldwinian logic. Every one knows that Garfield was returned to congress from a strongly republican district, and each time by decreased majorities, running far behind the presidential ticket of 1876. Garfield, as the republican nominee, is the creature of a crisis of the Chicago convention growing out of an effort to defeat a third-term, and amid the excitement he was nominated without any thought of his record.

The speaker, we think, created little impression upon his auditors, save a feeling of pity, by his school-boy gestures and ridiculous attitudes. The speech abounded with gross misrepresentations and thin logic. He did, however, very clearly prove one thing, and that was that he is rather frail timber out of which to make an attorney-general.

Our Glorious Pole.

As we previously announced in the COURIER, there was to be a pole-raising in Auburn last Friday evening, and there was one; it went off like a charm and to the entire satisfaction of every one present, even to F. D. Davenport, who, for a time, was afraid the pole would tip northward and smash his drug-store into the ground. A good force of hands were busy all day in preparing things, and when the time came a large crowd of our working democrats were on hand, reinforced by a regiment from our sister town of Garrett, including the band. The pole, though large and heavy, was admirably managed and went up from the word go, and it now stands straight and majestic, monarch of all it surveys, with the names of our illustrious leaders, Hancock and English, floating in the breezes. The speaking in the evening, which was entirely unlooked for up to a late hour, was listened to by an appreciative audience, Mr. M. V. B. Spencer, of Fort Wayne, being the orator. He made a telling speech and dispersed the crowd in the best of humor.

A Letter from Garrett.

GARRETT, IND., Aug. 16, 1880.

EDITOR COURIER: Please permit space in the columns of your paper for a few remarks in regard to a scurrilous and untruthful item in the Chicago Tribune of August 9, which has also been quoted by the Republican of last week. Said item is headed "Vulgar Democracy—Ladies Insulted and Decent Democrats Disgusted." It goes on to portray to the public that our pole-raising was a failure because the ropes broke, and that the public speaking was still more of a failure by reason of vulgar language and obscene stories on the part of our speakers. Now, I wish to state that those charges are false and unfounded in every particular. There were no ropes broken in the raising of our pole, or any attempt that was made to raise the pole. As to the vulgarity and obscene stories, if the vile, degraded, pusillanimous blackguard who sent that special telegram to the Chicago Tribune had a mind of pure, moral thoughts, free from vulgar and licentious culture, he never would have put a vulgar construction on the joke that was told here by our speaker on the evening of the 7th inst. He proved to those who are familiar with the circumstances, that his faculties of lust and vulgarity predominate over the moral.

It was the understanding here among the democrats, not to have any controversy with our republican friends and neighbors, in the papers, but since they have made the charge themselves, both through the press and by disturbing our speakers, we will meet them on every issue that will be honorable to ourselves. It is true that our speakers have been insulted while on the stand, and our meetings disturbed by the plug-uglies and blood-tubs of the republican party, but we will not retaliate or allow it to be done by any of our party; so you see the republicans have the decided advantage of us on that issue. It was disgusting, no doubt, to republicans to hear the life and public services of those men investigated whom the republican party have placed before the people to fill the highest positions in our government. It was also disgusting to the republicans when our speakers confined their remarks to the reports of republican investigating committees and challenged contradiction. When Judge Taylor, the republican nominee for congress, spoke here, there was good order maintained, and democrats did not gather together in a mob and disturb the speaker or the audience by hooting and yelling, as those roughs did at our meeting. As to vulgar language and obscene stories, Judge Taylor told a calf story here that was just as obscene in the presence of ladies as any story related by our democratic speaker, and could be construed in as vulgar a sense if any of the democrats had been of that order of mind. How is it that this low, degraded manufacturer of vulgarity who has so much respect for the ladies of Garrett, did not send Taylor's calf story over the wires to the Chicago Tribune? Will he please answer?

On the evening of the 7th, while our speaker was on the stand, the leaders of the Garrett Garfield and Arthur club, consisting of the little "drunken carpet-bagger," alias half-witted, self-conceited, four-eyed Barren, and the big portable sour-mash tub" took a stand on the street near the speaker and kept up a continual disturbance during the speaking. When the meeting disbursed and all had retired to their quiet homes, this same band of hoodlums bowled up and got out on the street to discuss what the speakers said about the republican investigating committees, etc. Citizens who had retired could not go to rest with the yells and blasphemies of this enraged, drunken mob, and a stranger in our town would have thought that Forepaugh's show was going through town with a dozen cages of wild hyenas. We do not charge all the republicans of Garrett with this kind of conduct, but we do charge the leaders of the Garrett and Arthur club. How is it that decent men, who are supposed to have respect for themselves, their families and society, will fall into line and be led by such drunken, depraved cusses? On Monday evening, August 8, this refined political club went to Avilla to witness the raising of a Garfield pole, and on returning the respectable portion of the club retired at once to their homes, while all the smart, conceited "Alicks," who have so much respect for the modesty of the ladies of Garrett, congregated together at their headquarters, and after partaking freely of a Garfield solution to clear out their hideous throttles, they marched at a midnight hour to the restaurant at the depot to get some hot coffee to warm up their internal reservoirs; but these proceedings did not go over the wires to any of the Chicago papers.

It would be a good idea to have printed on a shingle, "Commit no nuisance," and place it over the room door of one of these highly cultivated "Alicks," who have come here from an eastern city of taste and fashion, among a lot of "ignorant western people."

"AN IGNORANT MOSSBACK."

Normal School.

Upon the opening of the Auburn public school, a normal class will be formed for the purpose of giving teachers an opportunity to review in the common branches. The class will be under the supervision of the principal and his assistants. An invitation is given to all who contemplate fitting themselves for teaching. For particulars as to board and tuition, call on the board or principal of the school.

JOHN OTTO, Sec'y

Greenback Convention Held in Auburn, Saturday, August 14, 1880

Delegates from Steuben and DeKalb counties met in

SENATORIAL CONVENTION

And organized by the selection of Elder Carpenter, of Steuben county, as chairman, and J. S. Holly, of DeKalb, as secretary. For the office of joint senator, Mr. Ben. Dawson, of Angola, placed in nomination Mr. J. H. Carpenter, of Steuben county. There being no opposing candidate, Mr. Carpenter was nominated by acclamation. The convention adjourned, and the

JUDICIAL CONVENTION

Was convened with the same presiding officers, for the nomination of a prosecuting attorney for the 35th judicial circuit, composed of the counties of Steuben, DeKalb and Noble. The roll of counties being called, Noble failed to answer, and the convention adjourned without making a nomination.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

The county convention was called to order. Mr. Herman Lidecker was chosen chairman, and Mr. J. S. Holly, secretary. As soon as the convention was organized Dr. Winslow offered for adoption a resolution which was intended to stand as the platform of the greenback party of DeKalb county. A motion to adopt the resolution was lost, and the following committee on resolutions appointed, viz: Shoemaker, Darby, Holly, Goetschius, Roberts, Shaffer and Kennedy, which committee submitted a platform satisfactory to the convention.

On motion, the following named persons were appointed a committee on county organization: Messrs. Winslow, Wallace, Stoner, Shoemaker and Goetschius.

Mr. Phillips offered a resolution favoring the selection of candidates from those persons present, and pledging each nominee to the support of the greenback doctrine and the greenback ticket. The resolution was defeated.

The convention proceeded to the nomination of candidates.

REPRESENTATIVE.

The first and informal ballot for representative resulted as follows:

Henry Milliman, of Newville	6
Dr. J. U. Winslow, Waterloo	19
J. S. Holly	5
	30

Mr. Winslow was nominated by acclamation.

CLERK.

Mr. Hamilton H. Keep, of Franklin township, was nominated by acclamation.

SHERIFF.

R. N. Crooks, Waterloo	25
John N. Clark, Franklin	10

Crooks was declared the nominee.

TREASURER.

Orris Danks, of Waterloo, was nominated by acclamation.

RECORDER.

J. B. Goldsmith, of Wilmington, was nominated by acclamation.

COMMISSIONER.

E. R. Shoemaker, Smithfield	20
G. W. Row, Fairfield	4
John Campbell Smithfield	4

Shoemaker was declared the nominee.

CORONER.

Mr. Zahner, of Waterloo, was nominated by acclamation.

SURVEYOR.

Miles Chapman, of Newville, was nominated by acclamation.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Matilda McClellan, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

ARTHUR McCLELLAN, Administrator.
July 30th, 1880. 32-3w.

Estray Notice.

Taken up by Otis S. Blood, in Newville township, DeKalb county, Indiana, one dark red, lineback cow, about seven years old, with crop off the left ear, and had on a small bell. Appraised by Elba Hathaway and Jerry Andrews at nineteen dollars and reported to Isaac Guisenhouser, justice of the peace, August 5, 1880, as returned by said justice to the undersigned, August 14, 1880.

JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.
W. H. Dills, Deputy.

Liquor License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Garrett, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, on the following described premises to-wit: Lot No. 20, Block No. 15, in the original plat to the town of Garrett, said county.

AUGUST THIENEL.
August 16, 1880. 34-3.

D. D. MOODY, Attorney.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county—In the DeKalb circuit court, October term, 1880.

James Tinney, is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce by Maggie Tinney, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 2d juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences October 1st, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 29th day of July, 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
32-3w. W. H. Dills, Deputy.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is hereby given, that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on Friday, August 20, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest and most responsible bidder, the construction of a Howe truss bridge [illegible] feet in length, across Cedar creek, in the town of Auburn, on the extension of Seventh street. Bids will be received for both iron and stone abutments; the contract for bridge and abutments will be let separately, letting to take place at site of bridge. Plans and specifications of said work can be seen at the county Auditor's office. Bidders will be required to give a bond according to law, the work to be paid for in county orders. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the board.

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.
August 4th, 1880. 32-3w.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana will on Friday, the 13th day of August, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m. let to the lowest and best responsible bidder the construction of a side-walk on the west side of the public square in the town of Auburn, in said county, according to the following specifications:

Walk to be 8 feet wide, of pine plank dressed on one side to an even thickness; not more than twelve feet in length nor one foot in width and two inches thick, laid lengthwise on cross-ties of oak 3x5 inches in size, not more than four feet apart, and well spiked with spikes of sufficient size.

The work to be done to the acceptance of the said board of commissioners, and paid for in county orders. The board reserve the right to reject any or all bids. A bond will be required of the person taking the work. By order of the board. 32-2w.

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF-GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows.
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

Amelia { This Paper dont give much [illegible] other [illegible] when it comes out I will send you one Frank R D

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Off for Chicago.

This week is one of the grandest in the history of Chicago, it being the one in which the triennial conclave of Knights Templar is being held at that place. Thousands of the fraternity from all over the land are in attendance, besides countless numbers of visitors, and every available place in hotels and boarding-houses is monopolized. Herewith is given a list of the Auburnites who left for Chicago last Sunday and Monday, some of whom have already returned, the balance remaining to see it all through: J. J. Van Auken and wife, John L. Davis and wife, Fred. Davis, W. J. Austin and Miss Annie Hampton, Frank Zimmerman and wife, Mrs. John Robbins, Miss. Frank Stahl, T. J. Coppy, F. E. Davenport and children, J. G. Henry, Tom Mays, G. H. Yesbera and the editor of the COURIER. The latter went along to take notes and see how the Auburn folks deported themselves in a village like Chicago.

A Bad Wreck.

Wednesday morning about 1 or 2 o'clock, a collision occurred on the B. & O. road, near the elevator at this place, the effects of which were quite disastrous. While freight No. 12, going east, was ascending the grade, a coupling broke, detaching three cars and a caboose. The detached cars put out down grade with rapid velocity, and had gone but a short distance when they ran into engine No. 13, which was only a few minutes behind No. 12, and also going east. The engine was ditched and badly smashed up, and the three cars and caboose were thrown from the track and literally torn in pieces. The engineer and fireman, taking in the situation, leaped from the engine and landed in a fence-corner, thereby averting what might otherwise have proven to them a very serious, if not fatal, accident.

Johnny Picker Picked Up.

Johnny Picker, recognizing the fact that the web of life is of a mingled yarn, of good and ill together, and that in a state of celibacy the latter predominates by several majority, did, on last Tuesday evening, surreptitiously "skip out" to the residence of Miss Lou. Dysart, where, by the Rev. W. L. Meese, the two were joined in holy wedlock. Johnny is a good, hard-working young man, and we think that the maiden did well at this favorable moment to Pick her mate. The COURIER hopes that in the years that are to follow he will so husband his resources and his new-made wife, that their lives may be serenely peaceful, and their home abundantly supplied with cheese and crackers.

Pole-Raising and Speaking.

The citizens of Stafford Center, determined not to be behind in zealous work for Hancock and English, have fixed, on Saturday August 28, for a grand political revival. The features of the occasion will be a pole-raising and speech by our candidate for representative, Mr D. D. Moody. A good time is anticipated, and it is hoped that all who can will testify their devotion to democratic principles by their presence on this occasion.

Mr. Moody will also address the people as follows: Cedar Creek, Monday, August 30; Jackson Center, Wednesday, September 1; Newville, Thursday, 2; Corunna, Saturday, 4, Smithfield, Tuesday, 7; Franklin, Thursday, 9; Fairfield, Saturday, 11.

Off Again.

Show-day was entirely too much for John Korth, the high-flying tailor. Though he has endeavored to take a prominent part in the Good Templars' lodge, it was show-day, and he couldn't withstand the consuming desire to fill his skin full of beer and raise a muss, which he did in his usual and effective style. He made so much racket in a Seventh street saloon that William Snyder, special police, fired him out of the front door and marched him in double-quick time towards the cooler. Arriving at the jail, however, Sheriff Leas took him to one side and delivered a brief lecture to the inebriated gentleman, warning him in regard to giving vent to his inborn tendencies, after which he was turned loose and told to sin no more.

A Barn Burned.

A card from our Spencerville itemizer informs us that last Monday the barn of Mr. August Kinsey was destroyed by fire. Over three thousand feet of lumber and six tons of hay were also destroyed by the flames. Mr. Kinsey's buggy was damaged and his horse injured, though it is thought the latter is not seriously hurt. The fire was caused by some children smoking in the barn. There was no insurance.

To the friends and neighbors who rendered assistance on the occasion Mr. Kinsey returns his sincere thanks.

Funds Needed.

The friends who have subscribed to build a U. B. church building at the Victor cemetery, four miles east of Auburn, will be called on for their subscription in a few days. We wish to push the building through to completion as soon as we can possibly obtain the funds, J. R. COSPER,

Chairman of Board.

Wanted—To Buy,

Forty or sixty acres of land within 5 or 6 miles of Auburn. Terms of sale and price must be reasonable. Apply to 34-3t. THOS. H. SPROTT.

Local and Miscellaneous

—School opens Monday.

—Special term of circuit court Monday.

—Every individual man had his own private theory to advance, last Friday evening, concerning the best method for raising the pole.

—Use Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, for sale by McQuiston & Ralston. 33-3w.

—It is just a little funny to note with what unerring certainty a printer will set up c-o-u-n-t-r-y for county, and vice versa. In this he never has been known to fail.

—Jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, 5 cents per bunch, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Mr. Francis Picker's little black terrier dog was lost last Saturday evening at the circus. Any one returning it will be suitably rewarded.

—The Garrett band put the finishing touches on the pole-raising in fine style, and the well-timed appearance of the enthusiastic democrats of Garrett was as agreeable as it was unexpected.

—Good heavy sheeting at 7½ 7¾ and cents per yard, by the bolt, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—A newly discovered remedy for worms, differing from all others—it removes the worm nest. Rinehart's Worm Lozenges. Ask your druggist for them.

—Be sure and see Schaab, Beugnot & Co.'s stock of clothing before buying elsewhere, as they can give you special bargains. 33-2w

—What consistent reason can there be for making a two-dollar bill larger than a five?—not that we have compared any such bills, but a fellow who has tells us it's a fact.

—For shirtings, denims, ticks, brown and bleached muslin, table linen, and towlings, at lowest prices in the market, go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—J. B. Copper and wife, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, father and mother of our railroad agent, Frank Copper, are visiting at the latter's home this week. They arrived last Monday, and will return home next week.

—Go to Schaab, Beugnot & Co.'s for dry-goods, clothing, hats and groceries, as they have the largest assortment, at prices lower than the lowest. 33-2w

—Miss Bessie Hassler and Miss Della Ross, two Fort Wayne young ladies, and relatives of the family of Mr. Theodore Reed, are visiting at the home of the latter in Auburn.

—List of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., for the week ending August 14:

Daisie Green, William Jones,
Frank Johnson, Miller & Brakie,
Mrs. M. E. Thomas.
JOS. RAINIER, Postmaster.

—Hats for children, boys and men. Boys' hats for 60 and 75 cents; men's hats for 60, 75 and $1.00; also a large line of fine fur hats, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—An adjourned term of the DeKalb circuit court will convene next Monday, August 23, and continue two weeks. Administrators, executors, guardians and all others will take notice.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
By W. H. Dills, Deputy.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have the largest and best selected stock of boys', youths' and men's clothing ever shown in DeKalb county, at prices fully 15 per cent. below any other house in Northern Indiana. Call and see them before buying. 33-2w

—The Fort Wayne and Jackson road has been making some changes in its conductors. We are sorry to note this, as all of the old conductors, with hardly an exception, were faithful and accomodating gentlemen.

—P. V. Hoffman, who formerly resided here, but latterly has been practicing his profession in Fort Wayne, has "come back to his old love," so to speak, having re-established his law partnership with D. D. Moody and moved back to sweet Auburn.

—Fred. Clark and Miss Annie Hampton, in a two-seated vehicle with Dave Hampton and Miss Effie Wunderlich, made a drive to Angola, last Thursday evening, in two hours and a half. They went to attend the party given by Misses Lillie and Lena Morse.

—For goodness' sake can't some benevolent subscriber to the Republican send in a few nickels to that distressed "printer," (?) who sends out each week his plaintive wail? We are tired of that stereotyped appeal, "Remember the printer!"

—The editor of the Republican branched out in a new business last Saturday—the lemonade and peanut trade—which he apparently enjoyed with a keen jest, being eminently qualified to fulfill its requirements. He made a barrel of money and will probably be able to pay the printing-office hands for a week or two.

—It has escaped our notice until recently that B. F. Cobler, for some time past telegraph messenger at the Wabash depot, has been appointed night operator at Churubusco. Frank has shown himself capable at all times, and his instructor here, Mr. L. Johnson, is justly proud of the report from headquarters—namely, that his pupil "takes hold of business like an old man."

—I wish to state to the public that I will repair and do all kinds of tin work at the very lowest prices, but I will not under any circumstances, work for any persons who buy their tinware outside of regular dealers or manufacturers.

H. GOODMAN.

—You can find everything that you need for school, at bottom prices, at Willis & Co's.

—Standard granulated sugar, 11 cents per pound; good rice, 3 pounds for 25 cents; best Carolina rice, 10 cents per pound; No. 1 fine Saginaw salt, $1.30 per barrel; milk crocks, 85 cents per dozen; white fish, 7 cents per pound, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-2w.

—With characteristic enterprise (?) the Republican gets off some stale items which had appeared in the COURIER of the previous week, several of which we counted; and this occurs in every issue. Come, old fogy, stir around and get up something that isn't old enough to petrify.

—Farmers of DeKalb, look here! You can save money by insuring with the Ohio Farmers' insurance company, whose agent will wait on you as soon as possible and give you the safest and cheapest insurance in the United States. J. W. Swaysgood in north half of county, for F. M. Thompson, agent. 32-2w

—Don't buy your slates until you see what nice ones you can get for a little money at Willis & Co's.

—The church which is being built by the M. E. society at Metcalf's Corners, five miles east of this place, is about completed, and will be dedicated Sunday, September 5, 1880, by Rev. A. Marine, of Fort Wayne. A cordial invitation is hereby extended to all. The programme will be announced next week. H. J. NORRIS, Pastor.

—An error was made last week in stating that the new school readers, which are to be exchanged for the old ones, could be had at Ensley's store. The exchange will be made next Monday, the first day of school, at the school building. Children will not neglect to take their old McGuffey readers with them.

—It is our purpose to make a full and complete settlement of our company book-accounts at least once every year, by cash or note, and one year of our co-partnership having now expired, a settlement with each of our patrons is respectfully solicited. Please call at once, and oblige

31-4t. DRS. CASEBEER & MATHENY.

—The recent actions of one or two of our Auburn girls, consequent upon a spirit of envy inspired by the attentions shown to some young lady visiters from Fort Wayne, are anything but commendable. They would be heartily ashamed of the display of ungenerous disposition they have made if they could see themselves as others see them.

—A telegram received by County Clerk Baxter authorizes him to say that Judge Lowry will not hold court here next Monday.

—Now is your time to attend camp-meeting. There will be a great camp-meeting (D. V.) near the village of Nappanee, Indiana, commencing August 5, and continuing eight days, held by the Free Methodist denomination. The B. & O. railroad will sell excursion tickets at two cents per mile, to accomodate those who desire to attend. Come one, come all. 32-2w.

—We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the meetings of the Jasper county agricultural society, which takes place at Rensselaer, Ind., from September 21 to 24, inclusive. An attractive and liberal premium list is offered, and the fair promises to be one of unequaled success. For any particulars concerning premium list, etc., address Horace E. James, secretary.

—The chimney of Mr. Groscop's saloon was struck by lightning last Tuesday afternoon during the heavy fall of rain about four o'clock. The lightning ran down the chimney and set fire to the roof, thus saving the proprietor the expense of a chimney-sweep. Except the shattering of the top of the chimney, and a good scare to those present, there was no harm done.

—The semi-monthly Presbyterian social will be held to-morrow evening at the residence of Mrs. A. S. Leas. It will be a lawn social, by the light of that "orbed maiden, with white fire laden, whom mortals call the moon," and many other maidens will also be present. Good things, in the shape of watermelons and peaches, and other refreshments will be served in abundance. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—An amusing incident occurred one day last week just opposite the COURIER office. A gaunt and hungry cow, in passing in front of the bill-boards on which Forepaugh's show is advertised, spied some herbage on one of the bills which had been printed so true to nature that she made a dive across the sidewalk in anticipation of a delicious lunch; but the look of bitter disappointment which o'erspread that bovines countenance, about the time she ran her nose against the deceptive advertisement, is beyond the power of man to conceive.

Wanted—To Trade,

A good two-story frame house with L and two lots, on west side of Main street, in Auburn, for 40 or 60 acres of land in DeKalb county. Will pay money difference. Apply to 34-3t. THOS. H. SPROTT.

Circusisms.

—There was a show in town Saturday.

—It belonged to one Adam Forepaugh, and it was a big thing.

—Some of our merchants raked in many dollars, while others complain.

—The saloons all did a land-office business; it was a perfect harvest for them.

—All a man wanted last Saturday to make an independent fortune was a barrel of canal-water with two lemons in it.

—Tom Mays, Billy Shaffer and Tom Sprott had an equal one-third interest in three lemonade and peanut stands, and they have each retired now from active business.

—It is estimated that there were six million people under the canvas in the afternoon, but this is disputed by several people who stood at the entrance and counted.

—Everybody was there with his girl, and every girl had on her little white dress; and the dish-ragged appearance of those garments, after the night show, was heart-rending.

—Doc. Tritch tells of a rural youth who stood with his girl, "locked arms," leaning against some bill-boards, feeding each other bologna and gingerbread, alternately. Doc. says it brought the tears to his eyes.

—Will. Dancer hired out to the show, and the first notable feature of his circus career was the upsetting of the lion cage, wagon, horses and all, down an embankment near the bridge. Billy resigned his position after rendering his services for a few brief hours.

—The circus lady who endeavored to sing "Somebody's coming when the dew-drops fall," at the evening performance, when the "dew-drops" were pouring through the canvas in torrents and everybody looked like a drowned rat, made an ignominious failure of it. The supreme ridiculousness of the situation was too much for her, and she broke down with laughter.

Neighborhood Nippings.

Warsaw enumerates just 3,119 souls, 1,522 of whom are males and 1,597 females.

Last week there were 579 prisoners at the Michigan City state prison.—[Columbia City Post.

We have only two objections to the Warsaw Indianian—its politics and its size. It is so confoundedly enormous that we can't find table room to spread it on.

Around Wolf Lake, in Noble county, rattlesnakes are being hunted down while cutting marsh hay. "We waylaid six a short time since in about five minutes and it wasn't a very good day for snakes either," says a correspondent of the Banner.

There was quite an excitement around Rome City on Monday a week ago on account of eating pressed beef which was supposed to be unwholesome. Several parties having eaten of the same were taken violently sick, none, however, proving fatal. Measures have been taken to ascertain the exact cause of the trouble.

Speaking of the opening of the republican campaign at Albion, U. Donnahue, of the Banner, says: "The gentleman who spoke at the court-house on Saturday afternoon, was such a nice man that he ought to have had a chromo. He didn't abuse anybody, but flaunted the bloody shirt and pitched into the copperheads, and the butternuts, and the drunken democrats at a fearful rate. He is such a nice man that he ought to be preserved in alcohol when he dies, as a relic of a degenerate party." You Donno-who, don't you? We'll guess it was either Baldwin or Taylor.

Quite as Handsome.

[Uniontown (Pa.) Republican Standard.]

Mrs. Louis Johnson and Miss Lizzie Williams, daughters of Captain Joseph Williams, have just arrived home from Auburn, Indiana, where the former has been residing for the past five years, and the latter visiting for a year past. We are inclined to think Indiana is not so unhealthy as a great many suppose it to be, for after an absence of five years Mrs. Johnson looks as young and more healthy than when we saw her last. Miss Lizzie says the young gentlemen of Hoosierdom are quite as handsome as some of ours.

Dandelion.

If you are afflicted with Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Headache, Dyspepsia, Fever and Ague, Rheumatism, Constipation of the Bowels, or any disorder of the Blood, use Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. It is purely vegetable, harmless as water, yet very thorough in its action. Pint bottles only one dollar, and every bottle warranted. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 33-2w

Club Meeting.

The Hancock and English club will meet at Ensley hall, to-morrow (Friday) evening, for the purpose of transacting important business. Every member, and as many other democrats as possible, are expected to be present. No speaking. COMMITTEE.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

A Letter from Waterloo.

EDITOR COURIER: The republicans opened the campaign here on the 10th. They had advertised Judge Baldwin pretty extensively as a very fine speaker, but at the commencement the hall was not half filled. After being introduced to the audience the judge commenced his speech, and for gauziness it was the thinest of the thin. He stated that he wanted to compare the two great political parties; he said that the democratic party was born in 1800, and they had control of the government for sixty years, with the exception of two terms, one by J. Q. Adams, and Taylor and Fillmore, but that had not disturbed the democratic policy any more than throwing a pebble into a stream would divert its course, and the result was that, although the country was comparatively free from debt, that James Buchanan's secretary of the treasury, Howel Cobb, could not borrow but eighteen million dollars on the credit of the United States, and that at 12 per cent. He then wanted the audience to behold what the republican party could do in the short period of five years. They had got the government in debt to the enormous sum of $2,700,000,000 at an interest of 4 per cent. On the interest, I think, he was mistaken, as he afterward told us that John Sherman had been lending his debt at a lower rate of interest and saving the people a vast sum of money, as he said the people had to pay the interest, and, I suppose, the principal, too, as all revenues are derived from the same source. The judge considered the ability of the republican party to run the country into debt a good and sufficient reason to extend their lease of power four years longer. Now, the conclusions would be, that if the government had to pay 12 per cent. interest for $18,000,000 and could get $2,700,000,000 at 4 per cent. if it should be doubled, it could be obtained for 2 per cent., or by borrowing enough it would get a premium, or borrow itself out of debt altogether. The judge also contrasted the present banking system, or the republican system as he called it, with what he called the democratic system, or wildcat, red-dog banking, when he knew, and everybody else knew, that was old enough or had investigated the matter at all, that the banks were all state institutions and derived their charters from the legislatures of the different states, and that the banking on the present system was impossible, as the government had not issued 2,700,000,000 of patents of nobility in the shape of gold-bearing interest and principal bonds as a basis for the present system of banking. As well might he call all the banks of the present day democratic banks that have not bonds for the basis of their business as the old wildcat banks. The judge enlightened us on a great many other subjects. He said, and reiterated, that we had twenty-three years of profound peace from the close of the war with Mexico in 1847 till 1860. I do not mention this, thinking the judge wished to misrepresent, but to show the style of the speech; in manner that he left wrong impressions. The judge was very much afraid of mud-throwing, and said that the campaign was to be conducted by the democrats with mud, and he could not expect anything else, for the democrats did not know anything, nor could they learn anything. He was in favor of dealing gently with his ignorant neighbors, trying to reason with them and putting documents in the hands of those who could read, "for," said he, "you know there are some who cannot read." After concluding six times, he concluded to conclude, telling them they were enthusiastic, and that he was very enthusiastic, but it appeared to me more like a wet blanket. Yours, X. Y. Z.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil, it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on kidney complaints and rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures, in all climates, has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus diarrhoea, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at Casebeer & Matheny's and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine. 34-1y

FAIR,
AT
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA, 1880.

EXTRAORDINARY ATTRACTIONS!

$8,000 in Premiums! $4,000 in Speed Ring!

Fair commences September 6, and continues through the week. Liberal arrangements made with all the railroads. Send to W. W. Rockhill, secretary, for programmes and premium list.

HAIL CLOTHING BUYERS!

To the Americans!
To the Germans!
To the Irish!
To the French!
To the Italians!
To the Citizens of all Nations!

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

And their Salesmen

GREET YOU!

Perhaps in our list of salesmen you may recognize an acquaintance. If not call and see us anyway. We will make a good impression on you (we hope).

FIRST OF ALL YOU WILL FIND

I. Lauferty and Alex. Lauferty,
Sam'l Morris and Harry Graff,
Wm. Steilhorn and Sam'l Arnold,
Amede Dodane and Frank Chapman,

Who can speak most any language, and can talk

CLOTHING,
HATS,
CAPS,
FURNISHING GOODS

In a way that will certainly interest you. As for stock we can safely say it is second to none in Indiana in point of Quantity, Quality and all other fine points.

OUR PRICES SELL THE GOODS!

One Price, Square Dealing always at

A. S. LAUFERTY & Co., C. O. D.,

NO. 9 EAST MAIN STREET,

Exactly Opposite the North Door of the Court House, with a large American Flag over the sidewalk.

New Goods Arriving Daily. Fort Wayne, Indiana. Open till 9 at Night.

$100
Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the purulent matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Charles F. Mader, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent. 34-3w

GUST HELLMUTH, Administrator.

August 4th, 1880.

PINCHIN & BOYLE, Attorneys.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county,—In the DeKalb circuit court, October term, 1880.

George B. Tompson is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce, by Elizabeth A. Tompson, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 8th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences October, 1880.

Witness the clerk of said court, this 10th day of August 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
33-3w. W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

The Unit Rule Applies Here!

BARGAINS

Neither Private Nor Confidential.

1 o Black Alpaca Coats, Men's........ 75c
Two Linen Dusters, Men's,........ 76c
Three White Duck Vests, New........ 75c
Four White Dress Shirts, Linen Bosom........ 75c
Five Blue Flannel Derby Suits........ $7.50

BOYS' SIZES IN PROPORTION.

SAM, PETE & MAX
Star Clothing House,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

TO [illegible]

BY MRS J. [illegible] BOOMS.

When from life's dull and prosy care
My weary spirit turns
In quest of holier rest elsewhere,
[illegible]
Within my own heart, then I quaff
From the fount of poetry
Full many a fresh, nectarian draft,
[illegible]
Because I feel thy [illegible] hath felt
Its sweet, entrancing power,
[illegible]
[illegible]
And, while thy spirit upward soared
[illegible]
To God thou'st [illegible] thy praise and poured
Thy heart in fervent prayer.
[illegible]
Oft wandered forth and wreathed
Fresh flowers from thought's ambrosial bowers,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
And felt that none but hands divine
Such balmy drops could pour.
That thou hast nestled lovingly
On nature's wooing [illegible],
And felt while there a sanctity,
A peaceful, quiet rest,
That nothing else, no other place,
To thee could ever give;
Nor all thy thirsting [illegible] with life
'Twere heaven on earth to live.
In deep and prayerful tenderness
My heart goes forth to thee;
Thy faith and love and gentleness
Are full of poetry.
[illegible]
[illegible]
Together still up there our feet
Shall press the paths of heaven.
Till then I'll trust thy love and thee,
Nor doubt a heart like thine;
I'll pray for thee, pray thou for me,
Theone, and trust thou mine.

THE HUSBAND'S SECRET.

"Not a word, mind, to Dinah Ann!"

Dinah Ann herself, the speaker's wife, having strolled down the garden in the sweet stillness of the summer night, heard these suggestive words as the gig pulled up at the gate, and her husband descended from it. She was a pleasing little woman of seven or eight and thirty, with dark brown eyes, a bright, fresh face, and a natural propensity to take her own way, in the house and out of it. Drawing back from the gate behind the well-kept hawthorn hedge, she waited for what was to come next.

"Not a word, for your life, mind, to Dinah Ann!"

"No fear!" replied a voice, which she recognized as that of her brother, Harry Leete; "I know what women are. She'd be for revolutionizing the house, and herself too, once let her get an inkling of this. No fear, James! Take care, on your side, that you don't lose that—or let Dinah Ann find it."

"I'll take care. When are you coming to smoke a quiet pipe with me? I shall want your advice as to ——"

"One of these evenings," interrupted the lawyer, as he drove up the lane. "Good-night!"

James Harbury, substantial farmer and agriculturist, came through the gate, and turned to fasten it. Had he turned the other way, to the left instead of to the right, he would have seen his wife, standing against the hedge as close as she could stand, almost into it. He did not see her, and went straight up the path to the house. When his foot-steps had died away, Mrs. Harbury wound her light summer gown over her black silk apron, caught hold of her lilac cap-strings, lest the cap should fly off, and ran swiftly up the narrow sidewalk, got round to the back, went through the house, let drop her gown, and entered the sitting-room, all calmly, nearly as soon as her husband.

"You're back!" she exclaimed, with quite a look of surprise.

"Just come," replied the farmer; "Harry drove me in his gig."

"What brings Harry up here in his gig at this time? And why did you not come back with Hall?" inquired Mrs. Harbury, who liked to be at the beginning and the end of everything.

"Harry had to come," said the farmer, who seemed to be walking about rather restlessly—and who never thought of such a thing as refusing to satisfy his wife's questions. "He got a message from the Down Farm, to go over there without loss of time. I thought I might as well come up with him, Dinah Ann. As to Hall, I left him stuck in the tap-room of the Tawny Lion; he didn't order his gig to be ready before 10 o'clock."

"Just Like Peter Hall! You'd have taken the reins yourself, James, I reckon, had you come back with him."

"Oh, he'll not get as bad as all that! But, I say, Dinah Ann, it's a sad thing about Partridge at the Down Farm. A day or two ago he went out with his haymakers—and you know what a man he is to work when he does set about it—got into a heat, and drank a lot of cold cider. It struck to him for death, they say; and Harry is gone to make his will."

"What a dreadful thing!" exclaimed Dinah Ann, who had a feeling heart with all her curiosity.

"Ay, 'tis. I think I'd like a snack of cold beef, Dinah Ann, though it is late. I got talking to your brother in his office, and missed my tea, so I've had nothing since 1 o'clock dinner. While Phœbe puts it I'll just go and take a look at White Bess."

"White Bess is all right," said Mrs. Harbury. "So much better that Evan thinks you might have ridden her in to-day. No need to go and see her now."

"[illegible] is she? I should like to [illegible]."

He took up his hat, which still lay on the table, and went out. Mrs. Harbury's eyes followed him; they were full of speculation, and her mind, also.

"I don't believe he is gone to look at the mare," soliloquized she. "He'd not disturb her, now he hears she is all right. And how absent and fidgety he seemed! There is some mystery afoot, and I should like to know what it is. I wonder whether—I should not think—no, I should not think he can have stolen out to meet somebody," she concluded, her tone dubious in spite of the stress laid on the "not."

Stepping lightly into the kitchen and giving her orders to Phoebe about the supper-tray, she caught up an old water-proof cloak that hung in the back passage, threw it on to hide her light dress, and crept out after her husband. It was a very light and beautiful night; in fact it could not be said to be yet as dark as it would be, and that is never dark in the fine nights of summer.

"For him to lose his tea," ran her thoughts, "of all things! It must be some uncommonly urgent business to induce James to forego a meal of any kind. I do wonder what secret they have between them. 'Not a word, for your life, mind, to Dinah Ann,' cries he. 'No fear,' answers Harry. 'I know what women are, and she'd be for revolutionizing the house and herself, too.' Yes, that I should, but it's them I should revolutionize, not myself," she emphatically pronounced. "It may be that old love affair cropped up again; that woman who threatened to bring an action for breach of promise when James married me. Perhaps she has been writing letters to him. 'Mind you don't let Dinah Ann find it,' says Harry, or perhaps—perhaps James has been foolish enough to let her meet him. Harry, not a married man himself, and a lawyer, would lend himself to any earthly thing without scruple. All lawyers do."

This rural district, remote from the haunts of wily men of the world, was given over entirely to farmers and farming interests; simple-minded and simple-mannered people, who live out their uneventful lives in the routine of daily duties. The small market town of Northam, four miles distant, was sleepy and primitive, never awakening from its slumbers save on the weekly market day. It had its parson, its doctor, and its lawyer—Harry Leete; all three of them being nearly as simple as the farmers. Not simple in the point of intellect, it must be understood; but as to life and manners.

This Thursday was market day. James Harbury had gone to it in the gig of a brother farmer, Peter Hall, his own mare, which he either rode or drove generally, being sick. He was a tall, slender man of 39 years, very fair, with exceedingly handsome features and mild blue eyes, looking as unlike the popular notion of a farmer as a man could look, and presenting a marked contrast to his agricultural neighbors. So far as appearance went none of them, poor or rich, could vie with James Harbury, and his temper and his bearing were alike gentle.

He had one fault, though, perhaps, all people would not call it a fault, love of money. That he was one of the "warmest" farmers in the district was universally believed, and the most saving of men. Too saving, his wife would tell him, and where was the use of it, she would ask, considering she had neither chick nor child? And every now and then she would make the money fly, for she was a dear lover of smart attire, and of having pretty things about her. James would wince, and bid her be careful; but he never went the length of telling her she had spent too much. He was fond of her, and she of him.

"Neither chick nor child." In that fact had lain a sharp sting. They had been married eight years now, and the sting was wearing itself away. Time softens all things. He had never given her cause for an unhappy thought until to-night. He had never had any secrets from her, except that he never could be brought to tell her what the exact sum was that he was enabled to put by at the end of each year. Dinah Ann Harbury did not care for that; she knew that, however much it might be, it was all for her.

But she did care for this—this mysterious secret which had come to her hearing to-night. She knew how good-looking James was; how universally he was liked by man and by woman, and what a kind heart he had—she put it "soft"—and something like jealousy began to torment her spirit.

When James came in again the supper-tray was at one end of the table, and Dinah Ann, an unusual light in her eyes, sat at the other end, near the lamp, having taken up her knitting. The farmer's general manner was easy and placid, though he had certainly seemed restless after leaving the gig, but now he was calm again.

"Well," she said, as he cut himself a slice of the cold boiled beef, "and how did you find White Bess?"

"Oh, she seems comfortable," he replied, looking round for the mustard-pot.

"You deceitful villain! You know you did not go near the stable," thought his wife. "You are sure you think so?" she added, aloud.

"Aye. White Bess will be all herself again to-morrow, Dinah Ann."

"It's more than I shall be," thought Dinah Ann, "unless I can come to the bottom of this."

He ate his supper nearly in silence, like a man who is mentally preoccupied. And he enjoyed it, too, for he was very hungry.

"James, do you ever hear anything now of that Emma Land?"

James Harbury laid down his knife and fork in surprise at the question, and looked across at his wife, whose face was bent over her knitting.

"Did I ever hear anything of Emma Land?" he repeated. "What can make you ask that, Dinah Ann?"

"What can make me ask it? I don't know. The query happened to come into my mind. Why should I not ask it?"

"There's no sense in it—that I see."

"But do you?"

"Do I what?"

"Ever hear of her?"

"Why, you know she went out to—where was it?—the West Indies, I think—to her friends there—ever so long ago. Nigh upon eight years it must be. You know she did, Dinah Ann."

"But she may write from the West Indies. Perhaps she does. Does she write to you?"

He shook his head to imply a negative, and occupied himself with his supper again. Emma Land had once upon a time been a somewhat-sore subject between them, for Dinah Ann was jealous in the old days.

"Do you ever see her, James?"

"See who?"

"You know. Emma Land."

"I can't think what has put all this into your head to-night, Dinah Ann. How is it?"

"But do you?"

"Do I what?"

"See her?"

"Why, how could I see her?" returned he, in a sort of helpless tone, that his wife fully thought was put on. "She is in the West Indies, and I am here."

"She may not be in the West Indies now."

"I don't know where she is. She's there for all I know; and I'm sure it does not matter."

"'Ask no questions, and you'll hear no stories,'" thought his wife, quoting the line familiar to her in her school-girl days.

"I should not at all wonder, James, but Emma Land has come back again."

"May be. Two or three years ago we heard she was married out there——"

"Who heard it? Who said it?"

"I know I heard it; I remember it quite well. But as to who said it, I forget that—your brother, I think. That she had married a cousin."

"Oh! not that that's unlikely, for she was ready to marry anybody. She'd have married you, you know. She laid traps for you."

"That's about true, I believe; but I did not fall into them, Dinah Ann."

And, laughing good-naturedly, James Harbury turned from his supper-tray to reach his pipe. Dinah Ann rang the bell, resumed her knitting, and fell into an unpleasant reverie.

* * * * * * * *

A few days passed away, things going on smoothly at the farm. Dinah Ann had recovered her temper—at least, she displayed no signs of its being ruffled. James Harbury was as usual, save that at times he seemed a little absent and thoughtful. One afternoon he went upstairs to change his every-day coat for a better one.

"Where are you going?" cried Mrs. Harbury, quickly, as he came down again.

"Only into Northam. I shall be home early."

"Into Northam! It's not market-day."

"No; but I've got a little business there—about those sheep, you know, Dinah Ann. I shall get them at my own price, after all."

"Of course you will. I told you so all along. But I do wonder you could not wait until to-morrow."

"Oh—market-day's always a bustling day; one forgets half one's business, or has not time to do it. Anyway, I thought I'd go in this afternoon."

"I should like to go with you, James!"

Mr. Harbury received the impulsive wish with a blank look, and had no ready answer at hand.

"I want to buy a new silk gown, and to order a best cap, and ever so many things. Yes, I will go with you, James. I won't be five minutes getting ready."

"But—Dinah Ann—not to-day. I can't take you this afternoon. You shall go to-morrow, instead."

"Why can't you take me?"

"Business," he shortly replied. And, his gig being just then brought round, White Bess in the shafts, he got into it, without more ado, and drove away, calling out "Good-by!" to his wife.

"I'll be even with you, Mr. James," nodded she.

The sun was setting when he drove in again and round to the stable yard. Leaving his horse and gig with Evan, he was crossing to the house when his attention was caught by a huge volume of black smoke puffing out of the chimney of a narrow building that was formerly made to serve as brew-house and wash-house until the large one was built. As it was out of use now, was not in fact used for any purpose whatever, or entered by anybody from month's end to month's end, Mr. Harbury naturally thought of fire. He rushed to it like a madman.

In the fire-place under the furnace a fire blazed away, upon which more coal had recently been thrown. Whiter than death, James Harbury made one frantic move toward it, while a yell of what really seemed like terror broke from him. Another yell succeeded, and still another; then he collapsed utterly, and fell upon a low wooden stool in wild despair.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Dinah Ann, who had been stooping over some blankets in the far corner, "what in the world is the matter? Is it spasms, James? Let me run for the camphor."

"Camphor, indeed!" exclaimed the unhappy man. "Bring poison rather. Poison. You've ruined me."

"He's off his head," was her pitiable suggestion. "Let me rub you, James. Where is the pain? In the chest?"

He flung his arms around in all directions, so that she could not get to his chest, or to any other part of him.

"Who lighted this fire?" he gasped.

"Phœbe lighted it. I ordered her. The flue in the proper wash-house has taken to smoking frightfully. The blankets are to be washed to-morrow, and will be put in soak to-night. But what is the fire to you, James, that you should be put out about it?"

"It's everything to me," he faintly answered. "Five hundred pounds has been burnt up in it."

Rising up from the stool—and Dinah Ann wondered the creaky old thing had not come down with his weight—he hastened in-doors, sat down by the table, and buried his face upon it. She found him so, his face hidden in his hands.

"Now, James, just tell me what all this means—if you are not quite out of your senses. Come! I intend to know."

"Yes, you may know it now," he said, lifting his face and its despair. "I had placed in the fireplace of that old furnace, in my old green pocketbook, £500 in bank notes. And—and—they are burned! They are burned, Dinah Ann!"

Dinah Ann paused.

"Where did the notes come from?"

"From your brother—to me. A long while ago, years before I knew you, I lent a friend over £400. He ran away with it to Australia, and I lost my money, and set him down as a rogue. But he is not so dishonest as I thought him; he has made his fortune out there, and is back again in London now, and last week he transmitted the debt and interest to your brother for me—£500. I brought the notes home the night Harry drove me here."

"And now just tell me, James, how you could think of putting bank notes into such a place as a furnace fire-hole?"

"I did it for safety. Nobody ever went in there, and the furnace was never used."

"Safety! Was there not your bureau up stairs in the bedroom?"

"That's never locked."

"Why, it's always locked."

"Any way, the key is never taken out of it."

"Ah! I see what it is. You were afraid I should see the money and want to spend it."

"And so you would, Dinah Ann—a sum like that coming unexpectedly," he meekly rejoined. "Bonnets and frills, and fresh chairs and tables—you'd not have known where to stop."

"Well, I must say, James, you have been rightly served for your want of confidence. No husband ever has a concealment from his wife, if she's a good wife, but he's sure to be paid out. It is a loss, though, £500."

He groaned.

"My business in Northam this afternoon was to consult with your brother about a good investment for it."

"What's this?" asked she, placing before him the identical green case—with the bank notes inside it.

James gasped.

"Dinah Ann! My dear Dinah Ann!"

"Ah! it's my dear Dinah Ann now—and where would you be without me? I have given you a good fright, however. Don't you conceal a thing from me again, James."

"I don't think I will," he said. "How has it all come about?"

"Why, I have just been playing a little as well as you. I was at the gate last Thursday night, and heard what you said to Harry as you got out of the gig. It excited my suspicions and my curiosity."

"But what did I say?" asked the farmer, really not remembering between the excitement of the past misery and the present happiness.

"'Not a word, mind, to Dinah Ann. Not a word, for your life, mind, to Dinah Ann!'"

Knowledge of the Ancients.

A great many people entertain the idea that the progress of mankind has been invariably from barbarism to civilization. In what follows, Chief Justice Daly shows in Popular Science Monthly that people did know something four thousand years ago:

"From one of those books, compiled after manner of our modern encyclopædias, and the compilation of which is shown to have been made more than 2,000 years B. C., it has been ascertained, what has long been supposed, that Chaldea was the parent land of astronomy; for it is found, from this compilation and from other bricks, that the Babylonians catalogued the stars, and distinguished and named the constellations; that they arranged the twelve constellations that form our present zodiac to show the course of the sun's path in the heavens; divided time into weeks, months, and years; that they divided the week, as we now have it, into seven days, six being days of labor and the seventh a day of rest, to which we have derived our word "sabbath," and which day, as a day of rest from all labor of every kind, they observed as rigorously as the Jew or the Puritan. The motion of the heavenly bodies and the phenomena of the weather were noted down, and a connection, as I have before stated, detected, as M. de Perville claims to have discovered, between the weather and the changes of the moon. They invented the sun-dial to mark the movements of the heavenly bodies the water-clock to measure time, and they speak in this work of the spots on the sun, a fact they only could have known by the aid of telescopes, which it is supposed they possessed, from observations that they have noted down of the rising of Venus and the fact that Layard found a crystal lens in the ruins of Nineveh. These "bricks" contain an account of the deluge, substantially the same as the narrative in the Bible, except that the names are different. They disclose that houses and land were then sold, leased, or mortgaged, that money was loaned at interest, and market-gardeners, to use an American phrase, "worked on shares;" that the farmer, when plowing with his oxen, beguiled his labor with short and homely songs, two of which have been found; and, to connect this very remote civilization with the usages of to-day, I may in conclusion, refer to one of the bricks of this library, in the form of a notice, which is to the effect that visitors are requested to give to the librarian the number of the book they wish to consult, and that it will be brought to them; at the perusal of which one is disposed to fall back upon the exclamation of Solomon, that there is nothing new under the sun."

How Railroad Time Is Kept.

There are in use between this city and New York thirteen electric clocks, two of the number being placed in the waiting-rooms and one in the dispatcher's office at the Grand Central depot in New York. The time on the clock in the depot at East Albany corresponds exactly with the time in New York. Each one of these clocks is connected with the General Superintendent's office in New York, in which the railroad time is kept on what is called the "big clock." Conductors, train men and others are compelled to keep their watches in strict conformity with the Superintendent's clock. It is set by standard time and connected with the time-service department of the gold and stock telegraph. The time is distributed over the line each week day as follows: At 10 o'clock 58 minutes and 30 seconds a. m., the word "time" is sent by the main office to the telegraph stations between New York and Albany. The word is repeated for twenty-eight seconds, during which time operators must see that their instruments are adjusted. At 10 o'clock and 50 minutes, seconds commence beating and continue for fifty seconds. The word "switch" is then sent over the wire, and operators having electric clocks connect them immediately with the circuit known as No. 9 wire. Ten seconds are allowed in which to make the connection. At 11 a. m., with one touch of the New York key, the hands of the different clocks are set to 11 o'clock. If they are fast or slow, they change at once to the hour named.—Albany Argus.

GOD KNOWS BEST.

BY EMMA CLARK WHITNEY.

In many troubles that perplex,
And make us weary of this life,
If we would say, "I will not vex
My soul no more with worldly strife,"
But, looking upward—"God knows best;"
Unto His care leave all the rest.

Instead we strive with hands so frail
To part the clouds upon our way.
Ah! life gives us no warrior mail
Invulnerable to sorrow's sway;
And when its darts pierce through our breast,
Teach us to feel that God knows best.

When in the throes of fiercest pain,
And our weak spirits seek release,
And cry aloud to Him in vain,
To succor or to still in peace,
Though granting not our wild request,
Teach us to feel that God knows best.

When like a serpent from its lair,
With coils that kill all they embrace,
Sin springs upon us unaware,
And poisons what was pure and chaste,
Though fail'g 'neath temptation's test,
Teach us to feel that God knows best.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.

STAGE AND ROSTRUM.

MISS KATE FORSYTH, John McCullough's leading actress, is in Paris.

JAMES REDPATH, of lecture lyceum fame, is to lecture himself next season.

EMMA ABBOTT is writing her autobiography, which she will call "The Story of a Great Singer."

MR. EARL MARBLE, a young journalist of Boston, has written the libretto of a comic opera which Mr. Alfred Collier is now setting to music.

THE birthday of Richard Wagner, the composer, is celebrated in Germany with as much regularity as if he were one of the mythological heroes of antiquity.

THE experiment of open-air theaters is successful in Boston, where five of them at the various beaches are now open, with attractions ranging from Uncle Tom's Cabin to The Pirates of Penzance.

THE Emma Abbott Opera Company will begin their season at a rather early date and will make the opening engagement in the Far West, eventually appearing in the principal Southern and Eastern cities.

SAYS an English exchange: "Americans, when Bernhardt visits your shores, an actress without a parallel greets you." Bah! when Soldene comes, lots of actresses without apparel 'll greet us. —Boston Post.

LILIAN SPENCER, daughter of Dr. G. W. Spencer, of Pittsburg, Pa., has signed a contract with Max Strakosch for three years. She commences her starring tour at the Fifth Avenue Theater, New York, in a new play written expressly for her by Emma Schiff, entitled Norah's Vow.

ACCORDING to a Boston journal, 2,177 dramatic performances have been given in that city during the past season. The whole number of plays represented was 325, of which 13 were by Shakespeare. It is also noteworthy that as many as 74 of these plays were represented for the first time in Boston.

MME. NILSSON is probably going to America, but certainly not with Mr. Mapleson. Mme. Trebelli is probably going to America, but decidedly not with Mr. Mapleson. Mme. Marie Roze is surely going to America, but most likely not with Mr. Mapleson. Mme. Gerster is the only one who seems inclined to do so. The question is, what will the shareholders of the New York Academy of Music say?—London World.

THE following actors are among the stars who will appear on the American stage next season: Mlle. Sara Bernhardt, Miss Fanny Davenport, Mme. Selina Dolaro, Miss Ada Cavendish, Mrs. Genevieve Ward, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs. Scott-Siddons, Miss Emily Soldene, Miss Dion Boucicault, Miss Louise Pomeroy, Mr. John McCullough, Mr. E. A. Sothern, Mr. Joseph Jefferson, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, and possibly Mme. Janauschek and Signor Salvini.

BRET HARTE'S Two Men of Sandy Bar has been published in England, probably after careful revision by the author. The Saturday Review, after referring to its technical faults as an acting play, and to one serious artistic blunder, states that "the dialogue is written, for the most part, in the author's best manner, and there are several striking situations." Has the Review compared the manner of Luck of Roaring Camp with that of Two Men of Sandy Bar.

THE following extraordinary letter was a few days ago sent to the London Figaro, and published in that journal: "In the Figaro of Saturday you wish one of your contributors to mention an actor that has been hanged, in order to correct the gushing paragraph of Mr. Belton. If my memory serves me rightly, I think Edwin Booth, the actor who shot President Lincoln in his box at the theater by climbing up the side of a pillar and afterwards jumped on the stage—breaking his leg by so doing, was concealed for several days, and when arrested was put on board an American schooner, taken out in the middle of the Atlantic, and hung, his body being afterwards thrown overboard."

THE Passion play in Oberammergau was enacted on June 27, (Sunday,) under peculiar difficulties. Five thousand persons sat for hours in a drenching rain and a cold mist in order to see 700 performers go through their trying task soaked to the skin, and with their wet garments sticking close to them in a manner which made free or graceful action hopelessly impossible. "Pilate" was in a dreadful state. Water flowed from his diadem like rain from a roof. He told a correspondent privately, after the play was over, that he felt as if he never could get through with his part, his eyes were half blinded with the rain, and he was quite unable to manage his scarlet drapery with the dignity for which he is famous. In spite of the weather, the theater was overcrowded, and, as thousands could find no place there was a proposal for a repetition of the play on Monday.

The First Female Novelist.

We hardly read of a single authoress during the middle ages. In those days female education was almost entirely neglected, except in rare instances. If women possessed talent they were compelled to hide it. No female novelist worthy of the name appeared in England until the reign of George III. The lady who first had the courage to brave public opinion was Frances Burney, the friend of Garrick, and Dr. Johnson. Miss Burney remained unmarried until she was nearly forty years of age. Romance is then supposed to exercise a less dominant power, but she, nevertheless, had the imprudence to espouse Monsieur d'Arblay, a French refugee, whose income consisted only of a precarious annuity of £100. The marriage, however, proved a very happy one. Macaulay describes Monsieur d'Arblay as "an honorable and amiable man, with a handsome person, frank, soldier-like manners, and some taste for letters." The pair did not suffer from poverty; the wife became the bread-winner; and not very long after her marriage her third novel, "Camilla," was published, by which she is said to have realized over three thousand guineas.—Home Journal.

His Garden.

He went to the back door, and there saw his garden, the pride of his waking hours and the subject of his dreams, looking like an editor's office. He sat down on the door-step and said, "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, 'I keep a hen.'"

IN A HAMMOCK.

Dreamily swaying in [illegible] shade,
Under the shadowy trees,
Catching swift gleams o[illegible] the blue bending
Lulled by the hum of the bees;

Lazy white clouds, like great billows of foam,
Hang in the ether at rest;
Down by the brook in the blossoming grass,
A thrush singing loud to its nest;

Murmur of glistening leaves overhead,
Ripples of grass at my feet;
Bird-song and breeze in a harmony wed
Charm with a melody sweet;

Idly I build airy castles in Spain,
Light as the froth on the stream;
Laughing brown eyes peering down into mine
Startle me out of my dream.

Bees in the clover-bloom mad with delight,
I am as happy as you;
Thrush, singing glad, if my heart had a voice,
Its song would be full of joy, too.

Oh, the June day, with its sunshine and balm,
Its bird-song and beauty and bliss!
And oh, the dear eyes looking love into mine,
And lips that meet mine with a kiss!

"No Fooling."

A Detroit lawyer had a call to go into the country a few miles to attend a case on trial before a country Squire, and, while jogging leisurely along in his buggy, he saw a man come running across the fields at the top of his speed. Directly behind him, and armed with a stout stick, was a woman, and it was a nip-and-tuck race to the fence. The man reached it first, however, and, as he dropped on the highway-side, he called out to the lawyer:

"Stranger, for Heaven's sake give me a lift down the road for half a mile!"

"What's the trouble here?" asked the lawyer.

"Wife and I have had another falling out!" was the reply, as the man rolled down a steep bank to the buggy.

The woman at this moment reached the fence, and, as she was climbing over, the lawyer inquired of the husband:

"Are you fooling or in earnest?"

"If you think I'm fooling just wait a second!" gasped the woman, as she plunged down the bank, rolled over and over in the road, and rose up with a big stone in each hand.

"Squat!" yelled the husband, as he circled around the horse, but the lawyer wasn't quick enough. One of the stones hit him in the back and the other grazed his ear and hit the horse, and five or six more were coming as he struck a trot and moved off, the husband hanging to the vehicle and running behind. When a safe distance away the lawyer halted and looked back. The woman stood in the middle of the road shaking both fists at him, and the husband wiped the beads of perspiration off his cheeks and chin, and said:

"Stranger, Hanner and me never have any fooling. When she's good-natured I git one shirt a week and two meals a day. When she's mad one of us has got to light out, and I wish next time you come this way you'd tell me if there is anybody in Detroit who can make me a pair of wings."

A Gentleman.

John Ruskin presents his idea of a gentleman in his well-known work "Modern Painters." The primal, literal, and perpetual meaning of the word gentleman, he says, is "a man of pure race," well-bred, in the sense that a horse or dog is well-bred.

The lower orders and all orders have to learn that every vicious habit and chronic disease communicates itself by descent, and by purity of birth the entire system of the human body and soul may be gradually elevated or—by recklessness of birth—degraded, until there shall be as much difference between the well-bred and ill-bred human creature (whatever pains may be taken with their education) as between the wolf-hound and the vilest mongrel cur.

A gentleman's first characteristic is that fineness of structure in the body which renders it capable of the most delicate sensation, and of structure in the mind which renders it capable of the most delicate sympathies—one may say, simply, "fineness of nature."

And though rightness of moral conduct is ultimately the great purifier of race, the sign of nobleness is not in this rightness of moral conduct, but in sensitiveness.

Hence it will follow that one of the probable signs of high breeding in men generally will be their kindness and mercifulness, these always indicating more or less fineness of make in the mind, and miserliness and cruelty the contrary, hence that of Isaiah:

"The vile person shall no more be called liberal, nor the churl bountiful.'

Qualifications.

An old lady walked into a lawyer's office, when the following conversation took place:

Lady—Squire, I called to see if you would like to take this boy and make a lawyer of him.

Lawyer—The boy appears to be rather young, madam; how old is he?

Lady—Seven years, sir.

Lawyer—He is too young, decidedly too young; have you no older boys?

Lady—Oh, yes; I have several; but we have concluded to make farmers of the others. I told the old man I thought this little fellow would make a first-rate lawyer, and so I called to see if you would take him.

Lawyer—Oh, madam; he is too young yet to commence the study of the profession; but why do you think this boy is better calculated for a lawyer than your other sons?

Lady—Why, you see, sir, he is just 7 years old to-day. When he was only 5 he'd lie like all nature; when he got to be 6 he was saucy and impudent as any critter could be, and now he'll steal anything he can lay his hands on.

THE first step toward carrying out the augmentation of the German army prescribed by the new Army bill has been taken, and the Cologne Gazette points out that, when the new regiments are organized, the strength of the armed forces of the three great military powers on the continent will be, at all events in respect of the paramount arm of the service, very nearly equal; since the Russian European army will comprise 164 regiments of infantry, the German 161, and the French 154, or, including the four regiments of marine infantry, 158.

IT is estimated that the shipment of peaches from Delaware this year will reach 3,532,000 baskets.

READ THE RECORD.

Earnest Words Against Garfield by His Own Party, in His Own District in 1876.

Charged with Venality, Cowardice, Corruption, Bribery, Perjury, and Swindling.

[An Address to the Republican Voters of the Nineteenth (Ohio) Congressional District.]

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We who address you were appointed a committee for this purpose by an independent convention of Republicans assembled for the purpose of putting in nomination a suitable person as candidate for Congress in opposition to James A. Garfield.

The causes which impelled the calling of that convention and inspired its action are set forth in the resolutions by it adopted and printed herewith. To the indictment contained in those resolutions, and the evidence submitted in support thereof, we respectfully call your attention and ask your candid consideration.

We have no grievances. We never sought favors at Mr. Garfield's hands and have no personal quarrel with him. On the contrary, we have been among his warmest political friends and supporters, and now only attack his acts and conduct in public life and the character he has thereby attained.

It is easier to flow with the tide than to row against it, and we regret the necessity which compels us to denounce him.

It is fitting that as true men we should seek the cause and remedy for this state of ruin, and we look not far nor long. Corruption in office and want of wisdom in legislation loom up before us. We review with pride our party history and achievements, and we now see fraud in high places eating at its vitals. Its revenue officers are found stealing and dividing with whisky rings. Its Secretaries sell post traderships. Its Congressmen raise their own salaries and make them retroactive; take great fees for argument on paving jobs before boards of their own creation, and pocket the dividends of great frauds like the Credit Mobilier. Corruption rides in $1,600 landaulets, purchased at Government expense, and Congressmen build palaces at the capital, while the people toil and sweat under the burdens—they forget that they are but the servants of the nation, and act as if they were its owners, seeking to wring from it the greatest possible number of dollars for their own purposes.

The Republican party has done much to purify itself within itself. Its whisky ring revenue officers are convicted and imprisoned. Belknap is deposed and impeached, and only escapes conviction by a technicality. Its salary-stealing, Credit Mobilier, pavement-jobbing Congressmen are mostly retired. James A. Garfield remains. Richard C. Parsons, his compeer as a great patent-pavement lawyer, nominated without opposition in a district Republican last year by 6,500 majority, was buried at the polls by Henry B. Payne, a Democrat, by 2,500 majority. The office-holders nominated him, but the brave, honest people rebuked him.

James A. Garfield fell from 10,935 majority in 1872 to 2,529 majority in 1874. "Oh, what a fall was there, my countrymen." Rebuked, shorn of character for truth and integrity, all that is noble in manhood, defeated, he stands a sad and blackened monument of avarice and greed.

By the arts of the orator and demagogue, of which he is a consummate master, he is striving and struggling, and may postpone the day of his final doom, but he bears upon his front the writing on the wall, "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin."

Flaming oratory upon the horrors of Andersonville and Libby, and the disordered condition of the South are a poor compensation for want of integrity. The fools who believe that another great rebellion or payment of the rebel debt are imminent are only found in the postoffices and lunatic asylums. The people know better, and that cry of the demagogue to arouse their fears that he may get their votes ought to be of no avail.

G. N. TUTTLE,
P. BOSWORTH, and
H. H. HINE, of Lake county;
J. A. GIDDINGS, of Ashtabula;
L. E. DURFEE, of Geauga;
L. D. BROWN, of Portage,
A. YOUMANS, of Trumbull.

September 10, 1876.

On the 9th day of September, 1876, the Republicans of the Nineteenth Congressional district of Ohio opposed to the return of James A. Garfield to Congress met in convention at Warren, Ohio, and organized by electing Dr. C. W. Ensign, of Lake, for Chairman, and L. D. Brown, of Portage, and George E. Paine, of Lake, Secretaries.

On motion, G. N. Tuttle and J. B. Burroughs, of Lake; E. F. Perry, of Ashtabula; L. D. Brown, of Portage, and C. D. Crary, of Lake, were chosen a Committee on Resolutions, and H. H. Hine, William E. Hulett, P. Bosworth, and J. S. Casement, B. F. Perry, and R. M. Murray were appointed a Committee on Conference for Representative.

The Committee on Resolutions, after a long whereas, said:

Therefore, be it by this independent convention of the Republicans of the Nineteenth Congressional district of Ohio—

1. Resolved, That dishonesty, fraud and corruption have become so common, notorious and obvious in the administration of our National Government as to be not only humiliating and disgraceful in the estimation of every honest and intelligent citizen, but to imperil the prosperity of the people, if not the stability of the Government itself.

2. Resolved, That this deplorable condition of the administration of our National Government is largely due to the election to office and continuance therein of corrupt, dishonest and venal men.

3. Resolved, That it is useless and hypocritical for any political party to declare for reform in its platforms, papers and public addresses while it insists on returning to high official place and power men who have been notoriously connected with the very schemes of fraud which render reform necessary and urgent; that to send those to enact reform who themselves need reforming to make them honest is worse than setting the blind to lead the blind.

4. Resolved, That there is no man to-day officially connected with the administration of our National Government against whom are justly preferred more or graver charges of corruption than are publicly made and abundantly sustained against James A. Garfield, the present Representative of this Congressional district and the nominee of the Republican Convention for re-election.

5. Resolved, That since he first entered Congress to this day there is scarcely an instance in which rings and monopolies have been arrayed against the interests of the people, that he has been found active in speech or vote upon the side of the latter, but in almost every case he has been found the ready champion of rings and monopolies.

6. Resolved, That we especially charge him with venality and cowardice in permitting Benjamin F. Butler to attach to the Appropriation bill of 1873 that ever-to-be-remembered infamy, the salary steal; and in speaking and voting for that measure upon its final passage. And charge him with corrupt disregard of the clearly expressed demand of his constituents that he should vote for its repeal, and with evading said demand by voting for the Hutchinson amendment.

7. Resolved, That we further arraign and denounce him for his corrupt connection with the Credit Mobilier, for his false denials before his constituents, for his perjured denials thereof before a committee of his peers in Congress, for fraud upon his constituents in circulating among them a pamphlet purporting to set forth the findings of said committee and the evidence against him, when, in fact, material portions thereof were omitted and garbled.

8. Resolved, That we further arraign and charge him with corrupt bribery in selling his official influence as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for $5,000 to the De Golyer pavement ring to aid them in securing a contract from the Board of Public Works of the District of Columbia; selling his influence to aid said ring in imposing upon the people of said District a pavement which is almost worthless at a price three times its cost, as sworn by one of the contractors; selling his influence to aid said ring in procuring a contract, to procure which it corruptly paid $97,000 "for influence;" selling his influence in a matter that involved no question of law, upon the shallow pretext that he was acting as a lawyer; selling his influence in a manner so palpable and clear as to be so found and declared by an important and competent court upon an issue solemnly tried.

9. Resolved, That we arraign him for the fraudulent manner in which he attempted in his speech delivered at Warren, on the 9th day of September, 1874, to shield himself from censure in receiving the before-named $5,000, by falsely representing, in said speech, that the Congress of the United States were not responsible for the acts of said board, nor the United States liable for the debts created thereby, when in truth and in fact, as he then well knew, the said Board of Public Works and the officers of said District were but the agents and instruments of Congress, and the United States was responsible for the indebtedness by them created.

MORE HANCOCK RECRUITS.

George Wilkes Reviews the Situation.

Mr. Wm. M. Hall, of Stamford, Ct., has received the following letter from George Wilkes, dated Paris, July 18, 1880:

MY DEAR HALL: I have been away for a week, and your last letter has lain unanswered so long that I must jump its current topics to express my great gratification at the nomination of Gen. Hancock.

Garfield pleased me, because his name rose upon the collapse of a horrid specter which had frightened the country to its very marrow; but Hancock fills the bill—an honest soldier who knows nothing but his duty, and will be sure to leave the people, unhampered by "policies," to their own free will. That is the true theory of the Presidential institution.

I have been hankering to vote the Democratic ticket for over ten years past, because it is a fixed principle with me that no party whatever is fit to wield the Government, its army, and its purse consecutively for over ten years; certainly not for twenty. Parties, like certain dishes, need to be turned over once in a while to suit the public palate, nay, the public health, and Heaven knows our gorged and loathing country needs a change at present. But the management of the Democratic party has been so incompetent for the last ten years, so confounded with crassedness in its leaderships, that I felt forced, in spite of my principle, to adhere to the more respectable rogueries of the Puritan-Republicans.

Hancock, however, fills the bill. He is "a bold soldier boy," with a clean name; and though, since Andrew Jackson the military idea has not been a Democratic fancy, it is not for the Republicans to come out of their hotbed of sabers to reproach us with it now. They surely cannot clamor with success about the Mrs. Surratt performance of Hancock's bounden duty. That necessary tragedy has been sufficiently discoursed by applauding stalwarts; has always proved to be one of the most telling appeals to Republican patriotism during the last four Presidential campaigns; and I am much mistaken in my estimate of human nature if the same painful incident, with an honest but sorrowful soldier as its central figure, does not again powerfully influence the unpolitical portion of the American people.

I know Hancock, and I like him. He is a man of sound ability, and will wear well; and though, as you know, I never fancied West Point much, I must bear it this important testimony: Throughout the war, on both sides, not one of the regular brand was known to steal.

* * * I was always of the opinion, after what had happened in 1876, that Tilden was the logical and proper candidate for Cincinnati, and still believe he would have been elected—first, because the people throughout the land were yearning for a change. We have seen that mysterious public sense lately work in England. But beyond the impulse of this slow and steady revolution against the Republican party, and transcending the force of all other causes put together, came in the nick of time the audacious attempt of a set of political highwaymen at Chicago to plant their knees upon the public breast and throttle it of its voice, in order that they might establish a permanent government for their political master and themselves. They were mad with spoil and drunk with arrogance and power, and did not know to what a great extent they were unmasking themselves till it was too late.

Was ever such a sight? Their leader, with his private wire, most blind and mad of all, had waded in to his fate from a primary declaration that he would accept a nomination only if unanimously pressed upon him, and, after a six-day fight, died with his jaw upon the bit at 306.

That was the moment at which the country took fire, or, to use our American phrase, "got mad." At the same moment a panic seized the braves who had been forbidding honest men to speak. The siege of liberty was raised by the lifting of Garfield's banner. The desperadoes endeavored to make the best of their discomfiture; but they had gone too far. The people now had taken the bit, and the insults these Republican dictators had put upon their respected representatives in the convention burned every honest cheek in the land. From that moment the election of any Democratic candidate who might be named at Cincinnati was certain.

But the best man was chosen, and I rejoice in his selection. I do not predict anything, but I believe Gen. Hancock will be invited to the White House, in a large part by the very same patriotic men who sent honest Abraham Lincoln there for two terms. I shall take great pleasure in casting my vote for him as a man without stain and equal to the Presidential station. For that purpose I will be found at the polls in New York at the election next November. GEO. WILKES.

A Republican Candidate for Governor of North Carolina Gives His Reasons for Declaring in Favor of the Cincinnati Candidate.

The Raleigh Daily News has had an interview with Mr. W. A. Guthrie, a prominent lawyer of Fayetteville and one of the most prominent and influential of the younger Republicans of North Carolina, and who, as it had been rumored, was leaning toward Gen. Hancock. A News reporter called on Mr. Guthrie and asked him if it were true. Mr. Guthrie without hesitation replied that it was, and then the question was asked: "Why do you intend to vote for Hancock for President?" To which he replied: "For the same reason that I voted for Grant in 1868. I believe that he can give us 'peace' and permanent 'reconstruction.' I believe when Grant said in 1868, 'Let us have peace,' he meant it; but you Democrats, as I thought and still think, prevented him by your opposition to the 'reconstruction acts' from carrying out his good intentions. You said then that what I thought was inevitable would be 'eating dirt,' and you would not submit to it. You had to submit, nevertheless, and I have not seen any special benefit to the country by your thirteen years of opposition. I believe now the Southern Democrats are heartily sick of sectional strife, and mean in good faith to yield a hearty obedience to the national authority; and the election of Hancock by the co-operation of the national Democratic party will be conclusive proof that the South is now as loyal as the North. I don't believe that any man could be found so stupid as to doubt Hancock's loyalty, and I am sure that the Union in his hands would be safe. I think there is special necessity just now of having sectionalism abolished and the 'bloody shirt' eliminated from our politics. The development of our material resources and the prosperity of the country can never be promoted by sectional strife. So long as the North believes we are disloyal, whether it be true or not, we cannot expect capitalists to come here and help us to rebuild our waste places. I noticed a day or two ago in the News that a Rhode Island youth was actually afraid to come to Raleigh, the capital of our State, to attend Judge Strong's law-school, because his friends at home were apprehensive of his personal safety. I believe that Gen. Hancock is a man of pure private character, and I know he was a gallant soldier. We need a man as President of unimpeachable private character to inspire confidence at home, and a soldier of national reputation to command the respect of foreign nations."

The News editorially added:

"Mr. Guthrie's course is the more remarkable in these days in that in all human probability he would have been nominated for Governor by the State Convention of his party, and the nomination for Congress in the Cape Fear district has been at his disposal. His conduct and his reasons for it cannot fail of powerful influence with his party in the Third district and throughout the State."

Grant's Most Intimate Friend.

[St. Louis Cor. Chicago Telegraph.]

John T. Long, the most intimate friend of Grant in the West, and a leading Republican, in an interview with a correspondent, said yesterday: "I shall vote for Gen. Hancock, and believe he will be elected. I think he has the qualifications to make a good President. He will have the good sense to surround himself with the right kind of advisers. I have never heard Grant discuss Hancock save as a General, and in that respect he always spoke well of him. I am a Republican still. I have been in correspondence with many political and personal friends respecting the political situation, and I shall vote for Hancock."

Amid the Wildest Enthusiasm.

[Keokuk (Iowa) Cor. Chicago Times.]

At a meeting of the Hancock and English Club of this city, this evening, Ephraim Radasch, a prominent German, and recently Chairman of the Republican County Central Committee of Lee county, came forward and signed the club roll, amid the wildest enthusiasm. Mr. Radasch has heretofore been a wheel-horse in the Republican party.

OILY GARFIELD.

How Detroiters Were Victimized by the Oily Speculator.

[From the Jackson (Mich.) Patriot.]

An enterprising reporter of the Evening News, in his explorations about the city of Detroit in search of information for the readers of that journal, succeeded in gathering up quite an interesting historical sketch of the operations of James A. Garfield in that city fifteen years ago, whereby it appears that a number of Detroit capitalists "got left" pretty badly, and the Republican Presidential candidate realized a handsome profit. It seems that in 1865 the "People's Oil Company" was projected in Detroit, with John Burt as President, and a list of stockholders composing many of the solid business men of the town. The company purchased ten acres of land on Pithole creek, Pennsylvania, and began boring wells. Work had scarcely commenced when overtures were made by outsiders who wanted to enter the corporation. Among them was Gen. Garfield, who wrote the new company and suggested that it purchase several hundred acres of farming and mining land in Kentucky and West Virginia.

Finally Garfield was invited to Detroit for consultation in regard to his proposition. A meeting of the company was held, before which Mr. G. appeared in behalf of the lands which he represented, and which he described with such glowing phrases that the "People's Oil Company" decided to purchase the following lands in fee simple for $10,000: 190 acres in Wayne county, West Virginia; 221 acres in Floyd and Johnson counties, Kentucky; 850 acres in McGoffin county, Kentucky; 182 acres in Floyd county, Kentucky; and to take a twenty years' lease of 500 acres in Floyd county from Feb. 20, 1865. The lands had been inspected by Mr. Burt and others, were reported to be substantially as represented, and there was only one more question to be answered: Was the title to these lands in good shape? What followed is thus described by the News reporter:

Garfield accordingly gave his personal guarantee that the company should have a good title, and even offered to sign a personal bond to that effect. The company were satisfied with these representations, and it was agreed by Mr. Garfield that he and the other three owners of the land should take $10,000 of the purchase money in stock. So the necessary papers were made out. The transfer of the land was looked after by one Burrows, from Wheeling, W. Va., who acted as "agent" for Garfield and the other two alleged owners, and had the property in his own name "for convenience." But it was Garfield who promised to have a satisfactory deed made out and forwarded; and Garfield took the first installment of $5,000 home in his own personal gripsack. The man Burrows was a mere shadow—a dummy for "convenience sake." Garfield was the head and front of the whole business, and the company supposed all the time that it was dealing in good faith with him.

Garfield's written bond pledged him personally to secure for the company an abstract of title "which should be satisfactory." The deeds were sent on and accepted, and the money paid as above stated.

After Garfield and his three friends had been admitted as stockholders, the name of the corporation was changed to "The People's Union Oil, Mining and Manufacturing Company," incorporated under the laws of the State of Michigan, in March, 1865, with the following officers:

President—John Burt.
Vice President—Gen. James A. Garfield.
Secretary—Wm C. Colburn.
Treasurer—Albert Ives.
Directors—John Burt, J. Leonard, W. W. Wheaton, Joseph Hubbard, Austin Burt, Israel Mowry, A. G. Noyes, Wm. C. Colburn and Dr. Morse Stewart.

The company had a capital stock of 20,000 shares, per value $25, representing a paid-up capital of $500,000. During the first year of its existence it had several wells bored in Venango county, Pa., and laid out a large amount of money in unsuccessful attempts to strike oil. Then assessments began to come in, and some of the stockholders paid them and others turned their stock back to the company and went out. All their enthusiasm in the oil business faded away, and the stockholders began to comprehend that they would have to get rich elsewhere. After a year or two had passed the company was somewhat startled to hear that parties had laid claim to the land which they had purchased from Garfield. Supposing that Garfield would protect their common interests, the stockholders in Detroit remained idle until news came one day that some points of the suit had been decided against the company! Letters were immediately sent to Garfield asking what in ——, so to speak, was the matter, and Garfield replied with an oily communication urging the company to put their minds at ease, for he would take immediate steps to see that their rights were protected. And thus it went on until the lands which the company had bought of Garfield et al. passed into the hands of the rightful owners.

Letters were repeatedly sent to Garfield, and assurances were continually received from him which amounted to nothing; for it is understood that he never appeared in court to defend the suit, or took any steps whatever to protect the company. The case, so far as known, was allowed to go by default, and, when a delegation of the company went down to see what was the matter, they discovered that their own title to the property was worthless. There was, however, nobody to hold accountable for it except the lawyer, Burrows, who had executed all the papers in his own name, and who turned out to be a worthless, impecunious, good-for-nothing sort of a shyster.

When the delegation came home and reported these things there was a general howl of indignation all along the line. Some growled about John Burt's having engineered the company into this pitfall; but it is alleged that Mr. Burt had prudently disposed of his stock when he discovered that a crash was coming. Others were eager to bring suit against Garfield on his bond that a "satisfactory title" should be given, but when the bond was placed in the hands of a lawyer he snapped his fingers and said it was no good.

"When you accepted the deeds that were given you," said this man of law, "and paid your money and became de facto owners of that land, Garfield's legal responsibility ceased. The deeds were shown to be satisfactory from the fact of your accepting them!"

And thus ended the little project in which the "oily-tongued" Garfield, as the News calls him, seems to have adroitly victimized the speculative Detroiters.

THE BLOODY SHIRT.

An Earnest Plea for Peace.

[From the Chicago Daily News, Independent Republican.]

What is now really wanted to crown the present prosperous condition of the country is peace. And peace is assured if the politicians on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line ignore the old "bloody-shirt" business. Gen. Grant passed through the South a short time since. Returning to Illinois, he declared the Southern people both peaceful and prosperous. And he evidently knew whereof he spoke, for the facts and figures of the census and of the Statistical Bureau at Washington fully confirm his statement. Yet, in his speech in this city on Saturday night, Mr. Chauncey I. Filley, of St. Louis, would have us believe that the South is in a bad way, both politically and materially. He said that he "wanted the South to forget the lost cause; let them start factories, as in the North." Now, this is the very thing that the South is doing, and to an extent that is beginning to cause alarm to New England. The following is a statement showing the number of cotton spindles in the Southern States:

	Spindles.		Spindles.
Arkansas	1,708	North Carolina	93,000
Alabama	63,000	South Carolina	92,000
Georgia	187,000	Texas	9,300
Kentucky	11,264	Tennessee	49,500
Louisiana	6,300	Virginia	52,000
Mississippi	70,000
Maryland	113,000	Grand total	687,264
Missouri	26,500

This is doing pretty well since the war, which swept almost every material resource of that section to destruction. But it is by no means all that the South is doing in the way of adding to the prosperity of the common country. The enormous sums of money which have accrued to her people on account of the cotton crop alone are simply fabulous. The fifteen years' crops of cotton have brought to the cultivators over $60 per bale, while the increase during the period has been some 9,930,344 bales; the returns have reached about $3,500,000,000 in gold value, while the excess of production to be credited to free labor has realized $600,000,000. Finally, the value of these fifteen crops of cotton at the factories or at the ports of shipment has been little, if any, less than $4,000,000,000. It is not possible that a people whose industries exhibit such enormous figures as these can be so poorly off. Let Mr. Chauncey I. Filley visit the great Armour, Fowler, Hutchinson and other pork-packing establishments in this city, and he will find that the South is an immense consumer of our Western meat products. Now, we say to all these bloody-shirt wavers, that a country which exhibits such signs of prosperity as these, which will show at the next census a greater ratio of increase in population than the Northwest or East, and which is alarming the New England manufacturers at the giant strides she is making in "starting factories," is giving such bonds for her future loyalty as will render it secure beyond peradventure to the Union. Gentlemen, this business of manufacturing Southern disloyalty is played out. The figures, which do not lie, demonstrate it.

THE Bishop of Peterborough, in a letter to the Church of England Temperance Society, expresses an opinion that there is decidedly less intemperance now among all classes than there was fifty years ago.

INDIANA NEWS.

THE mortality among children in Madison this summer is unusually great.

SOUTH BEND has 13,392 inhabitants, a gain of 7,186 in ten years, or nearly the whole gain of St. Joseph county.

FRANK ROSS, a Terre Haute boy, has arrived home, having ridden from Ann Arbor, Mich., a distance of 550 miles on a bicycle.

THE building of a new cell-house at the Jeffersonville State Prison has been let for $50,000, and the work will commence at once.

ADDISON WILLIAMS, for sixty years a resident of Crawford county, and for forty years a magistrate therein, died last week, aged 90.

CONSIDERABLE excitement is caused at Whiteland, in the north part of Franklin county, over the appearance of a true case of spotted fever.

THE recent work of the Indiana State Board of Equalization, which will be the basis of taxation for the ensuing five years, will greatly reduce the assessment.

A TERRE HAUTE mule has been provided with overalls to keep it from demolishing the surrounding neighborhood in attempting to keep off the flies. It resembles a reversed centaur.

JOHN BODINE, a waiter, was burned to death at Terre Haute, the other night. He had gone to sleep in a restaurant, which caught fire, and was not awakened until escape was out of the question.

CHAS. F. BAKER, a prominent grocer of Vincennes, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to J. E. Weisert, assignee. His assets are estimated at $10,000; liabilities unknown.

THE old pioneers of Cass county will hold a big celebration Aug. 21. Hon. Horace P. Biddle, of the Supreme Court, and one of the early settlers, has consented to deliver the oration of the day.

THERE are within a radius of ten miles of Madison more than 250,000 bearing peach trees, and the present crop in that locality, though by no means a full one, will exceed 150,000 bushels.

A BOY about 12 years of age, son of a farmer living a few miles east of Delphi, played near the hind legs of his father's mule. The play terminated with the usual sad climax. The little boy is not expected to recover.

ALLEN LYBROOK, of Richmond, who recently went to France with a lot of Richmond horses for the French army, and was offered a clerkship by United States Consul Bridgeland, has been made Vice Consul at Havre.

B. F. HAVENS, aged 65, residing at Shelburn, Sullivan county, recently bled to death. An eating sore in his leg, the result of a war wound, finally came in contact with an artery, and, before assistance could arrive, death ensued.

SOME months ago, Willie, the little son of John Goaldy, of Sullivan, suddenly ran off, and no possible trace could be found of him. His father has just received a telegram from Sidney, Neb., saying Willie was dangerously hurt.

WORK on the Masonic Temple and Opera House at Fort Wayne have been suspended, apparently for an indefinite period. The Building Committee has become discouraged at the difficulty experienced in collecting subscriptions to the capital stock.

MR. E. BRAUNEGEL, of Aurora, is now the proud possessor of a clock sent him by his son Michael from Colorado, a clock the outside of which is made up of over fifty specimens of Colorado and Missouri ores. Gold and silver ores abound on the clock, and forty-four of the specimens are nicely labeled.

ALONSON P. FERRY died at his residence in Wabash, a few days ago, in the 62d year of his age. Mr. Ferry was born in Ashtabula county, Ohio, and came to Wabash county in 1843, and since that time has been prominently identified with the growth and history of the county. In 1847-8 he edited the Upper Wabash Argus, the first paper published in the county. He served several terms as County Surveyor, and as Auditor, and was editor of the Plaindealer for several years.

TWO BROTHERS named Holland lived near Petersburg, Pike county. A mule belonging to one of the brothers got into a cornfield of the other brother. The owner of the corn tied a clapboard on the mule's tail. This so maddened the owner of the mule that he proceeded to his brother's place and attacked him with a knife. The owner of the corn, in defending himself, struck his brother on the head with a board, crushing his skull, from the effects of which he died next morning.

Census Returns.

The following table shows the present population of the several counties of the Fifth census district, as compared with the population of the same in 1870:

Counties.	Pop. in 1870.	Pop. in 1880.	Gain.
Benton	5,615	11,112	5,497
Carroll	16,152	18,354	2,202
Cass	24,193	27,619	3,426
Fulton	12,726	14,304	1,578
Howard	15,847	18,351	2,504
Jasper	6,354	9,466	3,112
Lake	12,339	15,114	2,775
Laporte	27,062	30,943	3,881
Marshall	20,211	23,427	3,216
Miami	21,052	24,108	3,056
Newton	5,829	8,303	2,474
Porter	13,942	17,184	3,242
Pulaski	7,801	9,858	2,057
St. Joseph	25,322	33,823	8,501
Starke	3,888	5,106	1,218
White	10,554	13,815	3,261
Totals	228,887	280,887	52,000

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.
Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

"HAVE you been stealing apples?" asked the minister.

"Yes, sir," answered the boy, sheepishly.

"And are you trying to hide them from me?" continued the old man.

"Yis, sir," said the culprit, and then added, his face brightening up, "you said last Sunday that we must avoid the appearance of evil."

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
THE Physicians in charge of this old and well known institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.
INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE Producing such maladies as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Orchitis, all Urinary Troubles and Syphilitic or Mercurial affections of the throat, skin or bones, treated with success, on scientific principles, without using Mercury or other Poisonous Medicines.
YOUNG MEN and those of middle age who are suffering from the effects of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, the result of self-abuse in youth or excess in matured years, are permanently cured. This disease produces some of the following effects: emissions, blotches, dizziness, nervousness, dimness of sight, cough, indigestion, constipation, despondency, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, defective memory, sexual exhaustion, impotency or loss of manly vigor, which unfit the victim for business or marriage.
PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is FREE and invited. List of questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application.
Persons suffering from Rupture should send their address, and learn something to their advantage. It is not a truss.
Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles, 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by E. L. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhoea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly.
No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.
Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
☞ Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE
SAFE DIABETES CURE
SAFE BITTERS
SAFE NERVINE
SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THYSELF.

IN USE SINCE 1855
MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS
A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.
An experience of twenty-five years proves it to be the greatest Antidote to Malaria and all other Ague influences known to the world.
The only absolute cure for all Affections of the Kidneys. In Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, all Disorders of the Bowels, and Affections of the Throat and Lungs it is equally efficacious, while as a remedy for complaints peculiar to the female sex it has no equal.
NOT A BEVERAGE
But an old reliable Household Remedy, thoroughly adapted to assist nature.
It supplies tone to the stomach, reinvigorates the digestive organs, stimulates the secretions, and promoting a regular action of the bowels, enables every organ of the body to perform its allotted work regularly and without interruption.
Its highest commendations come from those who have used it longest and known it best.
Nowhere so popular as in Lancaster, Pa., where it has been in use for more than a quarter of a century.
Highly commended as a General Tonic and Appetizer. Sold by Druggists everywhere.
THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH
A large sized paper descriptive of disease, its origin and cure, will be mailed free to any address on application to
THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO.
Lancaster, Pa.
☞ We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. It never fails, is easy to take, and no after-physic is required. Price, 25 cents.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES---RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WM. ELLERY
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains,

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind

BOARDING HOUSES.

Some Reasons Why Married People Should Live Elsewhere.

The average American boarding house is an excellent thing in its way. It affords a shelter and a brevet-home for the homeless ones of earth. It is a good place, perhaps, for young men, old bachelors and widowers; but a boarding house is emphatically NOT a good home for young married people. The new-made wife, if she be a true woman, does not ask for a life of idleness; she would much prefer to busy herself in making a home of her own attractive, than to sit with folded hands, waiting for meal time. It is an absolute unkindness to the young wife to ask her to forego the healthful pleasures of early housekeeping, for a life of idleness in a crowded boarding house. But this is not the worst feature of the case. The do-nothing sort of existence that maintains in every boarding house, begets habits of indolence, a tase for gossip, a tendency to flirtation, and then—domestic misery and woe. Thousands of young wives have their happiness wrecked every year because, perchance, from kindliest motives, their husbands have placed them in the midst of temptations that always surround the idle. The whole danger of the situation is in the lack of healthful duties to perform. Idleness is no more the normal sphere of woman than of man. Our best development comes from the proper use of the faculties of body as well as of the mind, and when our surroundings are such that there is nothing to think about, then is the hour of danger. The wife in a boarding house cannot fold her hands and sit like an automaton, waiting for the coming of her lord. She grows impatient of solitude, and in the lack of employment, seeks companionship. In finding it, she secures the society of other indolent persons—not indolent of choice, but of necessity—and then the first step is taken in the wrong direction. Tired of the confinement of the house, she goes up the street, not with any especial aim, but simply to be amused; here is a second step in error. Soon the street becomes more attractive than her rooms, and she is found most of the time upon the street. At the house she is thrown daily in contact with a miscellaneous assemblage of people, good, bad and indifferent. She hears three times a day an interchange of views on all subjects of gossip, morality and religion. She is first startled by the enunciation of some strange theories of life advanced by the boarder who sits at the table of every boarding house in the land, who is either an atheist, infidel or free-lover, or possibly all three combined. Soon she listens complacently to doctrines that anon would have shocked her sense of right. She hears gossip and shortly engages in it. Her husband, too, when away from business, is subjected to the same influences. Instead of busying himself in the way of improving his own home, he interests himself in silly badinage with other boarders, and perhaps forms an unhallowed intimacy with some frivolous lady of the household. All these, and a thousand other reasons obtain against the custom so prevalent among married people of making their homes at boarding houses, a custom that usually springs from a desire to live in better style than one could afford to do in a home of his own. But we believe that a home in the simplest cottage, with the duties that home living brings, is infinitely better for husband and wife than the most luxurious apartments in a public boarding house.

◆

A Printer's Dream.

A printer sat in his office chair; his boots were patched and his coat threadbare, while his face looked weary and worn with care. While sadly thinking of business debt, old Morpheus slowly 'round him crept, and before he knew it he soundly slept; and, sleeping, he dreamed that he was dead, from trouble and toil his spirit had fled, and that not even a cow bell tolled for the peaceful rest of his cowhide sole. As he wandered among the shades the smoke and scorch in lower Hades, he shortly observed an iron door that creakingly swung on hinges ajar, but the entrance was closed by a red-hot bar, and Satan himself stood peeping out and watching for travellers thereabouts, and thus to the passing printer spoke, and with growling voice the echoes woke: "Come in, my dear, it shall cost you nothing, and never fear; this is the place where I cook the ones who never pay their subscription sums, for though in life they may escape, they will find when dead it is too late; I will show the place where I melt them thin, with red-hot chains and scraps of tin, and also where I comb their heads with broken glass and melted lead, and if of refreshments they only think, there's boiling water for them to drink; there's the red-hot grindstone to grind down h's nose, and red-hot rings to wear on his toes, and if they mention they don't like fire I'll sew up their mouths with red-hot wire; and then, dear sir, you should see them squirm while I roll them over and cook to a turn?" With these last words the printer awoke, and thought it all a practical joke; but still at times so real did it seem that he cannot believe it was all a dream, and often he thinks with a chuckle and grin of the fate of those who save their tin and never pay the printer.

Didn't Want to Kiss the Children.

Speaking of the death of Rev. Geo. Bradburn, in Boston the other day, "Templeton," in the Hartford Courant says: "He was one of the first of the Abolitionist whigs, and used to be prominent in the legislature when he represented Nantucket in that body. Mr. Brandburn made a plucky fight for years to get the law that prevented marriages between white and colored people repealed. The democrats always voted against him, and most of the whigs were too conservative to give him aid. One year he had made a long speech in favor of the rebel, and seemed to be very near carrying it. At this junction a dry old whig, who had not before spoken, took the floor. 'I have no objection,' said he, 'to my friend from Nantucket marrying a negro wife if he wants to; but I have this stipulation to make, that when I come over to the island to visit him in his matrimonial paradise, he will give me his word that I will never be asked to kiss his milk-and-molasses children.'"

◆

Brag or Bluster Won't Do.

[Boston Herald.]

We don't believe that Senator Blaine has any doubts as to the completeness of the fusion in Maine; that General Arthur or Governor Cornell bases any hopes upon a renewal of the fight between Tammany and anti-Tammany, or that the democratic leaders in Indiana have any idea they are playing a losing game. Neither does an impartial observer detect any signs that the democratic campaign "languishes," or that "the Hancock boom is subsiding." The supporters of Hancock are united, active and confident. He will receive the full democratic vote, and enough beside to give the republicans lots of trouble, perhaps in states where they do not expect it. This campaign is not to be decided by brag or bluster.

◆

Signs of the Millennium.

The Interior, of Chicago, speaking of "Spiritual Songs for the Sunday-school" of which Scribiner & Co. have printed 100,000 copies, says:

"It may be expected that among the signs to herald the dawn of the millennium, will be the publication of a hymn-book for Sunday-schools in which there shall be no doggerel hymns—mere empty rhymes—and no jig tunes. Until then, there will be more or less of a popular demand for these articles, which hymn-book makers and publishers cannot well disregard altogether. This latest work of Dr Robinson (who, as a hymn-book maker, is without a peer), is the most unexceptionable, in this particular, of any book that we remember to have seen. Of the 273 hymns in the book, many are old and among the most precious in the whole range of hymnology; while of the new hymns, some are beautiful, and almost all are good. The music, too, is generally of a high order of merit. Indeed, taken as a whole, we know of no other book so excellent for the Sunday-school service of song as this, nor so admirably fitted for cultivating what is greatly needed in all our Sunday-schools,—a love for really good hymns and good music. We note, as special features to commend, eight missionary hymns—two of them home missionary—and ten hymns appropriate to teachers' meetings. A serious defect of the book, which ought not to be repeated in subsequent editions, is the omission of the names of the authors of the hymns and tunes on the pages where they are found, and the printing of them only in the index. Let the children, at the same time they learn the hymns, learn also the names of their authors. This they will be certain not to do, where they have to turn to the index to find them. In fineness of paper, clearness of type and beauty of binding, the work is equaled by nothing in its line. It is a model."

◆

MAINE POLITICS.

The Convention at Bangor—Perfect Harmony Between the Democrats and Greenbackers.

[Boston Weekly Globe.]

The conventions are over and the work has been well done. The most harmonious feeling exists between the democrats and greenbackers, and, during the campaign now inaugurated, they will work together against the common enemy. The ticket put in nomination is one of great strength. Congressman Ladd has been tried and not found wanting. He is sure to defeat Editor Boutelle in the congressional race. As regards the senators the ticket is exceptionally strong. Stephen Jennings is one of the foremost citizens of Bangor; Hon. F. W. Hill is a man of prominence and widely known in political circles; Major Joseph L. Smith, the greenback governor, has a strong hold upon the people, Mr. Friend is prominent in western Penobscot. The rest of the ticket has much strength. Elliot Walker, candidate for judge of probate, but recently left the republican party. He is a prominent member of the Penobscot bar, and is honored and respected by all. Sheriff Stratton is universally popular, and Treasurer Chapman is thoroughly qualified to fill his position another year. A spirit of enthusiasm and determination was detected among the delegates assembled here to-day, which was significant, and the old fourth district in general and Penobscot county may be counted on for rousing union victories this fall. A grand union meeting was held in Norombega hall this evening. The large hall was thronged with an intelligent audience. The St. John's band discoursed beautiful music. Speeches were made by Hon. Edwin A. Alger and General F. S. Nickerson, of Boston. Great enthusiasm prevailed during the evening. The signs are auspicious.

◆

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of [illegible]:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O.24-tf

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:50 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:20; Angola, 5:30; Fremont, 5:48; Reading, 6:15; Bankers, 7:10; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 7:25, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west. Jackson, 9:20 a. m, there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p.m;

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:50 a. m., Academie, 11:10; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:28; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35 (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 5 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Iona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:59 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:10; Summit, 6:21; Pleasant Lake, 6:32; Angola, 6:45; Fremont, 7:15; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:50 p. m.; Buffalo, 8:00 a. m.; and New York, 10:00 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:35 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:40; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:06; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

2 22 P. M.—From Jackson 12:20 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:15 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:18, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:33; Reading, 1:45; Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:00; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:36; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:06 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26 P. M.—From Detroit 4:25 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 50; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3:50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 45 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 39 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 46 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 23 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	6 40 pm	4 55 am
Cincinnati	8 10 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 06 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 31 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Ass't Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

WABASH ST. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to Missouri, Kansas,
Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	6:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:15 p. m.	Local F't	6:58 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From
TOLEDO OR FT. WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From
St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the
Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific
Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880,

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 3, Pacific Ex.	No. 7, Night Ex.	No. 5, limit'd ex
Pittsburgh lv.	11 45pm	9 00am	1 50pm	7 30pm
Rochester	12 55	10 00	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 45pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 50am	6 25pm	9 55pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	2 41
Lima	10 40	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	6 25
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST.

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex.	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, At. Ex.	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 00am	3 30pm	5 15pm	9 40pm
Plymouth	11 35		9 45	2 30am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 10am	6 55
Lima	4 20	9 40	3 35	8 55
Forest	5 26		5 12	10 00
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	7 15pm	[illegible]pm	7 25am	12 05pm
Mansfield	7 45	12 25am	7 55	12 35
Orrville	9 38	2 30	9 56	2 26
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 22
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	2 25pm	7 30

Nos 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv	5 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 08		10 55
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 08	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 35	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 25am	6 23	4 05
Fostoria	1 08	7 25	4 58
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 15	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 10 Mail.	No. 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 20am
Tiffin	10 03	7 55	12 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 25	12 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 32	1 08
Defiance	12 58pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 33	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 25
Avilla		12 20	3 35
Albion		12 46	3 55
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 30	4 30
Milford Junction		1 40	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar.		6 10	8 20

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J. MARTIN, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

ROBERT OGDEN,

Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,

IRON AND LEAD PIPE,

BRASS GOODS

OF ALL KINDS.

125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indian

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, AUGUST 26, 1880. Number 35.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Ralston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 25 1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

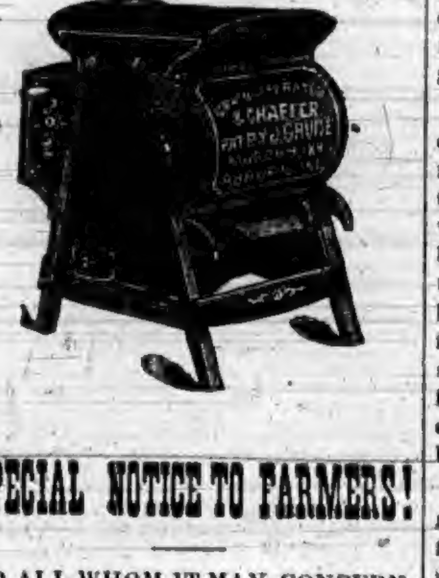
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn Indiana. 32-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Powell's Tribute to Hancock.

[Denver News.]

The following tribute to General Hancock was paid by James Elbert Powell, of Kansas City, the eloquent young rival of Bob Ingersoll, in his brilliant lecture on "The Solid South," now being delivered in Colorado under the auspices of the American literary bureau of New York:

I cannot close this allusion to the era of reconstruction in the south, ladies and gentlemen, without offering a tribute to that man, who, tried by the true test of greatness, has proven himself a peer; whose young sword flashed like a meteor over the bloody fields of Mexico, and flung its gleams across the deepening twilight of Spotsylvania and Gettysburg; whose splendid energies and spartan prowess have ever been dedicated to the cause of individual justice and national honor; whose gallantry is emblazoned upon the brightest pages of American history, but whose glory as a warrior is eclipsed by the grandeur of the civilian; who was no less a hero beneath the olive branch of peace, than when leading the charge under the red banner of war; who never feared to draw his sword at the call of his country, or to lay it, sheathed, upon the shrine of constitutional government, when the dust of conflict had drifted away; who crystalized his views and moulded his measures with that royal compassion, which yielded to a conquered and impoverished foe the inviolable inheritance of civic liberty; who is one of the grandest men in the land, recognized by the brilliancy of his individual lustre, and not reflecting the borrowed rays of other luminaries; to that defender of the Union, that champion of the constitution, that sovereign of soldiers, that pioneer of peace, that prince of patriots, General Winfield Scott Hancock, the exponent of great virtue, of tried courage, of lofty wisdom, of broad intelligence, of earnest patriotism, of noble aspiration and of true manhood.

He is a soldier, not alone of manner or of rank, but of merit and of mind; he is a soldier, who distinguished himself in the defense of liberty, and the vanquishment of despotism; he is a soldier, who lifted himself above the ignorance and prejudice of the day, and planted the royal banner of pardon and love upon the battlements of sectionalism and strife; he is a soldier, not by the power of fear, but by the force of splendid superiority; he is a soldier upon whose bosom radiates the star of honor, and to whose memory will be issued the highest patent of nobility.

When, at the foot of Bunker Hill, in the shadow of that royal shaft, which stands a monumental emblem of heroic valor, whose remembrance is consecrated in the hearts of fifty millions of patriots, beneath the rays of the stars and the light of the centuries, the goddess of historic unity, liberty, the guardian of our national faith shall call the roll of the grand army of heroes, there will be no more gallant—no more glorious response, than that which swells from the heart and record of Winfield S. Hancock.

He believed that, when the southern chieftain surrendered his sword to the northern conquerer beneath the historic tree at Appomattox, the southern sun went down, and with its setting were buried the passion and pain of war—that the blue and the gray should clasp hands forever, and the northern sigh meet the southern sorrow above the same graves, garlanded with the same flowers, gathered by the same hands, consecrated by the same regrets and bedewed with the same tears.

He has recently been nominated by a great political body for the highest office in the gift of the American people, and, though I come to night as the advocate of no faction—the champion of no party—as a lover of my country, I must say that, if the star, which now rises above General Hancock's destiny, casts its meridian beams upon him in the White House, they will fall upon an executive from whose hands the scepter of justice will not drop in helpless impotence, but one who will continue to battle for union and liberty, while truth, courage and fidelity to principle shall find a home in the hearts and hopes of men. He will not be a politician for the sake of party, as he has not been a soldier for the sake of glory, but he will be a man for the sake of manhood, and a patriot for the sake of his country. He is a man, the corner-stone of whose character is integrity; he is a man whose virtues are not negative or obstructive, but positive and aggressive; he is a man with a strong mind, a pure heart and a ready hand; he is a man, who will set his face against any system of political looseness, and link honor and valor to a sympathy with the people; he is a man, whose favor no spoils of office can buy, whose voice no mocking flattery can silence; he is a man upon whose escutcheon rests no stain or semblance of dishonor; he is a man, who will bind together the fragments of our dismembered union; he is a man, who will heal the wounds of sectional hate, and kindle the warmth of fraternal affection; he is a man, who will rise above the level of partisan zeal, above the reach of personal venality, above the influence or suspicion of corruption, above the scope of moral cowardice—a man, who will bring confidence, bring courage, bring peace to our unhappy country, where now—

"Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land,
And waiting Justice sleeps."

◆

A Motto for 1880.

I have no sort of sympathy with the republican party because of that act, and because it justified and sustained it. After such an act I have no desire to sustain the republican party in any way. I would not vote for a party that would carry through such a fraud. I think Mr. Hayes was elected by fraud, and I do not mean to have it said that at the next election I had forgotten it. I do not say that Mr. Hayes committed the fraud, but it was committed by his party. I have no enmity to Mr. Hayes, but after the fraud by which he became president, I could not vote for any person put up for president on the republican side who did not disvow the fraud committed. I would not support any member of that party who had any sort of mixture with fraud. I feel that the counting out is just as much a fraud now as at the time it was perpetrated.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

◆

In the Same Box.

[Boston Post.]

When General Fremont met General Garfield at the Fifth Avenue hotel he said: "The first republican candidate for president greets the latest," which was as much as to say: "You will know next November how I felt twenty-four years ago."

ULYSSES GRANT, JR.

A Successful Speculator at the Age of 28—Making Money for His Father.

[Milwaukee Daily News.]

Ulysses Grant, Jr., or "Buck" Grant, as he is generally called, is now twenty-eight years old, and one of the most successful financiers of his age in this country. His talent in that direction has been fully brought out during the last two years. During the closing days of his father's presidency he acted as his private secretary. Grant doubted every one about him when Babcock fell, and would not allow any one but Buck to have access to his private papers. Buck was at this time modest, smooth-faced, medium size, slim in figure, and very boyish looking. His modesty and real ability, however, made him many friends. Some powerful men in New York took up Buck when his father set out for Europe. Young Ulysses, who is a graduate of Harvard, thought that his future was to be developed in the legal profession. He was, after admission to the bar, assigned to duty in the district attorney's office in New York. There Secretary John Sherman has thrown special business in his way. Buck Grant, after accumulating a small capital under influential and powerful auspices, began making ventures in Wall street. He succeeded so well that he abandoned the law for the more profitable fields of speculation. Becoming interested, finally, in mining stocks, he paid a visit to the Pacific coast, where the great bonanza firm of Flood & O'Brien took him under its wing. Mr. Flood tossed young Buck a few points, and he made such a good use of them that the great speculators backed the young Ulysses in his cruise around the world of speculation, acting as his mentors at every point. The docile pupil so made use of his skillful training that at the end of two years he had $300,000 placed to his credit. It was only when this sum was reached that the young man proposed a matrimonial alliance with the great firm. Buck has now associated with him as a partner his brother, Jesse D. Grant. Buck himself promises to become one of the most brilliant operators in the country. Besides the fortune that he has made for himself, he has made several speculations for his father. Just before General Grant went to Mexico, he intrusted to Buck Grant $25,000 for the purpose of seeing what could be done with it. Buck Grant, during the absence of his father, cleared for him from the capital some $40,000; so General Grant, upon his return, found a dispatch placing $65,000 at his disposal by his thrifty son. With this profitable speculation added to his credit, General Grant is worth to-day in the neighborhood of $150,000. The union of the Grant and Flood families is to be followed by an aggregation of wealth that will make the families among the most formidable in point of influence in this country. In 1884, if General Grant should again be a candidate, it is intended that there shall be no money lacking for the management of a successful campaign.

◆

The Lucky Letter Carriers.

[Philadelphia Times.]

Suspecting that the letter carriers are an overpaid and favored class, Hon. Edward McPherson has assessed them $16 each as their share toward keeping McPherson in a comfortable place at Washington. The letter carriers will be lucky if they get through the year without being compelled to buy a lot of McPherson's books as a slight evidence of their loyalty.

◆

The lightning-struck girl last week. She was not injured in the least, but her corset ribs were sadly demoralized, as was also the arm of the young man who was trying to keep them in place. When asked by his friends why he keeps his arm in a sling, he explains that he "didn't know she was loaded."

◆

"You see," said a lively old bachelor, on being advised to get married, "You see, I can't do it, because I could not marry a woman I didn't respect, and it would be impossible for me to respect a woman that would consent to marry me."

A Southern Business View.

[Journal of Commerce, August 11.]

A well-known merchant and manufacturer of Richmond, Va., writes thus as he feels about General Hancock in a private letter to a gentleman of this city:

"I say to you that at no time in my recollection has a man been presented to our southern people for whom there has been expressed such spontaneous and affectionate regard as for General Hancock. He fought us to the death as a soldier, but when we were down he did not stamp on us. We will never forget that. He is a full man, and I pray God that for the sake of the peace, amity and strength of this country, he may become our ruler. A pure ruler makes pure people.'

Some time ago I asked our confederate general, Heth, whose noble division suffered so at Gettysburg, and who had elsewhere encountered Hancock on many a bloody field, what he thought of him. His eyes dilated and he answered with the utmost fervor: 'I thanked God from my heart of hearts when the news came of his nomination. Peace has at last come. There is not a fleck upon that man's character; it is absolutely spotless. I have known him from his boyhood, and his manhood is only the fruition of the noblier qualities he showed then.' A man must be more than of the ordinary run to receive such commendation from what the world would call an enemy. The war is done with us."

◆

A Straw from Ohio.

[Interview with Judge Headley.]

Among the mass of voters I hear of many changes to our side. In one single Hancock club in my neighborhood there are thirteen members heretofore republicans.

◆

The newspapers of New Orleans are seriously discussing the advisability of lynch law for that city. Although they condemn such a course, they say the lawless element is far more powerful than the police, and that something must be done about it.

Removed!

The undersigned having just completed their commodious building on the corner of Seventh and Main streets,--built especially for the hardware trade---are now placing the largest stock of

HARDWARE!

Ever shown in DeKalb county. The stock is complete in every particular, including

STOVES, TINWARE, WOODENWARE, BAR - IRON,

WOOD AND IRON PUMPS,

GAS PIPE, PAINTS, OILS, PAINT,

WHITEWASH AND HORSE BRUSHES,

Belting, Carriage and Wagon Hardware,

CARPENTERS' TOOLS, GRINDSTONES, CORDAGE,

From a fish-line up to the heaviest cable,

WHIPS, HUNTERS' Supplies, CROSSCUT SAWS, UCTLERY

And an endless assortment of Shelf goods. Our facilities for hldinng light and heavy hardware enable us to offer bargains in every branch of our trade, and wo are bound to sell at

VERY LOW PRICES.

We are thankful for past patronage, and hope to meet our many old customers at our new quarters. Come and see our new store and immense stock.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 7th, 1880. W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1880

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

A PASSENGER train came into collision with a freight train on the Pittsburgh and Fort Wayne railroad, near Freedom, Pa. Several cars were badly smashed, and many passengers were seriously wounded....Two freight trains came in collision near Cooperstown, N. Y., and the firemen of both engines were killed and two other train men seriously wounded.

K. E. PARKHURST, a young lawyer of Bath, N. Y., shot and killed Fannie Howell, the daughter of a prominent merchant of that town. Parkhurst then committed suicide. The murderer and his victim were married four years ago, but never lived together, as a legal separation was had immediately after the marriage.

MRS. LILLIE MATHER, of Lancaster, Pa., was walking with a young gentleman, when a spark from his cigar set fire to her dress, and she was fatally burned....On the night of Aug. 16 there was a heavy frost in the northern portion of New York, and at Stamford, Delaware county, thin ice formed. In Ulster county there was a light snowstorm. The growing corn and buckwheat crops are reported somewhat injured....The engineer of one of the excursion trains which collided with such fatal effects at May's Landing, N. J., has confessed the cause of the accident to the Coroner's jury. He says that on the day of the catastrophe he undertook, for the first time, to use the automatic brakes. He had never had any experience with them, and as a result the brakes would not work at the critical moment.

THE decapitated remains of Mary Cassidy, 10 years of age, have been found in the woods near Barnstable, Mass. A large knife was buried in the girl's side. There were indications that a desperate struggle had taken place, but no clew to the murderer was found.

A DARING feat has been performed at New York by a young Scotchman named Robert Donaldson. He safely leaped from High bridge into Harlem river, a distance of 116 feet. When he jumped he was dressed in tights. He wore heavy shoes on both feet, held tightly together, and his figure was erect. His hands and arms were flapped. When within about fifteen feet of the water he drew his arms to his sides and threw his head forward. He struck the water on the middle of his back. In less than a minute he swam to the nearest craft, and was soon all right.

THE WEST.

A LETTER to the Des Moines Register, from a responsible citizen of Iowa—Mr. S. A. James, of Sigourney—gives the information on the authority of an eye-witness, also a responsible man, that the notorious Bender family, four in number, were captured soon after the discovery of the murder of Col. York's brother, and shot. He says that the four were stood up in a row facing nine riflemen, and were told their fate. That Kate was plucky to the last, and called upon the captors to "shoot and be ——," and that the four bodies were buried at the corner of the four counties of Labette, Wilson, Neosho and Montgomery. A correspondent of the Chicago Times at Oswego, Kan., who claims to have been in at the death of the Benders, tells substantially the same story.

AT Minneapolis, Minn., Charles H. Richmond, an ex-railroad conductor, who has been separated from his wife for some time, shot her twice with a double-barreled shotgun in the yard of the house where they lived, and immediately after took his own life by blowing out his own brains with a revolver....On the Lake Erie & Western railroad, near Lafayette, Ind., the truck beneath the caboose became detached, and the car was thrown from the track while the train was running at the rate of twenty-three miles an hour. Fred Abrams was fatally injured, and seven others were badly hurt.

THOMAS MCGRAW, of Detroit, President of the Globe Tobacco Company and Michigan Savings Bank, and a large real-estate owner and dealer in wool, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. His assets amount to about $250,000, but the liabilities are a great deal more than that figure....Clementshaw, who swore that Charles De Young fired the first shot when young Kalloch assassinated him, has been sentenced to fourteen years in the California penitentiary for perjury. A motion for a new trial was denied....Mr. Smiley, of Spring Lake, Minn., while watering his horses overturned the wagon which contained himself, wife and three sons. All of the children were drowned....The Union Pacific Railroad Company is going to build an $80,000 monument to Oakes Ames, at the highest point on the Rocky Mountains.

OWING to the great success of "The False Friend" at Haverly's Chicago Theater, last week, it is continued for another week at least. This powerful play is presented by A. M. Palmer's Union Square Theater Company, with the original scenery, original properties, and the powerful cast of the New York company, including Mr. Chas. R. Thorne, who is unequaled in his character in this play.

HENRY HARTWELL, of Bunker Hill, Ill., killed his wife with a shot-gun, and ended his own wretched career by cutting his throat....Tremaine, an East St. Louis saloon-keeper, shot and killed Horace B. Vail, a drunken customer, who assaulted him.

THE town of Eureka, Nev., has for the second time within a year been almost destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000....A man named McGowan, on being expelled from a Kansas City saloon, went to sleep in an ice-house near a butcher's shop. While there he was so terribly eaten by rats that he will die....The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company has concluded arrangements with the Sioux Indians for running its line through their reservation, and work on the Black Hills extension will now be vigorously pushed....An explosion occurred in the Yaeger mills, St. Louis, and in an instant the entire building was in flames. The fire spread rapidly, destroying warehouses, tenements, freight cars, an old skating rink, and much other property. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

THE Agent at Poplar River, D.T., has abandoned his post in consequence of the threatening aspect of the Indians in that vicinity. He reports Sitting Bull within twenty miles of the agency. Troops have been dispatched to that point from Bismarck....A terrible tornado recently swept across the south part of Cass county, Dakota, making a track two miles wide, sweeping away buildings, crops, and farming machinery, and killing and injuring several persons.

ABOUT 30,000 people visited the Chicago Jockey Club Park to witness the prize drill of the Knights Templar commanderies. The Raper Commandery, of Indianapolis, took the first prize, the De Molai Commandery, of Louisville were given the second prize, and the third prize was awarded to the Reed Commandery No. 6, of Dayton, Ohio. The weather was intolerably hot, and the accommodations at the park were wholly inadequate. Most of the spectators were compelled to stand for hours in the broiling sun, and, although the dust was stifling, no water was to be had except for money.

A FALLING elevator at the Sandusky (Ohio) wheel works crushed a man and a boy who were passing under it, to death, mangling their bodies frightfully. There were sixteen persons on the elevator, only two of whom were injured.

THE SOUTH.

THE census returns of Arkansas, complete less nine small districts, four of which are estimated, show the population of the State to be 810,147. The final revision will increase the number slightly....Unofficial returns give South Carolina a population of 953,410, a gain of 247,804 since 1870....A band of Indians recently attacked the mail-coach on the road between El Paso and Davis, Tex., and took possession of all the mail matter and the stock. In the fight the mail-driver and three men were killed. The route is infested with the red-skins, and troops have been ordered forward to protect passengers.

MAIL CONTRACTOR ADAMS, of Little Rock, has telegraphed the Washington authorities for protection on the mail route between Fort Davis, Tex., and El Paso. Indians are making things hot in that region.

EX-GOV. HERSCHEL V. JOHNSON, who ran on the Democratic ticket with Stephen A. Douglas in 1860, has just died at his residence in Jefferson county, Ga., aged 68 years....While the parade of Coup's circus was taking place in Winchester, Va., the other day, the keeper of the cage of hyenas was pounced upon and torn to pieces by his infuriated and treacherous pets.

A SCHOONER has arrived at New Orleans from Havana, with yellow fever on board....James A. Sedden, Confederate Secretary of War, has just died in Goochland county, Virginia, aged 65 years....A young man named Waldron, who resided at Atlanta, Ga., eloped with his 12-year-old sister-in-law. He was arrested at Sunnyside, Ga. A mob overpowered the Sheriff, and took away the prisoner, whose head they cut off.

GENERAL.

ORDERS have been issued at Washington to have Payne, the squatter recently captured in Indian Territory and held a prisoner by the military authorities in Kansas, turned over to the Marshal of the Western District of Arkansas for trial at Fort Smith....Sir John Macdonald, the Dominion Premier, has completed arrangements with a great syndicate in London for the completion and operation of the Canada Pacific railway. The news was received at Montreal with many demonstrations of joy, and stocks went up several points.

ROBERT WILKES, wholesale jeweler of Toronto, Canada, his daughter Florence, aged 15, and son Bertie, age 11, were drowned the other day. Florence and Bertie were bathing and the boy getting out beyond his depth, the father, who was in a boat, jumped out to save him. The daughter also went to the rescue and all were drowned....The Grand Trunk freight sheds at Richmond, Quebec, with sixteen loaded cars, have been destroyed by fire.

GOLD to the value of $1,420,000 was shipped to New York at London on the 17th inst. It is estimated that the amount of gold that will be imported between now and the close of the year will be $25,000,000....Steamships leaving Liverpool and other European ports for New York are crowded with returning American tourists.

THE Triennial Conclave of Knights Templar attracted an immense number of strangers to Chicago, and the festivities passed off with much eclat. More than a quarter of a million people witnessed the grand parade of Knights. The streets through which the procession moved were packed, and thousands of faces were visible in the windows and doors and on the roofs of buildings. The day was excessively warm, and many of the Knights were prostrated by the heat. The column was seven miles in length, and contained a hundred bands of music and about fifteen thousand Sir Knights. Sixty thousand people attended the great ball at the Exposition building.

A NEW Atlantic cable company has been formed. This company proposes to lay a cable line between England and the Azores, and between the Azores and America. All the necessary concessions have been obtained.

BRITISH COLUMBIA Indians insist on catching sea otters at Cross sound out of season, and, as the Alaska savages object, trouble is apprehended. An armed vessel has been sent from Sitka to preserve the peace and protect the otters....The owner of St. Julien has offered to wager any sum from $5,000 to $20,000 that his horse will beat any trotting or pacing horse in the world in mile heats, best three in five.

THE Grand Encampment of Knights Templar, at their meeting in Chicago, elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing three years: Sir Benjamin Dean, of Boston, Most Eminent Grand Master; Sir Robert E. Withers, of Alexandria, Va., Right Eminent Deputy Grand Master; Sir Charles Roome, of New York, Very Eminent Grand Generalissimo; Sir John P. S. Gobin, of Lebanon, Pa., Very Eminent Grand Captain General; Sir Hugh McCurdy, of Corunna, Mich., Very Eminent Grand Senior Warden; Sir William La Rue Thomas, of Danville, Ky., Very Eminent Grand Junior Warden; Sir John W. Simons, of New York city, Very Eminent Grand Treasurer; Sir Theodore S. Parvin, of Iowa City, Very Eminent Grand Recorder. The next Triennial Conclave will be held in San Francisco, in 1883.

WASHINGTON.

THE official statement of imports and exports of specie for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, prepared by the Treasury Department, shows that the net imports of gold to the United States amounted to $77,153,31, a larger gain than any hitherto reported. The exports of silver exceeded the imports, but exact figures are not given.

RETURNS to the Department of Agriculture since Aug. 1, show an increase in the condition of the cotton crop as compared with July. The present average condition for the whole country is 102. The general average of the corn crop on Aug. 1 was 98, against 100 July 1. The condition of the spring wheat is 88, against 81 last year. California and Oregon report the highest condition since several years. Tobacco shows a general average for the whole country of 86.

SECRETARY EVARTS has renewed the offer of the United States to mediate between Chili and Peru, in connection with England, in the hope of preventing further bloodshed between those two countries.

POLITICAL.

THE New York Greenback State Convention, in session at Syracuse, nominated Thomas C. Armstrong for Judge of the Court of Appeals and re-affirmed the Chicago platform, with the following addition: "Land and air, light and water, are free gifts of nature to all mankind, and every person is entitled to enough of each of these to enable him to secure the necessary comforts of life; therefore, we protest against the further granting of large tracts of public lands by the Government to railroad corporations or individuals. We demand a tariff which shall protect American industry."

THE Democrats of Connecticut nominated James E. English, of New Haven, for Governor, and Charles M. Pond, of Hartford for Lieutenant Governor....The New Jersey Republicans have nominated Frederick A. Potts for Governor.

FOREIGN.

MISS ADELAIDE NEILSON, the accomplished actress, who recently announced her retirement from the stage, and sailed for Europe, died suddenly the other day at the Continental Hotel, in Paris....Twenty-one persons have just been tried by court-martial and convicted at Kief, Russia, for political offenses. Two were sentenced to death, three to twenty years' imprisonment, and sixteen to hard labor for terms varying from ten to fifteen years....Resolutions denouncing the British House of Lords and the Irish Land laws were adopted by an immense Home-Rule meeting in Glasgow, Scotland....Bulgaria and Roumania are at loggerheads, and Russia is concentrating troops at a strategic point in view of an impending crisis....Burglars stole $60,000 worth of jewelry and plate from the residence of the Earl of Eldon, near Wareham, England....A recent cable dispatch announces the death of Marshal Bazaine.

THE agitation against an exclusive gold currency is daily gaining ground in Germany, and it is expected that the entire financial question will be reopened at the next session of the Reichstag.

THE French Government renounces all intention of attempting to control the De Lesseps canal project, and is willing and desirous that the work should go on under the auspices of the United States. De Lesseps is working with his usual energy, and will soon place 600,000,000 francs' worth of shares in the London, New York, Paris and Frankfort markets....A dispatch from Paris states that the neutralization of the Panama canal under the guardianship of the United States has been accepted. De Lesseps will now again try to sell stock in this country....Over 3,000 persons left Liverpool for the United States in the month of July. There was an increase in the total immigration from the port for the month of 3,000 over July, 1879.

A DISPATCH from London, in reference to the evacuation of Cabul, says persons well informed as to the topography of Afghanistan, and of the military situation there, declare that England's only alternative now is to abandon the country altogether....The discovery of a plot to blow up the railway tunnel and barracks at Cork has thrown the authorities into a panic. Every suspicious-looking person in the city is closely watched....Mr. Griffin, the British Agent at Cabul, reports to the Indian Viceroy, the Marquis of Ripon, that the situation in Cabul is generally satisfactory and that the dissatisfaction with the new Ameer is confined to the rabble of the cities....Ole Bull, the celebrated violinist, died, recently in Norway, whither he had gone on a visit from this country. He was 70 years old.

RECENT floods in Germany have been very disastrous to the crops, and famine is feared in some of the inundated districts....Fully 30 per cent. more grain and provisions has been moved through the New York State canals since their opening this year than for the corresponding period of last year. This is regarded as a sign of great business activity and prosperity.

An Unpleasant Sort of Room-mate.

Uriah Phelps, a well-to-do merchant at Tyro, N. C., had a difficulty with some negroes in his store and ejected them. Fearing a return of the party again he secured the services of O. W. Click, a young man living in the vicinity, who is quite well known in the neighborhood as a somnambulist, and has once or twice walked out of the windows of his residence and hurt himself. The two retired to rest at a late hour of the evening, both occupying the same couch in the store near the counter. From subsequent developments it seems that the sleep-walker got up during the night and picked up an ax lying near the place where he and his companion slept, and cut his bed-fellow's head off. The next morning at daybreak Click gave the alarm, and the neighbors came to the scene of the tragedy to find Phelps' body on the bed, covered with blood. The trunkless head had rolled some distance from the spot, and was covered with gore, mutilated and gashed terribly. Click was at once arrested and charged with the crime. He says, however, and his statement is generally credited, that he knew nothing of the deed until he woke in the morning and found his companion and friend dead. The somnambulist says that he has no recollection of the terrible affair, but thinks that he must have got to dreaming about the negroes who were expected to attack Phelps, and had gotten up, armed himself with the ax, which he well knew where to find, and committed the deed, thinking he was striking one of the negroes. The doors and windows were all found securely fastened, and nothing about the premises gave the least indication that any one had forcibly entered the apartment during the night. Click is a highly respectable young man, and was on the most friendly terms with the deceased.

A $900 Wave.

A party of ladies and gentlemen from Baltimore determined to take a bath at Atlantic City. They had heard so much about the loss of valuables while bathing that they were in doubt as how to secure them. Instead of checking them with the bath-house proprietor they gave their watches, rings and pocket-books to a little ragged girl who was sitting on the beach and told her not to move from where she was and she should have a quarter when they had finished bathing. The child agreed, and taking the valuables in her lap she sat perfectly quiet on the sand. An occasional glance from the bathers assured them that their things were safe. Presently a wave, bigger than its fellows, washed far up the beach, and the little custodian of the jewelry was compelled to hastily scramble a few feet further up the sand, much to the amusement of the party, who made several remarks upon her failure to rival the boy who stood upon the burning deck. Their merriment was changed to a very different feeling when, a few moments after they left the water and received their valuables from the child, a cluster diamond ring, valued at $900, was missing. It had been dropped by the girl when she was compelled to beat a hasty retreat from the wave. A long search failed to reveal any trace of the lost ring, and the lady left for home the following day.—Atlantic City letter.

Lockjaw Relieved by Amputation of Members.

Nothing more remarkable in this age of marvels in science in all branches has been reported than a case of cure of lockjaw which a Louisville reporter learned from Dr. James McEvoy. The case came in Dr. McEvoy's own experience, and is the first on record, as it is the most wonderful he ever heard of. A young man aged 25, named George Dunn, residing on the "Point," above the city, had the fingers of his left hand severely mashed, three or four days ago. Wednesday morning he was seized with lockjaw, and nourishment was administered by prying the teeth apart and inserting sustenance upon the blade of a knife. Dr. McEvoy was called in, and yesterday, as a last resort, concluded to amputate the badly-mashed fingers. The first and third fingers of the hand were accordingly taken off, and, to the astonishment of Dr. McEvoy and the attendants, in an hour after the operation the contracted muscles relaxed and Dunn was able to talk. He ate also with relish, and that evening was doing well. The case is one that commands the interest and attention of all physicians.

A GRAND PAGEANT.

The Knights Templar Parade in Chicago—A Magnificent Spectacle.

From a Chicago paper we glean the following graphic description of the Knights Templar parade in that city:

At 7 o'clock it seemed as if every living thing within the city was moving on the line of route, but especially on Michigan and Wabash avenues, from Twenty-first street north. Every house sent forth its contingent, and the enormous, dense, surging ranks of the populace stretched along the sidewalks so overwhelmingly that a quick step was impossible to the most active of mortals. Soon, indeed, even the sidewalks would not, or could not hold them. They invaded the roadways, and not all threatenings and imprecations of the stalwart peeler on foot could move them half an inch from their ground. They held on like bull-dogs. The American monarch, his wife and royal republican family were on their dignity, and insisted on what they conceived to be their full rights.

This was all very well during the earlier part of the proceedings, as the procession was, inevitably, about an hour late in starting. This enabled every person who desired to be a spectator to take up some kind of a position. Some adhered obstinately to the sidewalks, some hung half way out of windows. Some climbed the trees and telegraph poles. Every stoop was garrisoned to repletion. Housetops were crowded with boys and girls who defied the ardent sun, as, emancipated from vaporish thralldom, he made the best use of his opportunity and seemed resolved on converting all humanity within his reach to roast meat. Small boys distinguished themselves by getting astride of lamp-posts. They hung like squirrels from frail branches, and escaped with their lives as none but a small boy can escape.

Compared with this wonderful turnout, all the other demonstrations were dwarfed of their fair proportions. Even the reception of Grant seemed like a drop in the bucket. To anyone who could see the great vista of the avenues, for an immense distance filled in almost every part with people, the sight put in the background every event that has gone before. It was the Valley of Jehosophat, without the goats or the judgment.

The hour preceding the grand muster was filled with the preparatory notes of the display. Drums rattled on highway and byway. Bugles rang out clearly, and "the flashing blade," and "the neighing steed," and "the trumpet-stirring blast," inspired one to sing with Tom Moore:

> Oh, the sight entrancing,
> When morning's beam is glancing
> On files arrayed
> In helm and blade,
> And plumes in the gay wind dancing.

How important everybody looked! But most of all the countryman who had acquaintances in his local commandery that was to march past where he stood, in the panoply of war, but with the spirit of peace.

It was difficult to decide at any state of the proceedings which were the most interesting—the Knights, or the people who came to look at them. Both were grand in their way, and, taken together, formed a picture of mammoth magnificence that must long remain impressed on the mind that contemplated the spectacles with the judgment born of experience in such matters.

As a matter of course, there were several excellent places from which to obtain a good view of the procession, but the best, perhaps was at the crossing of Wabash avenue and Twelfth street, where the stands for the Grand Master and the Grand Encampment were erected under the auspices of the Triennial Committee.

The peculiar advantage of the position was that it enabled the spectator to see the column at its best, before long marching had produced the partial demoralization that generally succeeds the early enthusiasm of the day.

The advance of the head of the column was heralded at 9:45 o'clock by the drum corps of the Second Regiment Illinois infantry, which was assigned the post of honor. A squad of mounted police, under Major Heintzman, rode at the people, who thronged the thoroughfares to an almost impassable extent, and caused them to fall back and align themselves on the curbing. Then, from the elevated platform, far along the avenue to the northward, the broad front of the mighty column, as it began to extricate itself from the cross streets on which the different commanderies were formed, was seen.

The picked men of the police force on foot, two platoons, under Capt. McGarigle and Lieuts. Ward and Hayes, extended clear across the street, and drove everything before them as they advanced briskly, every man looking his best. Then came the mounted escort of forty-five Knights of the De Molay Commandery, No. 5, of Grand Rapids, Mich., whose steeds, all clean-limbed, spirited, and richly caparisoned, danced under them in a lively manner.

Following came the carriage of the Grand Master, drawn by thirteen noble horses—seven white and six black—each with a groom at his head. Behind this imposing turnout came the carriages containing members of the Grand Encampment and other high officers, all brilliant with stars, crosses, ribbons and sashes. Passing through the saluting squadron of the escort, the cortege halted. The grand officers ascended their platforms. The one on the west was selected by Grand Master Hurlbut and his lieutenants. With them appeared Gov. Cullom, Mayor Harrison, Grand Prelate Locke, and many other eminent dignitaries. The platform on the east was occupied by another crowd of high Templars, and by several members of the press.

Some delay followed the appearance of the Grand Master, and it was 17 minutes past 10 o'clock when the drums again struck up, and the column was fairly under way. The splendid monotony of the uniforms, all dark and white, the former predominating, was relieved by the brilliant and ever-varying colors of the bandmen, who seemed to vie with each other in the matter of costly costume. The drum major, who is the human prototype of the important turkey gobbler, strode before each band, baton in hand, and with bearskin cap, black, white, or gray, that looked like a tremendous load for the poor fellow to carry.

The banners, the plumes, the thronging cohorts, or commanderies, marching mostly twelve abreast, made a stirring picture of modern chivalry. Their swords glittered in the struggling sunbeams, and their pennons seemed to dance in ecstasy. The ostrich feathers and white sashes seemed like angry foam cresting a black and swollen stream, or, better perhaps,

> As the snow on the larch, when > December appears,
> What a winter of plumes
> On that forest of spears!

It was remarked that all the organizations from the larger cities—such as New York, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Detroit, Louisville, St. Louis, and Cleveland, marched with more precision than the Knights from the rural districts, presumably because they have superior opportunities for concentrating and drilling. The Detroit Commandery executed some intricate movements as they tramped along, and were frequently rewarded by enthusiastic shouts.

The procession closed with another display of mounted Knights, whose rear guard filed by the grand stand at 1:15 o'clock. Thus, the procession was three hours passing that point, but an hour may honestly be deducted from that time on account of haltings.

A Case of Interest to Sporting Men.

Frank E. Shaw, a pool-seller who travels about the circuit, commenced suit in the Common Pleas Court against Joseph Udell, the owner of Sleepy Tom, to recover $500 claimed to be for pools purchased for the defendant on the 2:23 race in Grand Rapids on the 2d of July. The defendants backed Kentucky Wilkes against the field, Lucy selling as favorite. Wilkes won one heat, when the judges suspected that the race was not being trotted squarely, and ordered Lucy's jockey to drive her for all she was worth. The threat to expel the jockey had its effect, and Lucy won the race. Udell had not paid for his pools, and, when a demand was made for the money, refused on the ground that he had bargained with Lucy's driver to throw the race in favor of Wilkes, and that the order of the judges compelling Lucy to win had lost the pools for him. He admitted his complicity in the attempted fraud, and urged its failure to carry as ground exempting him from paying the pool-seller. The outcome of the suit will be looked to with interest by all sporting men.—Cleveland Herald.

The Wrong Leg.

The Portland Advertiser tells the following story: There was an eminent sergeant-at-law some years ago who had a cork leg that was a triumph of artistic deception. None but his intimates knew for certain which was the real and which was the sham limb. A wild young wag of the "uttar bar," who knew the sergeant pretty well, once thought to utilize this knowledge of the sergeant's secret to take in a newly-fledged young barrister. The sergeant was addressing a special jury at Westminister in his usual earnest and vehement style, and the wag whispered to his neighbor, "You see how hot old buzfuz is over his case; now, I'll bet you a sovereign I'll run this pin into his leg up to the head, and he'll never notice it, he's so absorbed in his case. He's a most extraordinary man in that way." This was more than the greenhorn could swallow, so he took the bet. The wag took a large pin from his waistcoat, and leaning forward drove it up to the head into the sergeant's leg. A yell that froze the blood of all who heard it, that made the hair of the jury stand on end and caused the Judge's wig almost to fall off, ran through the court.

"By Jove, it's the wrong leg, and I've lost my money," exclaimed the dismayed and conscience-stricken wag, quite regardless of the pain he had inflicted upon the learned sergeant.

A Petrified Body.

About thirty years since a steamboat was sunk in one of the Alabama rivers, and a number of her passengers were lost. On board were several persons, residents of Kershaw county, South Carolina—two of them belonging to Camden, a lady and gentleman, whose bodies were recovered and forwarded here. That of the lady was interred in the family burial-ground, just outside of the town. Two other bodies had been buried there, one of them ninety years ago. Not long since the graves were opened in order to reinter the bodies in the cemetery. On reaching the investments of the lady's body, which had been inclosed in a burial-case, zinc and a box, all were found partially destroyed; but, to the utter surprise of the workmen, the body had not passed into corruption, being nearly perfectly petrified and as "white as chalk," as the men said. The hair on the head was preserved—a part attached to the head and a portion beside it. The body was so heavy as to require five or six men to remove it, and, in doing so, the head was broken off. The slippers on the feet when first seen appeared perfect, but, in a moment, crumbled, while a few of the patterns of the dress were apparently unchanged. On opening the other graves in the same locality there was nothing but a dark line of earth found of one, and a few partially decayed bones of the other.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

New Caledonian Tortures.

The list of tortures inflicted on the French convicts in New Caledonia is a black one. One of the milder forms of punishment consists in shutting up ninety men in a space intended only for thirty, and leaving them there all night, with water up to the calves of their legs.

The officials themselves are punished for bearing any complaints from the prisoners to their officers. Imprisonment in cells, without light and air is also resorted to, and there the prisoner is supplied only with such food as quickly produces scurvy. He is kept in chains, water is given him in one of his shoes, as no cup is allowed, and when the doctor orders a ration of wine and soup, the liquids are mixed. When wine is supplied it is always bad, being rendered sour by the climate, and not even fit to make vinegar of. Flogging is frequently inflicted with great violence, and with slight provocation, and the convicts are often put in irons for being ill. Perhaps the most agonizing torture is that of hanging a convict by the legs and leaving him to the mercy of the mosquitoes. One man treated in this manner went mad on the spot. The officers make no scruple of using their revolvers, and on one occasion a warder lodged five bullets in the body of a man in one of the cells.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$6 75 @11 00
HOGS	5 00 @ 5 50
COTTON	11½ @ 11¾
FLOUR—Superfine	3 50 @ 4 00
WHEAT—No. 2	1 05 @ 1 08
CORN—Western Mixed	50 @ 51
OATS—Mixed	37 @ 39
RYE—Western	82 @ 83
PORK—Mess	15 00 @16 00
LARD	8 @ 8½
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 50 @ 4 85
Cows and Heifers	2 40 @ 3 50
Medium to Fair	4 00 @ 4 20
HOGS	4 00 @ 5 25
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50 @ 6 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex	4 25 @ 5 00
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	87 @ 88
No. 3 Spring	80 @ 81
CORN—No. 2	37 @ 39
OATS—No. 2	24 @ 25
RYE—No. 2	69 @ 70
BARLEY—No. 2	75 @ 76
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	24 @ 25
EGGS—Fresh	11½ @ 12
PORK—Mess	16 50 @16 90
LARD	7¾ @ 8
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	91 @ 1 00
No. 2	89 @ 90
CORN—No. 2	38 @ 39
OATS—No. 2	24 @ 25
RYE—No. 1	67 @ 68
BARLEY—No. 2	75 @ 76
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	94 @ 95
CORN—Mixed	35 @ 35
OATS—No. 2	25 @ 26
RYE	70 @ 71
PORK—Mess	15 75 @16 00
LARD	7½ @ 8
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	90 @ 96
CORN	36 @ 40
OATS	28 @ 29
RYE	87 @ 88
PORK—Mess	15 75 @16 00
LARD	7½ @ 8
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 1 White	97 @ 1 00
No. 2 Red	93 @ 98
CORN—No. 2	41 @ 42
OATS—No. 2	29 @ 29
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	5 00 @ 5 25
WHEAT—No. 1 White	94 @ 95
CORN—No. 1	43 @ 44
OATS—Mixed	30 @ 36
BARLEY (per cental)	1 25 @ 1 75
PORK—Mess	16 00 @16 60
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	92 @ 93
CORN	37 @ 41
OATS	26 @ 28
PORK—Clear	15 50 @16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	4 75 @ 5 00
Fair	4 25 @ 4 50
Common	3 50 @ 4 00
HOGS	4 90 @ 5 00
SHEEP	3 00 @ 4 25

MY CREED.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

I hold that Christian grace abounds
Where charity is seen; that when
We climb to heaven, 'tis on the rounds
Of love to men.
I hold all else named piety
A selfish scheme—a vain pretense;
Where center is not can there be Circumference?
This I moreover hold, and dare
Affirm, where'er my rhyme may go
Whatever things be sweet or fair,
Love makes them so.
Whether it be the lullabies
That charm to rest the nestling bird,
Or that sweet confidence of sighs
And blushes without word;
Whether the dazz'ling and the flush
Of softly-sumptuous garden bowers,
Or by some cabin-door, or bush
Of ragged flowers.
'Tis not the wide phylactery,
Nor stubborn fast, or stated prayers,
That makes us saints; we judge the tree
By the fruit it bears.
And when a man can live apart
From work, on theological trust,
I know the blood about his heart
Is dry as dust.

PITH AND POINT.

EVEN the laziest boy can catch a licking.

THE girl who chalks her cheeks thinks it is better to mark the miss than miss the mark.

THE compositor who set up "pimpled chops" for "dimpled cheeks" didn't look a bit natural in death.—Modern Argo.

"HANDS wanted on boys' pants," is the daily advertisement in the newspapers. 'Twas always thus from childhood's hour.

"YOU never saw my hands as dirty as that," said a petulant mother to her little girl. "No, but your ma did," was the reply.

AN old farmer said of his clergyman, whose sermons lacked point, "He's a good man, but he will rake with the teeth upward!"

THE farmer understands human nature who said: "If you want your boy to stay at home, don't bear too hard on the grindstone when he turns the crank."

THE jewel of a servant girl is the one who hangs all her mistress' embroidered underwear on that portion of the line most conspicuous to the neighbors' eyes.

"CAN dogs find their way home from a long distance?" says an exchange. It's according to the dog. If it's one you want to get rid of, he can find his way home from California. If it's a good one, he's apt to get lost if he goes around the corner.

"ARE animals color-blind?" asks a scientific journal. Well, our opinion is, if that querist were to put on a red shirt and undertake to go across a lot containing a bull, he could most satisfactorily answer that question without submitting it to the press.—Waterloo Observer.

"WHY, Bridget," said her mistress, who wished to rally the girl, for the amusement of her company, upon the fantastic ornamenting of a plate of butter. "Why, Bridget, did you do this? You're quite an artist; how did you do it?" "Indade, mum, it was myself that did it," replied Bridget. "Isn't it pritty, mum? I did it with your fine-tooth comb, mum."

A TALL, slab-sided Yankee, who strolled down Manhattan beach last Monday, on seeing the bevy of beauties disporting in the waves, burst into a fit of enthusiasm. "Je-ru-sa-lem! if that don't jest remind me of something good we have to hum." "What is that!" remarked a friend, who heard him. "What is it?" said Jonathan, smacking his lips; "'lasses in water."

WE have endured, with commendable patience, the appalling phantom of the young man who wears two watches; with Christian resignation and patience we have borne with the young man who wears his watch in the outside pocket of his coat, but when we meet the elegant youth who wears his silk-embroidered socks outside his slippers to show the monogram on the toes, there is going to be bloodshed, and don't you forget to remember it.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

Butler's Home by the Sea.

Gen. Butler's seaside home, on Cape Ann, is thus described: A gently sloping lawn of green surrounds the elegant granite cottage and stables, and through it is a driveway. On the lawn is a telescope, mounted on a pedestal, having a range of miles. Piazzas surround the house, with old rustic chairs, homely, but comfortable. "My idea of a seaside cottage," says the General, "is a house of one room," of course excepting the dining-room and chambers. But this room is a model. Forty by twenty-eight feet, of spacious proportions, polished floor, furniture elegant in its comforts, with articles or bric-a-brac at every turn, one cannot but help feeling that one room so inviting is all that is needed. "You will find that my niece is very successful in the cultivation of the ivy," says the host as his guests enter the room. And, indeed, the ivy is the first thing that attracts one's attention, and he is an acute one that is not "taken in" at the first glance. Starting from a vase on the floor, the ivy—a piece of fresco work—runs up the ceiling and across the corners of the window frame, where leaves molded of papier mache are introduced and so joined to the painting as to heighten the perspective and add to the deception. So delicate is the work that at a few feet distance one can hardly believe the vine is not real. From the drawing-room it is but a step to the dining-room, where there is also some elegant fresco work, including a stag's head, the antlers of which is another illustration of the power of perspective. Much of the work is the art of the General's daughter, Blanche, now Mrs. Ames, wife of the ex-Senator.

His Parents.

A little 4-year-old shaver in Troy, N. Y., made an informal call upon a newly-arrived neighbor, as some children are wont to do. He was graciously received by the lady of the house, who, after learning his name and place of residence, inquired, "What does your papa do?" "He don't do nothin'," responded young hopeful. "What does your mother do?" pursued the lady. "She licks me!" was the suggestive reply.

A PRINTER down in the city of 340,000 inhabitants, says "that the Chicago type of a girl has a nonpareil head on a brevier body, and a long primer foot." But you bet she is alive and counts one of that 502,931 inhabitants.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

AUBURN COURIER.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
Editor.

THE RADICAL CONFERENCE.

A Curious Collection of Patriots—Something to Cheer the Hearts of Civil-Service Reformers.

[From the New York Sun.]

Taken individually and collectively, the patriots who were invited to this city to meet the Credit Mobilier candidate for the Presidency were peculiarly adapted to the man and to the occasion. Ex-Governors, ex-Senators, ex-Secretaries, ex-Commissioners, ex-Ministers, ex-Generals, ex-Colonels, ex-clerks, and other extraordinary personages of the past, together with a few present dignitaries, made up the motley assemblage at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Landaulet Williams, Secor Robeson, Belknap; Banks, now United States Marshal, and a patriot of many sides; Bullock, the notorious ex-Governor of Georgia; Conover, ex-carpet-bag Senator; Warmoth, ex-carpet-bag Governor of Louisiana; Sypher, ex-carpet-bag Congressman; Orth, the Venezuela jobber; Storrs, who defended Babcock in the whiskey-ring trial, and now fitly defends Garfield in the paving job; Filley, ex-Postmaster at St. Louis, whom Schurz pursued to the bitter end; Dorsey, ex-carpet-bag Senator; Pinchback, whom the Republican Senate refused to admit to a seat, afterward voting him $17,000 for more than three years of salary; Clerical-Error Stoughton, and other distinguished personages, were conspicuous in the throng around the Credit Mobilier candidate.

John Sherman, with a specially-detailed force of Collectors and revenue officials as his staff, gave a festive air to the occasion, and tendered the olive branch to James G. Blaine, who was liberal enough to make two speeches, and to tell the audience that a political campaign was a matter of business, and not of sentiment or gush. John Logan appeared in his war-paint, and, with uplifted tomahawk, threatened to annihilate the old secessionists if they insisted on voting for a Union General who had taught them a lesson of duty and submission. Thurlow Weed made a noble effort to excite enthusiasm by referring to the campaign of 1840. He fought his old battles over with great bravery, and felt confident of carrying New York if the Republicans could get votes enough.

The great feature of the occasion was a hot debate between the Southern patriots, some of whom wanted money and moral support—principally the former—while others declared that any expenditure at the South would be a waste of resources. Conover, Hicks, Pinchback and a noble West Virginian advocated the former policy: Sypher and Freeman took the latter side. This is the first time in a long experience that Sypher has ever been found against hard or soft money. Perhaps his antagonism was excited by distrust of the virtuous Republicans who expect to handle the appropriation.

The appeals for aid and comfort carried the day, and Mr. Marshall Jewell's conglomerate convention voted to strengthen the hands of the faithful in the Virginias, North Carolina and Florida. It is gratifying to know that Conover and company have a prospect of getting their expenses to New York repaid, with perhaps a chance for something more for the good of the cause. They will not have another opportunity very soon, and it is not necessary to advise them to draw upon the Treasurer promptly and liberally.

Don Cameron sat through all these scenes like a philosophical spectator, and neither opened his mouth nor his purse. In fact, he is said to have clung to the latter with an exceptionally-firm grip during an outburst of Conover's eloquence. He had served with him in the Senate and knew his dangerous fascination.

Mr. Conkling manifested a most remarkable interest in the candidate and in the conference, for, although he lodged in the same hotel with Mr. Garfield and near the room where this meeting was held, he took pains not to see the candidate and not to participate in the conference. Blaine and Sherman were both grieved by his absence, while Marshall Jewell, as master of ceremonies, was sincerely distressed at the failure of the New York Senator to make the greatest effort of his life. Senator Bruce, who had named his baby after Roscoe Conkling, was also sorrow-stricken and despondent.

Altogether this was one of the most curious collections of politicians on record.

Christian Statesmen at Chautauqua.

The Young Men's Christian Association meeting at Chautauqua, yesterday afternoon, was a large one. It is said that fully 10,000 persons were present.

The meeting was also one of exceptional interest. The 10,000 spectators were treated to a rare exhibition of Christian statesmanship in the persons of Schuyler Colfax and James A. Garfield, who occupied conspicuous seats on the platform. Schuyler Colfax made a speech. Garfield was not invited to speak. This discrimination was not due to any difference in the quality of Colfax's Christian statesmanship and Garfield's. As the master of ceremonies explained, it was because Garfield is a candidate for a high office, while Colfax is not.

In this contrast lies the great interest of the spectacle. Both Colfax and Garfield were bribed with Credit Mobilier stock. They both received dividends from Oakes Ames. They both swore, in the name of God, that they had held no stock and received no dividends. They were both convicted of perjury as well as of bribery, both denounced as bribe-takers and perjurers by the press of their own party, and both equally degraded in the esteem of honest men.

But now Colfax is forgotten by the greater part of his fellow-citizens, despised by those who have not forgotten him, and unnoticed except when he intrudes his presence upon gatherings similar in character to that at Chautauqua. Garfield is the candidate of the Republican party for President of the United States.

The "Christian statesmanship" of men like Colfax and Garfield is no blot on Christianity. No one seeks to connect the two things, except the hypocrites themselves, the ninnyhammers who are imposed upon by cant, and the malicious enemies of religion.—New York Sun.

GARFIELD AND THE WHISKY RING.

[From the New York World.]

The revelations made and threatened by Gen. John McDonald, of St. Louis, exhibit in the most vivid light the nature of that Government by Republican rings to which the country is now urged to submit itself anew.

The whisky ring was a creation of the Republican party. Gen. McDonald alleges, and all the probabilities are in favor of the truth of his allegation, that the spoils of the whisky ring were assessed to defray the campaign expenses of the Republican party. He alleges less plausibly that to provide campaign funds was the original motive to the organization of the whisky ring. This is less plausible, because original sin and covetousness are amply sufficient to account for the formation of the whisky ring. It is, however, necessary to suppose a corrupt understanding with public officers in order to account for its long-continued success and for the immunity which the chief actors in it have enjoyed to this day. A few relatively unimportant persons, like Gen. McDonald, were given up to public opinion for a time as scapegoats to be driven out into the wilderness, or, more literally, to be put in jail. If they had been satisfied with their position as scapegoats we should not now be in the way, as we now are in the way, of learning the whole truth about the whisky ring.

It will be interesting to see whether the Republican organs will have the impudence to assert that the Republican party, which organized and cherished the whisky ring, also put down the whisky ring and punished some of its members. One man alone in the Republican party, Secretary Bristow, prosecuted the thieves to the best of his ability, and would have prosecuted all of them if he could have had his own way. But simply because he prosecuted these violators of the revenue laws which he was appointed to protect—simply because he showed himself to be a man of honesty and of courage—Secretary Bristow lost all standing in the Republican party. The leaders of that party assailed him four years ago with even more bitterness and hatred than they have since assailed Mr. Hayes, whose chief offense in their eyes seems to be that he is not a member or supporter of any ring whatever, except the civil service, which will divide the profits of violating the law with the party which connives at its violations of the law.

It is already evident that no effective opposition to the Republican rings is to be expected from Garfield, and that if he were to be elected his administration would be conducted exclusively in the interests of "the old set." The humiliating pledge which he gave in his letter of acceptance, that he would not interfere with the control of local patronage by local "bosses," ought to have satisfied "the old set," as it will satisfy the voters of the country, on that point. Even this humiliating pledge, however, does not seem to have satisfied the old set. Senator Conkling, though he is understood to be in New York, has thus far taken pains not to be seen or heard of in public in connection with the extemporaneous candidate of the Republican party for the Presidency. Of course, if Senator Conkling should hereafter come out as an advocate of Gen. Garfield's election, it will be self-evident that he must have demanded of Gen. Garfield and obtained from him some more abject assurance of subserviency to the friends of Grant than even the letter of acceptance furnishes.

It is the intention of Gen. McDonald, as expressed in the index of his forthcoming book, to supply "missing links in the chain of evidence of James A. Garfield's implication with the District of Columbia and the De Golyer bribery." One of these links is already supplied by the nature of Gen. Garfield's present errand in New York, if Gen. McDonald is correct in his declaration that the whisky frauds began with a desire to raise money for the party. Gen. Garfield has come to New York, hat in hand, to raise money for his own candidacy. Before he gets through with his mission he will probably be inclined to bewail the lack of a whisky ring, or some other ring, which would raise money for him without compelling him to such devices, or pledging him to anything, except to the shutting of his own eyes and of the eyes of his subordinates, if he should ever take Executive office, to the means by which the amount of money requisite to help him into office had been secured.

DAVID DAVIS FOR HANCOCK.

The Eminent Jurist's Reasons for Supporting the Democratic Nominee.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Aug. 4, 1880.

MY DEAR SIR: The training and habits of my life lead me to prefer civilians to soldiers for the great civil trusts. But, as parties are organized, voters must choose between the candidates they represent, or stand aloof, indifferent or neutral, which no good citizen ought to do at a Presidential election. I have no hesitation in supporting Gen. Hancock, for the best of all reasons, to my mind, because his election will put an end to sectional strife and to sectional parties, and will revive a patriotic sentiment all over the land, which political leaders and factions for sinister ends have sought to prevent. There can be no permanent prosperity without pacification.

Great as were the achievements of Gen. Hancock in war, his conduct in peace, when in command of Louisiana and Texas in 1867, was still greater, and justly commends him to the confidence of the country. That was a time when passion ruled in the public councils and military power was exerted to silence civil authority. The temptation was strong to sail with the rushing current, for an inflamed partisan opinion was too ready to condone excesses and applaud oppression.

Gen. Hancock's order No. 40, in assuming charge of the Fifth Military District, announced "the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be respected." These principles are the basis of free government, and the proclamation of them by Gen. Hancock stands out in striking contrast with the actions of his superior, who soon after revoked and drove him from that command for uttering sentiments worthy of all honor. The soldier, clothed with extraordinary power, voluntarily uncovered before the civil authority, sheathed his sword, testified his fidelity to the constitution and set an example of obedience to law which will pass into history as his proudest claim to distinction.

The man who in the midst of the excitements of that stormy period was cool enough to see his duty clearly, and courageous enough to execute it firmly, may be well trusted in any crisis. His letter to Gen. Sherman, recently brought to light, lifts Gen. Hancock far above the past appreciation of his civil ability. It marks him as one of the wisest of his time, with a statesman's grasp of mind and with the integrity of a patriot whom no sense of expediency could swerve from his honest convictions.

Long and unchecked possession of power by any party leads to extravagance, corruption and loose practices. After twenty years of domination by the Republicans, chronic abuses have become fastened upon the public service like barnacles on the bottom of a stranded ship. There is no hope of reform by leaders who have created a system of maladministration and who are interested in perpetuating its evils. Nothing short of the sternest remedy gives any promise of effective reform, and the first step toward it is in a change of rulers. The Government must be got out of the ruts in which it has too long been run. New blood must be infused into the management of public affairs before relief can be expected. The people demand a change, and, being in earnest, they are likely to be gratified. Very sincerely,

DAVID DAVIS.

James E. Harvey, Washington City.

THE CHANGED REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN.

The New Challenge They Have Now Put Forth.

[From the New York Herald (Independent).]

It is less than two years since Gen. Garfield, on the floor of Congress, painted the following patriotic sketch for the conduct of the Presidential campaign of 1880:

"The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support. The man who wants to serve his country must put himself in the line of its leading thought, and that is the restoration of business, trade, commerce, industry, sound political economy, hard money, and honest payment of all obligations."

Circumstances unexpected by the artist put him into a position two months ago, by his nomination as a Presidential candidate, to exert as much influence as any other man in the country to realize his own patriotic picture. Is it unfair to judge him out of his own mouth and by his own behavior? What has he been doing this week? Has he been attempting "to get up a political excitement on the old sectional issues," or "to put himself in the line of the country's leading thought?" Let the proceedings of the Republican conference in this city on Thursday answer.

Beyond peradventure the four representative speakers in that conference were Senators Blaine and Logan, Secretary Sherman, and Gen. Harrison. What did they set up in their speeches for the issues in this Presidential campaign? Mr. Blaine said that the issue is whether "the men who fought the civil war shall surrender to the men who fought against the Union." Mr. Logan said that it was whether "the loyal men of this land, who stood by her constitution and flag when the sword and flame were applied to the temple," or "the rebel army and the copperheads of the North" shall have the "right to govern this country." Mr. Sherman said it is whether "the Republican party shall resign to the solid South, headed by Wade Hampton and the Ku-Klux Klan, and a little segment in the Northern States, calling itself the Democratic party." Gen. Harrison said it is "how we will defend Washington against the enemy that once opposed it in arms." If these assertions are not a revival of the old sectional issues, what are they? Not a word was uttered in the conference from first to last concerning the line of the leading thought of the country—concerning business, trade, commerce, industry, sound political economy, hard money, and honest payment of all obligations, with the solitary and melancholy exception that Mr. Sherman announced that the Republican party has "accomplished all the results it proposed to accomplish of a financial character," although hundreds of millions of legal-tender greenbacks are outstanding, and eighty-eight-cent silver dollars are coining monthly by the ton.

It was entirely within the power of Gen. Garfield to check this torrent of sectional passion if he had willed so. He sat in an adjoining parlor, and knew what was doing. At any time between noon and 6 o'clock on Thursday, he had only to walk out of one room into another and repeat his own words, which we have quoted at the beginning of this article, to have given an entirely different complexion to this Presidential campaign on the Republican side from that which he has suffered it to assume. But he willfully withheld from "serving his country." He willfully ratified a partisan policy, which he himself has stigmatized as so unpatriotic that the man who pursues it deserves to find himself "without a party and without support." He starts back to his Ohio home this morning with the internal consciousness, whatever show of stolidity he may put on, of having been false to his own ideal of patriotism. With his full assent, by the concurrent voices of his party's leaders, "the old sectional issues" are adopted for the main issues of the Republican canvass, and "the line of the country's leading thought" is subordinated to them.

Can the Republican party elect Gen. Garfield President upon issues which he himself, not two years ago, nobly condemned as unpatriotic? It is too early to predict. Much will depend on the good sense of the Democratic leaders.

Champion of the Rings.

The Independent Republicans of the Nineteenth Congressional district of Ohio, at a meeting held on Sept. 7, 1876, when Mr. Garfield was a candidate for re-election to Congress, adopted the following among other resolutions:

Resolved, That there is no other man, to-day officially connected with the administration of the National Government, against whom are justly preferred more and graver charges of corruption than are publicly made, and abundantly sustained, against James A. Garfield, the present representative of this Congressional district, and the nominee of the Republican Convention for re-election.

This is the gentleman whom the great party of purity and political virtue has nominated for President, a man who, since he first entered Congress, says another resolution adopted at the same time, has arrayed himself against the interests of the people, and who in every case "has been the ready champion of the rings and monopolies."—Chicago News (Independent Republican).

POLITICAL INCONSISTENCY.

"Look Here, Upon This Picture—and on This."

[From the New York Herald (Independent).]

There have been two particularly-memorable conferences at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in recent times. The first was held on the 16th of May, 1876, and its presiding officer was the venerable Theodore D. Woolsey, formerly President of Yale College. It adopted an admirable address, written in great part by Mr. Carl Schurz, now Secretary of the Interior, from which the following are extracts:

> A national election is approaching under circumstances of peculiar significance. Never before in our history has the public mind been so profoundly agitated by apprehension of dangers arising from corrupt tendencies and practices in our political life, and never has there been greater reason for it.
>
> We therefore declare, and call upon all good citizens to join us, that at the approaching Presidential election we shall support no Presidential candidate
>
> 1. Who in public position ever countenanced corrupt practices; or
>
> 2. Who, while possessing public influence and power, has failed to use his opportunities in exposing and correcting abuses coming within the reach of his observation, but, for personal reasons or party ends, has permitted them to fester on; or
>
> 3. To whom, however conspicuous his position or brilliant his ability, the impulses of the party managers have shown themselves predominant over those of the reformer, for he will be inclined to continue that fundamental abuse, the employment of the Government service as a machinery for personal or party ends; or,
>
> 4. Who, however favorably judged by his nearest friends, is not known to possess those qualities of mind and character which the stern task of genuine reform requires.
>
> In one word, at present, no candidate should be held entitled to the support of patriotic citizens, of whom the question may finally be asked: Is he really the man to carry through a thoroughgoing reform of the Government? Can he, with certainty, be depended upon to possess the moral courage and sturdy resolution to grapple with the abuses which have acquired the strength of established custom, and to this end firmly to resist the pressure even of his party friends.
>
> Whenever there is room for question or doubt as to the answer, the candidate should be considered unfit for this emergency. The man to be intrusted with the Presidency this year must have deserved not only the confidence of honest men, but also the fear and hatred of the thieves. He who manages to conciliate the thieves cannot be our candidate.

The second conference to which we refer was held yesterday in the same place. Its presiding officer likewise was a citizen of Connecticut—ex-Gov. Marshall Jewell—and, upon examining the lists of participants on each occasion, we immediately identify our accomplished editorial compatriot, Mr. Murat Halstead, of Cincinnati, as assisting prominently at both. But yesterday's gathering appears to have been much more miscellaneous than the one in which he was active four years ago. Indeed, it must have reminded the Bible readers present—among whom, of course, we reckon Mr. Halstead—of St. Peter's vision at Joppa, in which a certain vessel was seen descending from heaven, "as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners and let down to the earth, wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air." Among others there were Senators Blaine, Cameron, and Logan; ex-Senators Dorsey and Conover, ex-Secretary Robeson, Messrs. Chauncey I. Filley, P. B. S. Pinchback, William E. Chandler, and several more, concerning whom Mr. Halstead must have grown deaf, indeed, since 1876, if he did not hear a heavenly voice like that which said to the apostle, "Rise, Peter; kill and eat." While the proceedings were in progress, according to the press reports, Gen. Belknap, formerly Secretary of the War Department, also was one of the gentlemen who were paying visits of congratulation to Gen. Garfield in an adjoining room. How so promiscuous an assembly got along peaceably with one another, and with Mr. Halstead, through the day, would be a wonder, did we not recollect that there were no quarrels among the animals in Noah's ark. In both instances a consciousness that they were "all in the same boat," and that their only chance of getting to land depended upon keeping the peace, perhaps, explains the mystery.

THE PARTY OF THE BLOODY SHIRT.

It Must Stand Aside and Let the Nation Prosper.

[From the Chicago Daily News (Independent Republican).]

There has been a decided change in public sentiment regarding the infamous bloody-shirt business during the past few months. The people of the North are beginning to realize that the Republican party organs have made it a point to misrepresent that section of our common country which lies below Mason and Dixon's line. Nothing could have brought these misrepresentations to light so plainly as the census which is now being taken. Instead of stagnation, ruin and desolation in the South, the census will show that nearly every Southern State has increased wonderfully in population and in wealth during the past decade. It will show that villages have become towns, and towns have become cities; that manufacturing industries have been developed accordingly, and that the people are prosperous and personally happy. The facts show that there is not a village, town or city in the South scarcely, unless perhaps it is in the backwoods of Mississippi, where Northern men are not working hand-in-hand with Southern men in the pursuit of wealth and happiness. Life and prosperity are as well protected in Alabama as they are in Illinois or New York. The Southern people have gone out of politics and into business. They have very little interest in the Presidential race, beyond that which all American citizens ought to have. If Mr. Garfield is elected, well and good. If Gen. Hancock is elected, well and good. Anybody will do, so long as the South is allowed to attend peaceably to its business. The people of the South are spending millions of money annually with the business men of the North. Chicago has an immense Southern trade—so has Cincinnati, so has Boston, so has New York. The merchants, manufacturers, bankers and business men generally of the North are more deeply interested in the general prosperity of the country than they are in the success or failure of professional politicians of either party. The people of the North are beginning to see that they have been deceived by the partisan press, and there is a strong feeling in the land that the bloody shirt must be laid aside at once and forever. For the good of the whole country this cannot happen too soon. If the war settled anything, it was that the Union should be maintained at all hazards. It was not intended to be maintained by one section continually blackguarding, misrepresenting, insulting and goading another section. The party of the bloody shirt must stand aside and let the nation, or whatever it is, prosper and become great.

DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE.

Meeting of the National Executive Committee in New York.

The Democratic National Executive Committee met in the city of New York on Tuesday, Aug. 10. The members present were: Chairman, W. H. Barnum; G. Horsey, of Maryland; A. W. Sulloway, of New Hampshire; Edward Wilson, of Maine; B. B. Smalley, of Vermont; W. W. Armstrong, of Ohio; W. C. Goudy, of Illinois; W. Scott, of Pennsylvania; B. F. Jonas, of Louisiana; W. T. Martin, of Mississippi. The committee was in session four hours, transacting business and hearing reports. The members of the committee from the various States made reports of the campaign. Chairman Barnum gave an account of his observations in his recent trip through Illinois and Ohio. The enthusiasm for Hancock and English in Illinois and Ohio, especially in the latter State, was beyond anything he anticipated. He could not see how these States could be claimed as strongholds by the Republicans. He did not travel extensively through Indiana, but he met prominent men from all parts of the State and obtained sufficient information to satisfy him that Indiana was Democratic beyond all question. The prospects in the West were sufficiently bright to gratify every Democrat. Mr. Barnum occupied three-quarters of an hour in making his report. W. C. Goudy, of Illinois, made a report from that State which not only sustained the statements of Mr. Barnum, but indicated that the result of the election in Illinois might prove a surprise to the Republicans. W. W. Armstrong made a statement about the changes going on in Ohio, which justified, in the minds of the committee, the predictions of Senator Pendleton in reference to the result in that State. Mr. Wilson, of Maine, said that there was a very hot contest in that State. Mr. Sulloway reported the canvass in New Hampshire as going on well, the Democracy organizing clubs in every district. Gen. Duncan S. Walker, from Washington, reported that the Congressional Committee had advices from forty-three points in Indiana of such a character as to justify them in placing that State in the Democratic column beyond any doubt. They also found that the Democrats in Ohio were working together harmoniously and were exceedingly confident of carrying that State in October. Mr. Armstrong said that there seemed to be a lack of enthusiasm for Garfield, even in the Western Reserve of Ohio.

Among the subjects considered was the Republican colonization of negroes in Indiana. A letter from Mr. English, the candidate for Vice President, states that the evidence of negro importations is increasing hourly. The Executive Committee also received many other reports upon that subject, and resolved upon the most active and stringent measures to prevent colonization. Detectives have been employed to watch the leaders in the business, all of whom are well known, and to keep track of the colonists. Arrangements are also making to arrest any person violating the election laws in that State.

Nast's Sore Thumb.

A correspondent in the New York World indicates why it is that Mr. Thomas Nast, cartoonist, has a terribly sore thumb in this campaign. He says that, in a double-page cartoon in Harper's Weekly for March 15, 1873, Mr. Nast pictured Mr. Garfield and other Credit Mobilierites under a placard reading:

> Disgraced in the eyes of the public for owning Credit Mobilier stock, which was, in fact and intent, a fraud upon the Government. Also, for deceit and evasion.

If Not, Why Not?

"Am I not as good as he is?" demands Colfax, pointing to Garfield from the platform of a Sunday-school.

"Am I not as good as he is?" demands Orth, pointing to Garfield from the platform of a Pullman car.

If not, why not?—New York World.

A Chinese Toper.

A story is current among the Chinese of a great wine-drinker who was able to sit all day at a table, and, after consuming what would have been sufficient to drive the reason out of half a dozen men, would rise up perfectly sober. The Emperor, hearing of the fame of this drinker, asked him to dinner, that he might test his marvelous powers. As the story goes, the King ordered a hollow figure to be cast in bronze of the exact size and model of the man, and, as the wine was served, for each cup the guest drank a similar cup was poured into the opening at the top of the head of the image. This went on for some hours until, at length, the bronze statue overflowed, while the guest still continued at the table, and arose from it perfectly sober.

INDIANA NEWS.

THE South Bend telephone exchange has 117 subscribers at present.

NINA, the 4-year-old daughter of M. D. White, was fatally burned at Crawfordsville, while playing with an outdoor fire.

A 4-YEAR-OLD child of Dr. Clay, residing near Thorntown, Boone county, was killed while playing with loaded cartridges.

MRS. FRANCES C. ARNOLD, of New Albany, has been sent to the State Insane Asylum. Religious excitement unbalanced her mind.

MRS. ISRAEL DAVIS, residing near Scipio, Jennings county, fell from a chair and sustained injuries that resulted in her death the same night.

NEW money-order postoffices established in Indiana: Elwood, Geneva, Knox, Naponee, North Judson, Otterbine, Patoka, Silver Lake, Walton.

POLICEMAN ADAM KNAPP, in a personal encounter with Chris Achilles, at New Albany, struck Achilles a blow on the jaw with his fist, breaking the jawbone.

MRS. BELINDA TULIDGE, who died in Richmond, a few days ago, was the daughter of Col. Shombre, a member of the Duke of Wellington's staff during the Peninsular war.

MR. MICHAEL ADCOCK, a wealthy farmer of Sullivan county, while digging a well on his farm, was lucky enough to strike a vein of artesian water at the depth of sixteen feet.

A FIRE at Evansville destroyed a portion of Herman's large furniture factory. The fire originated in the dry-house, where a large quantity of valuable lumber was stored. Loss, $30,000; insurance, $10,000.

THE postoffice at St. Marys, near Terre Haute, burned one night last week. The building was entirely destroyed, with a stock of goods and part of the mail. Loss, about $2,000. It was the work of an incendiary.

THE oldest resident of Scott county has gone to receive the reward of a well-spent life. Peter Christie, of Vienna township, was probably one among the oldest, if not the oldest, men in the State. He had lived 105 years, and during most of his life was a hale and hearty man. He leaves a widow aged 86 years.

PROPERTY was destroyed by fire at Evansville, the other night, to the amount of $12,000. New machinery was being placed in the water-works, so that no pressure could be brought to bear upon the flames, and the entire fire department witnessed, instead of rendering aid in checking, the fire. Insurance light.

PROF. J. F. McELROY, of the Indiana Institute for the Blind, has been elected Superintendent of the Michigan Blind Asylum, at Lansing, and will enter upon the duties of the office early in September. This makes the second official which Michigan has taken from Indiana, Superintendent McIntyre, of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, being the first to go.

THOMAS DEMPSEY, a convict, escaped from the Prison South last week. Dempsey has been employed around the prison for some time, acting as a police in the cell-house and grounds. He had an hour's work on a platform, every morning, at the northwest corner of the prison, cleaning night-buckets, and it was while there that he dug a tunnel under the wall, having the platform for a cover, and while he was supposed to be at work. He took his leave one morning, having changed his stripes for citizen's clothes in a lot north of the prison, and made good his escape in broad daylight. He was sent from Ohio county, Nov. 8, 1879, for six years, for burglary.

CHRISTIAN GREEN, who lives in the northern suburb of New Albany, keeps a kennel of savage dogs for breeding purposes. One day last week, Mrs. Christina Umbright, a widow lady, while passing along the commons, about 100 yards distant from Green's residence, was discovered by two bull dogs. The savage brutes had, but a few days before, attacked and bitten a citizen, and the taste of blood then received seemed to sharpen their appetites and add to their fierceness. They sprang over the fence and bounded over the commons toward the lady. She saw them coming, and, knowing of their viciousness, commenced shrieking for help. They were soon upon her, however, and, seizing her, threw her to the ground and commenced tearing her flesh. They stripped all the flesh from the calf of her right leg, tore her thigh to the bone, sunk their tusks through her arms and right foot, and bit her on the side, breasts and abdomen. In all she received twenty terrible wounds. Finally help come just in time to save her life.

Congressional Nominations.

The several State Central Committees furnish the following lists of Congressional candidates nominated in Indiana:

Democratic—First, J. J. Kleiner, Vanderburg; Second, Thomas R. Cobb, Knox; Third, S. M. Stockslager, Harrison; Fourth, William S. Holman, Dearborn; Fifth, C. C. Matson, Putnam; Seventh, Charles Byfield, Marion; Eighth, B. W. Hanna, Vigo; Ninth, W. R. Myers, Madison; Tenth, J. N. Skinner, Porter; Eleventh, J. R. Slack, Huntington; Twelfth, W. G. Colerick, Allen; Thirteenth, D. B. McDonald, Marshall.

Republican—First, William Heilman, Vanderburg; Second, James Braden, Dubois; Third, A. P. Charles, Jackson; Fourth, J. O. Cravens, Ripley; Fifth, W. B. F. Treat, Monroe; Sixth, Thomas M. Browne, Randolph; Seventh, Stanton J. Peelle, Marion; Eighth, R. B. F. Pierce, Montgomery; Ninth, Godlove S. Orth, Tippecanoe; Tenth, Mark L. Demotte, Porter; Eleventh, George W. Steele, Grant; Twelfth, Robert S. Taylor, Allen; Thirteenth, William H. Calkins, Laporte.

National—First, Christian Kramer, Spencer; Second, John C. Albert, Orange; Third, Moses Poindexter, Clark; Fifth, John Clark Ridpath, Putnam; Sixth, no nominee; Seventh, Gilbert De La Matyr, Marion; Eighth, John W. Copner, Fountain; Ninth, W. R. Myers, Madison; Tenth, John Skinner, Porter; Eleventh, John Studebaker, Wells; Twelfth, no nominee; Thirteenth, Dr. Matchett, Marshall.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., AUGUST 26, 1880

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District—JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

THE census of 1880 will give Indiana a population of about 2,056,500.

◆

"THE bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen."

◆

THE next triennial conclave of the Knights Templar will be held in San Francisco.

◆

JUDGE PORTER challenged Mr. Landers for a joint discussion, and now it appears that the kid-gloved aristocrat wants to crawfish.

◆

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES has been elected vice-president of the American Bible Society. It is generally supposed that he was counted in by fraud.

◆

SENATOR MCDONALD and ex-Senator Turpie made splendid speeches in Ft. Wayne last evening. Senator Jones, of Florida, was compelled to leave for home on account of the serious and probably fatal illness of his wife.

◆

CAN the solid south give us more honesty and purity in financial affairs at the ballot-box than we enjoy under republican rule? What kind of reformers do "murderers and traitors" make?—Rep. exchange.

Of course it can. The forty thieves could have done that.

◆

ARTHUR does not appear to figure very conspicuously in the present campaign. He is the man who received the nomination in Chicago for vice-president. He formely ran a customhouse for the government, and was kicked out by his fraudulency, R. B. Hayes, for dishonesty.

◆

THERE is a certain district in Johnson county, Indiana, that contains 118 persons over twenty-one years of age who cannot read. Of these, 117 are democrats.—Stolen editorial squib in the Republican of the 12th.

And we will bet that every one of these 117 ignorant democrats knows more about grammar than the editor of the Republican.

◆

WE are glad to be able to say to the democratic readers of the COURIER that success is certain in DeKalb county; there is no question but that the entire democratic county ticket will be elected, and the harder all democrats work, the greater will be the majorities. Be up and doing for every candidate from Hancock down to the least important county office. Victory is certain.

◆

THE Ligonier Banner, under the suggestive heading of "We are coming, Father Abraham," runs a column each week of short paragraphs containing the names of the converts to Hancock and English. Each week hundreds of names are being added to the list. The revival is still going on and spreading, and there are thousands now on the "anxious seat" who, by a prayerful reading of select campaign literature, such as Doolittle's and Pulitzer's speeches, and the expose of the damnable republican negro exodus scheme, by Voorhees, will "come through" and be made whole in the democratic faith.

◆

WILLIAMS, a negro member of the Ohio legislature, made a speech for Garfield at the wigwam in Indianapolis last Saturday evening, which was received with much enthusiasm. It was he who last winter asked the Ohio legislature to legalize the marriage of blacks with whites. This sweet-scented descendant of Ham and advocate of practical miscegenation, was brilliantly received by the republicans, which would appear an endorsement of his insulting demands. The Indianapolis Sentinel says that, "being doubtless the result of a black and white marriage himself, he desires that the custom may be generally adopted." It may be that he is the result of such a marriage, but such creatures are not unfrequently the result of a clandestine meeting in the dark of the moon.

New Hampshire.

The democrats of this state think that, by the proper amount of work and the nomination of the right man for governor, New Hampshire can easily be made a democratic state. There was a close contest at the election of 1878, there being 70,000 votes polled. Out of this large vote the republicans had a small majority of only 374, and it is believed that the nomination of Hancock has already overcome this majority. The nomination of the proper man for governor will make that state surely democratic. The favorite man for that position is Hon. Frank Jones. His fitness for the office is acknowledged by all, and it is thought he can poll a vote far beyond the party strength. T. J. Smith, of Dover, in that state, writes: "Never in the memory of our active men were our prospects so good as at present, and never has the party been so harmonious and confident of success. There is every indication of a vigorous campaign, which will place New Hampshire among the democratic states."

The Demand is Supplied.

What the democratic party needs today is a leader with brains, a policy with common sense in it, and integrity to guide its councils. Failing in all this no wonder it cannot succeed.—Hicksville Republican.

The democratic party has presented as its leader a man with brains. He is more. He is a statesman, a patriot and a hero of three wars. He is a man of the most sterling integrity and honest devotion to his country. As great a soldier as ever unsheathed a patriot's sword,—a heart as pure as the untrodden snow upon the mountain's top. Such is the character of the man for whom the democratic party asks the suffrages of all liberty-loving Americans. Can they not conscientiously support such a grand character? How different is the man for whom the republican party asks the support of the people!

The democratic party has not made a failure, as the writer of the above paragraph affects to believe. The democrats now have control of both houses of congress, and did elect their president in 1876, but the 8x7 commission stole the office. They will this year elect Winfield Scott Hancock to the presidency, and have possession of the entire government.

Concentrating in Indiana.

The republican party has about despaired of any chances of getting the thirty-five electoral votes of New York, and are concentrating all the wisdom and energies of that party in Indiana. They are moving heaven and earth to secure the vote of this state. They are doing it by the foulest means that ever disgraced any party on God's foot-stool. They are shipping pauper negroes from the southern states to this state and to Ohio for no other purpose on earth than to vote the republican ticket. They deny this, of course, but it is a fact that stands out as clear as the noondays' sun, and such a damnable outrage upon the rights of citizenship should cause every honest man, who loves his country and its free institutions, to forever turn his back upon that party. A recent issue of the Louisville Courier-Journal says "there can not be the slightest doubt that the republicans are pouring negro voters into Ohio and Indiana in the hope of carrying the elections in those states by fraud. The Courier-Journal yesterday received from South Union, Kentucky, the following information. It comes from one of the best men in the state, a man who is personally known to the publishers of the Courier-Journal: 'Nearly all our hired darkies have gone to Indiana and Ohio to vote. Where they got traveling funds I know not, as most of them lived here close up with their wages.' It is certainly a bad case with the republicans when they cannot trust their cause to fair election in Ohio, a conceded republican state."

Let Us Be Solid.

There is a disposition in the nature of man to be actuated too much by prejudices and petty animosities. This has ever been so, and will probably continue to be so, unless the nature of man shall be changed, which is not likely to occur. The man who can rise above such unworthy motives and exhibit a spirit of fairness and toleration, always challenges our admiration. The exigencies of the present campaign demand such an action on the part of those who have grievances. Every interest of the party and of our local government demands the united action of all democrats in support of our county ticket, for it should be borne in mind that every vote taken from the party counts two for the opposition. The democrats have placed a strong county ticket in the field. Each man on this ticket is an upright, honest democrat, and represents the honest and economical principles of the democratic party. We ask you, if you have a grievance, to rise manfully above it, and give your vote and influence to the election of this ticket. Their political principles and your political principles are the same; you desire the same result—the triumph of the democratic party in DeKalb county, as well as in the state and national governments, and this can be accomplished only by harmonious action. Consider, then, that you are not voting for men so much as for principles, and do your duty as good democrats, and Moody, Van Auken, Baxter, Boland, Miller and Foltz, will all be elected by a rousing majority. "In union there is strength."

County Affairs.

MR. EDITOR:—My attention has been called to an article in the Waterloo Press on the subject of county expenditures. Of the one or two points it makes I will notice. But let me premise with this statement, that I was not aware of the fact that the editor of the Press was as ignorant as that article proves him to be, and if he is not so ignorant, then I did not suppose him to be so great a falsifier. The editor of the Press, from his long experience and acquaintance, ought not be so ignorant, and his standing and occupation as a teacher and informant of the public, ought to prevent his falsifying the facts. He says the last republican board left the county government running upon a tax levy of 35 cents on the $100 valuation.

Let us look back to the record: In 1868 the democrats obtained a majority of the board of commissioners and have kept it ever since. The levy in the year 1867, for county purposes, was 70 cents on the $100 valuation. The levy in 1868 was 55 cents on the $100 valuation. Such is the record. Which can be relied on, the editor of the Press, or the county records?

The next statement he makes is also false by the record—that the present tax levy for county purposes is 70 cents on the $100—if he means by "county purposes" that tax known as "county tax."

The "county tax," levied for the year 1880, is 60 cents on the $100, with 10 cents on the $100 for the jail bonds. But that is not an actual advance over the 40-cent levy of last year for county purposes, and the 10 cents per $100 for the jail bonds. Last year the whole assessment of taxables in our county was, in round figures, $7,000,000, which, at 50 cents on the $100, would produce $35,000 for county and jail bond purposes. This year the whole assessment of taxables in our county is in round figures $5,000,000. It is slightly over that sum, which, at 70 cents on the $100, will bring in $35,000 of county funds. In other words, a farmer who had last year a farm valued at $7,000 paid $35 for those purposes. This year, that farm being valued at $5,000, pays $35 for the same purposes.

Now, let us see if we can find any reason for this increase, for I take it that it is as much the duty of the county board to increase the levy to pay the just debts and expenses of the county, as it is for them to decrease such and otherwise act economically.

The county board within the last two years has made the poor farm or county asylum self-sustaining, where it formerly cost the county per year from $2,500 to $4000, and in order to its greater efficiency and convenience the board within about a year has purchased eighty acres of land and made improvements, costing in all, over $4,000. And another matter should be taken into consideration in this connection, which the Press editor ignores. It is this, that the county board is not chargeable with having created all the debt against the county; the county board does not order the issuance of all the county orders upon the county treasurer. It may be well for the editor of the Press to examine this subject and ascertain that the county board makes but little of the county debt. It will, upon examination, find that from July 24, 1879, to June 15, 1880, in ten months and twenty days, the DeKalb circuit court ordered county orders to issue for the sum of $7,400, being one-quarter of the county revenue raised in the year 1879.

Let that editor look a little further and inform himself and be truthful, and he will say that within the last two years there has been an unusually large expense on account of criminals in this county for which the board is not responsible. The Abbott trial cost the county nearly $2,000, and the Spencerville burglary probably $4,000, besides a number of lesser criminal matters. Bridges have to be built, highways must be opened, ditches to be dug, the poor in the townships must be supported, officers of the county and assessing of taxables must be paid, public records, stationery, light and fuel must be furnished—all these things, and more, too, must be paid for out of the county revenue, and over which the county board has no control, only to levy the tax for such purposes, and when the bills come in to pay them, they having no discretion in the matter, but must furnish the funds and must pay whether they want to or not.

I dare say that ninety-nine hundredths of the expense of the county is of that class of debts, and if the county board would not build the bridges, lay out the roads, dig the ditches, pay the officers, furnish the public buildings, take care of the poor, levy a sufficient tax to pay all expenses, and pay the bills thus presented to them, they would be criminally negligent, could be compelled to do so, and, besides, be prosecuted for not doing their duty.

Let the editor also be informed that if a county commissioner or board would make an allowance that is not authorized by law, any taxpayer has the right to appeal to the circuit court for redress, and have such allowance annulled; and in addition thereto each member of such board favoring any such illegal allowance is guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction can be fined not to exceed five times the amount of such allowance, be imprisoned in the county jail, and his office declared vacant.

JUSTICE.

Neighborhood Nippings.

Harry Bennett, formerly of the Central house, in Auburn, and latterly of the Stamets house, Auburn Junction, is now proprietor of a hotel at Pleasant Lake.

The "good-bye" of W. M. Starr, one of the editors of the Goshen Times, is contained in the last issue of that paper. Dr. H. J. Beyerle assumes entire control.

A week or so ago Alexander Bush, a prominent farmer of Steuben county, living near Angola, shot his wife in the breast, inflicting a wound which was pronounced fatal. It is supposed that the cause of the act was jealousy.

A fellow at Indianapolis recently announced that he wanted to bet $750 that Porter would beat Landers 750 votes for governor. A democrat promptly called around with a $1,000 bill; but the "betting man" was nowhere to be found.

George Doren, a Fort Wayne boy, was hanged for murder in Carsicana, Louisiana, on the 20th. He was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., 1850, and left there when a small boy; lived in Fort Scott and Western Kansas; has lived in Tex as the past five years.

A four-year-old son of a widow named Bourie, of Ligonier, was killed by a pistol in the hands of a playmate, one week ago last Saturday. The children found the pistol under the mother's pillow. Women and children should not be allowed to have firearms.

Last Tuesday a week, a young man named Frank Emerson broke into the store of Steifel & Strauss, of Butler, and appropriated $80 in goods and cash. On retiring from the store he was caught by the marshal and taken before a justice of the peace, and in default of bail was sent to jail.

The Wabash Courier says that last Thursday night at 12 o'clock, during the thunder-storm, the residence of Samuel H. Butterbaugh, of Roann, was struck by lightning and that gentleman instantly killed. The house was badly wrecked, and a child and a hired man were severely shocked. The deceased was an old and estimable citizen, and his untimely death is regretted by all.

The Goshen Democrat says that an old man in the country was swindled out of five or six hundred dollars on show day by a couple of sharpers who pretended to sell him a lottery ticket. The old man never did believe much in "book larnin'," and as for newspapers he would not exchange a load of elm wood for fifty-two of the best papers in the county. He invested his money in lottery tickets.

Marion Democrat: One of the most dastardly and contemptible outrages ever perpetrated in this county was the cutting down of the Hancock pole erected by Mr. Irvin Love, of Washington township. On the night prior to the rally, some dirty, low-lived scoundrels procured an augur and saw and, like the thieves they are, crept up under the cover of darkness, and bored holes through the pole a couple of feet above the ground, and then sawed the pole down. Not content with this they also tore up his large flag and streamers, and also cut the halyard ropes into short pieces.

Cases of poisoning from eating pressed beef are becoming frequent of late. The Sentinel says that the entire family of Mr. George Zaller, a shoemaker of Fort Wayne, was poisoned from eating beef for supper last Monday, which produced violent vomiting. The four members of the family are improving, but the father and son, up to Wednesday, were unable to leave their beds. Another case is mentioned at Rome City, where pressed beef, bought at Skillen's restaurant, poisoned a large number of people in that place who ate it. In a number of cases it came near proving fatal, but all have since recovered.

Henry Lagerman, of Root township, about four miles from Decatur, reports that on Sunday morning last a calf was born to one of his cows which had seven legs and eight hoofs. The body and head were perfect. Four legs grew perfectly from the hind part and three imperfectly from the fore part of the calf. From the shoulders start two legs, apparently perfect, but at the knee of one branches out the third leg, all these three having perfect hoofs, but on one of the hind legs two full grown hoofs appear. The cow had great difficulty in giving birth to the calf, and in about ten hours after it was born she died. The calf was stillborn.

FAIR,

AT

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA, 1880.

EXTRAORDINARY ATTRACTIONS!

$8,000 in Premiums! $4,000 in Speed Ring!

Fair commences September 6, and continues through the week. Liberal arrangements made with all the railroads. Send to W. W. Rockhill, secretary, for programmes and premium list.

Liquor License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Garrett, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, on the following described premises to-wit: Lot No. 29, block No. 25, in the original plat to the town of Garrett, said county.

AUGUST THIENEL.

August 16, 1880. 34-3.

Town Ordinance.

An ordinance to compel the owners of lots and parts of lots in the incorporated town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, therein named to plank and repair certain sidewalks.

Whereas, It is the opinion of the board of trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, that public convenience requires the sidewalks along the streets and adjoining the lots and parts of lots in said town hereinbefore mentioned, to be planked and repaired; Therefore,

SECTION 1. Be it ordained by the board of trustees of the incorporate town of Auburn, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, that the owners and persons in possession and claiming to own, as hereinafter named, the hereinafter described lots and parts of lots in said town, shall, within thirty days from the taking effect of this ordinance, build and construct along and adjoining the lots and parts of lots they may severally own, or are in possession of and claiming to own, when the said lots and parts of lots front upon and adjoin the streets named, a sidewalk of good and sound pine or oak plank not less than one and one-half inches thick, and not more than four inches wide when made of oak, and laid crosswise, and not more than twelve inches wide when of pine plank, to be laid lengthwise, and to be placed upon sleepers of sound oak timber not less than three by five inches in width and thickness, and not more than three feet apart when laid with pine plank, and not more than two feet apart when laid with oak plank. Said walks to be six to nine feet wide, as the marshal of said town shall direct, and built on a grade with the street and alley crossings. Said sidewalks to be built along the streets and in front of and adjoining the following named lots or parts of lots, to-wit:

The south end of lot No. 2, McFarland's addition, on Seventh street, owned by James Griswold.

The south end of lot No. 1, McFarland's addition, on Seventh street, owned by C. C. Shaffer.

The south side of lot No. 94, Western addition, on Seventh street, owned by G. C. Halston.

The east end of lot No. 53, old plat, on Main street, owned by F. R. and C. E. Dills.

The east end of lot No. 51, old plat, on Main street, owned by F. R. and C. E. Dills.

The west end of lot No. 81, old plat, on Main street, owned by Isaac Cool.

The west end or lot No 83, old plat, on Main street, owned by Isaac Cool.

The east end of lot No. 71, old plat, on Main street, owned by Emily L. Gragg.

SECTION 2. The owners or persons in possession of and claiming to own the lots or parts of lots hereinafter described, fronting upon the streets hereinafter named, are hereby required to repair and put in good condition the sidewalks in front of said lots, or parts of lots, within thirty days from the taking effect of this ordinance. Said sidewalks to be repaired in all respects so as to correspond in grade, width and material, as required by the ordinance under which they were severally built originally. Said sidewalks required by this section to be repaired and put in good condition, are along the streets and in front of and adjoining the following named lots and parts of lots, to-wit:

The west end of lot No. 90, old plat, on Main street, owned by Isaac Cool.

The east end of lot No. 75, old plat, on Main street, owned by E. J. Baker.

The east end of lot No. 76, old plat, on Main street, owned by E. J. Baker.

The west end of lot No. 87, old plat, on Main street, owned by Amanda Little.

The west end of lot No. 114, old plat, on Main street, owned by J. Brinkerhoff.

The west end of lot No. 84, old plat, on Main street, owned by V. M. Swartz.

The east end of lot No. 11, Park's addition, on Main street, owned by John H. Weaver.

The east end of lot No. 9, Park's addition, on Main street, owned by John Otto.

The east end of lot No. 8, Park's addition, on Main street, owned by Isaac B. Brandon.

The east end of lot No. 1, Kuhlman's addition, on Jackson street, owned by Isaac Jones.

The east end of lot No. 4, Western addition, on Jackson street, owned by Jacob Somers.

The east end of lot No. 5, Western addition, on Jackson street, owned by E. and S. R. Dickinson.

The west end of lot No. 76, Western addition, on Van Buren street, owned by Jacob Walborn.

SECTION 3. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force ten days from and after its publication in the Auburn COURIER, to-wit: on the 6th day of September, 1880.

Done at adjourned regular session, Aug. 24, 1880.

JAMES A. POTTER,
T. G. MAYHENY,
PATRICK MURPHY,
Trustees.

Attest:
THOS. H. SPROTT,
Clerk.
35-3w.

Wanted—To Buy.

Forty or sixty acres of land within 5 or 6 miles of Auburn. Terms of sale and price must be reasonable. Apply to 31-3t THOS. H. SPROTT.

Town Ordinance.

An ordinance forbidding owners of sheep to allow them to run at large on the streets, alleys or uninclosed lands within the limits of the town of Auburn, affixing a penalty thereto, and providing for the impounding, sale and forfeiture of sheep found estray upon said streets, alleys or uninclosed lands.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained by the board of trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, that it shall be unlawful for any citizen of said town to allow his or her sheep to run at large upon the streets, alleys or uninclosed lands within the corporate limits of said town.

SEC. 2. Whenever any sheep shall be found running at large or pasturing upon any of the streets, alleys or uninclosed lands of said town, it shall be and is hereby declared to be the duty of the marshal of said town to take up and impound said sheep in the public pound of said town.

SEC. 3. The marshal, upon taking up and impounding said sheep, shall immediately give notice in writing to the owner of such sheep, if known to him; if not, he shall give notice by posting up in three (3) of the most public places in Union township, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, a notice in writing, stating therein the time of the taking up, the age, marks and a full description of the sheep taken up, that the owner thereof is unknown to him, and the place where said sheep is impounded.

SEC. 4. It shall be the duty of said marshal to carefully attend to, feed and provide for said sheep so taken up, and if after ten (10) days from the day of posting up said notices or notifying the said owner as provided for in section three (3) of this ordinance, no person shall appear and claim and prove the sheep so taken up to be his or her property, the marshal shall immediately advertise said sheep for sale at public auction by posting up in three (3) of the most public places in Union township, in said county and state, written notices, stating therein the time and place of sale, the description of the sheep to be sold, that the same was taken up as an animal not entitled by the law to run at large or pasture upon the public commons, which notice shall be posted up at least ten (10) days before the day of sale.

SEC. 5. If at any time before the expiration of ten (10) days from the time of posting up the notices as provided in section three (3) of this ordinance, any person shall appear and claim the sheep taken up as his or her property, and prove by his or her affidavit or the affidavit of another person that the sheep taken up belongs to him, and shall pay to the marshal taking up said sheep, for each sheep so taken up, not less than twenty five (25) cents nor more than three (3) dollars for his trouble and expense of keeping the same, he shall be entitled to the custody of the sheep so taken up, and it shall be the duty of the marshal to immediately deliver said sheep to the owner, provided that in all cases when the owner shall be notified by the marshal in writing by a notice delivered to said owner in person, if he shall immediately proceed to take into his custody the sheep so taken up, he shall be liable to pay to said marshal not more than twenty-five (25) cents for each sheep so taken up.

SEC. 6. In all cases where any sheep shall be taken up and impounded under the provisions of this ordinance, if the owner shall not appear and prove the sheep so taken up to be his or her property as in the fifth section of this ordinance provided, and pay the amount due the marshal for the taking up and impounding of the same as provided in section five (5) of this ordinance previous to the day of sale specified in the notices of sale, it shall be the duty of the marshal to proceed and sell at public auction the sheep so taken up, for the highest price bid for the same, and out of the sum bid for and received for the sheep so sold, he shall be entitled to retain a sum sufficient to reimburse him for all expense for impounding, feeding, care of and costs of sale of said sheep, and the balance of the money received for said sheep shall be paid over to the treasurer of DeKalb county, Indiana, by said marshal, to be by him disposed of as provided by law.

SEC. 7. Whereas an emergency exists, this ordinance shall take effect immediately after its publication in the Auburn COURIER, a newspaper published in said town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

JAMES A. POTTER,
T. G. MAYHENY,
PATRICK MURPHY,
Trustees.

Attest:
THOS. H. SPROTT,
Clerk.
35-3w

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows.
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—It has been thawing some all week.

—Watermelons, like ague, are plenty.

—Conductor Mogford, of the Jackson road, is taking a lay-off.

—Use Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, for sale by McQuiston & Ralston. 33-4w.

—Judge Morris, of Fort Wayne, was attending some legal business in town this week.

—Jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, jet beads, 5 cents per bunch, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Attend Stamets' sale of personal property, at Auburn Junction, one week from Saturday, or September 4.

—Mrs. Jones, of the Main street fancy goods and notion store, has been in Chicago this week purchasing goods.

—No griping, no sickness, in using Rinehart's Liver Pills. Only one for a dose. Sample dose free. Ask your druggist for them.

—Rev. H. Johnson and wife, Mrs. Hare and daughter Sadie, have been enjoying themselves at the village of Hudson this week.

—Opportunities, like the majority of people, are very sensitive things; if you slight them on their first visit, you seldom see them again.

—D. D. Moody has a very entertaining little card which somebody gave him to make some memoranda on. It is on exhibition free gratis.

—A meeting of the county board of education will be held at the office of the county superintendent, in Auburn, Wednesday, September 1.

—Turn out to hear Mr. Colerick, our candidate for congress, at Garrett, tomorrow (Friday) evening, and at Waterloo next Saturday evening.

—Miss Ella Hodge, of West Rushville, Ohio, a niece of Jos. Abright, returned with Mrs. Abright last week and will spend the summer in Auburn.

—For shirtings, denims, ticks, brown and bleached muslin, table linen, and towelings, at lowest prices in the market, go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Hats for children, boys and men. Boys' hats for 60 and 75 cents; men's hats for 60, 75 and $1.00; also a large line of fine fur hats, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Owing to the meetings of Mr. Colerick at Garrett and Waterloo, next Friday and Saturday evenings, there will be no meeting of the Auburn Hancock and English club this week.

—The lawn social in the court-yard last Friday evening, given by Mrs. A. S. Leas, was quite a novelty in its way and was a pleasure to all who were fortunate enough to be there.

—For the present, W. J. Austin is satiating the cravings of the inner man at the hotel Swineford. As a destroyer of tomatoes and pickles, mixed with various other refreshments, he has no living equal.

—The M. E. society will be entertained at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Clark, on next Wednesday evening; refreshments served at half past eight. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. J. Anderson, Sec'y.

—After a pleasant visit here this summer, Miss Annie Hampton returned last Saturday to her home in Richmond, this state. She was accompanied by Mrs. W. J. Austin and little ones, who will reciprocate with a visit of three or four weeks.

—The democratic county central committee has fitted up a convenient room in Schaab & Beugnot's building, back of Tom Sprott's office, where all business pretaining to it will be transacted. Mr. Reed, the secretary, will be found in charge.

—The omission by Judge Lowry to hold the adjourned session of the court this week, was owing to an urgent request of Judge Best, who desired to be absent and who is concerned in most of the pending cases, and to a concurrent petition from a portion of the bar.

—Ira M. McFarland and wife, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, brother-in-law and sister of Frank Copper, landed in Auburn last Thursday night, on their way home from the Chicago doings, and spent several days visiting with Frank and his wife, at their cosy little nest near the Jackson depot.

—We are sorry to state that Harry Stamets, late proprietor of the hotel of that name at the junction, is going to leave us—not only Auburn, but the state, as he thinks of moving with his family to Iowa. Mr. Stamets has been identified with the business interests of Auburn, in various branches, for some time, and her people would like to see him remain a fixture. However, they will join the Courier in wishing him prosperity in his new western home.

—Harry Yesbera's turn has now come, and his friends are "giving it to him." While at Chicago last week, he stepped into a drug-store with a party of Auburnites and "set up" the soda, receiving from the clerk a check with the amount stamped thereon, which was to be paid at the desk. Harry examined the check, turned it over, dropped it in his pocket and marched out, several nickels ahead. That check will probably be redeemed the next time G. H visits Chicago.

Figure It Again.

The Republican of August 12, gets off this cheeky assertion:

"Advertisers will please to call and examine our list of subscribers if they have any doubts as to whether it will pay to advertise in the Republican. We have a list in the county equal to any paper published in the county, and more than all the papers in the county published outside of Auburn."

That "published outside of Auburn," is pretty well put in, and as for having a county list "equal to any paper published in the county," perhaps the Republican would like to compare lists with the Courier. In order to ascertain the difference between the circulation of the Courier and the Republican, we respectfully call the attention of advertisers and parties interested to Geo. P. Rowell & Co.'s "American Newspaper Directory" for 1880. This company has means of finding out the exact circulation of papers that are inclined to prevaricate concerning it, and the publication is made accordingly. The Courier has a much larger circulation, both inside and outside the county, than any paper published therein, and it can back the statement with the kind of proof that doesn't lie—figures.

That Railroad Difficulty.

The case of the Lake Shore company against the new Butler and Detroit or Wabash company, wherein the former is endeavoring to enjoin the latter from crossing its track at Butler, except by an overhead bridge, has been in progress before Judge McClellan, in the circuit court this week. The arguments in the case were heard Tuesday, Judges Morris and Best appearing for the Lake Shore company, and Mr. James F. Joy, who is the president of the new company, assisted by Messrs. Rose, Hartman and Collins, acting for the Wabash. The judge has taken the matter under advisement, reserving his decision for a few days, until which time nothing definite will be known about it; we hope, however, to present the result to our readers next week. The case is one of considerable interest to people hereabouts, and has elicited much comment from all sources; but the general opinion seems to be that there is but little question as to the perfect right of the Wabash to cross the Lake Shore road, on an even grade, wherever it chooses. This, in all probability, will be the decision, and the extension of the Wabash through to Detroit will doubtless go on with a rush.

Now Shut Up.

Editor Courier: The editors of the Republican seem to be worried over the fact that our county commissioners spend so much time in attending to the duties of their office; of their riding around in carriages over the county, &c. Now, I have not, as yet, known of their doing so improperly, or of their going more than was necessary. In fact these editors have not shown that the commissioners have thus wrongfully squandered the people's money, but they do indirectly so charge. Let them itemize, let them bring forward some particular fact or facts that are capable of proof or disproof. I would prefer to rely upon the oath taken by these three commissioners, that they will honestly discharge the duties of their office, and that they will not dishonestly discharge them, than to rely upon the unsworn, partisan statements of any man. As presented now to the people, it is the unsworn, prejudiced, biased, partisan assertion of these editors against the sworn acts of these men recommended and endorsed by a majority of the people of this county for their probity, integrity and faithfulness. And to think that these three commissioners, men of wealth, age and experience swearing to, and acting out, perjury at the rate of three dollars and fifty cents a day is almost incredible, yet these editors think their bare, bold, partisan assertions will overbalance these oaths.

Is is not a fact, Mr. Editor, that there are now some twenty or twenty-five bridges recently or now being built? Is it not necessary that the locality of the proposed bridge shall first be visited to ascertain the actual wants, character or kind needed? The job let, the job accepted and probably the work visited in the meantime, advances made, earth purchased for the approaches, and other matters which neither you nor I nor the board beforehand could anticipate or expect, may arise; all of which require the board's presence when the work is being done. Have there not a large number of ditches recently been dug and at present, say forty or fifty, being dug that are reclaiming thousands of acres of our land, increasing the products of our farms very largely, diminishing sickness, disease and death, saying nothing of the saving of thousands of dollars of doctors' bills yearly—in fact saving more to the people of our county yearly in doctors' bills than all the ditches in the county have cost? Are not certain matters connected with their construction also to be seen to by the commissioners? If the editors of the Republican knew as much about the duties of the commissioners as they do about grumbling and fault-finding, they would not be saying such foolish things.

But the riding around seems to hurt these editors. Is it expected that the commissioners would go on foot, or furnish their own conveyances at three and a half dollars a day? Whom would you get to act as such commissioners if that were the case? Had not these editors better talk about something else, for instance, credit-mobilier, DeGolyer, salary grab, etc.?

Anti Grumbler.

—Theatre Monday night.

—Take in the excursion to Niagara Falls, Tuesday, August 31.

—Read the supplements to the Courier. They will appear each week.

—Brown Matheny is "firing" a freight engine on the Muncie road.

—See the Hotto Comedy Company in "Honeymoon," at Ensley's hall, next Monday night.

—Good heavy sheeting at 7½ 7¾ and cents per yard, by the bolt, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 33-3w.

—Col. Geo. Durkee, formerly a nightwatch at this place, spent several days in town last week. He is now teaming at Jackson.

—Our Garrett correspondent sends us a good letter this week, in which will be found a full account of the meeting and speaking at Avilla last week.

—A young man and lady at McDowell's party Tuesday evening, while purloining fruit from a neighboring vineyard, got shot at. "Thou shalt not steal."

—Last week, at the same time lightning struck Lanning's chimney, it ran down a telephone wire attached thereto and riddled the back door in Abright's jewelry store.

—As will be seen in another place Tom Mays has charge of a grand excursion to Niagara Falls, which takes place next Tuesday, Aug. 31. It is a rare opportunity to visit this celebrated place, and the fare is only six dollars.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Forkner, of this place, have made arrangements and will take charge of the DeKalb house at Garrett next Wednesday, September 1. They will make it a first-class hotel, and we hope success will crown their efforts.

—We are to have a theatre here all next week, and the proceeds are for the benefit of the band; therefore, it is to be hoped that our people will patronize it well. The Hotto company we can heartily recommend, as it is known to be first-class and comes well endorsed by the press wherever it has appeared.

—W. H. Withers, of Fort Wayne, made a speech to the stalwarts of Waterloo last Saturday. He said on the train, to the editor of the Courier, that we might say his speech was a poor one, but that he was a "pretty good sort of a fellow himself." The former we can't say anything about, not having heard the speech, but the latter is conceded. He is too good a "sort of a fellow" to be enlisted in such a cause and thus wasting his speeches on the desert air.

—Died, August 13, 1880, on the farm where he has resided almost fifty-seven years, four miles northwest of Ashland, Ohio, Thomas Sprott, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. That "misfortunes never come singly" has been well substantiated in all time past, and this sad occurrence only serves to strengthen the adage, as the deceased was a brother of our townsman, Major S. W. Sprott, who buried a loving wife but a few weeks ago. Major Sprott was present at the funeral, remaining about a week in Ashland and returning home Friday of last week.

The Seventh Street Bridge.

At the bridge letting last Monday there was quite a spirited contest, in consequence of which the contract has not yet been awarded to any of the contestants. That a good bridge is a necessity at that point is quite evident, and there being so much difference in the cost of iron and stone abutments, in favor of the former as being the cheaper and also as being fully as good as the latter, we should think there would be no hesitancy in accepting the iron abutments as preferable. Of course, however, the commissioners will exercise their best judgment and make the selection that seems to them most advisable.

HO! FOR NIAGARA!

A Grand Trip at a Cheap Rate.

A cheap excursion is now offered our people to visit the most gorgeous scene on the American continent—Niagara Falls. A train will leave Auburn Junction over the B. & O. railroad to Defiance, and thence east on the Wabash and Canada Southern to the falls, on Tuesday, August 31st, 1880.

No special train will be used, but the cars will be attached to regular trains and accidents avoided. You will have two full days at the falls, or one day at the falls, and one day for a splendid ride across Lake Ontario, to Toronto, Canada, and back again to the falls. Fare for the round trip, only which is only a one-third rate. The actual expenses for one person will be

Six Dollars,

R. R. fare	$6 00
Hotel, 2 days	3.00
Admission to all points	1.50
Total	$10.50

Now, if you want a sleeping car, which will be provided, and want to take in the other features it will cost

Sleeping to and from falls	$2.00
Trip on lake	1.00
Meals between points	1.00
Total	$4.00

This will give you a sleeping car from Toledo to the falls and back, buy your supper at Toledo, and breakfast on your return. The railroad has so arranged things at the falls that there will be no chance to extort money. The hotel will be at half rate, while a ticket will be sold to you on the train admitting you to all points of interest at the falls, for half price, the railroad making the arrangements. This will be the only chance to go to the falls this year, at so low a rate. I will accompany the excursion and see that you get what you pay for.

T. C. Mays.

OUR GARRETT CORRESPONDENT

Tells About the Avilla Meeting and Some Other Things.

Garrett, Aug. 24, 1880.

Keyser township is solid for Hancock and English. The republicans are disgusted and sick with their own stench; they try but fail to raise a rotten-cat swamp-stick for a Garfield pole, the quality of the timber of which conforms with the principles of the party.

The announcement being made last week that W. G. Colerick, our next congressman, was to address the citizens of Avilla and vicinity on Saturday evening, brought together a large and enthusiastic multitude of our citizens at the B. & O. depot, at seven o'clock p. m., and every coach that could be furnished by the company was soon crowded even of standing room, while many of our citizens returned to their homes sadly disappointed by not participating in the grand excursion. The Garrett band having been engaged for this occasion, accompanied the excursion and filled the air with their harmonious notes. On arriving at Avilla we were met at the depot by a procession of over three hundred torchlights, which accompanied us to the place of speaking. All being ready and prompt to time, the Hon. W. G. Colerick was introduced to an audience of over five thousand persons. After listening to an able address by this distinguished gentleman, on the political questions that are at issue in this campaign, and all feeling satisfied that the Honorable W. G. Colerick is well qualified to fill the position in which he will be placed in October next, we returned to the depot in good order, where the train was in readiness and soon brought us back to our homes. We can safely say that we out-numbered the republican excursion to Avilla three to one, but "hot coffee" was not in half the demand on our return.

The republicans tried to get up an excursion from here to LaOtto last Saturday evening, and after engaging three lumber-wagons and running all over town coaxing persons to go, they succeeded in getting two of their mud-scows partly filled which were followed by one empty. They started for LaOtto with no music to enliven their sickened hearts. When they arrived there they found a small band of discouraged republicans sitting in deep meditation on an old broken stick, which they had been trying to raise to the memory of De Golyer, but the pole was like the party—very poor timber and could not support its own weight. It was amusing to hear some of the disgusted republicans commenting on the failure to raise the pole. One said that they had "nothing but a d—d lot of moss-backs at LaOtto and that they hitched the ropes to the wrong end of the pole," etc. We will not attempt to give any further account of the rotten pole at LaOtto; we presume the Auburn Republican will give full particulars, as their reporter from Garrett was there, who signs himself "Garroche"—but better known here in Garrett as "Cockroach."

I now wish to make a few remarks in regard to an article which appeared in the Garrett Herald of August 12, and also in the Auburn Republican of Aug. 19, the author signing himself "Baltimorean." He says: "The first speaker at the democratic meeting of Saturday evening last, among numerous misstatements said that the republican party was the legitimate outgrowth of the American or 'know-nothing' party, and that the 'know-nothings' of twenty-two and twenty-four years ago are the republicans of to-day. The following question was propounded to him in writing: 'Where is the Hon. Thomas Swann, leader of the American party in Baltimore, Md., one of the few places in which it was victorious, to-day?' He read the card and professed to answer it, but said not a word about the Hon. Thos. Swann. His failure to do so can be accounted for by his ignorance of the subject." He goes on blowing his bugle about two men that he knew in Baltimore that were "know-nothings in years gone by and are with the democratic party to-day." Now I wish to say to this "Baltimorean" that, in the first place, he did not have the manhood to sign his name to the card he sent to the speaker;—and did not one of the gentlemen on the stand give out an open challenge to any republican under the sound of his voice, or in DeKalb county, to meet them at any time and place and debate the political questions that are at issue before the people, and examine the public character and services of the candidates who are presented to the people in this campaign? Why did you not accept the challenge? Your chance is good yet. When you went to the trouble to write such an intelligent article, why did you stop with such rural papers as the Herald and Republican? Why did you not get "Slim Jim" to send it over the wires to the Chicago Tribune and let the people of Chicago see what an intelligent "Baltimorean" you are? Please answer these questions.

Now, Mr. "Baltimorean," I wish to ask you a few more questions: What party opposed the democratic party in 1855 and '56? Has the democratic party not existed ever since? In 1855-6 where was the material that constitutes the republican party to-day? What became of the old "know-nothing" party, and from what seed did your republican party grow? And you know two men in Baltimore who are democrats that were "know-nothings" twenty-four years ago. Great God! do you know all that? and it took a whole column in two of our county papers for you to tell it! How many men are there in the republican party, holding government offices of appointment under the present administration, who were "rebels" from sixteen to eighteen years ago?—who took up arms and fought our stars and stripes and tried to overthrow our free government? Please answer.

Now, Mr. "Baltimorean," please remember that the city of Baltimore is not the "Hub of the Universe," neither is it the "Center of Creation" or the head-fountain of intelligence. When we have public speakers here during this campaign you, or any other republican, are welcome to come and ask any question you may please—providing you come sober and act the part of a gentleman,—and you shall have a seat on the speaker's stand; we will see that you shall have fair-play and a fair chance to make a public exposition of your ignorance. We also very earnestly request of you, in the name of decency and with respect to our town—for the welfare of society and for your own credit—when you come to any more of our meetings please don't be disturbing our speakers with your impertinent, anonymous interrogations. Also, for heaven's sake, don't be making a "Public Ass" of yourself by trying to write any more articles for the papers.

"Mossback."

Sedan.

—Oats are not yielding as expected.

—Why can't we have a democratic speech?

—We can hear the whistle of the steam threshers all around us.

—On account of the inclemency of the weather, the Red Ribbon club did not meet last Saturday evening.

—Sedan was evacuated Saturday, the 14th; all went to Auburn to see the electric light. Did any one see it?

—We are glad to learn that Mr. John McCague, who has been confined to his bed for a number of weeks, is around again.

—Communion services were held at the Luthran church last Sabbath: a large crowd was in attendance, Rev. L. Rice conducted the services.

—J. W. Baltman has purchased one of Eckhart's double-seated buggies. Eckhart sends out good work, and it would pay farmers to buy of him.

—If Hancock was a republican and Garfield a democrat, republicans could not eulogize Hancock's war record enough, nor could they soon forget his patriotic words in Louisana, and his heroism at Gettysburg; while on the other hand, their papers would be full of Credit-Mobiler swindle, and De Golyer pavement, salary grab, etc. And then they would ask (as the democrats are doing) can any honest voter support such a man? But the machine is turned around and it is hard for them to swallow the dose.

School in Dress-Making.

"I will teach the cutting and fitting system by chart, also styles of trimming, etc., to a class beginning on Monday, September 6. For terms, enquire at my rooms, up stairs, right side of hall leading to Gordon's art gallery.

35-2w Miss R. A. Canon.

Wanted—To Trade.

A good two-story frame house with L and two lots, on west side of Main street, in Auburn, for 40 or 60 acres of land in DeKalb county. Will pay money difference. Apply to 34-3t. Thos. H. Sprott.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind. Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf

Success.

The wonderful success which has attended the introduction of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, is doubtless due to the fact that it is an honest medicine, and will perform all that is claimed for it, and Dr. White must certainly have great confidence in his medicine, for he authorizes all druggists to sell it under a positive guarantee, such as is given on no other medicine in the market. It is a specific for Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, and Constipation of the Bowels, and as a blood purifier and renovator, it is positively unequaled. Pint bottles only one dollar. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug-store. 35-2w.

Lieut. Gov. Isaac P. Gray

WILL ADDRESS THE PEOPLE OF DEKALB COUNTY ON THE POLITICAL ISSUES, AT AUBURN, SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 4, 1880.

COLONEL GRAY IS AN EXCELLENT SPEAKER, AND WE HOPE THE PEOPLE WILL GIVE HIM A GOOD CROWD.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing a sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short, the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial Affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external or internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny. 34-cow-1y.

Notice to Ditchers.

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4., 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest responsible bidder, the construction of the county allotment on the Ballatt ditch, in Keyser township, in said county. Specifications of said ditch can be seen on the ground at the time of letting. Bidders will be required to execute a bond according to law.

By order of the Board.

Attest: Albert Robbins, Auditor.

August 24, 1880. 35-3w.

HAIL CLOTHING BUYERS!

To the Americans!
To the Germans!
To the Irish!
To the French!
To the Italians!
To the Citizens of all Nations!

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

And their Salesmen

GREET YOU!

Perhaps in our list of salesmen you may recognize an acquaintance. If not call and see us anyway. We will make a good impression on you (we hope).

FIRST OF ALL YOU WILL FIND

I. Lauferty and Alex. Lauferty,
Sam'l Morris and Harry Graff,
Wm. Stellhorn and Sam'l Arnold,
Amede Dodane and Frank Chapman,

Who can speak most any language, and can talk

CLOTHING,
HATS,
CAPS,
FURNISHING GOODS

In a way that will certainly interest you. As for stock we can safely say it is second to none in Indiana in point of Quantity, Quality and all other fine points.

OUR PRICES SELL THE GOODS!

One Price, Square Dealing always at

A. S. LAUFERTY & Co., C. O. D.,

NO. 9 EAST MAIN STREET,

Exactly Opposite the North Door of the Court House, with a large American Flag over the sidewalk.

New Goods Arriving Daily. Fort Wayne, Indiana. Open till 9 at Night

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an Internal Remedy Acting upon the Blood, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of Hall's Catarrh Cure is Not Cured or Benefited more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

The Unit Rule Applies Here!

BARGAINS

Neither Private Nor Confidential.

One Black Alpaca Coats, Men's	75c
Two Linen Dusters, Men's	76c
Three White Duck Vests, New	75c
Four White Dress Shirts, Linen Bosom	75c
Five Blue Flannel Derby Suits	$7.50

BOYS' SIZES IN PROPORTION.

SAM, PETE & MAX

Star Clothing House,

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

THE PENNILESS ORPHAN.

BY HATTIE E. G. CRESSY.

Oh! I am all alone in the world,
  And the world cares not for me;
The rich man shoves me rudely aside;
  I am poor, but what cares he?
"A penny, sir," but no, it's refused;
  He bids me not to annoy;
He ne'er felt the biting want
  Of the penniless orphan boy.

A lady arrayed in jewels and silks
  Is still more heartless than he;
She sullenly asks if the walks were made
  For such a wretch as me;
And she shuns the path that I have trod,
  As though 'twere a heinous sin
To even step where the shoeless feet
  Of the beggar boy had been.

A wretch!" Oh, the tears are starting now,
  For I remember that mother dear
Who always called me sweet, pet names,
  But she is no longer here;
For God has taken her spirit home,
  Where the holy angels dwell;
Oh, He was kind to take her away,
  "He doeth all things well."

In the dim old attic yonder she died,
  And none save me was nigh;
Ah! I forget, the angels were there,
  And the stars were in the sky;
I know I held her in my wee arms,
  Close by the window pane,
And told her to look upon the world
  She ne'er would view again.

And then, upon a pallet of straw,
  I laid her down to die,
And there we lay, heart pressed to heart,
  My dying mother and I;
The fire in the grate was low,
  And the lamps were burning dim,
And the walls of that low attic cell
  Were than death more grim.

She died just as the morning woke
  To usher in the new-born day,
And soon the dark-browed sexton came
  And bore her form away;
And I was thrust into the street,
  A beggar child, to roam
Amid the city wilderness,
  With neither friends nor home.

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

THE GOLDEN HAIR-PIN.

I.

George Adolphus Clarendon was a young man of pleasing presence, whose age was not far from 20 years. His father had long and successfully conducted a most exemplary meat-market at the corner of Market and St. Clair streets, in the thriving village of Westford, in Central New York, and had amassed a competence by fair and honorable means. But the son held the mean business in abhorrence, and steadfastly refused to entertain the thought of following it for a livelihood. He conceived himself to be formed of a quality of clay quite above the average, and was often heard muttering in his sleep about the "higher walks of life." Old Mr. Clarendon was a stern father, and he determined that, if George Adolphus would not sell meat, he should be compelled to engage in the distribution of tracks, with the heels toward the paternal mansion. George Adolphus accepted the peripatetic alternative with cheerful alacrity, and went on an aimless tramp. He said he was going in search of his proper level.

II.

Maud Muller was the only child of a retired banker in the sleepy town of Couponville, an aristocratic village in one of the eastern counties of Ohio. Maud's charms, both physical and mental, were the rarest ever lavished upon woman, and she had been favored with every advantage of education that money could purchase. Her beauty and accomplishments had made her the idol of a large circle of young men, to not one of whom had she ever given the slightest encouragement. They swarmed under her chamber windows on moonlight nights and made the long hours hideous with their caterwaulings, until old Muller got tired of it, and stole around the corner of the house with a gun loaded with tenpenny nails and let drive at the flock, killing three outright and wounding four others so that they died the following morning. That was the kind of man Mr. Muller was, but he was exceedingly fond of his daughter and had always been kind to her.

One evening as Maud was emerging from her boudoir, where she had been scrutinizing a large mirror and dressing for the opera, she was met by her father with the information that Mr. Muggleton waited in the parlor.

Now Mr. Muggleton was an ancient fossil, who had taken a great fancy to Maud, and, as he was a man of high social standing and great wealth, Mr. Muller had thought best to encourage him as much as possible, hoping that his daughter would have the good sense to offer no objection on account of age.

"Mr. Muggleton is waiting," repeated Mr. Muller.

"Well, give him my compliments, and tell him to keep on waiting," returned Maud, with some spirit.

"But don't you intend to go down? Are you going to be rude?"

"Oh, yes," replied Maud, with an injured air, "I'll go down and stroke his shiny old bald head, and ask him about his children and his grandchildren, and I'll ask him to give me some personal recollections of Noah. And, if you like, I'll go to the opera with him, and I'll ask him if there was better talent on the boards when he and Methuselah were young!"

"Now, Maud," said Mr. Muller, "you are making a fool of yourself. Mr. Muggleton never saw Noah in his life. As to grandchildren, you know very well that he is a bachelor and hasn't a relation in the world, so far as he knows. I command you to present yourself at once, and if you don't behave properly there will be a young lady about your size begging her bread in the streets before she is aware of it."

With these words the indignant father turned on his heel and left Maud to choose which alternative she would.

III.

While the events above narrated were transpiring, a young man possessing a dignified bearing, and 85 cents in money, was just entering the brilliantly-lighted town of Couponville in search of his level. It was a larger town than he had ever before seen, and he was consequently somewhat dazzled and bewildered. He began to be doubtful about finding his level that night, as the evening was rapidly wearing away, and another question was beginning to trouble him, namely: How was he going to reach the higher walk of life without more money? How was he to be a high-toned gentleman and live in a loftier atmosphere than that which pervaded the meat-shops, with so small a sum as 85 cents in his pocket? As he walked gloomily along the strange thoroughfare, busy with these troublesome reflections, he heard loud tones issuing from a mansion which he was just passing. A moment later the front door opened and a slight female figure hurried silently out into the street, and, passing by him with a quick, determined tread, was soon out of sight.

IV.

When Maud recovered from the shock which her father's angry words had given her, she immediately determined upon a course of action. She resolved that she would be turned out of doors before she would consent to go to the opera with an antediluvian relic, who waited for her in the parlor. She called her father back and told him her determination. The result was that the proud young beauty was promptly ejected through the hall door; for she it was who had passed George Adolphus as he wandered in search of his level.

When Mr. Muggleton had waited for Maud until he was tired, and on the point of leaving, Mr. Muller entered the room, and, apologizing for the non-appearance of his daughter by saying that she had a violent headache, begged him to come again in a few days, as Maud would then be delighted to see him. The truth was that Mr. Muller had no idea of punishing his daughter's disobedience with permanent banishment. He reasoned that she would surely go to some of her friends, and return in penitence in the morning.

V.

George Adolphus followed swiftly on after the young lady, hardly knowing why he did so, feeling irresistibly drawn by some unaccountable presentiment that all was not well with her. In a few moments he came up with her and followed at a little distance, watching her movements with the keenest interest. But Maud was so intent upon some purpose which lay deep hidden in her heart that she did not notice him. The street now began to be deserted, but still the restless girl kept walking rapidly on. At length a small foot-bridge across the canal was reached. The girl paused; was her purpose a desperate one? George Adolphus asked himself this question, and many more beside as he lingered in the shadows close behind her.

Murmuring something to the effect that the heaving, white-crested billows which rolled at her feet would soon embrace her and free her from her wretchedness, Maud began to take down her hair.

"Going to swim?" asked a voice behind her.

She turned and beheld a stranger standing close at her hand. At first she could not utter a word. Presently, however, she said, in tones that betrayed her intense excitement.

"Oh, sir, do not thwart my purpose. I desire to put an end to my trouble—I wish to sleep beneath the wave."

"There isn't any wave there," said George Adolphus. "The canal's dry. You'll break your neck if you jump off this bridge."

"But I want to find a grave in the restless deep. I want the blue billows to fold me in everlasting slumber, where the sea-weeds grow in sunless gloom."

"But I tell you, my dear lady, there isn't any restless deep anywhere around here. You'd better put it off till the canal opens. Here you are talking about sleeping beneath the billows, when the water won't be let on in a month yet. And, besides, if you want to be folded in everlasting slumber, it would be wise for you to jump into a well. You'd have a sure thing then."

"That would be horrible!" exclaimed Maud, with a shudder.

"Yes," replied George Adolphus; "it would spoil the well."

Maud felt that George Adolphus was right. True, he did not appear to enter very much into the tragic spirit of the situation. He ought to have dropped upon his knees and implored her to forget her trouble and sip a little longer the nectar of life. He ought to have pictured to her imagination a fair-haired girl lying with pallid face and marble form in the silent bosom of the canal, where the dolphin sports unseen and the mermaids comb their locks in shadowy solitude. But he did nothing of the sort. He told her to go home and practice in the cistern.

Maud thought the matter over for a moment, then bursting into tears she wrung the hand of our hero and ran swiftly home.

George Adolphus stood upon the bridge and watched Maud till she was out of sight. As he stood there, wondering what it was that weighed so heavily upon the mind of this fair young girl, he saw something glittering at his feet. He stooped and eagerly picked it up. It was a golden hair-pin of peculiar pattern. It occurred to him at once that it must have been lost by the girl when she took down her hair. He put it in his trousers pocket, thinking that it would be a handy thing to pawn for breakfast. The more he tried to forget about this fair girl, and the previous circumstance under which he had met her, the more persistently they rose before him. Presently he found himself laying plans to find out more about her, and then it dawned upon him that he was in love. He then tenderly removed the hair-pin from his trousers pocket and placed it next his heart. It was now getting very late, and the police were beginning to glance suspiciously at our hero, and so he turned into a more retired street and determined to search for a cheap lodging place.

VI.

Old Mr. Muggleton, whom we left at the residence of Maud's father, wended his way homeward, filled with bitter disappointment. He had long regarded Maud with tenderness, and had desired to offer his hand and fortune, and now he felt that he was rejected. He had seen nearly four score years of bachelorhood, and it was getting monotonous. He dragged himself wearily and sadly home, and retired to his couch in wretchedness.

VII.

The clock had just struck 11, and the town was as silent as the grave, when two villainous-looking men, with muffled faces, broke open the street door of a large mansion where an ancient bachelor lay dreaming of a supercilious maiden who had declined to meet him in her parlor a few hours before. The men passed safely into the house, and were seen standing by the bedside of the dreamer. A moment later a swift blow fell upon the unconscious millionaire, but before it could be repeated the assassin was stricken to the floor. His companion escaped. The police were summoned by the servants, who had by this time been aroused by the noise, and the captured man was led away in irons.

"Who is this young man that has followed these villains and risked his own life to save mine?" asked the wounded man.

"My name is George Adolphus Clarendon," was the prompt reply.

"George Adolphus," said the millionaire, "you have done a brave and noble deed. I am mortally wounded and must die in a few hours, but you shall be rewarded. You shall be my heir."

The next morning there was crape on the door of the Muggleton mansion, and George Adolphus Clarendon was a millionaire. He had suddenly landed in the lap of luxury. He could not have been more completely taken by surprise if he had suddenly succeeded to the English crown. And yet his magical elevation to wealth and position did not so engage his mind as to dispel certain memories that were lingering there—memories that carried him back to the foot-bridge across the canal. Who was the beautiful stranger that had almost made the canal bridge a "bridge of sighs?" Why had she sought a watery grave? And if she wanted to rid herself of sorrow why didn't she jump off a house instead of hunting up a dry canal, full of broken glass, iron and old boots? These questions were too much for George Adolphus. In less than a week he found himself in a perfect fever of mental excitement. He felt that he was growing rapidly worse. It did seem as if he could not get that hair-pin near enough to his heart. He thought of swallowing it, but changed his mind and had it made into a bosom-pin. In another week the malady had obtained so complete a mastery over him that he began to write poetry. He could not even think in prose, and when he read a newspaper the lines all seemed to commence with a capital letter and end with a jingle.

Thus the weeks passed wearily by without bringing the slightest intelligence of the owner of the golden hair-pin.

VIII.

In a brilliantly lighted ball-room in Couponville, gayest of the gay, and admired of all admirers, Maud Muller promenaded to and fro like a fairy queen. Her wretchedness had departed with old Mr. Muggleton, but she had not forgotten the night when a stranger had rescued her from self-destruction, and she secretly longed to know who it was that had saved her from herself. She closely scanned every gentleman that entered the room, as if in half-frightened expectancy. She had heard of Mr. Clarendon, the young millionaire, but, as he had not appeared much in society, she had not met him. Of course she was not curious, for she was a woman, and women are not curious; yet she could not feel easy after learning that Mr. Muggleton's heir was present, till she had signified her willingness to have him presented.

As George Adolphus advanced, arm-in-arm with an acquaintance, a perceptible pallor overspread Maud's countenance. Was it caused by the peculiar pin that ornamented his shirt-bosom? She tried to convince herself that the pin signified nothing. Perhaps he had picked up the hair-pin in the the street on that eventful evening she so well remembered. But when she heard his voice she withered like a stricken flower. George Adolphus was puzzled. So were all the bystanders. It was a very singular case indeed, they all said. Presently, however, Maud rallied, as she and George Adolphus were left alone.

"Do you remember me?" she asked, falteringly. "Do you remember having seen me before?"

Suddenly the truth flashed upon George Adolphus like a national convention bulletin.

"Yes," he replied, making an effort to control himself; "I remember a former meeting with you very well."

"I think papa would give his consent," said Maud, very timidly.

"But you are not going to try it again?" said George Adolphus in surprise.

"Oh, dear, no!" exclaimed Maud, "I don't mean that. I think papa would give his consent to—that is—I don't think he'd object."

"Object to what?" asked George Adolphus, blandly.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Maud.

"Do you mean to say," continued George Adolphus, "that you don't think the old man would object to your trying it again after the water is let out?"

"No," said Maud, "I don't mean that, for he is very fond of me, and I am sure he would be glad to encourage so worthy a—that is—oh, what am I saying?"

Then George Adolphus began to see how the land lay, but, as a ball-room is not a favorable place for a tableau, he mastered his impulse to catch Maud in his arms, and merely observed in a whisper that she was a gem of the first water, and that he would give his consent, too.

Old Muller sat in his library that night when Maud and Adolphus entered the house, and the young man was soon prostrated at his feet, clasping him tightly around the legs, and imploring his permission to marry his daughter.

"Ahem!" remarked Muller.

George Adolphus thought this rather meaningless remark was a favorable indication, and so squeezed the old man's legs harder than before.

"Come, young man," said Mr. Muller, "you are filling my slippers with tears. Rise up and let go my legs."

"Oh, do you give your consent?" sobbed George Adolphus.

"Consent!" roared the old banker, "heavens and earth! Of course I do. Here, Maud, take this lunatic away and get me a dry pair of socks."

And they were happy ever afterward.
—Detroit Free Press.

THERE is verdure all along one track of the Pennsylvania railroad, between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, and none along the other. This is caused by droppings of grain from the eastward-bound freight cars, while those going the other way deposit no seed.

TWO WASHINGTON WRECKS.

An Ex-Delegate Who Keeps a Low City "Dive," and an Ex-Senator Who is a Gambling Tramp

[H. J. R., in Philadelphia Times.]

One name among the list of Territorial Delegates I will not mention. He was in the House for four years, and from the time he entered it until the expiration of the second term he was greatly respected. He was an exceptionally able man, a thinker, a logician and a brilliant speaker. He was college-bred, had spent years in foreign travel, was a lawyer and had been in many responsible official positions. He had been in the Legislature of one of the Western States, had been Receiver of Public Moneys and Surveyor General. While in Congress he lectured before church and scientific societies here, and no man in Congress was more generally respected. Would the reader like to know where this man is now? He is still in Washington and about as low in the human scale as it is possible for a man to be. He first became the victim of a gambler, who was himself at one time a distinguished member of Congress from a great Western State. Together they carried on what they called private club-rooms, and there they fleeced their victims as they could catch them. They were frequently raided by the police, but they managed to get off; but they sank lower and lower each year, until finally they got to the lowest game of "policy." The ex-Congressman from a Western State died a few years ago. The ex-Delegate is now keeping one of the lowest dives in the city. His place is ostensibly a cigar store, but a thin partition separates it from a bagnio of the lowest character. The man flaunts his shame in the broad glare of day, and may be seen at almost any time sitting in front of his disgraceful abode in his shirt-sleeves, brazenly facing people who knew him in his better days.

Here is another case that almost makes one lose faith in human nature. In 1844 there graduated from Harvard University a young man of wonderful promise. He was 22 years old, and the world opened bright and promising before him. He was, I believe, for a time a teacher in Harvard and, subsequently, he founded a very successful school in Massachusetts. Some time afterward he went South as the Principal of a State Normal School. The war coming on he was driven from the State and came North. At the close of the war he went back to the Southern State as Collector of Internal Revenue. When the State was reconstructed he was elected to the United States Senate, and served with distinction for six years. He was Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor and a member of the Appropriations and other important committees. He was a very strong and pleasing speaker and stood high among his colleagues. After his term expired he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and was at times Acting Secretary. It was here that he fell. He was courted and flattered and used. Wine, cards and women did their part to accomplish his fall. There were some very crooked transactions while he was in office, and some way the Assistant Secretary lost his office and landed in jail. He was speedily got out, however, but he became wretchedly poor and got to borrowing 50-cent pieces of his old friends. It was a pitiful sight to see him about and know what he had been. Finally somebody had him appointed to a $1,200 clerkship (he wrote a beautiful hand), and it was thought that he might pick up and recover; but he didn't. He had got a passion for gambling, and whenever he could obtain any money he sought the tiger and, of course, lost it, and soon he lost his little clerkship. I understand he now borrows a dollar or two whenever he can, and goes into the lowest places and plays until it is gone. If he has no money, which is nearly always the case, he will sit where the game is going on and keep the score for the low wretches that infest the dives he visits. He once had a charming family of boys and girls, but the Lord only knows where they are now. If there is anything stranger or more revolting than this in fiction I have never come across it.

Golden Words.

The following extracts are culled from an address by Hon. Horatio Seymour to the young-lady students of Wells Female College, Aurora, N. Y.:

Youth is beautiful in the eyes of age, and it looks with admiration upon the courage with which the young confront the uncertainties of the future, and the faith that leads them to look forward to happiness and success.

Self-cheating is the most common kind of fraud. It is a good rule, when you find that subjects of importance or objects of value are matters of indifference, to conclude that there are some things which you do not, but which you ought to, know.

There is nothing you can learn about any subject which will not give it new interest in your eyes. The deeper your learning the better, but the quality of knowledge is like that of gold, which, although it is reduced to the thinnest leaf, yet makes all the things glitter that it touches.

Surface knowledge is lightly spoken of by the learned, but it is information worked out in the past by toil and study until it is brought within the reach of all.

In the course of my life I have studied all classes of men with care, and, as a rule, I have found those to be the most cheerful and wise whose habits and observations have given the widest range to their mental action, and have brought within the scope of their thoughts the most varied topics, although they may not have been learned with regard to any of them.

Men do not live in the same world. When we look around us we see that they live in very different houses; some are humble houses, but poorly finished; others are costly residences, adorned with paintings and statuary, and everything that art can do to gratify the taste.

We make the world in which we live. It is more disreputable to live in one that is dull and barren than it is to make our home in poor and dilapidated houses.

Intelligence will enable us to cope with the problem of life, to endure its misfortunes with fortitude, and to bear its successes with moderation and wisdom.

The office of the eye is to give facts to the mind. Things are not seen in a true sense merely because they are brought within the range of the vision, but when they have stirred the mind and thoughts have been evolved.

So strong are the enjoyments of looking upon famous objects, or of treading upon ground made sacred by events, that men cross broad oceans to visit them. And through after life they are wiser and happier for the knowledge thus gained.

It may be that some are gifted with aptitudes in certain directions beyond others; that some have faculties for learning, for arts, or for science, that gives them peculiar advantages in their pursuits.

When I am visited at my farm by those who feel no sympathy with nature, and say they have no taste for country life, I make up my mind they do not like it because they do not know enough about the world around them to enjoy its beauties.

No one who has reached the age of three-score years and ten would, upon reflection, be willing to rub out from the experience in life the sorrows which have softened his character, the mistakes which have taught him wisdom, or wrong-doings which he has ever regretted, and which, by their influences, have made the golden threads which may be formed in the texture of his moral character.

Stealing Another's Comfort.

Any one who has stopped over night at a large hotel has been disturbed in the small hours by persons walking in the halls as heavily and carelessly as if it were mid-day. Guests who are up late seem thoughtless of the quiet of those wrapped in slumber. Such conduct is selfishness of which any sensible person ought to be ashamed.

A grave gentleman at the Fifth Avenue Hotel once complained of it to the genial clerk. "I am surprised," he said, "that you harbor thieves in this house."

"Thieves, sir? Harbor thieves? What do you mean, sir? Explain, if you please."

"I mean that I had something stolen from me last night by one of your guests."

"We are all exposed to sneak thieves, sir."

"But this was not a sneak thief. It was a guest in the house, sir, and quartered as comfortably as I was."

"This is very extraordinary, sir. What was stolen from you, sir, and at what hour?"

The gentleman answered with great earnestness. "At 2 o'clock this morning some most precious sleep was stolen from me by one of your guests, and with a pair of boots."

Was not this guest one of the meanest of sneak thieves?

Nerve-Grafting.

Dr. J. Gluck, of Bucharest, lately brought before the ninth congress of the German Society of Surgery of Berlin some interesting results of experiments in nerve-grafting. He cut out a portion of the sciatic nerve of a fowl, and then removed a similar portion of the same nerve from the leg of a rabbit, and placed this in the leg of a fowl, uniting the two ends by sutures. The nerve united, and the paralysis caused, of course, by the excision of the piece of nerve was recovered from. He repeated the experiment, and exhibited the successful results, showing the fowls with full restoration of power. He was led to these experiments by the result of a case of nerve suture. Paralysis of the median had resulted from the extensive destruction of the tissue of the arm by gangrene. Dr. Gluck cut down on the radial nerve and found that part of the nerve was destroyed. He united the two ends by sutures, and the man regained the power of motion, which he had etirely lost. Of course, the experiments of nerve-grafting in animals, adds the Lancet, do not warrant the expectation that a similar result could be obtained in the case of the human subject. It is well known that the union and regeneration of nerves occur with greater facility in the case of the lower animals than in man.

A Young Widow.

A certain census enumerator of this city called upon a woman the other day who resides not far from the Capitol, and propounded the usual question as by law directed. The woman said she was a widow, her age was twenty-five and her husband died two years ago. The faithful recorder, on receiving the name of the woman's deceased husband and his occupation when alive surmised that he must have been a relative, if not the same Mr. B—— who was a member of the One Hundred and Seventy-seventh New York Volunteers during the war. A conversation ensued, when finally the enumerator innocently asked if her husband was the same Mr. B.—— who died during the war, saying that he himself was a member of the same regiment, and that he was well acquainted with the man. The widow, in a modified tone, replied: "Oh, yes, but that was a long time ago." The amusing part of the affair is that the man has been dead about seventeen years, and if the woman is only twenty-five, she became a widow at the early age of eight years.—Albany Argus.

A Grave Joke.

In the Jew of Dickens, Scott and Shakspeare, known respectively as Messrs. Fagin, Isaac and Shylock, may perhaps be found a national ideal of the manhood and generosity of the olden time. Such generosity, indeed, is not uncommon at the present day. In a turbid stream which flows through a village not a thousand miles from Milwaukee a human "floater" was recently found. A Hebrew gentleman happening to pass by while the body was being taken from the water thought that he recognized the lineaments of a brother Israelite, and, being in a generous frame of mind, he offered to assume all of the expenses of a decent burial, which amounted to about $40. The interment was properly made, and about a week or two afterward the Jew found out that he had paid to bury an Irishman. Then he sued the undertaker to get back his $40, but the jury stood four to two against him, and he now mourns, as did Rachel, refusing to be comforted. It's a very grave joke indeed on the Jew, this paying for the burial of an unfortunate Irishman.—Milwaukee News.

"How sad!" exclaimed one blade of a pair of scissors to the other; "how sad! We only meet to sever!"

CENTAUR LINIMENT

always Cures and never Disappoints The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO., Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest result to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book for the Million

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER"

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY

Seminal Pastille

HARRIS REMEDY CO. M'F'G CHEMISTS.

FARM NOTES.

THE London Agricultural Gazette says that Canadian butter is the worst class of butter that is brought to the English market.

FOR every thousand inhabitants this country contains 2,024 cattle, sheep and swine. In European countries the average is only 1,166.

A FOREIGN grower of lilies attributes his success, in part, to the use of deep pots, those eight inches apart being fully fifteen inches deep.

An old dairyman recommends having a faucet in the bottom of the cream jar, so as to draw off the watery portion, which becomes bitter, and imparts a bitter taste to the butter.

IT is in farming as in every other kind of business. No man can make it profitable unless he looks carefully after the details. There are hundreds of ways in which waste must be prevented in order to secure success.

THE Pall Mall Gazette says "that while the upper classes may not conquer their prejudices against foreign bacon, the native dealers do not hesitate to buy the American meat at low prices, and retail it at a high price."

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rural Messenger has had good results from the application of lime, wood ashes, and old iron put around the roots of fruit trees that were not doing well, thus restoring the trees to a healthy condition and improving the quality of the fruit.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rural New Yorker stops a cow or steer from jumping over fences by nailing a horse-shoe on one forward foot. This prevents the hoof from spreading, and consequently renders the animal unable to spring. This is calculated to be very effectual.

THE London Farmer, of recent date says: "We are threatened at all points with American competition. It is mentioned that eggs imported from Chicago have been eaten at Dublin breakfast tables since the month began, and good American butter at 8d. per pound is on sale on the Dublin quays.

THE Royal Society of England has offered two prizes of £25 and £10 each for distinctly new varieties of wheat which shall combine the largest yield of grain and straw per acre with approved form and size, smooth and thin skin, full and white kernel, and high specific gravity in the seed, and with bright, firm and stiff straw.

THE necessity of good walks about the house-yard to the barns and outhouses is apparent to every one during the fall, winter, and early spring months. In the vegetable gardens during the season of culture and harvest, and in the flower garden they should always be found neatly fringed with grass. To make a good walk dig out the earth a few inches deep and fill in a layer of broken stones, brick and the like, then a layer of fine clinkers, and over this spread coal ashes and roll down, if you have a roller. If not, make the surface as smooth and compact as possible by other means, and the weather will do the rest. These walks are hard, clear, durable, and withal cheap.

As a farm represents money, the farmer who improves it improves his financial condition. The more valuable he makes it the more his capital stock is increased, the larger will be his returns, and when he dies the larger will be the patrimony he leaves for his family. Fix up the old home, then. Clean out the fence corners. Destroy the noxious weeds. Grub out the hazel and sassafras. Burn out the stumps. Clean off the logs and stones. Make a paradise on earth of your farm, for are you not to live on it while you remain on earth, and will not your family live on it when you lie in yonder graveyard? Plant out good orchards so that your family may enjoy the good fruit that you had the foresight and energy to provide for them. Leave a good record behind you.

RADISHES may be grown in a very few days by the following method: Let some good radish seed soak in water for twenty-four hours, then put in a bag and expose it to the sun. In the course of the day germination will commence. The seed must be sown in a well-manured hot-bed, and watered from time to time with lukewarm water. By this treatment the radishes will in a very short time acquire a sufficient bulk and be good to eat. If it be required to get good radishes in winter during the severe cold, an old cask should be sawed in two and one-half of it filled with good earth. The radish seed beginning to shoot as before must be then sown in, the other half of the barrel put on top of the full one, and the whole of the apparatus carried down into the cellar. For watering, lukewarm water should be used as before. In the course of five or six days the radishes will be fit to eat.—New England Farmer.

The Destruction of Game Food.

So long as America continued in the occupation of the aborigines, the order of nature was apparently but little disturbed. The buffalo and deer, the wild fowl and turkeys, furnished abundant food to the savages without serious encroachment upon the fertility of nature. In savage life there appears to be no wanton or unnecessary destruction of the natural means of support. It was reserved for the civilized white man to carry on a wanton war against the bounty of nature, and kill and destroy, without thought or study of those imperative laws under which nature holds in trust the food supply of man. From the first settlement of the country, the process of eradicating and annihilating the useful animals, birds, and fishes natural to the country has been carried on with an energy and success but too characteristic of the Saxon race. Large tracts of land have been entirely depopulated of their animals and useful birds. The buffalo on his native plains has become an object of rare curiosity. Deer are limited to the remoter mountain ranges or extensive tracts of barren woods. The wild fowl, which swarmed in New England during the first settlement of the country, and for a long time afterward, have almost disappeared. The last wild turkey was killed in Massachusetts nearly half a century ago. There is probably no sportsman living who has killed a grouse on Martha's Vineyard, the last refuge in the northeast of that most valuable bird. Plover still migrate, though in diminished numbers, from their breeding-places in the far north to their winter homes in the south, but they carefully avoid the northeastern coasts. No one in this generation has seen a wild swan alighting on the waters of Massachusetts. They once abounded there. Even the wild geese find no resting-place here, but are expelled as if they were tramps and vagabonds.—International Review.

TO PREVENT DROWNING.

A Clergyman's Wonderful Invention to Save Life in the Water.

(From the Sheffield (Eng.) Telegraph.)

A Wesleyan minister—the Rev. W. Cowell Brown—has patented an invention which appears to be a simple and practical means of lessening the number of deaths by drowning. A chemical preparation is inserted in a portion of the coat, waistcoat or dress. It does not add to the weight or in any way alter the appearance of the garment. The preparation is inserted between the lining and the cloth; in the case of a coat it is placed on each side of the breast and up the back. The moment a man falls in the water the coat inflates, and he cannot keep his head under the waves. The invention was practically tested at the swimming bath of the Sheffield Bath Company. First, two small pieces of linen, with part of the preparation inserted between the folds, were thrown into the water. The linen instantly inflated so as to form a miniature cushion, and floated about the bath. An attendant of the company then put on a coat with the preparation inserted in it. He first went under a shower bath, where he was thoroughly drenched, to show that inflation would not take place under the ordinary circumstances of a shower. Under the shower bath the coat did not alter its proportions in any way whatever. The attendant then took a "header" into the water. He reappeared at the surface almost immediately and the coat promptly inflated. Entering a part of the bath deep enough to take him up to the eyes he could not touch bottom at all and the water scarcely reached his chin. By a struggle he dived partly beneath the surface, but came up again instantly. Divesting himself of the garment, it floated about the bath until it was taken out. The inventor then attached a piece of lead weighing three pounds to his appliance, which presents the appearance of a short sleeve, or lining, and threw it into the water. The sleeve, on touching the water, instantly expanded, like a small bolster, and floated about the bath well out of the water, sustaining the lead weight till both were fished out. The experiments were as interesting as they were successful. The inventor states that his apparatus, which would simply form an additional lining inserted in a portion of the garment, would sustain a person in the water as long as he could possibly endure the exposure. For forty-five or fifty hours it would be effective for its purpose. In the event of a person losing consciousness the lining in the back would form a kind of bed, and that in the breast a pair of pillows, against which his head would rest.

He Obeyed Orders.

It was just this side of Detroit that a man entered the car, took a seat, and devoted his attention to the morning paper. After a time the conductor came along and touched him gently on the shoulder, but without effect. Again he tapped the passenger on the arm, but there was no response, and the official had to speak.

"Ticket, sir?"

The traveler looked wearily up from his paper, and said:

"I haven't any ticket."

"Money, then," said the conductor.

"I haven't any money."

"You must get off at the next station."

"I will," was the submissive response, and the conductor passed along. The train stopped at the next station, started again, and was bowling along at thirty miles an hour, when the conductor again came through, and saw the traveler on the same seat as before.

"I told you to get out of this car," he said, somewhat sternly.

"You did."

"Why didn't you do it?"

"I did."

"And then got on again?"

"I did."

"Now look here, my friend, I don't want any more of this nonsense. Get out of the car at the next station, and stay out. You hear me!"

Again the train stopped and again it started, and again, but, in another car, the conductor found the self-same traveler, as calm as a June morning.

"You here again?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Didn't I tell you to get off this train and stay off?"

"No."

"I did."

"No; you told me to get out of that car and stay out, and I did."

"Now, my friend," said the conductor, "listen to me, and mind you do just what I tell you. At the next station get off this train and stay off. Do just what I tell you, or you will get into trouble."

"Agreed," said the traveler, and the conductor passed on.

Again the train stopped and started, and again the traveler turned up on the train. The conductor was just reaching for the bell-rope to stop the train and eject him summarily, when the traveler stayed his hand.

"I obeyed orders," he said. "You told me to do just as you ordered. I got out, and stayed out until you said 'All aboard!' Then I got aboard, for I didn't want to get into trouble, you know."

The conductor gave him his hand, and it was noticed that, later in the day, they ate together in the dining-car, and ate heartily.—Boston Transcript.

College Students as Waiters.

Some of the college students who have tried on the waiters' aprons at the summer hotels this season have learned that it is not so much fun to be a waiter as to board at a high-toned hotel and pay $4 per day. Several Bates Collegians have retired after twenty-four or thirty-six hours of life in the kitchen. One of them said: "Why, they don't know a fellow down there, when they see him out of the dining hall. They don't allow a waiter to go in and out any other way than by the back door. They won't have him around the front part of the house at all. I always have been accustomed to go in the front door when I wished, and couldn't stand it. I staid there one day, and then packed my trunk and left, without saying a word to anyone. I'd rather teach school at $25 a month, and board around." Another collegian, who struck in at one of Maine's most popular seaside hotels, gave a highly-colored account of his being quartered with hostlers, porters, and bootblacks, and said they fed him on last season's biscuit. He remained just twelve hours, and went home to the paternal hay-field. Other students stand it bravely.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

PASSING SMILES.

CABINET-MAKERS in Illinois are kept busy making furniture once owned and used by Abraham Lincoln.

THE jewel of a servant girl is the one who hangs all her mistress' embroidered underwear on that portion of the line which is most conspicuous to the neighbors' eyes.

AUGUSTUS DABBLE (artist)—"Don't you think it is about time I exhibited something?" Severe critic (examining Dabble's latest production)—"Yes, a little talent, for instance."

A MAN may object to wearing buttonhole bouquets, but it's astonishing with what fortitude he goes through the ordeal of having one pinned on, if the donner happens to be young and pretty.

WHEN a Cheyenne young man wants to amuse the girls at a picnic, he exhibits his skill in expectorating at a mark eight feet away, and if he hits it four times out of five they think he's "dreadful cute."

"OUR time is indeed brief," said Thompson, "but before we go out of office I'll get a United States ship up the Wabash River, or burst that infernal river to everlasting smash in the attempt."—Punch.

WHEN they can't make an Albany baby quit crying, in any other way, they let him crawl under a bed and make him believe they think he's lost, and are looking for him, and he will keep quiet for two hours.

SOME people are affected differently by different efforts from what other people who are not affected similarly by an agency that is like unto the same kind of an agent bearing proportion to the first cause.—Cincinnati Gazette. Liar!—Peck's Sun.

A TENNESSEE suitor wrote to his sweetheart as follows: "Your father kicked me last night, and forbade me the house. If I whipped him would it lessen your love for me?" She replied that it would not, and the parent was soundly thrashed.

A YOUNG lady, not accustomed to waltzing, at the earnest solicitation of a friend made the attempt in this city recently. When the music ceased another friend approached and said, gayly: "Well, I see you got through all right." "Yes," was the reply, "but it was a tight squeeze."

ONE Scotchman, afflicted with a very bad cough, meeting another Scotchman, profanely remarked to him that "this —— cough would certainly carry him off some day like a rocket." "Aye, aye," observed No. 2; "it's my opinion, however, if you dinna mend your manners, ye'll tak' a contrary direction!"

SARAH BERNHARDT is said to be of a revengeful disposition, and, as she is about to visit this country, we want it distinctly understood that we never said she was thirty-six. We don't believe she is over eighteen, and she certainly doesn't look as if she was just sixteen. This last statement we will make affidavit to.—Boston Post.

AN AWFUL CRAMMER.—Proprietor of boarding house (taking stout gent aside,) "You'll excuse me, Mr. Sharpset, but your appetite is so large that I shall be compelled to charge you a shilling extra. It can't be done at two shillings!" Diner—"No! For heaven's sake don't do that! I can eat two shillings' worth easy; but if I have to do three—I really—'afraid I should—but I'll try!"—London Punch.

A CERTAIN young Boston bachelor, wealthy but modest, was taking his bath one morning when his telephone called him. He sprang from the tub and was horrified to hear that a lady, wife of a distinguished New York Democratic banker, was at the other end of the wire, a mile away. It would never do for him to carry on a conversation with a lady in his present condition. "Excuse me. A thousand pardons!" he cried, aghast. He donned his pressing gown and then repaired to the telephone and conversed without fear of molestation.

"WELL, my man," said a philanthropist to a hardened-looking chap confined in the New Orleans parish prison, "what are you in for?" "In for thirty days, I reckon," said the prisoner sullenly. "No, not that. What offense did you commit?" "Didn't commit anything. The Judge committed me." "Well, you must have been accused of some crime?" "Oh, yes; I was accused of trying to get on the police." "Nonsense. Trying to get on the police is no crime. I have myself recommended many worthy men for positions on the police force, and have helped to get them on." "It is a fact. That is all I was sent here for. You see, there were two of us, and we both tried to get on the same policeman. We had him down, but some of the other peelers thought we were crowding the man too hard, and—" "That will do sir," said the philanthropist, "I understand your case perfectly. Here are a few tracts for the improvement of your mind, which just now appears to be a little warped."

Crisp and Satisfactory.

A correspondent wishes to know if we can recall the rest of that beautiful poem commencing:

A farmer sat in his easy chair,
Smoking his pipe of clay,
While his hale old wife with busy care
Was clearing the dinner away;
A sweet little girl with fine blue eyes
On her grandfather's knee was catching flies.

It gives us a good deal of pleasure to say we cannot. In the first place, no man ever found an easy-chair on a farm. Secondly, no farmer ever left any dinner for his hale old wife to clear away. Thirdly, there never was a child that could catch flies—we used to try it. When you come to analyze one of these sentimental poems it never fails to turn out a mass of prettily-worded lies.—Chicago Tribune.

ALL SORTS.

To bring up a child in the way it should go, lead the way.

A $50 PAINTED fan raises no more wind than the 5-cent palm-leaf.

THE hay crop of New Jersey amounts to 500,000 tons annually.

A TUNNEL under the St. Lawrence river at Montreal is to be undertaken.

THE Duke of Wellington's plate has been estimated to be worth $1,500,000.

BY means of an improved telephone the Adelaide (Australia) postoffice chimes have been distinctly heard as far away as Port Augusta, 240 miles distant.

A MAN near Reading has killed a copperhead snake that was thirty-seven inches long, and had eighty-eight young ones, all alive, from four to six inches long.

A SUMMARY of the national receipts and expenditures of Japan for a period of eight years has been issued, from which it appears that a surplus of $46,000,000 resulted.

SEVERAL Cuban ladies have formed a little colony of their own at Saratoga. They dress magnificently and display the finest of diamonds in dazzling profusion.

IN former years Austria used to import a considerable quantity of sugar and export little. Bounties having stimulated home production, there are now no imports of sugar, but large exports.

GEORGE POMEROY, of Madison, N. J., who has just left an estate estimated at $15,000,000, gave to Mrs. Luther Clapp, of Gloversville, his sister, $2,000. He must have been a heartless old curmudgeon.

A WOMAN in Marshall county, Kan., has had bad luck with husbands. Two of them were hanged by vigilance committees, a third was sent to the penitentiary, and a fourth committed suicide. Nothing has yet happened to the fifth.

A SAN FRANCISCO manufacturer has received from the interior of the State an order for a pair of boots which, if the numbers in use ran so high, would be eighteens in size. They will be seventeen and three-quarters inches in length and five inches in width. The man who is to wear them is small, except as to hands and feet.

THE enormous public indebtedness of Canada excites grave apprehension in the minds of thoughtful men. The system of decentralization has added largely to the cost of government, and this has been greatly felt in the recent period of depression. It is believed that the value of real estate in Montreal has declined more than $10,000,000 in the past ten years.

A BOY was caught by the leg while bathing at Altoona, Pa., and drawn under the water. The assailant, he says, was a black animal with immense jaws. He struggled frantically and got away, but not until his leg had been so mangled that amputation was necessary. It is thought that an alligator escaped from a car in a railroad accident near the place last spring.

A PARLIAMENTARY return, just issued, of cases of eviction which have come under the knowledge of the constabulary in Ireland shows that during 1877 406 families were evicted; in 1878, 834 families; and in 1879 there were 1,098. During the current year, up to June 20, there have been 1,060 families evicted. The aim of Mr. Forster's bill is to prevent further extermination. Hence landlords' opposition.

A Person of Importance.

The hotel clerk's chief idiosyncracy is his unruffled self-conceit. Whether he summons the bell-boy or porter, writes out the dinner bill of fare, adds up your bill, chews the end of a toothpick or surveys himself in the glass, he assumes the air of one who evidently thinks no small things of himself. The hotel clerk first, and after him the deluge. Some of these gentlemen are so very far gone in self-esteem that they effect a sham asceticism, being reserved in their manner, answering in monosyllables, and speaking in subdued cadences, as if a scarcity of speech and modulation of the voice were the indications of true dignity. The best passport to the good graces of these individuals is dress.

Should the guest arrive travel-stained and in modest attire, the clerk sniffs him at once and relegates him to a room at the top of the house. On the other hand, should the guest appear in a vest of many colors, and have the appearance of being some tailor's walking advertisement, shining with ointment and smelling of bandoline, he is received with a smirk and a smile, and assigned to one of the best rooms in the house. Hotel clerks may change their climate, but it is not often they change their manners, and to all guests they bear themselves with a supercilious air, as if the obligations were all on their side and they regarded the traveling public as interlopers, trying to make their way on cheek, and upon whom a very strict watch should be kept.

Weather Wisdom.

"Gem'len," said the President, "I fink dat de inhabitants of dis kentry am payin' altogether too much 'tenshun to dis wedder queshun. Dar's a groan o' dispair when it's hot an' a growl o' dis pleshur when it's cold. If it rains somebody raises a row, an' if it's dry somebody else has a bone to pick wid de powers above. Ebery red-headed, one-hoss white man—ebery broken-down old two-cent darky, has got de ideah in his head dat de Lawd am boun' to send him long jist de sort o' wedder he wants, no matter 'bout de rest of de kentry. De ole man Rubottom, libin' up dar by my cabin, has got about fifteen cents worf o' garden truck back of his house, an' when it's hot or cold or wet or dry, he am so agitated dat he forgits dat any odder soul in dis kentry has sot out an onion or planted a 'tater. Mo' dan fifty y'ars ago I come to de conclusion dat I mus' put up wid sich wedder as de Lawd gim me, no matter whedder it brought on chilblains or rheumatics, an' it was a great burden off my mind. I take it jist as it comes, keepin' de ole umbrella in good repair, an' I doan' know nuffin' 'bout almanacks an' I doan' want to."—Lime-Kiln Club Proceedings, Detroit Free Press.

A QUANTITY of sea shells were bored up from a well twenty-seven feet deep, in Sumter county, S. C.

Tale of a Texas Tarantula.

C. D. Parham, messenger for the Southern Express, is responsible for the following story: While at Texarkana in the discharge of his duties, he purchased some peaches of a boy who was vending them on the depot platform. They were unusually large and fine, being of the clingstone order, and Mr. Parham devoured the first one with great relish. The second one was even more toothsome, and, after removing all the meat that was possible from the stone, he placed the latter in his mouth while he turned to attend to some duty. Several times he felt something tickle the roof of his mouth, and, when at leisure, again he examined the stone carefully. Protruding from one edge of it he discovered something that resembled a spider's leg, and, when touched with a knife, it gave evidence of life. Mr. Parham called to his side George Stanton, an Iron Mountain engineer, and J. B. Martin, agent for the Southern Express at Texarkana. The stone was carefully opened with a knife, and there, snugly imbedded, was a centipede. It was in a torpid state at first, but the sunlight brought it into full vigor in a very few seconds, and it began to look around for a place of more safety. It was placed under a hat until a bottle could be procured. It was forced into its new glass prison and securely corked with the intention of bringing it to St. Louis. On the trip the bottle was accidentally broken, and Mr. Parham was compelled, much against his will, to kill his dangerous prisoner. It measured a fraction less than two inches in length.—St. Louis Republican.

Physically Fine, but Vile Morally.

The Afghans are Mohammedans of the faith Sunni; they reverence the first four Khalifs, and have no particular veneration for the prophet (Khalif) Ali. They are split up into tribes, clans and families, each under its own head, commander, or Sirdar; and they are often at war or feud, and often engaged in conspiracies, rebellions and assassinations. They are tall, burly, active men, with olive complexions, dark Jewish features, black eyes and long black hair hanging down in curls. Their countenances are calm, and they affect a frankness and bonhomie; they will sometimes indulge in rude jocularity; but their expression is savage, and evil passions are often raging in their hearts like hidden fires. They are bloodthirsty, deceitful and depraved, ready to sell their country, their honor, and their very souls for lucre. They care for nothing but fighting and loot, delighting in the din of arms, the turmoil of battle, and the plunder of the killed and wounded; without any relish for home life or domestic ties; without a sting of remorse or a sense of shame. There are no people on earth having a finer physique or viler morals. They are the relics of a nation who have played out their parts in history. In bygone ages they conquered Hindoostan on the one side and Persia on the other; but the conquering instinct has died away amid the incessant discord of family feuds and domestic broils.—Wheeler's "Short History of India."

Large Crops of Corn Fodder.

Several correspondents in a late issue of the Country Gentleman seem to have given from actual weight on small patches of their fields, pretty reliable estimates of the amounts which were grown per acre, previous to the curing of the corn. They state these weights at 28, 35, 36, and 45 tons, respectively, per acre. The latter was sowed in drills three feet apart, using three bushels of seed per acre, and the season was perfect in every respect for its growth. They do not state what the weather was when the corn was cut, or the time of day it was done. To be fair in such a trial, the weather ought to be sunny two days before, and the stalks not cut till all the morning dew was dried off. Dr. Bailey, of Massachusetts, asserts, that he can grow 75 tons of cornstalks per acre. If he does, we think he will have to resort to the Cuzco sort, of Peru, which grows there 25 feet high or more, and is three inchs in diameter, or so, at the butt. This would be about as eatable and digestible as cord wood, unless his method of ensilage can transform it to palatable fodder. He is now cultivating a mammoth ensilage corn, of which he thinks highly. We hope when his crop of this has been gathered and fed to his animals, he will give not only its yield per acre, but the value of its fodder to his stock in comparison with the smaller sweet corn.—Rural New Yorker.

Didn't Affiliate.

A colored man was busily engaged in sawing some wood for a Galveston gentleman. The "man and brother" had a large Masonic breast-pin on his shirt bosom.

"Do you colored Masons and white Masons affiliate?"

"Don't fillyate wuff a cuss."

"What's the matter?"

"Dunno, boss, but I'se tried it. Dar is a barkeeper in dis town what toted dis heah berry same emblem. I was in distress; hadn't had a dram all dat morning. I cum in and gave de distress signal."

"Did he respond?"

"He didn't respond right. He made a motion at de doah wid one hand and reached under de bar. I made the sign once moah, and he fotched me between de shoulders wid de bung-starter, jess as I was gettin' out de doah."

SALT water is being distributed through Brooklyn daily, in three-gallon cans, for sponge baths for invalids and children. The water is pumped at night at the end of the iron pier, and is sold for 4 cents a gallon.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlets in English and German.
Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

A MAN at Kansas City could not win the girl whom he wanted, and therefore married her sister. The wife soon learned the truth, and advised that the mistake be rectified. The sister assented, and a divorce, followed by a marriage ceremony, has apparently settled matters to the satisfaction of all parties.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
The Physicians in charge of this old and well known institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.
INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE Producing such maladies as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Orchitis, all Urinary Troubles and Syphilitic or Mercurial affections of the throat, skin or bones, treated with success, on scientific principles, without using Mercury or other Poisonous Medicines.
YOUNG MEN and those of middle age who are suffering from the effects of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, the result of self-abuse in youth or excess in matured years, are permanently cured. This disease produces some of the following effects—emissions, blotches, dizziness, nervousness, dimness of sight, cough, indigestion, constipation, despondency, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, defective memory, sexual exhaustion, impotency or loss of manly vigor, which unfits the victim for business or marriage.
PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is FREE and invited. List of questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application.
(Persons suffering from Rupture should send their address, and learn something to their advantage. It is not a truss.)
Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.
READ! SAVE THOUSANDS

IN USE SINCE 1855
MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS
A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.
An experience of twenty-five years proves it to be the greatest Antidote to Malaria and all other Ague influences known to the world.
The only absolute cure for all Affections of the Kidneys, in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, all Disorders of the Bowels, and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs, it is equally efficacious, while as a remedy for complaints peculiar to the female sex it has no equal.
NOT A BEVERAGE
But an old reliable Household Remedy, thoroughly adapted to assist nature.
It supplies tone to the stomach, reinvigorates the digestive organs, stimulates the secretions, and promoting a regular action of the bowels, enables every organ of the body to perform its allotted work regularly and without interruption.
Its highest commendations come from those who have used it longest and know it best.
Nowhere so popular as in Lancaster, Pa., where it has been in use for more than a quarter of a century.
Highly commended as a General Tonic and Appetizer. Sold by Druggists everywhere.
THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH
A large sized paper descriptive of disease, its origin and cure, will be mailed free to any address on application to
THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO.
Lancaster, Pa.
☞ We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. It never fails, is easy to take, and no after-physic is required. Price, 25 cents.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound . We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 25c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains,

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind.

A Fearful Picture.

But now the struggle is over, I can survey the field and measure the losses. I had a position high and holy. This demon tore from around me the robes of my sacred office and sent me forth churchless and godless, a very hissing and by-word among men. Afterward I had business large and lucrative, and my voice in all large courts was heard pleading for justice, mercy and right. But the dust gathered on my unopened books, and no foot-fall crossed the threshold of my drunkard's office. I had moneys ample for all necessities, but they took wings to feed the coffers of the devil that possessed me. I had a home adorned with all that wealth and exquisite taste could suggest. This devil crossed its threshold and the light faded from its chambers; the fire went out on the holiest of altars, and, leading me through its portals, despair walked forth with her, and sorrow and anguish lingered within. I had children, beautiful as a dream of morning, and they had so entwined themselves around their father's heart that no matter where it might wander, ever it came back to them on the bright wings of a father's undying love. My destroyer took their hands in his and led them away. I had a wife whose charms of mind and person were such that to see her was to remember, and to know her was to love. For thirteen years we walked the rugged path of life together, rejoicing in its sunshine, and sorrowing in its shade. The infernal monster couldn't spare me even this. I had a mother who for long, long years had not left her chair, a victim of suffering and disease, and her choicest delight was in the reflection that the lessons which she had taught at her knee had taken root in the heart of her youngest born, and that he was useful to his fellows and an honor to her who bore him. But the thunderbolt reached even there, and there it did its most cruel work. Other days may cure all but this. Ah, me! never a word of reproach from her lips; only a tender caress; only a shadow of a great and unspoken grief gathering over her dear old face; only a trembling hand laid more lovingly on my head; only a closer clinging to the cross; only a piteous appeal to heaven if her cup at last were not full. And while her boy raved in his wild delirum two thousand miles away, the pitying angels pushed the golden gates ajar, and the mother of the drunkard entered into rest.

And thus I stand, a clergyman without a cure; a barrister without a brief or business; a father without a child; a son without a parent; a husband without a wife; a man without a hope—all swallowed up in the maelstrom of drink.

◆

"Take Your Religion."

"Good-by," said Uncle John to Will, as he entered the cars for a few weeks' vacation in the country. "Good-by, Will. Got everything along?"

"Yes uncle, I think I have. There is my trunk, and satchel, and gun, and umbrella, and—"

"There, boy, I don't mean those traps. They're not everything."

"What then?"

"Oh, something more important."

"I guess I've got money enough to take me there."

"Not that, my child."

"Well, I believe you think I've forgotten my bible, but I haven't."

"I hope you haven't forgotten that; though, to be sure, it is an easy matter to take it along, just for the respectability of the thing. Mind you use it. But how about your religion? Many professed christians take a vacation from their religion, just as they do from their business. Don't do that my boy. Take your religion with you. You need it. Others need it too."

"Thank you, uncle."

"Take your religion along," sounded in the young lad's ears as he took a seat in the cars. It made him feel more courteous to his fellow-travelers. It helped him speak a word to them.

"Take your religion along," echoed a still small voice, as he met old friends in the country village, and it helped him to say a word for Christ. It sounded from the church bell, and prompted him to speak for his Master in the little village prayer meeting, where a new voice was a great encouragement. It urged him to take the place of an absent teacher, and tell a class of lads how pleasant he found it serving Jesus.

Months have passed since then, but many still thankfully remember the young man who took his religion along. —Baptist Weekly.

◆

A young lady, not accustomed to waltzing, at the earnest solicitation of a friend made the attempt in this city recently. When the music ceased another friend approached and said gayly: "Well, I see you got through all right." "Yes," was the reply, "but it was a tight squeeze."

◆

A young man from Texas married a girl in North Carolina, and then proposed to leave her while he worked his way back to his Texas home, in the hope of there earning money enough to send for her. She said, however, that she would rather accompany him afoot. They therefore made the journey of 1,600 miles as tramps, but their good appearance gained for them considerable help along the way, and for the last fifty miles they rode triumphantly in a carriage, provided by an enthusiastic admirer of their pluck.

Attractions in Scribner.

"Mr. Pickwick and Nicholas Nickleby" is the attractive title of the opening illustrated paper in Scribner's for September; the actual scenes of two of Dickens' most popular works being here portrayed. But the most important pictorial feature of the number is the beginning of the life of "Jean Francois Millet—Peasant and Painter," illustrated with fac-simile reproductions of Millet's works, by the process so much in use in "L'Art" and other French art periodicals, that of Yves and Barret. This biography should not only be interesting to artists and art students, but to all who are interested in the struggles of genius. Those who have read the work in advance declare it to be as interesting as a novel. Another point in the September number is a paper by E. B. Washburne, the late minister to France, on "Thomas Paine and the French Revolution," containing, as it does, several documents hitherto unpublished, and adding a most interesting chapter to the history of the French Revolution. The paper in the July Scribner, "Does Vivisection Pay?" meets with a temperate and readable reply entitled "The Value of Vivisection," by Dr. H. C. Wood, clinical professor of diseases of the nervous system in the university of Pennsylvania. It is not too much to say that the true story "Eighteen Years Alone" is one of the most pathetic and remarkable tales of actual experience ever printed—it is of a savage woman who leaped into the sea to save her child, and was thus doomed to a solitary island-life for eighteen years. "Over the Balkans with Gourko" is by Lieutenant Francis V. Green, the United States army officer sent out by the government to observe the operations of the Russian army during the late war. If the above-named article is particularly interesting to soldiers, sailors will find special interest in "The Loss of the Oneida," an account with illustrations, of the collision between the U. S. steamship Oneida and the British merchant vessel Bombay, in the Bay of Yokohama, in 1870. The true statement of the case, it seems, has not heretofore appeared in a popular form, and this description, by Lieutenant T. A. Lyons, U. S. N., who was in the vicinity when the accident happened, throws new light on the matter, and shows where the blame should rest. Taking into consideration the numerous collisions which have occurred in our own waters lately, this paper might almost be called "timely." "When Woods are Green" is a seasonable paper, illustrated by Mr. and Mrs. R. Swain Gifford. That Catholic institution—"Georgetown College, D. C."—is described by D. A. Casserly, and illustrated by Sheppard, Blum, Vanderhoof and others. A. R. Macdonough contributes an essay (with portrait) on "Richard Henry Stoddard," and Lina Redwood Fairfax, a story, "Hickett's Hollow." "Peter the Great" and "The Grandissimes" are continued; the former, which is fully illustrated, describes the German suburb of Moscow during Peter's time, its influence on Russian manners and customs, and Peter's friends and life therein. The poetry of the number is by Emma Lazarus, Dora Reade Goodale, Mary L. Ritter, E. D. R. Bianciardi and others. In "Topics of the Time," Doctor Holland discusses "The Presidential Campaign" and "Dandyism;" "Letters to Young Mothers" are continued in "Home and Society;" "Culture and Progress" contains reviews of White's "Everyday English," Howells' "Undiscovered Country" and other new books; "The World's Work" contains an account (with diagram) of the invention of a new hot-air pumping engine, and the first complete description that has yet been published of Prof. Mayer's Topophone; "Bric-a-brac" continues "Uncle Esek's Wisdom," and contains "The Ballade of the Candidate," etc.

◆

Senator Wallace's Advice.

[From his Speech at Reading, Pa.]

"Pennsylvania is to be one of the great battle-grounds of this campaign, and we propose to make a start right here in this Gibraltar of the democracy. In this great canvass we propose to organize at the very bottom. We intend to start with the young men, in the earliest school of politics, and work assiduously during the month of August, so that every voter will be ready by the first day of September. The campaign has been most auspiciously begun. The organization thus far is of the most satisfactory character. It should spur every democrat on to active work. Don't put too much confidence in brass bands. Count noses! Bring out every vote. Commence at the bottom and work up, so that when election day comes our great vote can be silently and effectively dropped into the ballot-box, and our great soldier-statesman candidate, General Hancock, elected."

◆

Nothing is more common than to hear old people utter querulous complaints about their deafness; but those who do so are not perhaps aware that this infirmity is the result of an express and wise arrangement of Providence in constructing the human body. The gradual loss of hearing is effected for the best purpose, it being intended to give ease and quietude to the decline of life, when any noise or sounds from without but discomposes the enfeebled mind, and prevents peaceful meditation. Indeed, the gradual withdrawal of all the senses and the decay of the frame in old age have been wisely ordered in order to wean the human mind from the concerns and pleasures of the world, and to induce a longing for a perfect state of existence.

"Say, ma, why is death like a dog's tail? Bet you can't guess? Now, put down your rollin'-pin and think." "I've heard that, Tom, it's old—very old. Death is like a dog's tail because it is bound to a-cur; but if you don't just go out and hoopalow at that wood pile, so I can bake, you won't have any pie to-morrer."

◆

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O. 24-tf

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:20 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:20; Angola, 5:20; Fremont, 5:48; Reading 6:15; Bankers, 7:10; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 7:45, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west Jackson, 9:20 a. m, there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p. m;

12:31 P. M—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:38; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detriot, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek etc.

5:39 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:10; summit, 6:21; Pleasant Lake, 6:31; Angola, 6:55; Fremont, 7:14; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:50 p. m; Buffalo, 8:30 a. m.; and New York, 10:00 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:31 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:40; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit; 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:30; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 22 P. M.—From Jackson 12:30 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:10, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:23; Reading, 1:45; Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:00; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:30; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:05 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26 P. M—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 30; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10:30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3:50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 39 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 35 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	6 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 29 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 06 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 31 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 10 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.	WEST.
Mail....12:31 p. m.	Mail....3:20 p. m.
Accom'n....12:57 a. m.	Accom'n....6:57 a. m.
Local F't....4:15 p. m.	Local F't....6:58 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler....1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport, 6:48 p. m

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St Louis or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R.

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880.

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 7, Pacific Ex	No. 3, Night Ex.	No. 5, Limit'd ex
Pittsburgh lv.	11 45pm	9 10 am	1 50pm	7 30pm
Rochester	[illegible]	10 00	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 45pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	3 05	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 50am	6 25pm	9 55pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	2 41
Lima	10 40	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	6 25
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, At. Ex	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 10am	3 30pm	5 15pm	9 40pm
Plymouth	11 48		9 45	2 00am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 10am	6 55
Lima	4 20	9 40	3 35	8 55
Forest	5 23		5 12	10 08
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	7 15am	[illegible]	7 25am	12 05pm
Mansfield	7 45	12 25am	7 55	12 35
Orrville	9 38	2 30	9 56	2 26
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 22
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	3 25pm	7 30

Nos 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

—o—

CHICAGO DIVISION.

—o—

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv.	5 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 03		10 55
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 03	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 35	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 25am	6 23	4 05
Fostoria	1 08	7 25	4 58
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 15	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 40 Mail.	No 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 20am
Tiffin	10 03	7 55	12 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 35	11 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 32	1 08
Defiance	12 30pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 33	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 25
Avilla		12 20	3 38
Albion		12 45	3 55
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 30	4 20
Milford Junction		1 20	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar		6 10	8 20

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J MARTIN, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

PINCHIN & BOYLE, Attorneys.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county,—In the DeKalb circuit court. October term, 1880.

George B. Tompson is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce, by Elisabeth A. Tompson, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 8th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences October, 1880.

Witness the clerk of said court, this 10th day of August 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
W. H. DILLS, Deputy.
3-3w.

[illegible] LANDERS.

[illegible] Candidate for Governor [illegible] Mr. Porter and [illegible] Him Alive.

Speech of Hon. Franklin Landers, [illegible] at Seymour, Ind., August [illegible], 1880.

[illegible]

[illegible] bondage for the soldier [illegible] whenever an election is [illegible] whenever soldiers have asked that their services shall be recognized, as they did in asking Congress that their bounties should be equalized, that measure received its death-blow at the hands of a Republican President. No measure in the interest of the bondholder was ever vetoed by him. The law to increase his own salary [illegible] was readily signed by him. I voted when in Congress in favor of equalizing these bounties, and I did it on principle. A Government like ours needs no standing army. If laws are made fair and honorable they can be enforced without an army. We only need an army when we are invaded, or when there is a great insurrection at home. We rely on the fields and shops for an army, and the Government ought to [illegible] so called into service in such a way that there never will be any doubt about our getting an army at the first tap of the drum. The men who went into the army first were paid the least. I want that equalized, as an encouragement to volunteering hereafter. We can afford to be liberal with our soldiers, as we have them only when needed. They are not quartered on the country in time of peace, as [illegible] not to be.

But to return to the bonded debt the Republican leaders claim so much credit for. They were not satisfied with the legislation of [illegible]. The bonds and the law under which they were issued were still against them, as no provision was made for coin payment; hence the necessity for the law of 1870, which provided for the issue of new bonds payable in coin. The law provided they were to be payable in coin of the standard value that then existed, which was 25 8-10 grains of gold, or 412½ grains of silver to the dollar. The old bonds have been taken up, and this new bond, with its coin provision, has been substituted and the question has been settled by the Republican party. That party has placed it entirely out of the reach of legislation now, and all that we can do is to denounce it for its management of the public debt in the interest of the bondholder and against the laborer and producer, thus saddling upon the country for generations to come the burden of an enormous debt and forcing its payment in par money, when we got money therefor not worth [illegible] cents on the dollar. Had the volume of currency of the country remained at what it was when the war closed [illegible] would have been worse than during the war, and the taxes remained as they were, we could have had the debt paid off long before this, and been back to as sound a basis as we are now, with no debt upon us. The currency has been contracted, the money has been brought to par and the debt has been left hanging over us like a millstone around our necks. We can not escape legislation that has been enacted; we must accept legislation as it is, and deal with existing facts.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

Under existing circumstances our platform is right: that we are in favor of money—gold, silver and paper—issued by the Government. The third resolution of our platform declares that the coin and paper money of the country should be of universal value and readily convertible, and should have as great purchasing power as the money of other first-class commercial countries of the world, and that paper money, like the coin, should be furnished by the United States, and should not be in excess of such quantity as will be, and remain always at par with coin.

Mr. Schurz, in his late speech in Indianapolis, draws a contrast between the Republican candidate for Governor in this State and myself. He says I am one of the leaders of the wildest inflation movements, and one of the most vociferous advocates of the repeal of the Resumption act. I have stated to you, gentlemen, the purpose for which I wished to use the inflated currency given us by the Republican party. I wished to pay off the debt, as I stated, in money of the kind received. That purpose has been put out of our power, as I have also stated, by the Republican party. The debt being funded in those new bonds, no man has since heard me advocate inflation. The currency had been inflated by the Republican party, and I opposed contraction till we paid off the debt. The resumption law provided for contraction and I opposed it, as he says, for I was opposed to retiring the greenbacks as provided by that law. "Where," Mr. Schurz asks, "would our prosperity be, had he and his followers prevailed?" I answer: We have prevailed; our policy is to-day the policy of the Government and the country. We have defeated the execution of the resumption law, as provided by the law itself. The destruction of the greenbacks as a currency was the object of the law, and that being defeated, we have accomplished our purpose. We have the greenbacks with us, notwithstanding the resumption law; and we have them because of Democratic legislation—because of a law passed by the Democratic party for the reissue of greenbacks, instead of destroying them when redeemed under the resumption law. This Democratic law is entitled, "An act to forbid the further retirement of United States legal tender notes;" but in a suit now pending in the United States Courts, managed by Republican leaders, they expect to get a decision declaring it unconstitutional.

The resolution in our platform has ever been my doctrine for a sound business policy, and we are now looking to nothing else but business. We have been brought to that by contraction, and the debt placed out of our reach for payment, as I have stated, in any other way than with coin. Gold, silver and paper issued by the Government is the policy of the Democratic party to-day, and has ever been my policy, except when we had been carried so far from it by the Republican party, and such a business debt piled upon us, twice as large as it would have been had it not been for a deviation from that policy. The policy of the Republican party was ever different from mine and from the Democratic party. Its policy was to go back to resumption upon a gold basis and have nothing but gold money.

The Republican party having demonetized silver in 1873 and passed a resumption law for the retirement of greenbacks in 1875, we Democrats said, as has been charged by Mr. Porter and other Republican speakers, that to go back to a gold basis, retiring greenbacks with no silver in circulation, was nothing but bankruptcy to the entire country, or, at least, of that portion of it in debt. And while the policy of the Republican party remained as the policy of the country there never was such a record of bankruptcy known in the history of the world. Every man of feeling was shocked; the business of the country was paralyzed, and the money that we had was kept close in reserve, except when used to buy property at still lower rates. It mattered not how low the rate was, it was expected to be less.

I can give you some idea of the bankruptcy and loss and ruin done by this Republican policy, by reference to R. G. Dunn & Co.'s commercial reports, that firm being one of the principal commercial agencies in the country. They give a list of failures in the United States from 1873 to 1877, in the aggregate, as follows: Number of failures, 40,776; total liabilities, $1,[illegible]. And these immense figures are but a fraction of the sum total of disasters that have fallen upon the country. The recorded liabilities of those who went down beneath the current of Republican financiering while underlying the course of contraction, furnishes [illegible] data upon which to predicate a satisfactory estimate of other losses, the sum total of which, by those most familiar with the subject, of shrinkage in the value of real estate is estimated at [illegible] per cent., or $[illegible] [illegible] by throwing at least [illegible] working people out of employment [illegible] [illegible] the Republican party upon the [illegible] policy of our country was checked by Democratic legislation. If we had looked exclusively to party considerations we would not have checked it; but looking only to the interests of the country at large, we felt bound, as Democrats, to check up a policy that was ruining the country, although Republican demagogues may claim the credit for it. Mr. Schurz, even, claims that the prosperity of the country is due to Republican policy. I have shown what the Republican policy has led to. Mr. Porter in his loud [illegible] similar claims, and I presume the smaller lights in his party will follow, and set up the same claims.

[illegible] OF GREENBACKS, INSTEAD OF THEIR [illegible] ANNIHILATION.

Mr. Porter says the Republican party brought the old greenback to par. [illegible] that was what you wanted. I admit that was what you wanted, but had it not been for the Democratic legislation which I have referred to, in passing a law for the reissue of greenbacks, where would you have been? You would have had the ashes the greenbacks would have made instead of the greenbacks themselves. The Republican law provided for their redemption and their retirement, but the Democratic law provided for their reissue, thus stopping the depreciation of property. Republicans will no doubt say but few greenbacks have been offered for redemption, and therefore but few of them would have went to ashes under their law. But suppose the policy of the Republican party had been carried out, [illegible]

[illegible] quality, being then no longer [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Congress. [illegible]

It will be a source of gratification to me to be able to [illegible] this measure of Congress [illegible] [illegible]

I want you to bear in mind his language, "looking steadily toward coming resumption." This is his object. He further [illegible] "There is [illegible] which I deem of importance in this connection, and which I commend to your earnest consideration. A repeal of so much of the legal tender act as makes these notes receivable for debts contracted after a date to be fixed in the act itself, say not later than the 1st of January, 1877." [illegible] this would have, where he says, "We would have quoted gold [illegible] real values, not fictitious ones, and gold would no longer be at a premium, but currency at a discount." He and all the effect of this measure. It was to put greenbacks down. That was the idea. And when put down he then provided a scheme for bringing them into the Treasury. His second proposition is, that the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized to redeem, say not to exceed $2,000,000 monthly of legal tender, by issuing in their stead a long bond bearing interest at the rate of 3.65 per cent. per annum, of the denominations ranging from $50 to $1,000 each.

I ask you as intelligent Democrats and Republicans, does this look like bringing the greenback to par, or does it look like bringing them to ashes, as I stated?

And John Sherman, in his late report as Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, recommended the taking from the greenback its legal tender quality. But Mr. Hayes' recommendations were the most remarkable. He says, in his late message, that he wants more stability in the paper money of the country, and in order to have it he recommends the taking from greenbacks their legal tender quality. His conclusions as to the effect of taking from them their legal tender quality were the most remarkable. General Grant insisted that that would depreciate them, but all other men [illegible] upon the subject, [illegible] [illegible] he does not understand this he is lacking in financial judgment, and if he does understand it we must say that he is chargeable with playing the demagogue.

It is very remarkable, gentlemen, that, in view of all these facts I have brought to your attention, my competitor, Mr. Porter, before an intelligent audience in my own city, boldly asserted that the Republican party had brought the old greenback up to par. I was shocked and astounded at the declaration. As much so as he professed to be at the ignorance of his crowd on that occasion, to hear such a declaration from the representative of a party that had made such a persistent war upon that money.

HOW BUSINESS WAS REVIVED.

I am willing the managers of the Republican party should have all the credit they are entitled to. They have managed the public debt, and I have shown how they managed it, as I have shown how we checked their destruction of values and their paralyzation of the business interests of the country when we said that no more greenbacks should be destroyed. Intelligent men possessed of capital said to themselves, "We will have no less value in commodities; we will commence buying again." The manufacturer said, "I will kindle my fires, for the destruction of values brought about by the Republican party is now checked. There will be no less value. I can go to work, for we are now at the bottom." And it was that act of the Democratic party which revived confidence in the minds of moneyed men and restored the industries of the country. We claim nothing but what we are justly entitled to, and we are resolved in this canvass to put to flight any demagogues we meet who sets up this false claim, that to the Republican party we are indebted for the return of prosperity to the country. While Republican policy was being carried out there was nothing but destruction and paralyzation until we checked it.

THE SILVER DOLLAR [illegible].

Another claim as remarkable and as astounding is the claim set up by Mr. Porter that the Republican party brought the silver dollar from its hiding place. The silver dollar was the unit of value from the days of Washington until 1873. It never had been changed except as to the amount of pure silver in the dollar. It contained 371¼ grains of pure silver when first coined by Alexander Hamilton; it contains that now. As I have stated to you, the legislation of the Republican party has always been in the interest of the few at the expense of the many, and its leaders were not satisfied in changing our bonded debt into a coin debt, but they set up a hue and cry that we must have but one standard of value. They insisted that the double standard of value established by Washington and Hamilton was false and should not be maintained. I admit there have been many things said about this standard. I am of opinion that gold and silver have a more uniform value than any other commodity; but the claim that they have a fixed value I never did indorse since I have examined the question. The cause of their steady value consists principally in the fact of their being adopted as money by the various Governments of the world and the standard fixed by law for them. The fact of their being thus adopted as money by the various Governments of the world is the strongest reason why we should adopt them as money, because our exports are very large.

I once tried to expose this false theory of there being a fixed value for gold and silver. When I first brought forward the measure in Washington for the remonetization of the silver dollar it was violently opposed; and I found Dr. Linderman, the Director of the Mint, was giving my measure all the opposition that could possibly be brought to bear against it. I studied out a proposition, which as I thought, would expose the fallacy of the theory of fixed value. They were claiming that silver was an article that fluctuated very much, although they once claimed it had as fixed a value as gold. After the Republican party demonetized it in 1873, it declined in value, and the argument was then lost. On one occasion I met the Doctor and said to him that I was very much annoyed with a question connected with coinage, and would be much pleased if he could explain it to me. He said he would do so with the greatest pleasure. I said, suppose you had two tape lines precisely of the same length made to measure space, and had nothing to compare your lines with but themselves; they would pass into use, but after some years you bring them together and find they differed in length. Now, said I, how would you determine which had changed its length, or whether one had contracted or the other expanded? After hanging his head for some minutes he replied: "By God, sir, there is no answer for such a question; there is no way to determine that." Well, sir, said I, I want to know why it is you and others claim that gold has this fixed value, and that silver has depreciated. The Government the same year made 25 8-10 grains of gold, or 412½ grains of silver to be a dollar. The market value at that time was the same. Now they have got apart, and there is a difference probably of fifteen cents. Why, sir, do you say that silver has depreciated and gold has retained its original value? Is there not as much argument to show that gold has increased in value as there is that silver has depreciated? He said: "That is a question we settle by comparing gold with the real estate of the country." Said I, sir, that will not do, for the real estate of this country has depreciated far more than you say silver has, and the value of silver to real estate bears much nearer the same proportion than does gold to real estate. And, said I, every acre of land in the West can be bought with the silver dollar at the same price that now the owners could have sold it for gold dollars.

The demonetizing of the silver dollar in 1873 was still further to aid the bondholders of the country in securing to themselves a dollar of more value. By demonetizing silver the bonds were afterward payable in gold, as there was no other coin. Seeing this great outrage upon the rights of the people, and seeing that it was the only thing we could do to aid them in the payment of their debts—the Republican party having declared by law that it should be a coin debt—I brought forward a measure to remonetize the standard silver dollar. Leading Republicans fought that measure with more bitterness than any that ever was brought before Congress within my recollection. The bondholders' advocates on the floor of Congress were exceedingly bitter, to show their bitterness, and also to show that this claim of the Republican party, and of Mr. Porter for the Republican party, that it brought the silver dollar from its hiding place, is without a particle of foundation, and right in the face of facts that every [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that the Republican party is and has been the violent enemy of the silver dollar.

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Garfield [illegible] the ability to [illegible] [illegible] enormous [illegible] one-fifth of the [illegible] [illegible]

THE [illegible] AND FLOW OF GOLD ACCOUNTED FOR.

Mr. Garfield said that gold would [illegible] [illegible] understand the financial rule I have just referred to.

REPUBLICAN EFFORTS TO PREVENT THE [illegible] OF SILVER.

The Republicans now claim that they have brought the silver dollar from its [illegible]. I have tried to show you how they [illegible] in its making [illegible], and I now [illegible] you how they are endeavoring to [illegible] it. [illegible] The Republican party, [illegible], is wedded to the doctrine of [illegible] nothing as money but gold. Ever since the remonetization of silver by the Democratic party in 1878 the leaders of the Republican party have sought in every way [illegible] prejudice the people against it. [illegible] Sherman, when in the Senate of the United States, opposed the remonetization [illegible] as bitterly as did Mr. Garfield, and since Mr. Sherman has been Secretary of the Treasury, he has allowed no opportunity to pass by which he could impress upon the minds of the people the impracticability of using silver as money. He combined with the bankers of New York against it. He had his Assistant Treasurer made a member of the Clearing House Board of New York City, and then, according to a resolution passed by the Board (the Assistant Treasurer of the United States being a member thereof), silver was not to be offered in payment for any balance due any member of that Board, and was not to be received in bank only to be paid back in kind. All this tending to [illegible] the business community in handling it.

A business man wants to deposit in bank what he receives, and to check out of bank as his necessities require. It was well known to Mr. Sherman that an arrangement of that kind was calculated to bring about great opposition to the use of silver as money; and this arrangement [illegible] the prejudice among business men [illegible] against silver. He has constantly refused to hand out silver in the payment of [illegible] bonded debt, while the silver he has on hand [illegible] tender for every dollar that we owe. [illegible] to issue new bonds bearing interest and sell them to buy gold, without [illegible] paying out the silver he has on hand. If he would pay it out on the bonded debt of the country we would save the issuing of new bonds just to the amount of silver that he has on hand, and the interest upon the bonds also.

Mr. Sherman has never [illegible] to bring the law into contempt; he even [illegible] the law passing silver a legal tender. Although he is our hired man, and his only business is to carry out the laws passed by Congress, instead of carrying them out he sets the law at defiance. Not being aware, apparently, of the intelligence of the people he was talking to, he has on many occasions asserted that he could not pay out the silver. If any business man had an agent employed, as we have Mr. Sherman, to pay out money in bank on indebtedness, which was a legal tender, for every debt he owed, were the agent to keep the [illegible]

[illegible]

A REPUBLICAN [illegible].

[illegible]

INDIANA AFFAIRS—DEMOCRATIC ECONOMY.

[illegible]

[illegible] in the one item of printing [illegible].

While the expenses of the Benevolent Institutions of the State have been largely diminished [illegible], it should be remembered that the inmates have been increased in number, especially in the Insane Hospital, and also that the cost of living has been greater the past year than during [illegible]. [illegible] and in the [illegible] Asylum the Superintendent's report shows that the [illegible] for food was $11,[illegible] or 15 per cent. more than for the year [illegible] for the same number of inmates; and yet the present Democratic officials have shown such extraordinary economy in the general expenses of that institution as to save the tax-payers $[illegible] in the year 1879, as compared with the annual expenditures under Republican officials. No one will say that the Benevolent Institutions of the State have not been as well managed and cared for as they were under Republican rule; and no one will deny but that the State printing has been as well done. Indeed, no department of the State Government has suffered in the least in efficiency.

Peace and order have generally prevailed. It is true we have had some labor troubles, but they have been settled by wise counsels, and the laws have been enforced by the civil authorities. Not a gun has been fired during the eight years of Democratic executive control. No property has been destroyed by violence; and the persons and property of our citizens have been protected. I am convinced that in this enlightened age, with prudent and wise management, our laws can be enforced by civil authority without resort to arms. And I think a great deal of this desirable state of affairs is due to our wise system of common schools. Intelligence and reason have taken the place of violence and passion. During the labor strike in 1877, many persons thought it [illegible] to arms. [illegible] and believing as I did that our trouble, which was then great, could be settled by compromise and argument, [illegible] to the office of the Mayor of Indianapolis and moved the appointment of a Citizens' Committee of Conference. My motion was kindly entertained by the Mayor, a good and efficient Committee was appointed, and my highest expectations were fully realized by the work of that Committee. Pittsburg, Pa., and [illegible], O., by pursuing a different policy, and hastily resorting to arms to settle [illegible] of the same trouble, lost many valuable lives and millions of property. This is a lesson that should be remembered by all, and all should profit by it. Should I be your Governor, there will not be a gun fired in Indiana for the purpose of preserving law and order at home until every means shall have been exhausted to secure law and order through the civil authorities, and no man would be intrusted by me in command of any force, should it be necessary to call out the militia, with power to decide the question [illegible] to the inability of the civil authorities [illegible]

CONCLUSION.

And, now, my fellow-citizens, [illegible]

[illegible] the passage of a law [illegible] the [illegible] of greenbacks, checked the decline in values, which had destroyed confidence in any kind of investments; and, by the remonetization of the silver dollar, gave the manufacturer and the capitalist an assurance that there would be more money, encouraged investments, restored confidence in future values and relieved the country of the paralyzation and bankruptcy which had been brought on by Republican policy.

Bill English's Religion.

Our Republican neighbors have made grave charges against Hon. William H. English upon almost every conceivable subject. They charge that he pays his debts, which has not been very fashionable in business circles for some years under Republican rule, and exacts payment when he can honestly. They even say that he is not religious.

Professor Wayland, of Trigg County, a graduate of Hanover College, in Indiana, was asked what were Mr. English's religious convictions. He replied that he did not know. All he knew about his religion was gathered from a little incident that occurred in college life. An old man who lived in the vicinity of the college had incurred the displeasure of a number of the students, and one night, to the number of about thirty, they assembled and proceeded to the man's cabin to wreak their vengeance upon him. Wayland, hearing of the affair, repaired to the scene to see what he might see. It appears that Bill English had also heard of the affair; for when Wayland got there he saw English standing in the doorway in front of the old man in his shirt-sleeves and the sleeves rolled up, exposing his brawny arms. In front of him were about thirty of his fellow-students, whom he defied with oaths and expletives more expressive than polite, and dared them to cross the threshold of the cabin. The Professor said that was all he knew of Mr. English's religious views.

Republican Opinions of Mr. English.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

It has not been a year since the Republican papers of Indiana were speaking of Hon. Wm. H. English as one of the strongest men in the State. The Terre Haute Courier (Rep.) said:

"We warn our Republican friends now, that if the Democratic party puts Mr. English in the position to make a leader of him in this State next year, there are breakers ahead for us. He is one of the strongest men in that party."

The Indianapolis Journal, the recognized organ of the Republican party in Indiana, said only a few months ago:

"There is not in the Democratic party in Indiana a better politician, a better organizer or a man possessing more of the qualities of real statesmanship than William H. English."

It will be observed that since this was said there has been no change in the proprietorship of the Journal. Now in view of these declarations and the fact that Mr. English has never been defeated before the people, the present gabble of these same Republican papers about Mr. English being a weak man and unpopular, is contemptible in the extreme. They know it is not true and say it only for effect abroad. Hancock and English will receive the cordial support of all the Democrats in Indiana, and many others who have not heretofore belonged to that party.

HENDRICKS.

Governor Hendricks' Brilliant Opening of the Campaign at Marion, August 12th, 1880.

Garfield's Fine Italian Hand in the Returning Board Rascality of 1876.

A Clear Presentment of the Issues of the Day—A Short, Crisp Speech.

Governor Hendricks' Speech.

As Governor of the State, I recommended to the Legislature that the Constitution should be so amended that the general elections should take place in November instead of October. We would then vote on the same day with most of the other States, and avoid the double election in the Presidential year. For many reasons I thought the change desirable. I also recommended that a residence for a short and fixed period in the voting Precinct should be made a qualification of the right to vote. The voters would then come to know each other when meeting on election day. The Legislature passed upon these propositions, but amended them by annexing conditions requiring registration laws to be passed and maintained. I think that was unfortunate. It should be left to the discretion of the Legislature what policy of [illegible] the voters shall be made. A very large body of the people opposed the amendments on that account. The vote upon them was had last April. A plurality was for the amendments, but not a majority of the voters of the State—not a majority of the voters who voted at that election. Upon a case that came up from Floyd County the Supreme Court decided that the amendments had not been adopted. Upon the question of law the Democratic Judges were equally divided, and the decision was pronounced by Judge Biddle, who is not a Democrat, but independent in politics. The Republican leaders have hoped and labored to make political capital out of that decision. In that they will fail. The Court is the proper tribunal, under our Constitution and laws, for the settlement of such questions. In the cause of good and stable government the people will sustain the Court. I think the Court was right. Do you not think so? Are you willing that our Constitution and form of State Government shall be changed by less than half the people? The Legislature, that represents all the people, can not put over us any law except by a vote of a majority of all the members elected. Of the 100 members of the House, full fifty-one, and of the fifty Senators, full twenty-six must vote [illegible]

[illegible]

English and The Foreign-Born.

[illegible]

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 2, 1880. Number 36.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Ralston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 28 1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15 tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gonsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

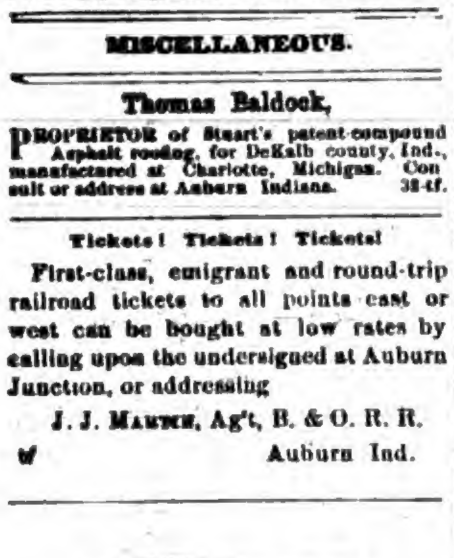
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn Indiana. 38-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MAHNKE, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
Auburn Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Political Notes.

The dear people are paying to the men who counted Hayes in as the first living embodiment of a fraudulent president, the sum of $233,030. Such are the rewards of perjury and theft under a republican administration. The "visiting statesman" to Louisiana, alone draw the sum of $87,600.

Hon. Frank Landers, democratic candidate for governor, is now making the canvass of southern Indiana. His meetings everywhere are immense outpourings of the people. Reports from that section of the state say that his tour is a perfect ovation, and is adding thousands of votes to the ticket.

The democrats of Indiana have an admirable ticket for state officers in the field. It is emphatically a young man's ticket, a business man's ticket, a working man's ticket, and an honest man's ticket as well. It will sweep the state by more than 10,000 majority, and don't you forget it.—[Valparaiso Mess.

Hon W. G. Colerick closed his first canvass of the county, Friday evening last. His speeches have given great satisfaction to those who heard him. It is altogether safe to predict that a large majority of the people of Whitley will desire to retain him as their representative in congress.—[Col City Post.

The republicans of Elkhart county are in bad luck. Their chairman (Ira W. Nash) has mysteriously disappeared, and one of their editors (Wm. Starr) has fallen from grace and is about to retire to the shades of the Michigan pineries.—[Lig. Ban.

Her name was "Grace," then, and he is the fallen Starr. The chairman's case, we hope, occasions no (g)nashing of teeth.

The report published in the Chicago Times last week that the judges of the Indiana supreme court were about to reconsider their decision on the validity of the constitutional amendments is a lie made out of whole cloth, and on a par with the swash relating to Indiana politics, usually appearing in that journal. The majority of the judges standing that decision because it is the law, and the people will sustain them. —[Col. City Post.

General W. S. Rosecrans, on whose staff General Garfield served, writing to the democratic national committee, from San Francisco, says: "We organized a Hancock legion some ten weeks since. I think that we shall organize at least 5,000 strong in the city, and probably 10,000 strong in the state. The nominations pleased the workingmen, who are uniting with the democrats, and in fact it appears more like a popular uprising than anything known on this coast."

Hon. Samuel S. Shutt, democratic nominee for joint representative from Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb counties, made a splendid record in the last legislature, and is probably the strongest selection that could have been made. He was chairman of the committee on claims in the house, and as such earned the highest encomiums of all parties for his care in guarding the interests of the people. He should, and no doubt will be, sent back to the legislature.—[Goshen Dem.

How is This for R. S.?

When Judge Robert S. Taylor was a candidate for congress in the year 1874, he issued a circular which contains this significant paragraph:

"We have heard many promises of reform in this direction. But they have resulted in little, and I have no hope of any progress in this respect through the instrumentality of existing parties. The trouble is, that the party that is in the minority cannot effect the reform, and the party that is in the majority will not, because it is a surrender of one of the means by which its power is to be retained."

Does Judge Taylor stand by this position to-day? If he does, how can he refuse to advocate a change of the national administration?—[Ligonier Ban.

That circular was issued as a sort of campaign manifesto in 1874, when the republican party was in power in both branches of congress. As a republican he wanted it understood that he was cutting loose from party shackles. The circular above referred to and his speeches appear in strange contrast with his utterances now. The political parties dividing the country now are the same as then Was he honest then? If so, he is dishonest now.—[Col. City Post.

Chicago Takes the Cake.

[Indianapolis News.]

As a Bng, Chicago takes the cake. The Knights Templar consider themselves lucky that they got away with all their clothes on—empty as every pocket was.

Prologue to Forney's Life of General Hancock.

I make no apology for this book. It has already had the double advertisement of praise from friends and abuse from foes, and if that does not secure it a fair clientage, no explanation of mine will. My chief motive is to help once more to put an American into the presidency who will honestly lead the American people away from quarrels into comradeship and confidence. Such a man is the soldier Hancock.

Believe me, I have no other aspiration in writing his life. I do not want any of his offices. Never having been a candidate before any administration of the general government for place, I have simply, in order to maintain my independence, resigned the most valuable positions voluntarily tendered to me by other presidents. I can safely make this statement. As for money, I have never learned to steal it from the government, though I dearly love to earn a fair living by honest industry in my own chosen profession.

The little organs and placemen of a party just ushered into being one year after I myself co-operated with it to put down human slavery, are now as much disturbed by my refusal to follow that party into the very sectionalism I have always despised, and are as angry as so many disturbed mice in a rich cheese, because they say that I have left the ring republicans. As I never belonged to these rings, I cannot therefore be accused of leaving them. In one thing I am consistent at least, that is in sincere love of my country, and, I will join any side or drop any side, if by so doing I can get the American people to be good to each other, to be grateful to those who have served them, to put the best men into office, to help our youth to be honest and manly, and have pluck enough to drive out of positions of trust a set of mercenaries as utterly disqualified for public responsibility as any men that ever lived. I think it is high time for our country to realize that the parrot politicians, running up and down the land, shrieking republicanism and abusing honest people because they will not bow to such temporary fantoccini,* are mere impostors, and no more genuine in their professions than a set of play-actors trying to show that they are real kings, when they are simply paste, spangles and feathers.

General Hancock seems to me to be the constable to clear out these intruders. At all events let us give the bold soldier a full chance. I believe in him thoroughly, and have always believed in him. I knew him as a boy and man, in peace and war, and his father's associates in Montgomery county were the friends of my youth. I do not condemn him because he was born in my state, for I have a Scotchman's love of home; and I would not shoot him because he continues a democrat, when I know that without democrats we should have been beaten in the civil war.

This is the general scope of the volume now committed to the public. It has been quick work; and when I recollect that one distinguished American has been toiling nearly twenty years on the life of Voltaire, that another started on the biography of General Grant twelve years ago, and has only printed one volume, and that another ten years ago advertised an elaborate memoir of Thaddeus Stevens, and has not yet issued a single page of it, if this campaign life of Winfield S. Hancock, the democratic candidate for president of the United States, is a little defective, I cannot be blamed. Very sincerely,

*Puppet. JOHN W. FORNEY.

THE Toledo Journal, a greenback-republican paper, in commenting on Gen. Hancock's Sherman letter, makes the following very pointed remarks:

"The parties who forced the publication of General Hancock's letter to General Sherman have great reason to regret the results of their folly. The letter, which is pre-eminently patriotic, indicates an acquaintance with constitutional law rare even among the judiciary. It indicates also the high regard General Sherman had for General Hancock's opinion, at that critical period in the history of the government. If our civil officers had been true to constitutional methods, as outlined by General Hancock, the country would have been spared the disgrace of a partisan electoral commission, with all the scandals it has entailed. The more such letters the republicans unearth the better it will be for General Hancock."

The republicans are so sick over this letter that it is quite probable they will not unearth any more.

The Wily Washburne.

[St. Louis Republican.]

Mr. E. B. Washburne having been suggested as a candidate for congress in the third Illinois district, the fact is developed that he is in the presidential field for 1884, and his nearest friends fear that if he should run for congress and be defeated his future prospects might be injured thereby.

The Truth Concerning Hampton.

In another column we print a letter from the editor of the Washington Post to the editor of the Springfield Republican, which ought to be read by every voter who has seen or heard it asserted that Senator Wade Hampton uttered disloyal sentiments in his recent political speech at Staunton, Va. It contains a direct and positive statement from the senator himself in regard to his Staunton speech which should forever silence the malicious tongues of partisanship which have made haste to circulate a lie and have gloated over it as a sweet morsel. "I had, last night," writes Mr. Hutchins, "a private letter from Senator Hampton of an almost despairing tone. 'What good,' he asks, 'to deny this story to instantly be confronted with a more desperate fabrication? Is my whole record since the close of the war and all my efforts for a better understanding between the sections—a broad and down-reaching for the union—to be frittered away by the forgeries of an obscure newspaper writer? I neither used the words attributed to me nor anything approaching them in meaning. I am perplexed and almost discouraged.'"

Is there any evasion in that? Is there any attempt at subterfuge or deceit? Is it not, evidently, in every line and word, the manly, truthful utterance of an honest man?

We have never believed for a moment that Senator Hampton had a disloyal word. We have heard him express his opinions upon the war, its results and the conditions, feelings and needs of the southern people, both upon the floor of the senate and in private conversation, many times, and we are entirely sure that there is no more loyal man in all the United States than Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina. Of all the political leaders, north or south, democratic or republican, not one has labored more honestly, more earnestly or more persistently for a complete restoration of the union than Senator Hampton. His word is above question, and no man who knows him personally would dream of questioning it. His character stands as high as that of any man in Massachusetts. He says: "I neither used the words attributed to me nor anything approaching them in meaning." Will any honest man, in view of his character, his record and this positive declaration, longer believe the absurd and malicious falsehoods which have been printed? Will republican newspapers which so eagerly printed them be just and manly enough to print as conspicuously Senator Hampton's denial?

The following paragraph from the Troy (New York) Times, of February 23, 1873—a conspicuous and influential republican newspaper of the Empire state—is eloquent, lively, pointed, and particularly pertinent at this time:

"If congress keeps on to the end as it has been going on for two or three days, its termination will be welcomed by hosts of people throughout the country as a benediction. Last night, when only 157 members were present in the house, Mr. Garfield called up the Civil Appropriation bill, and recommended an amendment concerning the salaries of public officers. Ellis H. Roberts vainly endeavored to postpone action. But the mercenary fellows on the floor, who had doubtless gone there to steal $5,000 each from the people of the United States, mocked him with derision. He, however, made the pious Credit-Mobilier Garfield wriggle and squirm like a skinned eel. Eighty-one men voted under the convenient cover of tellers, so that there is no tell-tale yea and nay list, to pay themselves $5,000 for a term of service that will close next week. For a man who stands upon trial for past misdemeanors, and begs the merciful indulgence of the people, the conduct of Garfield in the business is strangely imprudent in a personal sense."

Notice to the Ungodly.

[Boston Post.]

The Independent gives notice to all those ungodly people who intend to witness the performance of Sarah Bernhardt that if they make any attempt "to secure for this vowed and unabashed courtesan a social success," it will protest. Those ungodly people, of whom it is to be feared there are several, will therefore take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Calling for Funds.

[Hartford Times.]

The southern radicals are calling lustily upon the northern republicans for "funds" to be used in the election campaign. They feel that the government offices and drippings are about to pass away from the grasp of the carpet-baggers, and they mean to get as much plunder as possible from the national committee.

Puzzled Nast.

[N. Y. Express, Aug. 17, 1880.]

The most puzzled cartoonist, just at present, is Mr. Thomas Nast, of the Journal of Civilization. It is a notable fact that since the opening of the campaign he has not once drawn the figures of the republican nominees. Perhaps he remembers that cartoon of 1873, when he portrayed Garfield as a Credit Mobilier thief, and cannot see exactly how to get around the record. But what to do with General Hancock is the thing that puzzles him. He is naturally a man of strong convictions and honest in his impulses; so it is that he cannot be brought to libel, and does not know how to caricature the hero for whose record he has so profound a respect. In every cartoon he has drawn, General Hancock appears as the embodiment of all that is grand and noble. The current number of Harper's Weekly, however, contains a cartoon that must serve as a double-edged sword. Hancock is represented as standing in a graveyard filled with numberless graves, and on the headstone of one is inscribed "Rebels killed in front of General Hancock's line (2d corps)." The descriptive lines at the bottom of the cartoon are: "The Silent (Democratic) Majority; General Hancock will miss them on election day." It would be somewhat difficult to discover whether this in intended to drive away democratic, or to secure republican votes for the general. It is a good deal like a case of paying your money and taking your choice.

The Two Candidates.

[New York Herald, Aug. 16, 1880.]

Which would make the abler president is a question on which it would not be safe to express an opinion. The presumption that a man trained in civil trusts would make a more useful head of the government is not always confirmed by trial. The administration of Jackson was more successful than that of John Quincy Adams, although there was no comparison between the civil training of the two. Mr. Lincoln is ranked with our most illustrious presidents, and the "old public functionary" who was his predecessor sunk in discredit. Mr. Hayes is a fairly good president, although the figure he made in congress was greatly inferior to that of Mr. Garfield. All three of the presidents whom the republican party has heretofore elected—Lincoln, Grant and Hayes—were men who have made no mark in civil stations, and yet the republican party boasts of having administered the government with signal success in great and trying emergencies. Garfield has more vigorous parliamentary talents than any of them; but if parliamentary talents were a sure passport to success, Buchanan and the two Adamses should have been great instead of weak presidents.

Our most popular presidents have never been great orators. The four who were most esteemed and idolized were Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, none of them orators, although Lincoln could speak on occasion with homely impressiveness.

Would They Take Garfield Now?

[New York Sun, Aug. 19, 1880.]

If the republican convention was to meet now to select a candidate for president, would it be possible for them to take James A. Garfield?

If the republican national convention could now select their candidate, they would never take Garfield; and there are thousands upon thousands of republican voters who will also never take Garfield, but will either not vote at all, or vote for Hancock.

The Growth of the South.

[Baltimore Gazette.]

If the south, during the next ten years, continues to grow as rapidly as it has for the past four or five, our republican friends will have to drop the ancient myth that southerners are incapable of progress.

Young Men for Hancock.

[Nashville (Tenn.) Banner.]

It is estimated that about two million young men will cast their first vote this fall, and that of this number fully three-fourths will be cast for General Hancock.

The republicans have been carrying Indiana entirely to their own satisfaction up to last Saturday. On that day the democrats opened the campaign, and they at once showed that they mean to begin their carrying of the state and to keep it up until the close of the voting on election day. Over 200 democratic meetings were held in the state on Saturday and the most distinguished leaders of the party spoke in each county. There has been no doubt at any time of the entire ability of the democracy to carry Indiana, or of their intention to do so.

[Last week.]

St Joe.

—M. E. Olds has a bran new clerk.

—Items scarce. Why don't some one raise a racket?

—Crowds of people at the grove meeting Sunday last.

—Doc. McClaren entertained two of his sisters over Sunday.

—J. D. Leighty and lady returned from Chicago Saturday morning.

—The paymaster on the B. & O. made the boys happy last Saturday.

—H. H. H. was suddenly taken sick Friday last. Disease: Too big a dose of lawyer fees. So says Kingtown Rambler.

—J. W. Dills is one of the happiest men alive; the reason is that he had more wheat than he expected. Jack has succeeded in raising nearly 40 bushels to the acre on 84 acres, and he feels so excited over his crop that he is making an effort to organize a company of farmers who will pledge themselves never to raise less then 30 bushels of wheat to the acre. If one of the company fails to raise the required amount, they are bound to immediately sell out to some one else of the company and leave the country forever.

Old Proverbs with New Readings.

[New York Sun.]

Adapted to the views of the republican national committee.

Dishonesty is the best policy.

Money makes the machine go!

It is never too late to spend.

Put none but Ohio men on guard.

Jewell loveth a cheerful giver.

The kisses of a Conkling are deceitful.

It's a wise candidate that knows his own heart.

Washington is payed with good intentions.

A bribe in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Garfield is not so black as he is painted.

It's a fool that won't swear both ways.

A loan by any other name would smell just as sweet.

Never look a campaign contribution in the mouth.

Jove laughs at Garfield's vows.

Little voters have long ears.

Of the dead (Oakes Ames) nothing save what is bad.

The nation was made for Ohio and not Ohio for the nation.

Like as a Jewell in a swine's snout, so is a handsome chairman without discretion.

Lincolnites for Hancock.

[Evansville Courier.]

Most of the great men who stood around Lincoln in the dark hours of the war are now supporting Hancock. Hon. David S. Gooding, who was a Lincoln elector for the state at large in 1864, is now an elector for the state at large for Hancock.

It is as true now as it has been in all past times, that one of the most vital principles of government is the art of being honest, and the man who cannot thoroughly stand this test deserves to be hurled with indignant scorn into obscurity when he mounts such a pinnacle as the presidential candidate of one of the leading parties of the country necessarily occupies.—Forney's Progress.

Act From Principle.

How few persons there are whose lives are governed entirely by principle, rather than inclination. Even those of us who may be endeavoring to live for high purposes come far short of our aspirations; alas! how very far short. How often we find ourselves debating with our convictions of right and duty, questioning if it might not be as well for us to yield to inclination just for the time, promising our disturbed consciences that we will make up for the present indulgence by more rigorous self-denial and strict attention to duty. Vain, fallacious reasoning of a weak nature! We can never make up for one neglected opportunity unimproved, one misspent hour, one wrong, selfish act. Once past, the opportunity unimproved, the hour wasted, the act committed, it is beyond our reach, our recall, except in thoughts of regret. We may atone for it, but we can never change the past. Alas! how painfully are we aware of this fact. Then should we all endeavor the more earnestly to make our lives ornaments of principle, for we all know that, after all, the path of duty, though sometimes rugged, is not without sweet pleasure; and let us never follow our inclinations if they would lead us away from right. Then shall we be permitted, at the last, to look back upon our lives with satisfaction, feeling that we have "done what we could," and that our Father regards us with smiles of approval.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1880

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

DR. TANNER has had all of his teeth pulled. During his long fast his gums shrunk away and the teeth became loosened to such an extent that he could not masticate food. Hence the artificial set.

ALLIGER, accused of hypothecating $100,000 worth of stolen securities at New York, has been lodged in the Tombs in default of $16,000 bail.

A FIRE at Philadelphia destroyed the flour mill of W. B. Thomas & Co., the hollow-ware foundry of Stuart & Peterson, and the cigar manufactory of Gumpert & Bro. The loss is placed at $200,000; fully insured.... Loeb & Co., exporters and importers of clocks, hardware and silver-plated goods at New York, have failed with liabilities of $400,000.... It is reported that Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague will shortly return to her husband's roof at Canonchet, Narragansett Pier.

THE WEST.

A FARMER named Emmons, living near Neenah, Wis., had a dispute with his father-in-law, Mr. Huxley, about some money matters. The dispute waxed warm; Emmons drew his revolver and fatally shot Huxley, and then shot himself with equal deadly effect.... Advices from Fort Keogh are to the effect that about 1,800 Sioux Indians are on their way thither with the intention of surrendering themselves as prisoners of war. It is designed to disarm them as soon as they arrive. Their arms and ponies will then be sold, and the proceeds will be employed in the purchase of provisions for their temporary support. ...Monroe Robertson was hanged at Greenville, Ohio, on the 20th of August, for the murder of his father-in-law, Ned Comler. Robertson killed a man in Maryland, and another in Kansas. During the war he was connected with a band of guerrillas, and frequently boasted that he killed seven colored men in one day. Before going to execution he accused his 12-year-old child of having sworn his life away.... Mr. J. K. Ercher, a farmer of New Philadelphia, Ohio, died of the effects of a bite inflicted by his insane son.

A HORRIBLE tragedy has been enacted near Madison, Wis. Flames were seen to issue at night from the residence of John Winrick, a farmer living on the line of Dane and Columbia counties. The neighbors rushed to the spot, and were not a little puzzled to observe that none of the occupants were around the burning dwelling. Entering the house, the reason for this was made clear. Mrs. Winrick's dead body was found on the floor riddled with shots, and her husband's body was found in the bed bleeding from ghastly wounds about the throat and head. From all that can be learned about the affair, it appears that Winrick, in a moment of rage, shot his wife, then set fire to his house, that both of them might be consumed in the flames, but, finding the work too slow, he shot himself. The Winricks lived unhappily.... St. Paul has had a disastrous fire. The flames started in the wholesale paper house of Averill, Russell & Carpenter, on Third street, and destroyed that and the adjoining wholesale grocery of P. H. Kelly & Co. The total loss is $650,000, and the insurance $500,000...... Simon Zimmerman, of Chicago, shot and killed his wife. He then reclined by her side, placed the dead woman's arm around his neck, and fired a bullet into his own head, dying instantly. Two children, one 3 and the other 1 year of age, were in the room and witnessed the tragedy, the dreadful import of which they could not comprehend.... Gen. Grant has returned to his Galena home from Colorado, having visited all points of interest in that State..... Washington dispatches announce that both the Northwestern and the Milwaukee and St. Paul railways have successfully closed negotiations with the Sioux for right of way across the reservation between Fort Pierre and the Black Hills. The concession has been ratified by the Interior Department, and some rapid work at track-laying is predicted in the contest as to which line shall first reach the hills.

THE appearance of McVicker's Chicago Theater since its opening for the new season is calling forth deserved words of praise from all the local papers, and it really seems as though that popular manager would distance competition in elegance of auditorium as well as in richness of stage appointments. The past three weeks have been devoted to Eaton's "All the Rage," under the management of J. M. Hill, which remains in all four weeks. After the present run of "All the Rage," Denman Thompson in his great assumption of Joshua Whitcomb will play a four weeks' engagement. His engagement of last season at the same house was the largest monetary success ever known in the history of McVicker's Theater.

FIVE buildings occupied as saloons, concert halls, shooting galleries, restaurants, etc., near the Bay District race-track, San Francisco, have been burned. Loss, $80,000; partly insured.....A young carpenter named Hadet, employed in effecting some repairs on a Terre Haute hotel, dropped his rule into a vault thirty feet deep, and descended to pick it up. When near the bottom he suddenly fell over. His father, who was at work on the same building, went to his rescue, but when he got as far as his son had gone he too fell over. Both died from inhaling foul gas.

SIX MILLION feet of lumber, the property of J. C. Cameron & Co., John G. Meyer, Knapp, and Stout & Co., was destroyed by fire at St. Louis, Mo. The blaze was a formidable one, and taxed the energies of the fire department to the utmost.... Richard O. Adams, the defaulting Postmaster of Deadwood, D. T., who had been convicted and was awaiting sentence, has escaped from the custody of the Marshal.

THE 1,000 Northern Sioux lately surrendered at Fort Keogh are to be sent to Cheyenne River Agency, on the Missouri. It is said that about 1,000 more will come into that post from Sitting Bull's camp. Sitting Bull has now with him but 100 lodges, estimated at 150 fighting men. The buffalo have all gone south of the Missouri river, hence the breaking up of the hostiles.

THE SOUTH.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., and Matamoras, Mexico, have been ravaged by a hurricane. A great amount of property was destroyed and many people injured.

THE recent storm on the lower Texas and Mexican coast was much more destructive than appeared from the first accounts. The Mexican city, Matamoras, looks as if it had been bombarded. Over 300 houses were demolished and the streets are strewn with debris. At Brazos, Point Isabel and Brownsville the results were equally disastrous. The losses at the various points are estimated: Brownsville, $250,000; Matamoras, $500,000; Point Isabel, $200,000; Garrison, $50,000. Several Mexicans are reported to have been drowned.

MEMPHIS dispatches furnish the particulars of a row and a shooting bee between Greenbackers and Democrats in Mississippi: "The Democrats and Greenbackers have tickets in the field. Both parties held ratification meetings at Coffeeville. Each raised a pole. The Democrats had a brass band from Grenada, which, after the pole-raising, marched through the streets. While passing a corner a difficulty occurred between a negro named Spearman, who was in the Democratic procession, and R. V. Pearson, Greenbank candidate for Sheriff, which resulted in Pearson shooting Spearman, killing him instantly. This was the signal for a general melee, and a volley of shots was opened upon Pearson, who was shot three times, from the effect of which he died last night. Two white men, Bailey and Reddin, friends of Pearson, were wounded. For a time a perfect pandemonium reigned."

AT Leesville, Texas, William and John Littlefield, prominent and wealthy stockmen, were killed in a fight, resulting from an old feud, with families named Finney and Martin.

HENRY M. SPOFFORD, of Louisiana who has for four years been prominently before the public as a contestant for the seat of Senator Kellogg, died the other day, at Red Sulphur Springs, Va., aged 48 years.

WASHINGTON.

ON and after the 1st of October the postal charge on newspapers addressed to countries or colonies of the Universal Postal Union shall be the same as on printed matter for the same destination, viz.: 1 cent for each two ounces or each fraction of two ounces.

MR. J. C. MILLER, one of the proprietors of the Washington Daily Critic, was fatally injured by a fall from a third-story window. He was adjusting the sash, when he lost his balance. The fall was forty feet.

THE Coroner's inquiry into the May's Landing (N. J.) railway collision find that the people killed came to their death from a collision which might have been prevented if the engineer and conductor had more carefully observed the rules and regulations of the company governing its running of trains.

GEN. SHERMAN has issued a general order regarding the death of Brig. Gen. Myer. The order says his perseverance, energy and tact, resulting in the establishing of a uniform international system of simultaneous meteorological observations, affords to the world the only full and satisfactory data extant for the study of meteorology. Struck down at the meridian of his usefulness, the country has lost a most distinguished and promising officer, and the Signal Service an able, efficient and zealous chief.

JUDGE KEY retired from the office of Postmaster General Aug. 25, and the Hon. Horace Maynard, late Minister to Turkey, was installed in his place.

PRESIDENT HAYES and family left Washington on the 26th of August, for their long-contemplated visit to the Pacific coast.

GENERAL.

DURING the year ending 30th of June last 457,243 immigrants arrived in this country. In the month of July this year 49,922 came The year of the greatest immigration in the history of the country was 1873, when 459,803 arrived. From present appearances the immigration for this year will largely exceed that number. Germany and Ireland contributed the largest quota on both occasions.

GEN. ALBERT J. MYER, Chief of the Signal Service of the United States, is dead. Gen. Myer, who, through his connection with the weather reports, was known as "Old Probs," was the founder of the system of Government meteorological observations, which under his supervision have come to fill an important place in the daily news, and are consulted by thousands of people, who arrange many business concerns accordingly. Gen. Myer also introduced the study of military signals at West Point.

THE National Convention of Representatives of the State Grand Councils of the Masonic Order has just been held at Detroit. Twenty-one States were represented. It was resolved to organize a General Grand Council, and a constitution was adopted for submission to the State Grand Councils. Upon ratification by nine of these bodies, the General Grand Council will become fully organized.

THE first meeting of the colored editors of newspapers in the United States, for the purpose of organizing a permanent Press Association, has just been held at Louisville, Ky. J. Q. Adams, of the Louisville Bulletin, was elected President.... The deaf mutes of America have just held their first convention at Cincinnati. There was a fair attendance of leading deaf mutes from all parts of the United States and from Canada. The proceedings were all carried on by signs. Robert McGregor, of Cincinnati, was elected President.

THE Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons, recently in session in Detroit, elected the following officers: G. G. H. P., Robert F. Bower, Keokuk, Iowa; D. G. G. H. P., Selford H. Chapman, Boston; G. G. K., Noble D. Lamar, Washington; G. G. S., Henry Bostwick, Covington, Ky.; G. G. Treasurer, Reuben C. Lemmon, Toledo, Ohio; G. G. Secretary, Christopher G. Fox, Buffalo, N. Y.; G. G. C. H., D. P. Day, Buffalo, N. Y.; G. P. S., Joseph P. Homer, New Orleans. In the afternoon the Chapter took an excursion to Lake St. Clair and down the river, and in the evening they had a grand banquet.

THE Knights of Pythias, to the number of several thousand, from all parts of the continent, assembled at St. Louis last week, and indulged in a grand parade and had a good time generally. The Supreme Lodge elected the following officers for the ensuing term of three years: Supreme Chancellor, Judge G. W. Lindsey, Maryland; Supreme Vice Chancellor, John P. Linton, Pennsylvania; Supreme Prelate, the Rev. M. Bryce Thompson, of Tennessee; Supreme Master of the Exchequer, John P. Stumpf, of Indiana; Supreme Keeper of the Records and Seal, Joseph Dowdale, of Ohio; Supreme Master-at-Arms, J. Rufus Smith, of West Virginia; Supreme Inner Guard, G. B. Shaw, of Wisconsin; Supreme Outer Guard, John W. Thompson, of the District of Columbia.

THERE seems but little prospect of the troops overtaking Victoria and his Apaches, although they have punished the Indians severely. The latest news is to the effect that the hostiles have again retreated into Mexico, and that the Mexican troops have again failed to do their part in protecting the Rio Grande and intercepting Victoria.... Eighteen of the gang of Mexican Greasers who killed the American miners Conolly, Yoantan and Arnold, at Michauchan, in March, have been arrested.

POLITICAL.

THE Colorado Democrats have nominated the following ticket: Governor, John S. Hough; Lieutenant Governor, W. S. Stover; Treasurer, Dr. A. Y. Hull; Auditor, Robert G. Bray; Attorney General, Robert G. Stallcup; Superintendent of Schools, J. J. Crook; Secretary of State, C. O. Unfug; Congressman, R. S. Morrison.

THE Democratic State Convention of Delaware nominated Col. E. L. Martin for Congress by acclamation, and the following electoral ticket: Charles J. Love, Dr. Whitely and George Russell.

THE Republican State Convention of Iowa assembled at Des Moines Aug. 25, and nominated the following State ticket: State Auditor, W. V. Lucas; Register of the Land Office, J. K. Powers; Attorney General, Smith McPherson; State Treasurer, E. H. Conger; Secretary of State, J. A. T. Hull.... The Republican State Committee of Texas, at a meeting held in Hearne, nominated E. J. Davis for Governor, A. Siemering for Lieutenant Governor, and put a full State ticket in the field.

THE Democrats of Kansas met in convention at Topeka, Aug. 26, and nominated the following ticket: Governor, E. G. Ross; Lieutenant Governor, Thomas George; Secretary of State, John M. Griffin; Auditor, H. J. G. Neumueller; Treasurer, Theo. Michelthaum; Attorney General, A. L. Hackford; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Miss Sarah A. Brown; Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, A. R. Wagstaff. The following Electoral ticket was chosen: At large, R. Fenton and A. A. Harris; First district, Thomas Moonlight; Second district, J. B. Scraggs; Third district, G. C. Rogers.... The Colorado Republicans held their convention at Leadville, Aug. 26. Gov. Pitkin was renominated for Governor; George W. Robinson was nominated for Lieutenant Governor; Norman H. Weldrum, for Secretary of State; James A. Davis, for Auditor; W. C. Saunders, for Treasurer; L. S. Cornell, for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

FOREIGN.

PREMIER DE FREYCINET, of France, made a speech the other day at a banquet. He said that the result of the recent elections guaranteed the permanency of the republic; denounced the calumniators of the present ministry, declared that the religious orders must not attempt to rise superior to law, and assured his hearers that the foreign relations and domestic affairs of France were highly satisfactory.

A ST. PETERSBURG dispatch says that Asiatic cholera of a severe type has broken out in the Russian camp and town of Saratoff. The mortality has been great, and is increasing.... Advices from Europe say that the powers will make a naval demonstration in Eastern waters, with a view toward the rectification of the Greek frontier, and that Turkey will, finally, be glad to settle the matter amicably.... A London dispatch announces the death of Mrs Charles Kean, formerly Ellen Tree, and at one time a very famous actress.

ACCORDING to the Mark Lane Express' last weekly review of the state of the European crops, the English wheat yield falls below the average. What in some degree compensates for this deficiency is, that the yield of barley, oats and beans is above the average. The wheat is damaged by blight and mildew but the crop is not reported quite so bad as last year. The French harvest is set down as above the average. In Holland and Belgium the yield is excellent. Throughout Germany the wheat yield is fairly good, though considerable rust and mildew is reported. But in Saxony, Pomerania, Brandenburg, and Holstein the rye crop is only about half the average. In Bavaria, Franconia, and Suabia it is magnificent. Accounts from Hungary, Austria, Spain, and Italy uniformly report the wheat harvest good.... The cable brings to us the official declaration to the House of Commons of the Chief Secretary of Ireland as to the state of affairs in that isle. The substance of it is that it is not thought there is occasion at this juncture for asking extraordinary powers to be used in holding down the Home Rulers. But the apprehension excited by their threats is indicated by his statement that uncertainty was felt as to the future, and should occasion arise Parliament would be convened to determine what policy should be pursued.

A GOVERNMENT proclamation just issued in Cuba declares that henceforth all Chinese shall enjoy the same rights as other individuals belonging to a friendly nation.... There has been severe fighting at Candahar, in which the British claim to have gained a decided advantage, although suffering a severe loss. Ayoob Khan occasionally drops a shell into the city, and his sharpshooters make things lively on the ramparts.

ALARMING news has reached London from the seat of war in Afghanistan. It is to the effect that Ayoob Khan has assembled not less than 100,000 well-armed warriors, and is lying in wait to gobble up the reinforcements going to the relief of Candahar.... A terrific hurricane swept over the island of Jamaica, recently. Crops of all kinds were disastrously injured, trees were uprooted, houses leveled with the ground, and thousands of people rendered homeless.... Iron huts are being constructed in some estates in the West of Ireland, where policemen may be stationed so as to be on hand to assist the landlords in evicting tenants.

"Raising" Setter Dogs.

A good story is told of a Rockville sporting man. Having a fine litter of setter pups—pedigreed stock—he was taking special pains to give them a good start in the world, and to this end it was his custom to rise from his bed at short intervals to feed them. It became rather tedious business for him to "crawl out" during the cold winter nights to attend to their wants, so he tried a new plan. Setting a pan of milk in a warm corner behind the stove, he went to bed, and in the small hours the young canines called for food. Thinking to make one job of it he arose in the dark and carried the pan carefully to the wood-house, when seizing each pup by the nap of the neck he thrust its nose into the pan, and when all had "got in their work" returned to his bed. The next morning he was roused by his wife, who wanted to know what in the world he had done with her bread pan. Investigation followed: his wife had wet up a batch of bread and set it behind the stove to rise; this pan our "shot" had carried to the pups and they, after gorging themselves with the dough, waddled back to their warm nest. The yeast was good and the puppies rose, looking like so many muffs with the head of the animal used for trimming, while their legs and tail resembled warts on an early rose potato. The sportsman says he would have made a pie of 'em, only the crust would have been inside instead of out.—New Haven Palladium.

Memory.

Memory is not peculiar to intelligent people. On the contrary, the inferior race of mankind, such as negroes, the Chinese, etc., have more memory than those of a higher type of civilization. Primitive races, which were unacquainted with the art of writing, had a wonderful memory, and were for ages in the habit of handing down, from one generation to another, hymns as voluminous as the Bible. Prompters and professors of declamation, know that women have more memory than men. French women will learn a foreign language quicker than their husbands. Youths have more memory than adults. It is well developed in children, attains its maximum about the fourteenth or fifteenth year, and then decreases. Feeble individuals of a lymphatic temperament have more memory than the strong. Students who obtain the prize for memory and recitation chiefly belong to the former class. Most people remember better in the morning, when the mind is soothed by a night of rest, than in the evening.

How Soon We Are Forgot.

How soon human glory becomes only a fleeting shadow. But so goes the world. It is a story verified by many generations. A Chinaman, a student of Confucius, once took it into his head to travel in Europe. He arrived at Amsterdam, and at a bookseller's shop he asked for the works of the immortal Hixiofou. The bookseller assured him that he had never heard of the author. "What!" said the Chinaman, "have you never heard of that immortal poet, that light of the eyes, that favorite of Kings, that rose of perfection? I suppose that you know nothing of the immortal Fifsihihi, second cousin to the moon?" "Nothing at all," said the bookseller. It is an obvious moral. The world is the bookseller. Alas, the vanity of human fame! "How few," says Jeremy Taylor, "have heard of the name of Venepatadino Regium! He imagined that there was no man in the world that knew him not; how many men can now tell me that he was the King of Narsinga?"

HANCOCK--SHERMAN.

Their Correspondence at the Time of the Electoral Controversy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.

The two letters of Gen. Sherman so frequently spoken of as having brought forth the recently-published letter of Gen. Hancock, dated Carondelet P. O., St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 28, 1876, are as follows:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4, 1876.
Gen. W. S. Hancock, New York City:

DEAR GENERAL—I have just received your letter of the 2d, and have telegraphed you my consent to your proposed trip. I cannot foresee any objections, and hope soon that events will admit of a return to their posts of the companies detached at the South. But every time I make a move in that direction I am met by insurmountable objections. Three of the companies of the First Artillery from Fort Sill reported at Columbus, Ohio, yesterday, and will be here this evening. Everything is ready for them. The last company, I suppose, was detained at Fort Sill to await relief on the way. Tell Gen. Fry (Adjutant General) that in case of any orders I will have them sent you at New York, and he can execute them. The political orders to Ruger at Columbia I preferred should go from the President to him, through the Secretary of War. They were not military. I dislike much to have our soldiers used in connection with a legislative body, but orders coming from the President have to be obeyed. They form a bad precedent, but thus far have prevented a collision of arms between inflamed partisans.

I trust you will find Mrs. Hancock and your St. Louis friends well. Truly yours,
W. T. SHERMAN, General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17, 1876.
To Gen. W. S. Hancock, Jefferson Barracks, Mo.:

MY DEAR GENERAL:—Lest your peace of mind may be disturbed by the foolish report bandied in the newspapers about your being ordered from New York, I will tell you there is not a word of truth in it. Neither the President nor Secretary of War has ever intimated to me such a purpose, and I know I have never said a word nor written a syllable to that effect.

I see in the Republican (of St. Louis) that not only was the order made, but that I destroyed it, and tore out the leaves of the record-book containing a copy. The whole thing was and is an invention by somebody who wanted to create a sensation. The same is true about John Sherman intriguing to be President of the Senate, that he might be President ad interim. He has told me that he has never heard the subject broached; that he would not accept the place, as he prefers to be what he is now—Chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance.

I hope you will find the family in good health and spirits, and I hope you will spend with me a peaceful and happy week of the holidays.

This letter may be superfluous, but the emphatic repetitions of a wild rumor in the St. Louis Republican suggested to me the propriety of my correcting an impression, if made on you.

No serious changes in command are being contemplated, and when they are you may be sure that I will give you the earliest notice. There are men, on mischief intent, who would gladly sow the seeds of dissension among us in the army. Truly your friend,
W. T. SHERMAN.

The answer of Gen. Hancock to these letters was published in the Western Associated Press newspapers of Sunday, Aug. 1. Gen. Sherman replied:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 2, 1877.
To Gen. W. S. Hancock, New York:

DEAR GENERAL: I did not receive your most-interesting letter of Dec. 28, from Carondelet, Mo., till yesterday. I am very glad to have your views in extenso upon subjects of such vital importance. Our standard opinions are mostly formed on the practice of our predecessors; but a great change was made after the close of the civil war by the amendments of the constitution giving to the freed slaves certain civil and political rights, and empowering Congress to make the laws necessary to enforce these rights. This power is new and absolute, and Congress has enacted laws with which we are not yet familiar and accustomed. [See pages 348, 349, and 350, Revised Statutes, Sec. 1,989, edition 1873-4.] As a matter of fact, I dislike to have our army used in these civil conflicts, but the President has the lawful right to use the army and navy, and has exercised the right, as he believes, lawfully and rightfully, and our duty has been, and is, to sustain him with zeal and sincerity. As to the Presidential election, we are in no manner required to take the least action, but to recognize him as President whom the lawfully-appointed officers declare to be such person. I hope and pray that Congress will agree on some method before the day and hour arrives; but, in case of failure to elect by or before the 4th of March, there will be a vacancy in both the offices of President and Vice President, in which event the President of the Senate becomes President pro tempore, and a new election will have to be held under the law of 1792. [See Title III., Chap. 1., pages 21, 22 and 23, Revised Statutes.] It is well we should compare notes and agree before this crisis is on us; but I surely hope we shall pass this ordeal safely and peacefully.

I will be pleased to hear from you at any time.
W. T. SHERMAN.

HEADQ'RS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE ATLANTIC,
NEW YORK, Jan. 2, 1877.
Gen. W. T. Sherman, United States Army, Washington, D. C.

GENERAL: An anonymous communication to the Secretary of War, dated Louisville, Ky., Dec. 16, 1876, reached my headquarters on the 27th of that month from the office of the Adjutant General of the army. It represents that, in the contemplated uprising of the people to enforce the inauguration of Tilden and Hendricks, the depot at Jeffersonville is to be seized and is expected to arm and clothe the Indiana army of Democrats. The indorsement on this communication made at your headquarters, dated Dec. 26, 1876, is as follows:

(Official copy.)

"Respectfully referred to Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock, commanding Division of the Atlantic, who may draw a company from Gen. Ruger, commanding the Department of the South, and post it at the Jeffersonville depot, with orders to protect it against any danger."

The terms of the indorsement imply the exercise of discretion on my part which leads me to write you before taking action. In my judgment there is no danger of the kind the anonymous communication sets forth, or other kind, at the Jeffersonville depot, to justify the movement of troops to that place. Such movement, it seems to me, would involve unnecessary expense, and would create or increase apprehension for which there is no real foundation. There are no arms or ammunition at the Jeffersonville depot, and if such force as is referred to could be raised for rebellious purposes it is not likely that it would begin by seizing a depot of army uniforms; and, therefore, if there are grounds for the action of the Government, I see no danger in delay which will result from this presentation of the subject to you. If, however, in your letter judgment a company should be sent there, it shall be promptly done as soon as you notify me to that effect. As I have already said, I do not act at once because in your instructions you say I "may" send a company there, which I construe as leaving it somewhat discretionary with me. I returned the 31st of December, 1876, from St. Louis. I am very truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
Major General Commanding.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.
Gen. W. T. Sherman, commanding United States army, Washington, D. C.:

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have been intending to write you in acknowledgment of your two recent notes, but I have been so much engaged in hunting a place for winter and "gathering" up my affairs of business, as well as personal matters, owing to my recent absence, that I have deferred doing so. Now I write to inclose you a copy of a letter I addressed yesterday to the editor of the World in reference to an article (special dispatch) which appeared in that paper Sunday, the 7th. The World corrects the matter in its issue of this morning. I would have preferred the publication of my letter, but, as I gave the editor latitude as to the manner of correction, I cannot complain, I suppose. I have written to no one on the subject of my order to go to the Pacific, reported by the newspapers, save yourself. I have said nothing to any one differing in letter or spirit from what I wrote to you, and I have not seen Buford for years or heard of him, nor do I know of any person who has in that time met or communicated with him. I inclose you a copy of the World's publication. I am very truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
Major General.

(Inclosure.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8, 1877.

MY DEAR SIR: I inclose slip cut from the World of yesterday (special dispatch from Washington), headed "A Rescinded Order: Did Gen. Hancock Refuse to Be Transferred to the Pacific Coast?" As an authority given for the communication it seems that I should publicly notice the same, and it would gratify me if you would, in the manner you may deem best, make such correction as would be most likely to remove any misapprehension on the subject. I have not received any orders transferring me from this station, nor any intimation of the existence or contemplation of such orders. Hence I did not refuse to be transferred to the Pacific coast. I have not tendered my resignation. All my information in the matter has been derived from newspapers of the day. I had no communication whatever relating to the subject with the authorities until after the rumor of my removal was published in Washington, a good deal less. Then Gen. Sherman wrote me a note to the same effect.

I am in no wise responsible for any statement contained in the dispatch in question, or for any misconception which has arisen concerning this subject from first to last. I am very truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To William H. Hurlbut, editor New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10, 1877.
Gen. W. T. Sherman, United States Army, Washington, D. C.:

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have been quite busy since my arrival, and have not felt like writing much, so that I have not written to you as I intended, in reply to your favor acknowledging the receipt of my letter from Carondelet. I wished to notice simply your reference to the Revised Statutes and one or two other points in a brief way. I will do so yet, but not to-day, as I am house-hunting, or apartment or hotel-hunting, rather. It is too late in the season to accomplish much here in that way, save to pay out money and get but little satisfaction in return.

The proposition for a joint committee insures a peaceful solution of the Presidential question, if it becomes a law, and, in my opinion, gives to Gen. Hayes chances he did not have before. I have considered that Mr. Tilden's chances were impregnable. Not so Mr. Hendricks. Now it seems to me that Gov. Hayes has something more than an equal chance, but definite results cannot be foreshadowed. Fortunately, trouble need not be provided against by the use of the army, should the bill become a law. If the bill passes, and Gen. Grant vetoes it, Mr. Tilden's chances will be stronger than before; certainly if he and his friends supported the measure, public opinion will strengthen his position.

The danger in the compromise question, or joint-committee plan, is that the defeated candidate might appeal to the Supreme Court on grounds of illegal (unconstitutional) decisions. I am very truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

The correspondence closed by Gen. Sherman writing Gen. Hancock that "The passage of the bill for counting the electoral vote, approved by the President, ends, in my judgment, all possible danger of confusion or disorder in connection with the Presidential imbroglio."

A Japanese Fable.

Once upon a time, on the shady side of a hill near the sea-shore, there lived a crab. One day he found some boiled rice, and set off home with it; but on his way was spied by a monkey. The monkey offered to exchange the seed of a persimmon, the fruit of which he had nearly finished eating, for the rice. This the crab accepted on condition that the monkey had not injured it with his teeth. The exchange made, Jocko devoured the rice, but the crab planted the seed in his garden. A long time afterward, the monkey happening to pass the same spot, was surprised to see a fine tree laden with fruit, and his friend the crab sitting on the balcony of a nice new house, admiring his fruit tree. The monkey being hungry, begged the crab to allow him to eat some of the fruit. But the crab apologized saying that his friend would be quite welcome to some of the fruit, but he could not climb the tree to gather it. The monkey declared ability to climb if the crab would allow him to try; to which the owner of the tree consented, stipulating that he should receive half the fruit that was plucked. So up the monkey clambered, and as fast as he could, selecting the best and ripest fruit, but was too greedy to notice the crab, who was waiting patiently below. At length the crab, losing patience, accused the monkey of being a bad and deceitful fellow; upon which the monkey got angry, pelted the poor crab, and broke his shell. The crab's friend, the wasp, coming by, attacked the monkey and stung him so severely that Jocko scampered away frightened. The wasp then sent for his friends Egg and Mortar, and after due deliberation, they made it up amongst them to punish Jocko. They arranged that Egg should explode if put on the fire, the wasp should sting Jocko, and Mortar, placed on the roof, should roll off upon his head as he ran out of the door. The next day the monkey being hungry, called at the crabs' house to apologize, and to beg another dinner of fruit; but, seeing no person in the house, he entered, and finding a nice large egg on a tray, he put it on the fire to roast it, as he could not manage raw eggs so well as hard cooked ones. Presently the egg exploded violently and scattered the hot cinders over Jocko, who ran into the next room howling with pain; but the wasp flew out of a corner and stung him so badly that he rushed out of the house, frightened and almost mad with pain, when dropped the mortar upon his head and killed him.

Moral:—Cunning and greedy people rarely gain much; and ungrateful ones are generally punished in the end.

Knew His Business.

A conductor on one of the Chicago street-cars suddenly experienced religion and joined a small flock in the neighborhood of his residence. None more devout than he was to be found in the country round, and every spare moment from his business was put into something energetic toward strengthening up the little church into which he had projected himself. Noticing his interest, his pastor, to encourage him, shoved him along all he could, and in a short time the new convert was a shining light among his fellow-worshipers, and the Christian grace with which he passed the contribution-plate evoked nickels from what before had been barren pockets.

One Sunday morning a hoodlum was noisy, and the conductor quietly ordered him out. He went, but last Sunday evening he appeared with a mob of dissolute companions, bent on a difficulty. The conductor kept an eye on the leader until the disturbance became unbearable.

"Put on breaks a moment, parson," said he, "till I look after this fare."

Approaching the thug, he went for him, and wiped up several yards of aisle with him, and then stood him on his legs.

"Five cents for the kingdom of God!" he demanded.

The hoodlum said he did not have to pay.

"Five cents for this ride on the gospel chariot," and he smashed the thug in the countenance.

"But, brother," remonstrated the pastor, "you cannot compel him to contribute."

"Never you mind that, parson. You preach and I'll collect. This man can't dead-head on this orthodox through line without putting up. Beside, I'm responsible to the company for his fare. I've punched him, and he's got to show coin."

A PROVIDENCE lady visited a store to purchase a pair of gloves. She tried on one or two pairs before become satisfied. A few days afterward she missed a valuable gold ring from her finger. Search was made for it without success, and it was finally given up as lost. At the expiration of nearly a year she went into the same store again on the same errand as before. In the finger of the first pair she tried on she found her long-lost ring, where she left it in drawing off the glove a year ago.

AN old lady from New Bedford visited Boston recently for the first time, and while viewing the attractions of the public garden, was pointed out the bronze statue of Charles Sumner. "Well, I de clare," the old lady remarked, "I never knew Sumner was a colored man before."

ALL SORTS.

THE window-glass blowers of Pittsburgh are demanding more pay.

IN the choir of the Presbyterian church, at Penn Yan, they clash a pair of cymbals.

GRAYSON has the largest population of any county in Texas—37,559. Sherman is the county seat.

NEW ORLEANS expects to export 30,000,000 bushels of grain next season, and a Produce Exchange has been established.

MR. SAMUEL BROMLEY, of Mystic River, Ct., says he can live ten hours with his nose and mouth hermetically sealed.

LONDON Truth says that when an American lady takes a Parisian husband she feels as if married only to a semi-human being who has mean ideas about living on his wife's money.

MRS. HANSEN, a respectable old lady of San Francisco, reports that the perturbed spirit of the late William S. O'Brien, millionaire, visits her chamber nightly and complains of his treatment in the other world.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., has the largest and finest flouring mill in the world in the new Washburn—a mill rebuilt on the ruins of the one destroyed by explosion two years ago. It is fitted with the best machinery and appliances to be had; and is capable of turning out 3,000 barrels of flour every twenty-four hours.

FIVE boys recently discovered a number of old coins in a field near Mahanoy City, Pa. They are mostly English pieces, and the dates run back 200 years. Seventy years ago a peddler named Foulhaver was murdered near this spot, and the money discovered is believed to be part of the plunder taken from his body and buried by his murderer.

AN English seed firm of high standing suggests the following remedy for the turnip-fly. It is to drill a little extra seed in the rows, and to scatter a little seed broadcast between the rows. We have known this to answer admirably in checking the pace of the flies through the rows, and thus affording time for a sufficient portion of the plants to develop from the seed leaf, after which period the plants are proof against the fly.

AT a picnic near Berryville, Ky., a five-hours' walking match, go-as-you-please, for a purse of $25, was indulged in. George Bates, one of the contestants, had walked for four hours and fifty-five minutes, when he fell on the track, completely exhausted, and had to be carried home. He had covered twenty-six miles, and came out second best in the race. He died two days afterward.

THE Boston Transcript says: "It is feared that the death of John G. Saxe's wife will have a fatal effect on the poet. He has been bedridden for some time, and was devotedly attached to her, having in several of his works drawn his best woman, both as to loveliness of person and beauty of moral character, so plainly after his wife that friends always recognized the portrait. Miss Saxe, the only living daughter, is also an invalid, and could not attend her mother's funeral."

ANTOINE WEBER'S wife went away from his Pittsburgh home, and he could not learn where or why she had gone. The pair had lived happily and contentedly together, and the husband would not believe that she had willfully deserted him. Eight years passed without tidings of the missing woman. Then he accidentally found her in an almshouse. She had been crazy until recently; and, on recovering her reason, could not clearly remember who she was; but the sight of her husband restored her completely.

OUR young readers will perhaps be surprised to learn that man is not the only being that keeps milch cattle as a food supply. The milch cattle of the ants are small insects, which draw their food from the sap of plants, and give to the ants a sweet and nutritious milk, which they either eject for the ants or allow them to abstract from them. Instinct causes them to regard ants as masters, and instinct causes the ants to protect them. Each herd of ants has its flock of cattle, and it is said often individual ants have individual flocks of these insect cattle, which are scrupulously protected.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$7 00	@10 00
Hogs	5 00	@ 5 50
Cotton	11⅞	@ 12
Flour—Superfine	3 50	@ 4 00
Wheat—No. 2	1 03	@ 1 06
Corn—Western Mixed	50	@ 51
Oats—Mixed	38	@ 41
Rye—Western	84	@ 86
Pork—Mess	15 00	@16 00
Lard	8½	@ 8¾
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 70	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	4 20	@ 4 40
Hogs	4 00	@ 5 45
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50	@ [illegible]
Good to Choice Spring Ex	4 25	@ [illegible]
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	87	@ 88
No. 3 Spring	78	@ 79
Corn—No. 2	38	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	24	@ 25
Rye—No. 2	69	@ 70
Barley—No. 2	73	@ 75
Butter—Choice Creamery	24	@ 25
Eggs—Fresh	11½	@ 12
Pork—Mess	16 50	@16 90
Lard	7½	@ [illegible]
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	92	@ 1 00
No. 2	90	@ 92
Corn—No. 2	38	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	24	@ 25
Rye—No. 1	69	@ 70
Barley—No. 2	73	@ 74
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	95	@ 96
Corn—Mixed	35	@ 36
Oats—No. 2	25	@ 26
Rye	74	@ 75
Pork—Mess	16 75	@16 80
Lard	7½	@ 8
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	89	@ 95
Corn	41	@ 42
Oats	30	@ 31
Rye	82	@ 83
Pork—Mess	16 00	@16 50
Lard	7½	@ 8
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	97	@ 1 00
No. 2 Red	96	@ 97
Corn—No. 2	42	@ 43
Oats—No. 2	28	@ 30
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 00	@ 6 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	96	@ 97
Corn—No. 1	42	@ 43
Oats—Mixed	26	@ 27
Barley (per cental)	1 00	@ 1 50
Pork—Mess	16 00	@16 50
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	91	@ 92
Corn	39	@ 40
Oats	28	@ 30
Pork—Clear	16 00	@16 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 75	@ 5 00
Fair	4 25	@ 4 50
Common	3 50	@ 4 00
Hogs	4 90	@ 5 50
Sheep	3 00	@ [illegible]

AUBURN COURIER.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

GEN. ROBERT C. SCHENCK, who is now in Vermont, is said to be failing rapidly. He is 71 years of age.

THE National Museum on the Smithsonian grounds at Washington is nearly complete. It is expected that the centennial and other exhibits will be placed in the building by next January.

CAPT. JOHN ERICSSON, of New York, has invented a new engine on the caloric-motor principle, which is said to be a very serviceable and economical machine. It occupies a small space, and the cost of running it at full pressure is only 3 cents per hour.

THE revised census of New Orleans gives 216,359 inhabitants, an increase of 18,446 over 1870—viz., an increase of 15,029 whites and of 3,417 blacks. The excess of whites over blacks is 101,897, and of females (of both colors) over males 16,721.

SIXTY-SEVEN Russian emigrants, the sole survivors of a party of 330, which left Russia in 1877 for Brazil, lately arrived at New York sick and destitute. They found the South American climate unsuited to them, and, after losing nearly all their funds, decided to leave the country where they had experienced so many hardships.

THE Baptists in the United States number 2,133,044 this year, against 2,102,034 last year, showing an increase of 31,010. There are 1,095 associations—increase of 20; 24,704 churches—increase, 295; 15,401 ordained ministers—increase, 447. The additions by baptism were 78,924, a falling off of upward of 33,000 from last year. The exclusions numbered 20,580.

COMMISSIONER LE DUC has recently been selecting sites for tea farms in Georgia, and has returned to Washington, leaving an assistant to complete the work. He thinks that he will have no difficulty, as the problem of tea culture at the South, or at least in Georgia, has been already solved. A quality of tea equal to that imported from Asia is raised in quantities in that State at a cost of not more than 20 cents a pound, and readily finds a market at from 40 to 50 cents.

NAPOLEON B. ARTHUR deserted his wife and family at Marysville, Ohio, twenty years ago, to elope with a neighbor's daughter. His wife remained on the farm, and reared their children, while he wandered about the country. A poor, broken old tramp presented himself at the homestead. This was the wreck of the husband and father. He begged for food and lodging, expressing the utmost contrition for his bad behavior. The wife acted with promptness. She set the dog on him, and he barely escaped with his life.

MRS. ELIZABETH CAMPTON, who was was nearly 90 years of age, committed suicide by drowning in a shallow pool near her house at Metuchin, N. J. She suffered from many hallucinations, the most remarkable of which was that she was in danger of hanging at the hands of Gen. Hancock. She learned from the newspapers that Gen. Hancock had had something to do with the hanging of a woman, and became possessed with the idea that, if elected, he would immediately seek out and execute her in order to get her property.

A WOMAN at Carson, Nev., is said to have undertaken to refrain from speaking for forty days. The report runs as follows: "She began at 9 in the morning, and at 10:30 her pulse was so feeble from exhaustion that the physicians feared she would die by noon. At 11 her heart beat but twenty-six a minute, and her respiration was hardly noticeable. Her friends here urged her to piscontinue her terrible task, and told her some gossip about a neighbor. On hearing it she immediately rushed from the house, and, going across the street, met a lady friend and talked to 6:30 last night, and is now fully restored."

RUSSIAN petroleum is gaining a market rapidly in Europe. The policy of the huge American monopoly known as the Standard Oil Company has been to depress the price of the crude product and raise that of the refined. They have thus brought the price of crude down to about 2 cents and pulled the price of refined to 9 cents. The effect of this action has been to open the European market to Russian refiners, and to exclude from it the American crude. The export of petroleum and petroleum products from the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, was 423,691,767 gallons. But the trade is now falling off. For the month of June, 1880, 24,221,291 gallons were exported, and for the same month in 1879, 32,940,443 gallons.

THE Italians at work on the New Haven and Northampton railroad extension in Franklin county, Mass., deposit no money in the local banks, but all wear belts, and carry their money with them. They are all numbered and tagged, so that when they are paid off or receive rations it is on presentation of a little tin check properly numbered. A little water boy, who had to give up boot-blacking in Boston because he could not read or write, acts as interpreter for a large gang. They live very economically, and their bread is bought, several hundred loaves at a time, by the contractor, while they do their own cooking. Many of them say that they only propose to stay in the country long enough to earn $100 or so, when they will return to Italy.

MR. COX, who is running as an Independent for Congress in the Fourth Georgia district, is an ingenuous youth. He talks right out in meeting, saying recently: "If you see fit to send me to Congress I will go to the best of my ability. I believe I would like to go. In fact, I want to go. I have heard that the salary is ample, and, as I have a small family, won't insist on its increase. As I am fond of vindication, I want to vindicate myself. It has been hurled at me like a thunderbolt that I am too young. In answer to this I say first I can't help it, and it is not my fault. Second, I am trying to grow older every day. Third, I am succeeding. Fourth, I am afraid I will be much older than I am before I get to Congress." If other candidates were as candid there would be heaps of just such speeches.

LAST winter the Connecticut Legislature made a law prohibiting under penalty the employment of railroad hands who could not pass an examination as to their normal visual power and their ability to distinguish colors. The examinations thus far have been made at the expense of the railway companies, a charge of $2 being made in each case by the Yale professors to whom the fat job of examination was let by the State. They have refused certificates to some of the oldest engineers in the State, men who have never had an accident in a life-time of service, and all the railway employes of the State are in consternation, and they, as well as the corporation which employs them, are demanding a practical test of visual power rather than that to which the professors subject them. The State test is made with letters as to range of vision, and skeins of worsted as to color capacity—the applicant in the latter particular being required to separate from a heap not only the skeins of primary colors, but to classify the various shades of each. The engineers and other employes demand that the test shall be made on the road, and if they cannot read the large letters of signs and distinguish the colors employed in light signaling they are willing to surrender their places on the footboard. The companies, which are deeply interested on the side of perfect safety, are as anxious as the men for a reasonable, not a fanciful, test, and both will unite to defeat the existing law and procure legislation that shall be more practicable.

Big Figures.

Mr. S. C. Clarke, of the Treasury Department, has, beyond a doubt, an eye for figures. He has prepared some remarkable tables, taking a cent of our money as a basis. He says that one cent at simple interest, at 6 per cent. per annum, from the commencement of the Christian era to the end of the current year, A. D. 1880, would amount to only one dollar and fourteen cents ($1.14). Accepting for the present purpose the common understanding of the adaptation of the Gregoria calendar of the whole period of the Christian era, the same one cent at compound interest, for the same period of time and at the same rate of interest, compounded annually, fractions excepted, would amount to three quadridecillion, 735 tredecillion, 963 duodecillion, 560 undecillion, 427 decillion, 120 nonillion, 584 octillion, 658 septillion, 169 sextillion, 353 quintillion, 630 quadrillion, 998 trillion, 468 billion, 995 million, 477 thousand and 562 dollars and 98 cents. ($3,735,963,660,427,120,584,658,169,353,630,998,468,995,477,562.98). Mr. Clarke continues and says that the current value of a globe of fine gold of the magnitude of this earth is $11,116,503,641,581,635,112,643,097,947.14, and the number of golden globes each of the dimensions of this planet, contained in the amount of the cent at interest, as aforesaid would be $264,652,186,921,303,226. The maximum estimate of the entire population of the world, including every man, woman and child of all races and creeds and conditions of men on the earth is fifteen hundred millions (1,500,000,000). If said amount therefore were equally divided among all of the inhabitants of the earth each and every human being would be entitled to 176,434,791 of said globes of fine gold as his proportionate inheritance; and each and every one of them, living exclusively on the principal, without any further accumulation or income, might spend one of said globes of gold every minute of time—night and day for three hundred and thirty-five years without exhausting his patrimony. But if this stupendous aggregate amount of the compounded accumulations of said cent for nearly nineteen centuries be again invested as a new principal, the simple interest thereon at 6 per cent., for the single year 1880 would be $224,157,831,625,627,235,079,490,161,217,859,908,139,728,653.78, or for each of the 366 days of said year $612,453,042,692,970,587,648,880,221,906,721,060,491,061.89. This vast sum proportionately distributed among the fifteen hundred millions of people would give to each and every inhabitant, as his or her own proper portion of said interest, one of said globes, containing more than two hundred and sixty-four billions of cubic miles of pure gold every three seconds during the year, or twenty of said golden worlds every minute.—Washington Republic.

THE Carson mint has now on hand silver dollars to the value of $1,116,059.

FARM NOTES.

W. A. BROOKS, of Hamilton Township, Franklin County, Iowa, has 215 acres of flax as an experiment. He is satisfied flax is a more profitable grain than wheat, and predicts that it will take the place of wheat in a few years in Iowa.

AN Ohio wool-grower noticing that another flockmaster complained that he could not rid his sheep of ticks, says he was troubled that way once, and advises wetting salt with turpentine when salting sheep. He finds this effectual, without "dipping."

WEEDS on gravel walks may be destroyed and prevented from growing again by a copious dressing of the cheapest salt. This is a better method than hand-pulling, which disturbs the gravel and renders constant raking and rolling necessary. One application early in the season, and others as may be needed, while the weeds are small, will keep the walks clean and bright.

A QUICK and effectual method to destroy plantain and other weed pests on lawns, is to cut the plant off at the crown, and drop on the top of the root two or three drops of kerosene oil. The lawn will not be defaced by digging, and the work is at once and completely done; the root dies as surely as if struck by lightning.

EVERY farmer knows that exposing potatoes too long to the rays of the sun, or to too plenty of light and air, will soon ruin them. A good farmer will dig and dry his potatoes at the proper time, as quickly as convenient, and take them to his dark cellar without delay, being careful not to have too many in one bin. Potatoes which are fine and mealy when dug, treated in this manner, will remain good until new early potatoes are ripe.—Ex.

THE experiment has been tried in Iowa, it is said, of sowing in the fall, upon one acre of land, two bushels of wheat mixed with one bushel of oats. The oats shot up rapidly, and were, of course, killed down by the frost. But they furnished a warm covering for the earth, and when the snow fell among the thick stalks and leaves they kept it from blowing away. This covering prevented the winter-killing of the wheat, and the rotting oat leaves and stalks afforded a rich top-dressing for the crop the following spring. The result was an abundant yield of wheat, while land precisely similar alongside, and treated in the same manner, with the exception of omitting the oats, was utterly worthless.

THE destructive currant worm has for many years been held in subjection by the use of white hellebore, and although this substance is quick and sure in its operation, and by its use enables one to speedily rid his currant and gooseberry plants of the depredator, yet it is a little difficult in some cases of application—when the worms are working on the lower part of a bush. It is with much satisfaction, therefore, that we learn the announcement of a more convenient and not less certain agent for the same purpose, and this is carbolic acid. Two teaspoonsful of carbolic acid mixed in three or four gallons of water gives a liquid of proper strength to sprinkle over the bushes. It is said to kill worms quickly, and what is more, it is reported to be equally valuable in destroying the rose-bug when applied to rose bushes.—Vick.

EVERYBODY about a farm knows that animals will not eat the grass which grows up rank around their own droppings; it has also been observed by some that hay from meadows heavily enriched is not eaten so readily as that from other fields. It is the practice, usually to put such meadows to other crops, but if lime be applied instead, will restore the ground to a proper condition quickly. Lime laid on for such a purpose would do more to sweeten a foul pasture in three months than if it was shut up for six months, and left to the ordinary process of cleaning. This is about one of the most important uses to which lime could be put, correcting as it does all sourness and rankness in grass, reducing almost immediately all noxious effluvia from the manure deposited, and therefore presenting food, which, being relished by the stock, is converted into that which will lay the foundation of a profit. It is more especially on bog pastures that the use of lime is particularly beneficial, for besides its action on cattle droppings, it destroys moss, rushes, and all sedgy or other coarse growth, whose places become occupied by other more nutricious grasses. After the liming of a pasture, cattle will eat the grass readily, which before they would not touch, showing the beneficial change the lime had brought about.

The Law of Entail.

Much misapprehension exists in this country as to the present powers of entail in England. There is no such thing as a law of primogeniture, except in so far that if a man die intestate his real estate would pass to his eldest son, except in Kent, where it would be divided among all his sons. Up to the close of the last century the power of entail was illimitable. It was curtailed in consequence of the extraordinary will made by a merchant named Thellussen, of Swiss origin, who accumulated a vast fortune in London, partly by buying up jewels from French emigres at the time of the great revolution. Mr. Thellussen intended his money to accumulate until it would have reached about $700,000,000. The Government, deeming it undesirable that any subject should possess wealth so colossal, introduced a bill limiting entail to living persons and twenty-one years afterward. This is is not much greater than the power of entail in New York, and almost identical with that in Massachusetts. Many estates in and around New York—the Lefferts, Rhinelander, for example—are entailed. In England hundreds of great properties are completely unentailed, and it is purely the custom, not the law, of the country which will cause them to be transmitted to the eldest son. Men who are very liberal in politics favor the custom, because they think that it keeps up the position of a family, and that were an estate divided up in the next generation none would be better for such division. It is not generally understood here that the law in England permits a man to leave his property precisely as he pleases, and that a Duke can leave all to his footman. The great estates, for instance, of the Duke of Hamilton, Premier Duke of Scotland, were, up to the time of his marriage, absolutely unentailed. This came out of some law proceedings.—London Times.

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

TO TAKE OUT STAINS.—One teaspoonful of chloride of lime in three quarts of water will take out any kind of stain. Put the part stained in the water, let remain until out; it will not injure the cloth; only stains on white goods can be taken out in this way.

CHICKEN CHOLERA REMEDY.—Blue vitriol, one ounce, dissolved in one gallon of water; give one ounce of this in one gallon of drinking water every morning; wash the drinking vessel out every morning; using an iron or tin. It is a sure cure.

BROWN BREAD.—Take two cups buttermilk, one cup Indian meal, one cup flour, one egg, one-half cup molasses, one large spoon butter, one teaspoon soda, and one of suet. Steam one hour then set in the oven until it becomes a nice brown. Cut it warm for dinner.

CATSUP.—Six large, ripe tomatoes, two small green peppers, one large onion; chop all fine, then cork till tender, and add two cups vinegar, two tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, and one of cloves. Let boil a few minutes and bottle. Will keep a long time.

GRAPE PICKLES.—Seven pounds of grapes on the stems, three pounds of sugar, and one pint of vinegar. Place the grapes in a jar and scald the vinegar and sugar together and pour over them. For nine successive mornings pour off the liquor and scald it. Use any spice you like.

PICKLED BEETS.—Take beets while young and sweet and not too large, boil and slice as usual while they are still hot. Have ready a pan of hot vinegar, into which put the slices; cover a few moments until thoroughly hot, then with a spoon place carefully and closely in a glass can; then fill up with the vinegar and seal. If the slices are too large cut them in two. These make an excellent relish during the spring and early summer.

EAST INDIA PICKLES.—Two hundred small cucumber pickles, two heads of cabbage sliced fine, two quarts of small, or sliced onions, one large head of cauliflower cut up, six green peppers sliced, two ounces white mustard seed; soak all in salt and water twenty-four hours; drain over night. Boil good vinegar and one quarter pound black pepper, ground, one teaspoonful cayenne pepper. Pour over pickles; when cool stir in one quart mixed mustard.

CREAM PIE.—To be eaten warm or cold; very nice. One pint of cream, three eggs beaten separately, sugar to taste, pinch of salt, flavor as you like. Butter a deep pie dish, or mountain cake tin, sprinkle with bread crumbs that have been sifted, about as thick as pie paste, pour in the custard and sprinkle over it some bread crumbs and cocoanut mixed.

RHUBARB JELLY.—Take some rhubarb, wipe it with a clean wet cloth, peel it, and cut it into pieces an inch long. To each pound of rhubarb add three-fourths of a pound of white sugar. Put it to boil for about ten minutes, or until the juice is well drawn. Strain it into a preserving pan, let it boil quickly till it clings to the spoon, skim it and put it into jam pots or molds. The quickest way to know if it will set is to drop a little on a plate to cool.

PUFF STRAWBERRY PUDDING.—Sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with a pint of flour; beat well an egg; add a little salt; mix with sweet milk till of the consistency of thick batter. Place well-greased cups in a steamer; put into each a spoonful of batter, then a spoonful of strawberries, and cover with another spoonful of batter and steam twenty minutes. Eat with cream and sugar, or a liquid hot sauce with a cupful of strawberry juice added.

APPLE BORER.—According to a writer on horticultural and agricultural subjects, when borers have once gained possession of a tree the only way to get rid of them is to hunt for them carefully with a knife or wire and destroy them. The eggs of the parent beetle are deposited during nights in June, and are placed in the bark of the tree at the surface of the ground, or whatever may surround the tree. These eggs hatch in our latitude during September, and it is soon after this that the young grubs may be easily removed without the use of anything more than the point of a penknife. A few minutes spent in this way about the 1st of October each fall will keep the tree free from this pest.—Scientific American.

Yesterday and To-Day.

"Hole on dar," said a colored man, hailing an acquaintance. "Does yer cross de street ebery time yer sees me ter keep frum payin' dat bill?"

"No, I doesn't."

"What fur den?"

"Ter keep frum bein' axed fur hit."

"Mr. Napoleon," said the creditor, "I lent yer ten dollars three weeks ago. Yer promised an' promised ter pay me. De udder day you said dat 'pon yer word an honer as a gen'leman yer'd pay me ter-day. Now, what's yer got ter say?"

"I al'ers 'serves my honer. Yer's gettin yer lack of flosofy and my honer mixed."

"How's dat?"

"Doan yer know dat de udder day all de time in town was changed? Da foun' dat de time was wrong an' da sent off an' got what da calls a transit apparatus. Since den all de watches an' clocks hab been overhauled. Hit hab been foun' dat our time is gis one day too fast."

"Dats got nuthin' ter do wid my money."

"Course it hab. I promised ter pay yer ter-day. De oberhaulin, ob de time shows dat dis ain't ter-day."

"How does yer make dat?"

"Why, dis is ter-morow. Doan' yer see? Lemme tell yer, ef yer goes roun' dis town showin' such ignunce of flosofy de people will laugh at yer."

"Well, when is yer gwine ter pay me?"

"Jes ez soon ez we kin get the time straightened up. Da's workin' on hit now. Jes take my advice, fur ef the people onst gits inter dar heads dat a man is a fool, ten years ob knowledge won't change hit."—Little Rock (Ark). Gazette.

EIGHT young men have been fined $5 each in Jonestown, Pa., for loafing in front of a church on Sunday night.

A STRANGE STORY.

How a Family Were Separated and Were Reunited After Many Years.

[Pittsburgh Cor. Chicago Tribune.]

A case of singular interest has just been developed at Beaver Falls, Pa., a few miles west of Pittsburgh. John Sims, professor of music, has resided there for the last four years. He was joined yesterday by his daughter, Mrs. James W. Bouk, of Ashland, Neb. Twenty-three years ago the Sims family followed the example of an uncle, George H. Walker, and emigrated to St. Paul, Minn. Mrs. Bouk was then 1 year of age. After a residence at that place of a few months the mother paid a visit to relatives at Lake Minnetonka, a summer resort a few miles from St. Paul. While there a party, of which Mrs. Sims and her children were a part, took a sail on the lake. A storm came up and they were capsized. The party was rescued, but the child, now the woman who relates the story, was so young that she knows little of what took place. They were taken to a hotel near a town called Excelsior. A paper published a statement that Mrs. Sims and daughter had both been drowned in the accident. The father read this and went to the lake to look for their bodies. Mrs. Sims, in the meantime, knowing nothing of the misapprehension of her friends, went on to Keokuk to visit other friends. While there she, too, read an announcement of the death of a Mr. Sims, whom she supposed was her husband. The uncle mentioned, who had before this left St. Paul for Keokuk, now also disappeared, leaving no word, wishing, as has since appeared, that his friends should know nothing of him until he succeeded in making his fortune, after which he went to the West. "Thus," in the language of the narrator, "in a few short months a family had been separated to meet no more for twenty-three years."

Mrs. Bouk tells the remainder of the story as follows: "My uncle paid a visit to the Centennial Exhibition in 1876, and stopped in Allegheny City to ascertain whether he could find any trace of us. Some gentleman told my uncle that he had seen Prof. Sims in the city only a few days ago. 'Impossible,' said my uncle, 'for I read of his death.' Nevertheless it was true. My uncle wrote a letter to father and received an answer, stating that his wife and child had been drowned. My uncle returned to Keokuk, but could not rest. He inserted an advertisement in a Chicago paper asking information regarding my grandmother and my aunt. Between the 15th and the last of April, two years ago last spring, I was in my home at Ashland, Saunders county, Neb. I felt an impulse to read the Chicago papers. The advertisement attracted my eye. I was excited and told my husband to answer it, as I could not. He did, and in a few days received an answer from my uncle stating that I was not his niece, as she had been drowned. I then wrote a letter to the effect that if he had lost two fingers of one hand, and—well, I related circumstances that made proofs positive. In a few days my long-lost uncle was at our house. The meeting can be imagined. Then followed explanations, stating that my father was living and well in Beaver Falls, Pa. I wrote my father, but received an answer that I could not surely be his daughter, as she had been drowned twenty-three years ago. Another letter told him of 'Little Dallas,' a dead brother, and of other circumstances which made a clear case. About three weeks ago I started for Beaver Falls to find my long-lost father. I have found him. I have been married several years. My husband is in the grain business in Nebraska. My mother has been married the second time, but is now a widow. What the sequel will prove I will have to tell you at another time, as we do not know yet what our plans shall be."

The family is highly respectable and the story is, no doubt, strictly true, though savoring more of romance than reality.

Brief Correspondence.

Many people object to postal cards on account of their effect on personal correspondence. It is one of the natural tendencies of human nature to avoid trouble as far as possible; and it is so much easier to write a card than a letter that it is often given the preference. So that in fact the close intimacies that once might exist between persons who lived far away from each other, fed and fostered by long letters which were really autobiographies, are no longer a part of our social life, as they were to those of our grandmothers. Distance now separates divided friends more really than it did fifty years ago. It is a pity to lose the charm of so many private letters, written from the heart, and giving to the absent, frank, simple pictures of the events of the passing hour. It is difficult to see from what material the memoirs of the present and coming generations will be made. A file of correspondence cards, a drawer full of "postals," will afford but scanty substance out of which to build up the fabric of history. No tender reminiscences can be gleaned from these barren messengers; no glimpse given of home affection; for of course no one writes "Dear ——" or "affectionately yours," for fear of exposing this wave of emotion to the observation of the postman. No one likes to write anything either affectionate or important on so public a medium; therefore the sweetness of the sentimental correspondence in which our ancestors delighted is fast changing to the bitter brevity of hard fact.

Runaway Horses.

The horse that has once acquired the habit of running away will bolt on the first opportunity. If you suspect his intention, the best plan is to check it the moment he begins to move, taking hold of one rein with both hands, and giving it one or two such violent jerks that the rogue must pause or turn around. Then stop him, and, if you doubt your being able to hold him, get off. Perhaps a too-vigorous "plug" may make him cross his legs and fall—not a pleasant contingency, but anything is better than being run away with in a street. In open country you may compel the runaway to gallop with a loose rein until he is tired, or to move in a constantly narrowing circle until he is glad to halt. A ten-acre field is big enough for this expedient. But the great point is to stop a runaway before he gets into his stride; after he is once away few bits will stop a real runaway—a steady pull is a waste of exertion on the rider's part. Some horses may be stopped by sawing the mouth with the snaffle, but nothing will check the old hand. Another expedient is to hold the reins very lightly, and on the first favorable opportunity, as a rising hill, for instance, to try a succession of jerks. But the cunning, practiced runaway is not so much to be feared as the mad, frightened horse. The mad horse will dash against a brick wall, or jump at spiked railings of impossible height. I once saw a runaway horse, after getting rid of his rider, charge and burst open his locked stable-door.

INDIANA NEWS.

THERE are seventy-three postoffices in Indiana to which a salary of $1,000 or more is attached.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON has written a letter congratulating the Indiana Bureau of Statistics on its first annual report.

DAVID FOUTCH, a boy living in Brown township, Washington county, died from "damps" in a well on his father's farm last week.

VINCENNES will shortly boast of starch works. The factory of J. A. Cunningham, now located at Danville, Ill., will be moved there.

MRS. JOHN P. REYNOLDS and Miss Ella Sheridan, of Madison, are heirs to an estate in England valued at £200,000, and an annual income of £4,000.

MR. RUEL CUSTER, a well-known Jefferson county farmer, aged 90 years, died at his home last week. He had resided on the place for sixty years.

AT the annual meeting of the Wabash Association of Detectives, in Crawfordsville, a few days ago, eighty-three local associations were represented.

A FISHERMAN at Madison, a few days since, caught a blue catfish weighing 100 pounds. It is said to be the heaviest of the species ever caught in the Ohio river at that point.

A MOVEMENT is on foot, projected by property-holders along the bank, to make Pigeon creek navigable five miles from its mouth. This is proposed in the interest of manufacturing establishments, and if done will be of incalculable benefit to Evansville.

A FEW weeks ago the brick sewer passing under the canal in the heart of the city of Fort Wayne broke, causing the canal banks to give way, and flooded a number of business houses, doing about $25,000 damage. The city is now being sued for individual damages.

TWO MEN named James Ragan and Michael Hoover killed a blue racer near South Bend, which measured fifteen feet in length. Hoover was sitting under a tree resting when the snake dropped down and wound itself around his body. He fought it and called for Ragan, who was mowing a little distance off, and together they killed it.

TWO TREES, standing on opposite side of the Brandywine river, several miles north of Shelbyville, were struck by lightning, the other evening, at the same instant. A herd of hogs under one of the trees, a beech, were all killed, and a milch cow under the sycamore on the other side of the stream also fell a victim to the thunderbolt.

INDIANA captured nearly all the offices at the recent meeting of the National Teachers' Association at Chautauqua. J. H. Smart, President of the General Association, is Superintendent of Public Instruction. Dr. Lemuel Moss, President, is of the State University, Bloomington; E. E. White, President of the scientific department, is President of Purdue University, Lafayette; George P. Brown, Secretary of the normal department, is President of the State Normal School at Terre Haute; J. B. Roberts, Secretary of the elementary department, is Principal of the Indianapolis High School, and J. S. Irwin, Counselor, is Superintendent of the Fort Wayne Public School.

Assessment on Railroad Property.

Following is a table of main track, side track and rolling stock of railroads in Indiana for the year 1880, as assessed and equalized by the State Board of Equalization:

NAMES OF ROADS.	Miles of Main Track.	Miles of Side Track.	Miles of Rolling Stock.	Total Assessment.
Anderson, L. & St. L.	19.37	1.35	19.37	$ 40,110
Balt. & Ohio & Chicago	146.35	15.63	146.35	1,473,306
Bedford, S., O. & B.	41.00	2.00	41.00	62,300
Bloomfield N. Gauge	9.00	.....	9.00	13,500
Cleveland, C., C. & I.	83.84	27.22	83.84	809,165
Cincinnati, H. & I.	78.63	8.68	78.63	76,716
Cincinnati, R. & I.	85.89	3.65	85.89	399,065
Cincinnati, R. & C.	5.98	.98	5.98	56,716
Cincinnati, W. & M.	109.51	5.48	109.51	506,495
Cincinnati, L. & C.	23.77	3.26	23.77	184,795
Cincinnati, L., St. L. & C	153.69	30.77	153.69	1,521,505
Lawrenceburg branch	2.57	5.05	2.57	34,515
Cincinnati, R. & S.	37.14	.99	37.14	125,211
Cairo & Vincennes	6.92	.....	6.92	31,140
Chicago & Eastern Ill.	19.61	4.74	19.61	127,140
Chicago, Cin. & L.	71.47	5.01	71.47	293,295
Chicago & Block Coal	19.75	.13	19.75	[illegible]
Chicago & Canada S.	.....	.....	.....	54,846
Eel River	93.84	7.79	93.84	501,900
Evansville & T. H.	108.40	21.07	108.40	1,082,795
Evansville, T. H. & C.	52.68	10.13	52.68	386,340
Frankfort & Kokomo	25.55	1.00	25.55	60,925
Fort Wayne, M. & C.	104.17	5.66	104.17	390,749
Fort Wayne & Jackson	52.39	5.46	52.39	220,021
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Grand Rapids & I.	52.27	2.52	52.27	346,055
Havana, R. & E.	8.50	.14	8.50	14,534
Indiana (C. & G. T.)	79.00	5.70	79.00	682,900
Indianapolis P. R. C.	3.28	.....	.....	129,200
Indianapolis, P. & C.	72.87	11.79	72.87	656,007
Indianapolis, D. & S.	74.77	5.04	74.77	471,696
Indianapolis & St. L.	79.43	15.50	79.43	822,050
Indianapolis, D. & C.	26.42	.45	26.42	83,170
Indianapolis, B. & W.	78.61	15.31	78.61	948,000
Joliet & Northern I.	15.40	1.94	.....	192,500
Indianapolis & Vincennes	116.44	5.95	116.44	511,392
Jeffersonville, M. & I.	110.28	22.31	110.28	1,234,032
Mad'n branch same road	45.90	5.63	45.90	202,957
Columbus & Shelbyville	23.26	.98	23.26	88,071
Shelbyville & Rushville	18.42	.96	18.42	70,447
Cambridge City Extens'n	20.97	.72	20.97	70,645
Kingan	.42	.46	.....	3,480
Louisville & Nashville	26.41	3.83	26.41	198,817
Louisville, N. A. & C.	208.20	25.45	208.20	1,064,979
Louisville, N. A. & St. L.	26.00	.....	26.00	58,500
Little Miami	4.19	.94	4.19	20,115
Lake Shore & Mich. S'n.	167.76	69.42	167.76	3,800,540
Lake Erie & Western	157.89	14.14	157.89	1,086,706
Lake Erie, E. & S. W'n.	17.00	.43	17.00	42,960
Michigan Air Line	3.62	1.01	.....	30,129
Mich. City & Indianapolis	12.75	3.00	12.75	88,084
Michigan Central	42.41	24.72	42.41	962,490
Ohio & Mississippi	171.89	28.32	171.89	1,752,483
O. & M.—L. Branch	53.31	6.25	53.31	275,000
P., C. & St. Louis	416.64	45.72	416.64	4,074,408
P., Ft. W. & Chicago	152.57	48.10	152.57	3,166,579
T. H. & Logansport	115.07	9.50	115.07	421,746
T. H. & Indianapolis	79.98	74.82	79.98	1,467,500
T. H. & Southeastern	40.00	2.37	40.00	182,518
T., D. & Burlington	37.30	.66	37.30	87,260
U. R. T. & S. Yard	12.10	6.07	12.10	302,650
W., St. L. & Pacific	166.00	45.00	166.00	2,674,000
White River	61.40	4.00	61.40	185,140

RECAPITULATION.

	Miles.	Value.
Main track	4,275.67	[illegible]
Side track	687.54	[illegible]
Rolling stock	.....	[illegible]
Canada Southern right of way	.....	[illegible]
Total		[illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., SEPTEMBER 2, 1880.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District—JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM. P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL DEVENS, another of Mr. Hayes' cabinet, will speak in Indiana.

DON'T forget that Hon. Isaac P. Gray will speak in Auburn next Saturday evening.

OUR candidate for representative, D. D. Moody, will speak at Corunna next Monday evening.

BEN. BUTLER will not support the republican nominee this year. He will make speeches in Indiana for America's great soldier during the present campaign.

HON. T. A. HENDRICKS speaks at Hicksville, Ohio, on Friday, September 17, in the afternoon. DeKalb county democrats are urged to attend this rally in force, and show to our neighbors across the line that Indiana democrats are wide awake.

HON. ISAAC P. GRAY, lieutenant-governor of Indiana, will address the citizens of DeKalb county, in Auburn, next Saturday evening. The bare announcement that this distinguished gentleman is to address our citizens is sufficient to insure a large turn-out.

IF there were any misgivings on the part of the COURIER as to the feelings of all the better class of republicans in regard to the course pursued in the last issue of the Republican toward the editor of the COURIER, the assurances we have received during the week would completely allay them. Auburn, at least, has not a congenial atmosphere for hyenas.

IN the joint canvass between Judge Porter and Mr. Landers, the opposing candidates for governor, there is to be but one discussion for each congressional district, as follows: South Bend, Sept. 2; Fort Wayne, Sept. 3; Dunkirk, Sept. 4; Frankfort, Sept. 6; Terre Haute, Sept. 7; Greencastle, Sept. 8; Fairfield, Sept. 9; Cambridge, Sept. 10; Brockville, Sept. 11; Vernon, Sept. 12; Winnemac, Sept. 14; Vincennes, Sept. 15; Boonville, Sept. 16.

THE average republican sheet characterizes Mr. English as an old Shylock, because, forsooth, he is wealthy. Because he has by energy and sagacity accumulated considerable means, he has all at once become a monster who has ground down the poor with the iron heel of oppression. This and other extremely attenuated charges only prove that republicans are very hard up for something to say against the democratic nominees. If Mr. English had ever kept a custom-house and had been kicked out of that position for dishonesty, by a president of his own party, the republicans might have a charge calculated to attract attention.

THE envy of the infinitesimal corpuscles who run the sheet yclept Republican, at the success of the COURIER under its present management, instead of receding from its former well-earned position, as they fondly hoped it would, is plainly manifested in their last issue. Meantime the COURIER will pursue the even tenor of its way. By continuing in the paths in which he has firmly planted his feet, the editor can live down all the calumnies that gangrened envy can invent, and, when his maligners are still "smousing" their living from others, the COURIER will be found to be a power for good, aiding in the advancement of both the general and the local welfare.

The Beauties of Registration.

Pennsylvania has, for years, had a registration law, such as provided for in one of our proposed constitutional amendments. Experience has shown it to be one of the most valuable aids to the republican ringsters of Philadelphia in the perpetuation of their shocking frauds upon the right of suffrage. To the [illegible] of the honest republicans there the whole thing is becoming disgusting. The most largely circulated republican paper in Philadelphia, which is edited by the distinguished George W. Childs, the Public Ledger, describing the defiant and shameless criminality with which the republican managers in Philadelphia corrupt the ballot-box, says: "It does, indeed, begin to look as if there is a privileged class of republican politicians beyond the reach of the law. With such examples who need be surprised that election frauds flourished, and that the attempt to select public officers by means of the ballot-box is made the merest mockery, and will continue to be so." This is the testimony of a partisan republican—an ardent admirer of Gen. Grant—about fraudulent registration and fraudulent voting in Philadelphia. But for the villainy of the republican managers in Philadelphia, who are in the habit of generally reporting a republican majority sufficiently large to overcome a democratic majority in the rest of the state, Pennsylvania would be democratic by a round majority. With a population less than New York City by over half a million, Philidelphia casts about 30,000 more votes than her more populous sister city.

Here is a fine illustration of the great benefits of a registration law,—a rich field for the operations of the congressional interventionists in the control of the elections. The quantity of "paying dirt" it developes is immense.

The Same Old Howl.

There's Mississippi on a free and fair vote is republican by no less than thirty thousand; North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana, every one of them a republican state, were the voters not afraid of the shot-gun, the revolver, the rifle, and the bowie-knife in the hands of masked men! And yet the democracy fairly scream themselves hoarse for a fair count. Out upon such hypocrisy!—Northern Indianian.

The above is about as near the truth as the average radical sheet ever gets. By such false publications they seek to mislead and embitter the north against the south for the sole purpose of gain. These paragons of political virtue who affect to so much desire a fraternal feeling and a unity of the sections, are the very ones themselves who are the sectional-hate promoters. It is the only ammunition they have for the campaign. Eight years ago it was proclaimed by prominent republicans that the requisites for republican success were a "bloody-shirt campaign and plenty of money." Four years ago it was the same cry. And now, fifteen years after the dust of the conflict has passed away, this same party has resorted to the same dirty, despicable work of arraigning one section against another by fanning the embers of sectional hate. There is nothing low, mean or contemptible to which the republican leaders do not appear capable of resorting in their desperation to retain power. So industriously and continuously have the people been fed on this kind of mental diet that very many honest, fair-minded citizens have come to believe that their lives would be in danger were they to venture south of Mason and Dickson's line. They are told that a fish-net cannot be drawn through a lake without hauling out a negro or two, whom the democrats have killed on account of political affiliation. Whenever any little difficulty occurs in the south among roughs, as they do everywhere, it is magnified into a monstrous onslaught on republicans, and is heralded with flaming headlines all over the north by every republican paper. Is it true that the people of the south are traitors, murderers, robbers, villains, devils, and everything else that is mean, which can be expressed in English, as charged by such papers as the New York Tribune and all of its little echoes in the land? No, it is not. It is the merest twaddle. It is the basest, villainous lies that ever emanated from man, fiend or devil. To-day thousands of northern men are living all through the south. They have happy homes and prosperous business, can worship God under their own vine and fig-tree, can vote any ticket, or express any sentiment with the same security there as they do here. In everything they stand there just as they do here—simply on their merits. It is not true that people going there from the north are treated discourteously or ostracised. The people of the southern states have organized immigration societies and solicit the brain and brawn of every clime to come and live with them and help develop the possibilities of that great country. They do not ask where a man is from. They ask if he is an honest man and a good citizen, and if he is, he is as welcome there as he would be anywhere under heaven.

The negroes, for whom the republicans affect so much solicitude are being educated in place of being persecuted and killed off. There is no desire to re-enslave them, and if there were, every fool knows that such a thing could never be done. The prevailing sentiment is that, as the negro is free he should be educated, that he may be made more provident, more moral, and may the better be enabled to discharge the duties of a good citizen. The school laws make the same provision for the blacks as for the whites, and they enjoy the same privileges thereunder. In addition to their private and free schools, they have access to the state agricultural colleges, and in many places their educational facilities compare favorably with those of the whites of either this or that section.

There is no desire in the southern heart to secede from this union. The question of the right to secede was settled by the war, and there is not a corporal's guard of people in this country to-day who believe in the right to secede. We all know that reunion is better than disunion, and no party would go further to prevent such a disruption in our government than would the democratic party. Mr. Talmage on his return from an extended trip through the south a short time ago delivered from his pulpit an earnest eulogy on southern loyalty and hospitality, and General Grant said on his return from his southern tour that he found the southern brethren as loyal and true to the flag as we of the north, and yet these foul-mouthed political leeches continue day after day to utter these base lies. The Grand Rapids Democrat in a recent issue has the following pointed remarks on this subject: "In the name of God, will the republicans never cease their work of demoralization and cultivation of hatred? If it is not desirable to live with our brethren of the south in peace and brotherly kindness, it is certainly not desirable to have them a part and parcel of the union. We had better drive them out from under the protection of the old flag, than continually keep up the war of hate. It is utterly impossible that the different sections of the country should attain that position in the family of states which is right, unless there is an equality in the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges under the constitution. This can only be done by a just recognition of that citizenship which belongs to each member of the great family of which we are composed.

Why did we by the strong arm of the military demonstrate the purposes of the government and the states to form a unity, indissoluble, if one section of the great whole is to be forever arrayed against the other? It is utterly impossible to develop those possibilities which are justly ours, so long as that spirit of sectional animosity is maintained upon which the republican leaders seem to think their success depends. The republican party cannot possibly hope for all time to succeed in political contests upon the issues of the bloody-shirt and hate; if so, the sooner the states return to their original elements the better for this country and the world. The wars of the roses cannot always last, but so long as they do, just so long must we fall short of that destiny so much desired. Comparatively speaking, our country is yet an undeveloped wilderness, and while the spirit of generous rivalry is desirable and proper, the spirit of sectional hatred and partisan purpose of success at all hazards, is equally to be deprecated."

The Stampede.

The stampede from the ranks of the Garfieldites to the Hancockers goes forward with a continuous rush. Amongst the recent recruits are the following:

Ex-U. S. Senators Pool, of North Carolina, and Fowler, of Tennessee, have renounced their allegiance to the former and embraced the true faith. Hon. W. A. Guthrie, republican candidate for governor of the former state, has done likewise.

A Hancock and English pole 150 feet high was raised in the Eighth ward in Syracuse, New York, one night last week by republicans who have come out for Hancock and English. Fifty-one republicans in the ward have signed the roll forming a republican Hancock and English club. The republican Hancock pole was drawn through the principal streets of the city by four horses, preceded by martial music.

Thomas Dumm, of Cambria county, Pennsylvania, formerly a republican, and who was wounded seven times during the war, has just announced himself for Hancock.

A New Yorker writing to a New York paper, says: "I have 150 men employed in my shop, and at the last presidential election 125 of them voted for Hayes and were republicans. Saturday they took a vote which showed 120 Hancock men among them."

Judge Smith of Herkimer, and Jacob Smell, of Fort Plain, Montgomery county, New York, two well known stalwart and influential republicans, addressed the democracy of Canajoharie on Friday of last week, on the occasion of the Hancock and English banner raising at that place. Ex-Sheriff Wagner has also come out for Hancock.

Amongst those announced during the preceding week are the following:

Hon. W. W. Browning, of Brown county, Indiana; Ex-Governor Parris C. Dunning, of Bloomington, this state; Captain Chas. Gill, a prominent Kentucky republican, W. L. Glessner, Clinton, Ill.; Judge Stevens, of Humboldt, Nevada; Hon. J. D. Baldwin, of Storey county, Nevada; Isaac Gilmore and seven sons, of Connellsville, Fayette county, Pa.; Hon. J. J. Ketchum, of Jacksonville, Ill.; Dr. James Berryman, of Montgomery county, Ind.; Col. Jas. Chapman, of Clyde, O.; Julius C. Schultz, of Pine Valley, Cattaraugus county; William Collins, Henry Lone, Major Hurdley, Ellicotsville; Alburn Bro's, (nine of them), of Buck Creek Station, Tippecanoe county; Joseph Nessel, of Allegany, Cattaraugus county, New York; Colonel E. E. Rose, of Bloomfield, Greene county, Ind.; Rev. J. W. Catterson, of Shoals, Martin county, Ind.; Henry J. Johnson, Wilson Webster, Geo. D. Train, of Loogoote, Martin county, Ind.; Geo. W. Vinton, of Moline, Illinois.

In Galva, Henry county, Ill., a Hancock club of 135, whereas our total vote two years ago was 97.

Three counties in Pennsylvania—Cumberland, York and Warren—have 3,225 ex-soldiers enrolled in clubs.

The Hancock legion of Pennsylvania consists of 30,000 ex-Union soldiers.

The People Insulted.

The editors of the Republican last week hired some one to write a column of the vilest slanders and lies we ever saw encompassed in the same space. We say they hired it done from the fact that no one would write such an article unless for money, and then we know that neither of the editors of that moral sheet have brains enough to compose such an article; and, further, that they are known to procure their articles written, just because they have not sense enough to write them themselves. As a text for the article in question, they state that some said a "rebel soldier was better than a Union soldier," etc. Now, to start out, we will state we believe the statement to be a lie of the first water. We don't believe the charge. We challenge the proof, and demand that the editors of the Republican give names, dates and places, and if they will sustain the charge, we agree to, as publicly, condemn the fool for making such a foolish remark as we do any other fool's remark. And we will condemn it just as we condemn the balance of the lies in that article. That article charges that the democratic party is represented by such men as the one who made the remark complained of. Bring on your proof or stand convicted of a lie. It charges that men in the north assert the principles for which the rebels fought, and maintain and vote for them to-day. Prove that or lie again. That democrats say to the maimed and broken-down soldier, that you are lazy and ought to abide by the $18 a month paid you. Lie No. four. That the democratic party will take away the soldiers' pension if they get in power. Lie No. five. Democrats do not nominate war democrats. Lie No. six. Thus the bright Republican says that Hancock, Gray, Manson, Steadman, Ewing, Rosecrans and thousands of other men are not war democrats, that the leaders of the democratic party are guilty of treason and ought to be hanged. Lie No. seven. If it is truth why didn't you hang them? you have been in power for the last twenty years. That Landers retarded Gov. Morton in feeding sick and wounded soldiers. Lie No. eight. But Landers and his party, in 1863, appropriated $2,000,000 of the democratic Indiana money to pay the soldiers, because the United States had not paid them any for seven or eight months, and placed this $2,000,000 in the democratic hands, and after about a quarter of the sum had been paid out Gov. Morton succeeded in obtaining an order from the officers of the United States army refusing to permit democratic Indiana to pay her own soldiers. Landers voted to appropriate $100,000 to be expended in aid of the sick and wounded soldiers of Indiana.

Landers, in 1863, voted for a resolution to congress asking that the pay of private soldiers be raised 25 per cent. or to $16 per month, and that congress pass such a law at its then session. Landers at the same time voted for a resolution asking congress to pass, forthwith, a law whereby the company officers and private soldiers be paid their wages in gold and silver or its equivalent in paper money, and the same kind of funds as pensions to soldiers, their widows and orphans thereby as the resolution states, "placing them on as favorable footing as the bonder or capitalist who loans money to the government."

The Republican says Landers refused to vote another man or soldier to the war. Lie No. nine. That Vorhees called Union soldiers "Lincoln dogs," was a Knight of the Golden Circle, refused aid to the soldier. Lies ten, eleven and twelve. "And thus it is all over the north." What a terrible lie No. thirteen. The men nominated and elected, as a general thing, by the democrats by word and act, are in sympathy with the north. Lie No. fourteen. After all these lies, then, the Republican article gives its beliefs. That if the democratic party gets control of, the government Union soldiers will get no pensions unless the rebel soldiers do. We cannot help a man's belief, nor can we believe he has such "beliefs" when asserted in a mass of fourteen or more lies. A man who can lie at such wholesale strides can believe any, and can say he believes anything. A man who can thus lie about his neighbors is as great an enemy to the community as the prince of liars. He is such a villain that were it not cowardice (for all liars are cowards) he would murder his nearest neighbor. No lie is too wicked, no slander too vile, that he cannot belch forth and spew from his rotten maw upon his neighbors, and those a majority of the people of the Union, like the following: "But in voting the democratic ticket he (the soldier) is risking his benefits and liberties to the men who attempted to destroy the Union, or who sympathized with the rebels." Lie No. fifteen.

If men will lie and teach such lies, is it any wonder that they will go to democratic soldiers and tell them the same stuff? That the democrats will, if they get in power, cut off their pensions; that if the soldiers vote for Hancock they (the republicans) will take away his pension; that to the colored man they say, if the democrats get in power the negroes will be re-enslaved; that soldiers nominated for office don't want democrats to vote for them; that soldiers will say, "I fought democrats four years in the war and will fight them here until the night of the election; that soldiers and republicans can say, "Give the democrats h—l, the more you abuse them the better they will like you."

Neighborhood Nippings.

Hon Franklin Landers will speak at Rome City Sept. 30.

Last Saturday a week ago, a man in Lagrange, named Robert Carney, took passage for eternity by the laudanum route. He left this note:

Dear Julia: I have seen enough of the world. May God bless you all. Good-bye, Julia, and the children, mother and all. My name is Robert Carney. Please send my remains to Wabash City, Indiana.

He has a family, mother and brother living in Wabash. He was a harness-maker, and whisky led to the commission of the suicide.

Kendallville News: Oliver C. Forker, aged 55 years, died Tuesday, August 24. Mr. Forker was one of the old settlers of this county, having come here about forty years ago.

The section of country around Lagrange was visited last Thursday with a violent storm. Hail fell as large as hen eggs, barns were unroofed and corn blown down.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel, under the able management of Mr. E. A. K. Hackett, has been much improved in moral tone, and now has none of the ring of a police gazette. Its editorials, though long, are pointed.

Mr. J. J. Firestone, of the Hicksville (Ohio) Republican, was married last Sunday to Miss Lizzie Eveland, daughter of D. M. Eveland, editor of the Republican. Miss Eveland was the former editress of the Churubusco Herald. We trust that the union may prove a "fat take" for both of them.

Mr. A. Bigfellow, of Churubusco, has undertaken the wonderful feat of eating six hundred pounds of solid food in forty days—an average of fifteen pounds a days. The Herald of last Friday says that up to that time he had passed the fifth day of the feast, and thinks he is Bigfellow enough to succeed. The second day he ate four pounds of dried apples and drank one gallon of water, but did not burst. We would rather be a Bigfellow than a Tanner.

Last Sunday afternoon John Meyer, a German about 28 years of age, was most brutally murdered in Fort Wayne by John and Perry Snurr. Reports indicate that there was some previous misunderstanding between these parties, though it is not known what it is, as the Snurr brothers are silent about the matter. They met Meyer at the Bloomingdale brewery, when the altercation immediately ensued. Meyer had dealt them some pretty effectual blows, and while in a scuffle with Perry Snurr, John Snurr stepped back and got a stick of cord-wood, with which he struck Meyer who, with a pitiful moan, fell to the ground. After Meyer had fallen Snurr dealt several more blows with the stick of wood, badly fracturing the skull. Meyer was picked up and carried to the office of the brewery, and medical aid was called in, but he died in less than an hour. The murderers attempted to escape, and had gotten about two miles out on the Grand Rapids road, but were immediately pursued by Sheriff Munson and brought back and lodged in jail. Too much beer, perhaps, had considerable to do with this terrible crime. Meyer came to America about 17 years ago, and soon afterward located in Fort Wayne. About five years ago he was married. He has been engaged for some time in teaming. He is spoken of by all who know him as a sober and industrious man, who always attended to his own affairs, and never had any difficulty with anyone. He was quite a favorite among his fellows. The Snurrs are said to be hard characters, and have not unfrequently figured in the police courts for various offences, and if justice is given them for this shocking crime they will probaby not disturb society again.

ON the day the Cincinnati convention nominated Hancock, Mrs. Margaret Perry, of New Orleans, gave birth to triplets, two boys and a girl, who have been named Hancock, English, and America.—Ex.

Let Dan. Baldwin hasten to seize upon the above as a badge of distinction between democratic and republican ladies. Or, if one of the latter should happen to follow suit, they might name them Garfield, De Golyer and Mademoiselle Credit-Mobilier. And then how much better for Taylor in the way of a bug-a-boo this would be than even the horrible idea of Texas being divided up into four states! Judge, why not drop the old drivel that has been slobbered through so many mouths before yours, and come boldly forward with the charge that it is the solemn purpose of all the southern ladies to follow suit as above? What a terrible menace that would be against "northern" ascendency! It would be the best shot in your locker.

THE New York News says that Slippery Jim's ticket for Salt river will be numbered 329.

THE New Haven Register asserts that Garfield is seeking the presidency, and the presidency is seeking Hancock.

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

Political Meetings.

Lieut. Gov. Isaac P. Gray

WILL ADDRESS THE PEOPLE OF DEKALB COUNTY ON THE POLITICAL ISSUES, AT AUBURN, SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 4, 1880.

COLONEL GRAY IS AN EXCELLENT SPEAKER, AND WE HOPE THE PEOPLE WILL GIVE HIM A GOOD CROWD.

MR. D. D. MOODY,

Candidate for Representative, will speak in the evening at

STAFFORD CENTER, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 3; CORUNNA, MONDAY, SEPT. 6; SMITHFIELD, CENTER, TUESDAY, SEPT. 7; ST. JOE, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 8; FRANKLIN CENTER, THURSDAY, SEPT. 9; FAIRFIELD CENTER, SATURDAY, SEPT. 11.

"Go, Poor Devils."

In the regular line of its vocation as a public journal, the COURIER has had occasion to notice, as a matter of local news, the arrest of a mountebank, for some little time sojourning here, whom we believe, for reasons best known to ourself, to be a scoundrel, and who is given to the frequent practice of disturbing the peace of our town and other places, and we spoke of his conduct in proper terms of reprehension. The parties in control of the columns of the Republican have allowed this to serve as a pretext for admission to their columns of a vulgar and brutal personal attack on the editor of this paper, purporting to have been furnished by John Korth, the individual referred to. In doing this they place themselves outside the pale of anything like legitimate journalism, and place us at liberty to make use of matter furnished us for publication imputing to the real writer of the article referred to, and also to one of the ostensible editors of that paper, participation in very scandalous transactions. We refused publicity as to either at the time, and do not now feel that the example set is one we are wholly justified in following, even by reason of the provocation given. Mayhap we may at some future time be inclined to tear the mask gently from the hypocrite who thinks he is not known because he scribbles anonymously, under the guise of having it supposed his venom emanates from others; but, for the present, we dispose of him and his coadjutors by saying to them, in substance, as Uncle Toby did to the fly, "Go, poor devils. There is room enough in the world for thee and me too."

The Republican Bugbear—Afraid to Go.

Every republican speech we have heard, every one we have read, and every republican from the highest to the lowest—from Bob Taylor to little Weamy Weamer—are so terribly scared about the prospects of their defeat that they are crying their bitterest tears, and blubbering that if the democrats get in power, (meaning if they shut down on salary-grabbing, credit-mobilierism, DeGolyer contracts and continue to cut down on expenditures), the country will have gone to the demnition bow-wows, and that the confederate brigadiers will control everything, and that a thousand other dire and dreadful things will happen. Let us see how powerful these brigadiers of the south are. The total vote in 1876 was about 8,300,000. The republicans had of that, negroes and all, about 4,000,000. The democrats in the north had 2,670,000, and the "rebel brigadiers" in the south had 1,600,000—over 1,000,000 less than the democrats in the north, and less than one-fifth of the whole vote. And yet these terrified republican spouters, in the vain hope of being thereby enabled to hang on to the government pap, assert that these brigadiers are going to have things all their own way, and that one-fifth can eat up or control four-fifths! It won't all do, though. The credit mobilier, DeGolyer treasury leeches must all go, and the brave and honest Hancock be allowed to try his hand.

General Blair for Hancock.

The Hancock army goes marching on, gaining recruits by the hundreds in every state. DeKalb county will have its share of the glory. Among the recent accessions, we take pleasure in mentioning that of Gen. Lew. Blair, who has been a life-long republican; who served with distinction in the army; who has made more republican speeches in this county than any other man in it, and who will now be sneered at by the republicans for having the manhood and independence to publicly assert his political opinions in private and upon the stump. Gen. Blair takes issue with the republican party and its principles, and is enthusiastically supporting the brave soldier and pure statesman, Gen. Hancock. His speeches abound with good and sufficient reasons why the republican party should be relieved from the further control of the government, and his influence will be felt by the republicans of this county when the votes are counted out in October.

Another Pole.

In spite of the threatening appearance of the weather, quite a number of persons from this place and adjoining localities gathered at Carmer's schoolhouse, Tuesday evening, where another Hancock and English pole was raised and good speeches were delivered by S. M. Hench, of Fort Wayne, and D. D. Moody. Although a drizzling rain was falling, it in no way interfered with the proceedings, and the programme was carried out satisfactorily to everybody. Score one more and "go ahead with the music."

Love's Labor Begun.

The weather, though distressingly uncomfortable, seems to have had no effect on the matrimonial market, the following people having procured marriage licenses in August: Jno. Franklin Kagey and Sarah Jane Ritter, Chas. M. Thair and Leora B. Flint, Jos. W. Reeder and Mary Ann Flickinger, Jno. T. Picker and Luverne Dysert, Peter J. Showalter and Sarah Ann Dilgard, Henry Lindorffer and Caroline Hagenaw, Lemuel Nelson and Mary Ann Frick, Franklin Fisk and Ella I. Imhoff, Cornelius C. Carr and Barbara A. Imhoff, Winfield Maxwell and Maria Jacobs, William M. Baughn and Jane L. Goldey, John G. Martz Jr. and Lizzie F. Mader.

County Taxes—DeKalb's Economy.

The editors of the republican papers are envious concerning the democratic economy prevailing in DeKalb county. We have a statement from Steuben county, where they probably never had a democratic board of commissioners, and where the republican majority is anywhere from 1,000 to the whole number of votes in the county, and the county levy this year is 75 cents on the $100 valuation—is greater than ours—and where they do not have one bridge to build where we have a dozen, and where they do not have a stream in the whole county as large as Cedar creek is at Waterloo. What say the honest republican voters to this? Contrast the amount of the levy with that of 60 cents on the $100 in DeKalb, and then say whether you want to put republicans in power.

Falsehood Unparalleled.

The corps of liars now traveling over the country in the interest of a certain republican candidate for a county office, ought to be, and will be shown up in their true colors, unless their contemptible work is stopped at once. In the beginning of the campaign the republican papers had a great deal to say about mud-throwing, which talk was done with a view of shielding their candidates from legitimate and just assaults through the press; at the same time the republican editors and other leading republican politicians were quietly circulating all manner of lies against democratic candidates. If the republican leaders desire a bitter campaign in this county, they ought to be accommodated. The democracy will lose nothing by such a fight. In an open contest we are sure to win, but if an unprincipled lot of scalawags are permitted to secretly villify and lie about our candidates without an effort on the part of democrats to correct such misrepresentations, they may succeed in lying some of their candidates into office. The republicans have invited a personal contest by instituting and encouraging a guerrilla fight. Let it come.

"A Soldier Insulted."

An article in last week's Auburn Republican, under the above heading—and which we have reason to believe was written by Geo. W. Gordon—is in toto a misrepresentation of facts. The "several young democrats" alluded to deny every charge therein made, and either of those "young democrats" will be believed in preference to a man whom the public knows to be guilty of gross misrepresentations upon all questions connected with politics. The "young democrats" say that no such language was used as that quoted in the article in question, and that the writer of that article manufactured the language attributed to them for the purpose of prejudicing democratic ex-soldiers—whom the republicans have not been otherwise able to scare into the republican ranks—against the democratic party. Now, what are the facts concerning this insult (?) offered to an ex-soldier and a citizen of this city, being "accosted on the street by several young democrats?" Our informant says that a loud-mouthed worshiper of Gordon, at the time alluded to, undertook to abuse democrats for voting the democratic ticket, but got the worst of the argument and was about to leave the crowd, when Gordon came along and put in his lip, as he usually does. These "young democrats"—and old democrats, too—know Gordon as one of the blatant demagogues who delights in saying that "any man who votes the democratic ticket is a rebel," and other equally untrue and unreasonable expressions. Knowing these things of Gordon, induced the "young democrats" to tell him what they thought of him in rather plain terms, and to get even with them a whole column of filth is injected into the Republican,—the whole article based upon untruths, the author knowing them to be such when he wrote them.

EX-SOLDIER.

—See the Hotto company.

—Theatre three nights yet this week.

—Miss Emma Bodine is visiting at Richmond, this state.

—Nobbier than ever—those fall hats at Mrs. A. J. Little's.

—Landers and Porter to-morrow evening at Fort Wayne.

—The Ft. Wayne fair begins next week. It has big attractions.

—Old reliable H. & M. oysters, nice and fresh, at Sherm. Hollister's.

—W. H. Kiblinger, of the corner hardware store, was in Toledo Friday.

—Frank Dills had some fun at Fort Wayne Friday. He passed the day there.

—Mrs. Little has just received her millinery goods for fall. Call and see them.

—The rolling stone gathers no moss, perhaps, but it gathers the barefooted boy every time.

—John Harris—Auburn Junction—Sunday—girl. He "set 'em up" to the boys all around.

—Capt. Baughn, of this place, and Mrs. Goldey, of Garrett, were married by Rev. H. J. Norris this week.

—Dr. Marine, of Fort Wayne, will preach in the Methodist church at this place next Sabbath evening.

—Will. Shaffer, of Davenport's, has gone to Niagara Falls to take a bath. Eleven towels went with him.

—The Hotto Comedy company is not immense in proportions, but it is in the way of a first-class little theatre troupe.

—All the latest styles in fall millinery can be seen at Mrs. A. J. Little's, she having just received her fall stock.

—D. D. Moody is making a thorough and spirited canvass of this county, in which he is doing some effective work.

—Miss Sadie Hollister got home Tuesday from her two months' visit at her old home in Ohio, and all her friends are welcoming her.

—Postmaster Joe Rainier has gone west to get mar—ket reports and other interesting statistics. There is no telling when he will get back.

—Reduced rates will be given on the Jackson road to those wishing to attend the big political meeting at Ft. Wayne to-morrow, Friday, Sept. 3.

—Tickets will be sold at half fare to all persons who want to take in the fair at Fort Wayne, which begins next week. Buy your tickets over the Jackson road.

—The result of the railroad injunction case was as we predicted, Judge McClellan refusing to grant it. The case, however, has been appealed, we are informed.

—Hon. Andrew Ellison, of Lagrange, candidate for presidential elector in this district, will speak in Auburn one week from next Monday evening, or September 13.

—So great a pressure on our space prevents the appearance this week of a communication from Spencerville. Campaign times make things lively in a printing-office.

—Excellent oysters at Hollister's restaurant, 25 and 35 cents a can. In this month there is an "r", so you can eat oysters with impunity—or with a spoon, just as you like.

—Bring on your Harrisons, your Baldwins and your Taylors. The more republican speeches such men make in this county, the greater will be the democratic majority.

—Hon. W. D. Hill, member of congress from the sixth district of Ohio, made a rousing speech last night at Jackson Center. Hear him to-night at Franklin Center.

—A report of the annual Sunday-school picnic of Richland township, this county, has been displaced this week by other prior matter. It will be found on the first page next week.

—Hon. Richard Gregg, greenback candidate for governor, will speak at Auburn on Monday, September 13, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and at Waterloo in the evening. COMMITTEE.

—Dr. C. C. Hiatt says: Twenty years' special practice with children has led me to test Rinehart's Worm Lozenges. I give them my unqualified endorsement. Ask your druggist for them.

—Clyde Moore is again attending the famous normal school at Valparaiso, having departed last Friday for that point. He says "the normal at old Valpo beats Notre Dame at South Bend all hollow."

—Hon. S. S. Shutt, our candidate for joint representative, is receiving many merited compliments from the press of both parties. He is an honest, efficient and economical man, and there is no disputing it.

—The Auburn Hancock and English club will meet at the club room, in the rear of T. H. Sprott's office, to-morrow, (Friday) evening at 7 o'clock, promptly, to transact important business. A full attendance is desired.

—The new church at Metcalf's Corners will be dedicated next Sabbath morning by Rev. A. Marine, of Fort Wayne. A general invitation is extended, and those who wish can ride out and back for 25 cents.

—The M. E. social has been postponed until Tuesday evening, when it will be held at the residence of Mrs. G. Clark. Those wishing to attend will meet at the church at half past six. Conveyance will be furnished for ten cents.

Garrett Letter.

GARRETT, Aug. 30, 1880.

EDITOR COURIER: We had one of the largest political demonstrations here last Friday evening ever witnessed in Garrett. The boys had just received one hundred torches on Thursday, so there was no time to be had to practice in torch-light tactics, although they deserve credit for the display they made. An excursion train of three coaches was run from Avilla, all filled with Hancock voters, each accompanied with a torch. There were also large torch-light processions from the neighboring villages of Butler Center and St. Johns, led by a splendid band of music which was highly appreciated by all spectators. The Auburn band was also present on the occasion; as usual it did well, was highly appreciated and is deserving of all praise. Hon. W. G. Colerick, our next congressman, addressed the meeting in his free and forcible manner on the political questions of the day, in which he made some telling points. At the close of Mr. Colerick's address, General Blair, of DeKalb county, was introduced, who appeared on the stand, amidst cheers, in behalf of Hancock and English. General Blair is well known to the citizens of DeKalb county, and has been a life-long republican. He made some very good remarks and gave his reasons for supporting Hancock and English. We are glad to see the general take the course he has, and believe he will strengthen the cause of democracy. It will be remembered that General Blair was one of the most ardent workers the republican party had in DeKalb county, and is well posted in the principles of each of the parties; he gives good, plausible reasons for giving his support to the right cause.

Some of the most ardent republicans here are having quite a time among themselves and think they have the democrats puzzled in regard to the authorship of the untruthful and lying telegram which was sent from here to the Chicago Tribune of August 9, which has been copied by all the leading republican papers of the state. I wish to state that there is no mystery connected with it, as the language in said item is easily identified. I also wish to remark that the author of said item is an infamous liar in every sense of the word. We do not pretend to say what influence this scurrilous item will have in other parts, but we do assert that it has had more influence in uniting the democrats than anything that could have been brought to bear within themselves in Garrett, which time will prove. If the author of said item thinks he has weakened the democracy of Keyser township by making the false statement "that he has been a life-long democrat, but now declares himself a Garfield man," we wish him happiness in his imagination, and would advise him not to forget one of the ten commandments—"Thou shalt not lie," for "a liar shall never enter the kingdom of Heaven."

They now cast up to us that we throw mud. Who threw the first handful? It was not our desire to commence any political controversy. Who disturbed our meetings? Who insulted our speakers? Who commenced throwing mud through the newspapers? Who blew our torch-lights out on the public streets last Friday evening at the door of the republican headquarters, while under the influence of smuggled rot-gut whisky? Four years ago the republicans of Garrett got up a Hayes and Wheeler club; drunkenness vice and all kinds of licentiousness was their creed; decent, respectable republicans were ashamed of them; some of their members became so depraved that the courts had to send them over the road to Michigan City for reformation. Now, again, we have a Garfield and Arthur club here in Garrett, and what do we hear? A few days ago one of their pure, undefiled saints very unceremoniously disappeared; the reports are that he left behind a poor, homeless, feeble-minded young female to bring forth an innocent witness of his damnable guilt. This same political club extends an invitation to the ladies of Garrett to attend their meetings. Has the republican literary asses of Garrett got anything more to say about "vulgar democracy?" We would advise them to clean out their own foul nest. When the COURIER of August 19, which contained my first letter, was received at the republican headquarters here in Garrett, it produced a commotion in their radical camp as though a double-barreled shot-gun had been discharged into a drove of guttersnipes. The big dry-land "Bull-Head," whom nature has endowed with more intestines than brains, and who occupies the honorable position of dishing up illegitimate "forty-rod" to his republican constituents, has let his tongue go ever since like a mag-pie's tail in a thunder-gust. He says that in my first letter to the COURIER I stated that a certain man here sent that telegram to the Chicago Tribune, and that in my second letter I accused another man, and that neither of the men thus accused had anything to do with it. I wish to invite this conceited "rooster," who has been doing so much crowing, to read those letters again and see if I accused any person in particular of sending that dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. He also appears to be taking considerable interest in the matter, and appears to be well posted as to who the lying author is. I will inform the gentleman that we have not interfered with him in our articles to the COURIER, and if he is desirous of taking part in the game, we are ready to deal him out a full hand. There are some republicans in Garrett whom we respect and recognize as being honorable, worthy citizens; and our remarks, therefore, are confined only to those who have forced this warfare on us by their own disgraceful conduct, and to whom we have no apology to offer. I still remain,

"AN IGNORANT MOSSBACK."

—Our people have not patronized the theatre as well as they should, for two reasons: First, because it is a deserving troupe that presents only the most popular and attractive plays, and second, because it appears under the auspices of the band. Give them good houses for the remaining three nights.

—Rev. W. Conzelman leaves to-day for his new charge at Dillsborough, Dearborn county, this state, whither he has been transferred by the recent conference. Mr. Conzelman is a quiet, christian gentleman who has done faithful work here and made many friends who regret to see him go.

—Democrats of DeKalb county, remember that Lieutenant-Governor Isaac P. Gray will speak in Auburn Saturday evening. Large delegations from the neighboring towns will be here, and it is hoped that every democrat who possibly can will turn out and help to give this distinguished gentleman a rousing reception. Let there be such an outpouring of democrats as was never known in DeKalb county.

—The Auburn Historical Society will meet at Gordon's art gallery to-morrow (Friday) evening. A paper on the life and character of William Cullen Bryant has been prepared, and will be read by one of the members; also some of his poems, extracts from letters, etc. The committee has taken a great deal of pains to prepare a programme, and we hope the members will encourage them by their presence.

E. L. CASEBEER, President.

Off to DeKalb County.

Under the above heading, the Fort Wayne Sentinel, of Tuesday evening, has this to say concerning the trial of George Hazzard—deah Geawge—which comes off this month:

George Hazzard, formerly of Auburn, the notorious bank swindler, will be tried in the DeKalb circuit court in September on the charge of forgery and false pretense. S. M. Hench, Esq., the well known prosecutor of this county, has been engaged to assist Prosecutor Adams, of that circuit, in the trial of the case. Mr. Hench left for DeKalb county to-day to look after the preliminary arrangements for the trial in which his services have been enlisted.

Joint Senatorial and Judicial Conventions.

WATERLOO, IND., Aug. 27, 1880.

The democracy of the counties of DeKalb and Steuben, by their chosen delegates, met pursuant to adjournment, in the law office of Husselman & Leas, on Friday, August 27, 1880, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for joint-senator from the counties of DeKalb and Steuben.

On motion T. C. Mays, of Auburn, was called to the chair, and W. K. Sheffer, of Angola, elected secretary.

The chairman stated briefly the object of the meeting, and announced that nominations would be in order. H. Freygang nominated Jesse A. Carpenter, of Steuben, for joint-senator, and, no other names being presented, Sol. Barney moved that Mr. Carpenter be declared the unanimous nominee of the convention for joint-senator. Carried.

No further business being presented, the convention adjourned sine die.

T. C. MAYS, Chairman.

W. K. SHEFFER, Sec'y.

JUDICIAL CONVENTION.

The judicial convention was called immediately upon the adjournment of the senatorial convention, and, on motion, the same officers were called to preside.

No delegates from Noble county being in attendance, B. F. Dawson, Esq., read a telegram which he had just received, authorizing him to cast the vote of Noble county.

B. F. Dawson presented the name of Geo. B. Adams, Esq., and, on motion, his nomination was made by acclamation as candidate for prosecutor of the thirty-fifth judicial circuit of Indiana.

On motion the secretary was instructed to furnish a copy of the proceedings for publication in the several democratic papers of the county and Indiana State Sentinel.

T. C. MAYS, Chairman.

W. K. SHEFFER, Sec'y.

Success.

The wonderful success which has attended the introduction of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, is doubtless due to the fact that it is an honest medicine, and will perform all that is claimed for it, and Dr. White must certainly have great confidence in his medicine, for he authorizes all druggists to sell it under a positive guarantee, such as is given on no other medicine in the market. It is a specific for Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, and Constipation of the Bowels, and as a blood purifier and renovator, it is positively unequaled. Pint bottles only one dollar. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug-store. 35 2w.

Wanted—To Buy.

Forty or sixty acres of land within 5 or 6 miles of Auburn. Terms of sale and price must be reasonable. Apply to 34-3t. THOS. H. SPROTT.

School in Dress-Making.

I will teach the cutting and fitting system by chart, also styles of trimming, etc., to a class beginning on Monday, September 6. For terms, enquire at my rooms, up stairs, right side of hall leading to Gordon's art gallery.
35-2w Miss R. A. CANON.

Wanted—To Trade.

A good two-story frame house with L and, two lots, on west side of Main street, in Auburn, for 40 or 60 acres of land in DeKalb county. Will pay money difference. Apply to 34-3t. THOS. H. SPROTT.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female, and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind. Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-1f.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on kidney complaints and rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates, has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus diarrhoea, coughs, colds, catarrh and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at Casebeer & Matheny's and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine. 34-1y

HAIL CLOTHING BUYERS!

To the Americans!
To the Germans!
To the Irish!
To the French!
To the Italians!
To the Citizens of all Nations!

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

And their Salesmen

GREET YOU!

Perhaps in our list of salesmen you may recognize an acquaintance. If not call and see us anyway. We will make a good impression on you (we hope).

FIRST OF ALL YOU WILL FIND

I. Lauferty and Alex. Lauferty,
Sam'l Morris and Harry Graff,
Wm. Stellhorn and Sam'l Arnold,
Amede Dodane and Frank Chapman,

Who can speak most any language, and can talk

CLOTHING,
HATS,
CAPS,
FURNISHING GOODS

In a way that will certainly interest you. As for stock we can safely say it is second to none in Indiana in point of Quantity, Quality and all other fine points.

OUR PRICES SELL THE GOODS:

One Price, Square Dealing always at

A. S. LAUFERTY & Co., C. O. D.,

NO. 9 EAST MAIN STREET,

Exactly Opposite the North Door of the Court House, with a large American Flag over the sidewalk.

New Goods Arriving Daily — Fort Wayne, Indiana. — Open till 9 at Night

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

The Unit Rule Applies Here!

BARGAINS

Neither Private Nor Confidential.

n e Black Alpaca Coats, Men's	75c
Two Linen Dusters, Men's,	76c
Three White Duck Vests, New	75c
Four White Dress Shirts, Linen Bosom	75c
Five Blue Flannel Derby Suits	$7.50

BOYS' SIZES IN PROPORTION.

SAM, PETE & MAX

Star Clothing House,

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

A LOVER'S DEPARTING SONG.

BY ROBERT FRANKENSTEIN DOTY.

While blustering winds around me roar
And dash to fragments thoughts of mine,
I muse and ponder with love's lore
And ask to bask in friendship's shrine.

Shall obstinacy stifle down
That love which I have often shown,
As tears the memory so drown
And harden hearts to hearts of stone?

Can heaven proclaim a blessing rare
And leave an impress on the soul?
Can nature with her flowers fair,
Teach lessons that are wholly whole?

Yes, yes, dear girl, it can but do
That which will most ennoble man;
It speaks out boldly, and so true,
While nature says: "Be with that van

"Which seeks to show its lovely power
Unto our lovely, gentle race."
Oh! let me love the "Prairie Flower"—
Ah! let not time her form efface.

Oh! let the jewels of thy heart
Forever shine in radiance fair,
And let not anger send a dart
To make one linger and despair.

And may I say with him who said,
"Oh! cherish grandly, strong and long."
Oh! let thy heart become not dead,
But let it rise up bright and strong!

And picture out to me the way,
That I should travel as I go;
And brighter make my darker day,
Which once was bitterest of woe.

But say! I know you will not yield
To one who is so very low;
I dream that I must leave the field—
Ah! like the Chinese, I must go!

I do but go with deep regrets,
Still wishing that I knew you more;
I hope that you will ne'er forget
The heart that beateth o'er and o'er.

Dear "Flower"—Ah! I would I were
Beside thee close—to speak—
I'd press thy hand that is so fair,
And make an impress on thy cheek!

While you are traveling on the road
Of joys, of merry passing youth,
Look out upon the highway broad,
And speak for me a kindly truth!

Good-by, good-by, mayhap fore'er—
We may not ever meet;
The road is rough, but we must bear
The bitter with the sweet!

Good-by, good-by, my lady sweet,
May yours be ever bliss;
On earth mayhap we'll never meet—
I give to thee a kiss.

BENTON, ILL.

A SUMMER'S TRIP.

BY LIZZIE R. M'KINNEY.

"Pwease, mamma, let Fweddie go. Fweddie 'ants to go fwisin', too. Fweddie likes to fwis so bad."

And the little 3-year-old stood twirling his tiny straw hat, his great pleading eyes full of tears as he watched his "pwetty young mamma," as he called her, pack her valise for an early start, for she and "Fwed's" papa were a very essential part of a very gay party that were to leave the next morning for several weeks' shooting and fishing at the lakes.

"Oh, Fred, dear, run away; don't tease mamma, please, when she is so busy! Here take mamma's boots down to Norah, and tell her to polish them; that's a darling little man."

"But Fwed ain't a man. 'Fwed's mamma's dear, darling little baby boy!' zat's fwat mamma always says, only when she wants Fwed to stay at home. Fwed don't want to be a man. Fwed wants to be a little boy and do wiz mamma. Pwease, mamma!"

And the tears now became full-grown sobs, as he caught her around the neck and clung to her with all the strength of his baby arms, as she leaned forward to hand him the boots.

"Ah! ah! mamma didn't think her boy was such a baby as all this! Come, run down stairs now," and she loosened the plump little arms. "Mamma don't want to have to be cross to her little Fred. Run fast, now, and when you come back we'll rock and sing and send nurse clear off and mamma'll put her little boy to bed herself. Won't that be nice?"

And Fred, with a shadow of a smile, though the deep, quivering sighs attested that the cry was not all gone yet, pattered off down stairs, dangling mamma's dainty boots, intent upon the errand to be performed.

"Why can't you take him?" asked "Papa Harry," who outside of the home circle was known as Dr. Leslie. "It's too bad to leave the poor little fellow, I declare; it takes away all the pleasure of the trip. Come, Min, what do you say? let's take him."

"Well, Dr. Leslie, you may take him and your daughter, too, if you desire; she is only two years older, and is doubtless as anxious to 'fwis' as Fred is. But, as for me, I want a little recreation and rest, and if you take them you will assume the entire responsibility—babies, nurse and all. You gentlemen talk very magnanimously indeed, but you take a mother's place for just one week, and the probability is that you would not run away for a little while, but altogether. I do truly believe that I don't take a half dozen steps a day when at home that either Fred or Bess, or both, are not after me. I sometimes think if there was a single place about the premises that I could slip to for just two minutes and be alone, I should be extremely grateful. Yesterday, I laid down for a short nap, and hadn't more than got settled and closed my eyes when I felt a scrambling on the side of the bed, and in a moment Fred's arms were around my neck and his little hand patting me on the cheek, as he nestled up close and whispered: 'Mamma dothe you lug your little Fwed?' with such irresistible sweetness that I of course said 'good-by to sleep,' and turned to receive his caresses; and, in fact, that is the way my naps usually end; both he and Bess usually take that time to assure me of their affection, bless their innocent hearts. But still, I do really get nervous and tired sometimes."

"Well, little wife, I do sympathize with you and all the rest of womankind in all your trials and vexations," said Dr. Leslie, as with a caressing movement he drew his wife to him. "But then, dear, this would be a desolate world to us without our babies, after all. But I presume they will do very well without us for a little while. The best place for children, after all, is at home, and Norah seems to be perfectly good and trusty; so don't worry about it. I know you do need rest; and we want a little more of the old color here, too," and he playfully pinched the slightly tinted cheeks.

"I am sure, Harry, that you know there are none who sacrifice themselves to their children more than I do," continued Mrs. Leslie. "There is Mrs. Col. Brighton scolds me continually; she scarcely sees her children day in and day out—leaves them almost entirely to their old black nurse. She often laughs, and says they think more of Mammy than they do of her; and Mrs. Eaton, you never see her with her children—the nurse always has charge of them."

"Well, I don't think any one will have charge of that baby of hers very long; it is a beautiful child, but the most fragile little thing I ever saw. Last night, just at dusk, its nurse had it out, and when I passed it it was sitting in its perambulator alone on the edge of the sidewalk, in a little cobweb of a dress of embroidery and lace—the poor little thing!—perfectly blue in the chilliness of the damp evening air, without a thing on its head or around it; the nurse at a neighboring gate, wrapped in a handsome crimson shawl, doubtless the property of the baby, which she had appropriated when a safe distance from home. But I am humbly thankful that my wife possesses neither the heart nor the conscience of either Mrs. Brighton or Mrs. Eaton, and do you know, dear, that it pains me exceedingly to hear you speak of them as examples of mothers? for the name, as applied to them, is simply a mockery. My prayer is that God may ever preserve you from any temptation which might lead you in the footsteps of either. But there comes Fred for his promised rock and swing," and, catching up the little fellow, he placed him in his mother's arms, and, kissing both, left them for a little while to attend to some necessary matter of business.

The next evening found our friends seated just outside of the great tent which had spread its white wings under the noble old pines skirting the lake shore. There in the quiet peacefulness of that midsummer evening, the moon shining benignly down upon the shadowy scene, seemed a fitting place in its grand solitude for the forgetfulness of all cares and anxieties, and a merry party indeed was here assembled, as the lively chatter, social converse, music and song fully attested. But this, the first evening, they separated early to retire to rest, of which they all felt the need after the long day's travel.

"Why, Min dear, what means this long face and subdued air?" asked Dr. Leslie, coming suddenly upon his wife, as she stood waiting for him at the tent door; "seems to me this is the last place in the world for a long face, surrounded as we are by the beauty and sublime grandeur of this exquisite lakeside scenery. Look at that broad expanse of water with its multitude of waves, lifting their silver-crested heads, murmuring and whispering to each other as they meet only to part in a thousand shining crystals, and these trees too, these great majestic trees, swaying, almost moaning; their whispered chants scarcely audible above the accompaniment of the restless, tossing, frolicksome waves. Why, little wife, what could be more grand or delightful, and only a few short weeks to enjoy it all! Come, brighten up, we must enjoy every moment to show our appreciation and thankfulness to the Giver of all good."

"Yes, I know, but it's all so still and solemn, it almost makes me 'so fwaid,' as Fred says, when he cuddles up so close in the night," and Minnie Leslie slipped her hand in her husband's arm and drew closer. "And I can't help but think how disappointed Bess and Fred must have been this morning, when they got up and found papa and mamma gone. But I guess I'm about as big a baby as either of them after all," and she latched a little faint sort of a laugh. "But I'll be all right in the morning. My little molehills that I would scarcely give a thought to during the day would become mountains at night, from the days of my babyhood."

"Oh, yes, all you need is a little rest; you're tired and nervous to-night; to-morrow you'll be all right."

And sure enough, on the morrow not one gayer in the party could be found; all care was thrown to the breeze with the first rays of the morning sun; and that day, a fair sample of those that followed, was one of unalloyed enjoyment. Fishing, shooting, rowing, the programme for the day, finished with music and dancing in the evening. And into the spirit of it all she entered with all the zest of her ever-exuberant nature; not one could take a steadier aim, or row a boat more skillfully, for Minnie Leslie, in her girlhood days, had developed a decided disposition to be what some proper persons term "fast," until tamed by the love of her grave, noble-hearted husband, who, though he admired the bright, wild, winsome ways, loved her for the warm, true heart, which he knew existed and beat far away in the depths of a true womanly nature. With a letter every day or so from home, apprising the parents of the welfare of the little ones, the days glided by in uninterrupted pleasure. The weeks are gone and we again peep into the home where mamma and papa are now expected. Although several hours before time for the train, we find Norah preparing the little ones for their advent, which, indeed, was no easy task. Perfectly wild with delight, it was utterly impossible for them to stand still two minutes at a time; but, finally, the task was finished, and Bess and Fred stood waiting in the parlor, looking very much more like fairies in their dainty muslins, ribbons, and slippers than the two veritable flesh-and-blood children who, just before their debut into the bath-tub, had resembled very much the African species of humanity, having been engaged for the last hour or so in the very entertaining and diverting occupation of piling coal dust on each other's heads for the express purpose of watching it roll down their faces and over their little white dresses, all of which they thoroughly enjoyed, judging from the shrieks of merriment proceeding from the coal-house, where Norah had finally discovered them; and now, to be imprisoned in the parlor in this painfully nice condition for an hour or two was more than the human nature of two such wee tots could stand. They concluded that Norah's presence would help matters considerably, and proceeded at once to call her, but, as no answer came to Fred's stentorian "Nowah, Nowah," they concluded to go in search of her. The bath-room being the last place where they had seen her, consequently to it they repaired, but nothing greeted them there save the great bath-tub, which stood invitingly full of water. "Well, I won'er where Nowah is. Mamma always tells her her must 'muse us when we's dwessed up, so we don't get dirty; now she's wunned off, so we must 'muse our own selves, I s'pose. Let's do fwisseen in 'is bid baff tub, Bess, till mamma comes, and here's a whole spool of twead; we can have gweat long lines," continued he, running to the window. "Nowah always gwives us such wee short lines."

"But these are too long," suggested Bess.

"Oh, no, wey ain't, only 'e baff tub's too short. I wish we had a gweat long wiver to fwis in; but, oh! Bess," he cried, jumping up and down gleefully, "Nowah's don an' lef' the cwistern open. We can go an fwis in 'at, 'en our lines won't be too long," and away bounded both children. And all was quiet the next half, when suddenly the neighborhood was aroused by one prolonged agonized shriek, and hurrying in the direction of the sound the neighbors found Norah in a dead faint just beside the open cistern, and little Bess rubbing her eyes in awestruck wonder wakening from a nap she had been taking on the shaded grass just a short distance beyond. And peering into the great open-mouthed cistern nothing was to be seen there save a little white sailor hat floating slowly and silently on the unrippled surface. And when a few moments later the front door of the handsome house opened and Minnie Leslie came bounding upstairs, calling gleefully for her pets, she was met by pale, awestruck faces which seemed filled with dread and fear as she approached.

"Why, friends," she cried, then suddenly a consciousness of some dire evil seemed to take possession of her, and growing deadly pale she piteously asked, "My babies, are they sick?" As she laid her hand on the door of her room, but before she could turn the knob, a kindly hand was laid on hers to draw her away, but she emphatically threw it off and pushed on into the room. Occupied only by the silent figure of little Fred, stretched on his tiny white bed, and from whose limp, still body still trickled the little rivulets of water, the long yellow curls—now straight and reaching below the little, plump waist—the white dress, broad sash and tiny blue slippers, the busy little hands all so cold, wet and still, met the gaze of the mother whose agonized shrieks again and again rang through the great, still house as she bounded across the room and caught the little one in her arms, begging, pleading, oh, so piteously! for just one word—to wake up and say "Mamma" just once more.

"Oh, my darling! my darling! won't you never put your little warm arms around my neck again, and ask in your sweet little way, 'Mamma, doth you lug me?' and wait for the answer of kisses, which was always yours; for, my darling, I did love you! God knows I loved my baby boy! but why—why did I ever leave him? If I had stayed with my babies, God would never have sent this cruel punishment!"

So she talked and moaned the whole night through, holding fast to the little, lifeless form—all efforts to take him away proving unavailing—and not until the first day-dawn did the bright, glittering eyes once close; then, suddenly, came the blessed swoon, and she lay passive and helpless in her husband's arms, unconscious of her sorrow and the agony with which his own heart was well-nigh bursting, but smothering for her sake, and, in the months that followed, when her life was given back after the raging dilirium of the long weeks of brain fever, and she moved about the house a mere shadow of herself, she learned to lean upon the strong arm of a kind Father, who, "though He chasteneth, still loveth," and, in time, she grew the same cheerful, smiling Minnie of old, and she thought of her little one only as an inmate of that bright, beautiful city where "Never sets the sun nor fades the leaf." Though she still pales slightly and answers tenderly, "I can't leave my little ones," if asked by a stranger to her experience if she contemplates a summer trip.

BUSHNELL, ILL.

Some Men's Wives.

Three men of wealth meeting, not long since, in New York, the conversation turned upon their wives. Instead of finding fault with women in general, and their wives in particular, each one obeyed the wise man's advice, and "gave 'honor' unto his wife."

"I tell you what it is," said one of the men, "they may say what they please about the uselessness of modern women, but my wife has done her share in securing our success in life. Everybody knows that her family was aristocratic, and exclusive, and all that, and when I married her she had never done a day's work in her life; but when W. & Co. failed, and I had to commence at the foot of the hill again, she discharged the servants, and chose out a neat little cottage, and did her own housekeeping until I was better off again."

"And my wife," said a second, "was an only daughter, caressed and petted to death; and everybody said, 'Well, if he will marry a doll like that, he'll make the greatest mistake of his life;' but when I came home the first year of our marriage, sick with a fever, she nursed me back to health, and I never knew her to murmur because I thought we couldn't afford any better style or more luxuries."

"Well, gentlemen," chimed in a third, "I married a smart, healthy, pretty girl, but she was a regular blue-stocking. She adored Tennyson, doted on Byron, read Emerson, and named the first baby Ralph Waldo and the second Maud; but I tell you what 'tis," and the speaker's eyes grew suspiciously moist, "when we laid little Maud in her last bed at Auburn, my poor wife had no remembrances of neglect or stinted motherly care; and the little dresses that still lie in the locked drawer were all made by her own hands."—Journal of Commerce.

"I WOULD announce to the congregation that, probably by mistake, there was left at the meeting-house this morning a small cotton umbrella, much damaged by time and tear, and of an exceedingly pale blue color; in the place whereof was taken a very large black silk umbrella of great beauty. Blunders of this sort, my brethren, are getting a little too common."

MANY people who hunt for happiness are continually finding fault.

BODIES FOR DISSECTION.

Disadvantages Under Which Main Physicians Labor.

In a free talk with a reporter of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, a prominent physician and surgeon said: "The law of the State provides that each medical student, before he receives his degree of M. D., shall dissect. Another law of the State provides that the body of no person shall be given up for dissection unless it be the body of a criminal, who has suffered death by hanging; and in that case, even, if a desire is expressed by the condemned man or his friends that his body be buried, his body cannot be claimed for the dissecting-table. The last straw the Legislature piled on was when it abolished capital punishment, and made it absolutely impossible for us to get bodies for dissection in a legal way. The laws, as they now stand, encourage body-snatching. No man can become a practicing physician and surgeon until he has dissected, and the laws absolutely prohibit our getting bodies in a legal way. We can't legally bring bodies into the State from other States, as their laws prohibit it. Of course, we must have bodies. We must rely on the generosity of friends in New York who will send us bodies, and run the risk of getting caught and paying the penalty of the law. I can't tell how many bodies are used in Maine for dissection in the course of a year. The Bowdoin School probably used twenty-five bodies a year; the Portland School ought to use about ten bodies; two years ago, when our Lewiston School was in operation, we used ten bodies a year. Then many physicians, who have a good deal of practice, use one or two bodies a year. We've got to have bodies. When a physician comes upon a rare disease, he's obliged to post himself on a dead body in order to save a live one. The price of a body depends upon where you buy it. To get a body here costs us about $35. You buy them in New York for $5 apiece. The Maine Medical Association is taking steps in the matter and trying to make a way to secure bodies legally. Again, people don't consider the risks their doctors run in fitting themselves for work. Every man who works over bodies runs the risk of being poisoned from the decaying flesh. Dr. Garcelon once came near death from this cause. I was once sick six weeks from being poisoned from a body, and an Auburn physician has suffered in the same way. Bowdoin College has paid the price of three of its professors to the cause of medical science. No less than that number have died from poisonous exhalations from corpses upon the operating-table. I would rather have old bodies than new ones. Bodies two or three weeks old are best for dissection."

Church Deacons and Kissing.

Is it wrong for a church deacon who offers his umbrella to a young lady on a rainy Sunday to kiss her on the way home? The following documentary evidence was recently laid before the deacons of the First Baptist Church, Jackson, Mich.: "Having heard that grave rumors are in circulation affecting my reputation as a member of the church, I herewith submit the following as a true statement of the circumstances out of which the rumors have grown: Sunday, the 27th of June, 1880, after Sabbath-school, as it rained, I invited Nellie Bigelow, daughter of L. G. Bigelow, to walk home under my umbrella. I asked her to walk by my store so that I might see if any water had come into the cellar. After coming up from the cellar I gave her some candy, and, while going to the door, I put my arm around her and kissed her. On our way home I cautioned her not to tell what I had done—Charles H. Palmer." This statement bears the following indorsement from the father of the girl who was kissed: "The above statement is substantially as related to me by Nellie.—L. G. Bigelow." Then, gossips having enlarged on the foundation, Mr. Bigelow issued the following: "It having come to my ears that scandalous stories are afloat in the city differing from the statement signed by me July 30 last, this is to certify that such scandalous stories are false in every particular, and the statement so signed by me contains the whole of the occurence as related to me by my daughter Nellie.—L. G. Bigelow."

At an adjourned business meeting held in the First Baptist Church, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

"WHEREAS, Certain damaging reports have been circulated in connection with Brother C. H. Palmer;

"Resolved, That the First Baptist Church, having listened to the report of its committee appointed to investigate the rumors affecting the character of said C. H. Palmer, find that he has been guilty of no wrong beyond that set forth in his statement of July 30 last, and that he was simply indiscreet in said matter.—George G. Byrne, Clerk."

Moral—Never take an umbrella to church.

Seven Troys.

The famous archæologist, Schliemann, writes from Athens to a Russian paper, as follows: "I have just returned from Asia Minor, where I have at last finished that digging out of Troy which I began in 1870. During ten years I have struggled with great difficulties, among which the most troublesome has been the large amount of debris under which the ancient city was buried. It has been necessary to dig down and dig up the ground for more than sixteen yards below the surface. But I am fully recompensed for all my trouble. I found the remains of seven different cities; the last of them was the Ilion of Homer. That city was built by the Æolians, banished from Greece by the Dorians in the eleventh century before our era. In one of the buried cities I found many statues of Minerva with the owl's head, whence her name of Glaucopis. In another city were found many images of the divinities. But the most interesting and important of all the discoveries is, of course, the city of King Priam. Every article found in the ruins of that city bears unmistakable signs of having been destroyed by fire and in time of war. There were discovered many remains of human bodies in full armor. I dug out and cleared away the debris from the entire wall that surrounded the city, and also from all the principal buildings. Now I am finishing a large volume in English describing with full details all my discoveries, and containing 200 illustrations of the most important of the discoveries. My Trojan collection is now in London, but at the end of this year I shall take it to my villa in Athens, which is fire-proof, built only of marble and iron. I have received large offers for my collection from the United States, England, France and Germany, but I cannot part with it for any money in the world."

Forty Years in Bed.

Cynthia Taggart and Elizabeth (commonly known as Betsy) Taggart are the names of two very extraordinary women, one deceased, the other on the brink of the grave. Their father was Deacon William Taggart, who formerly owned or kept the old ferry at Middletown, in this county, where Betsy still resides. They belong to a most respectable family, and these two women have been visited by thousands of people who were anxious to learn something of the cause which brought them into notoriety. Cynthia was bedridden for nearly forty years before she died, and Betsy has been in the same condition for thirty-nine years. It is stated by those who have known them well that patient endurance of great suffering was a marked feature of their existence. Asked by the writer, a day or two since, what their illnes was, a relative replied that he could not tell; in fact, no one knew. It was simply a lack of vitality; the unfortunate women appeared to lose all power after arriving at a certain age. Of late years but few visitors have been admitted to the sick chamber of the surviving sister, but in the first years of their extraordinary illness they were called upon by strangers from far and near, especially during the summer time. Cynthia, after taking her bed, found much comfort with a lyre, it is said, and in her uncultured way would compose poetry. She once wrote an "Ode to Health." Her death appeared to afflict her sister Betsy to a great degree, and at times she was inconsolable. Her mind would wander at times, but the name of sister Cynthia was seldom off her tongue. Her nephew, a well-known business man here, was one of the first to go to the war, and by courageous conduct rose from the rank of private to that of colonel. This was nearly twenty years ago, and the colonel says that even then his friends used to write him that "Aunt Betsy is failing fast." Yet she is still alive. But perhaps the most extraordinary fact in her whole case is that now for nearly seven weeks nothing but water has passed her lips; not one particle of solid food or nourishment. Her mind has become completely a blank for a long time now. As may be imagined, she is reduced to a mere skeleton. These two cases are perhaps the most remarkable of the sort ever heard of. There is not a particle of imagination or sensation connected with them. Their family is one of the most respectable on the island, and any statement they make can be implicitly relied on. It is not possible for poor old Betsy to survive many days, seeing that she takes no nourishing food whatever.—Boston Journal.

Songs of the Steeples.

In this age the Netherlands claim precedence among the countries of Europe in belfry music. There are more chimes or carillons in that country than in any other. A great number of bells are required for this strange kind of music, which is sometimes of a very elaborate and intricate character. The carillons a clavier are played like a piano-forte. The keys are handles connected with the bells by rods or cords. The carillonneur employs both hands and feet in executing the airs which charm the inhabitants of the Low Countries. The pedals communicate with the larger bells for the bass. The keys on which the treble notes depend are struck with the hand, which is cased in a thick leathern stall. It is recorded that a carillonneur of Bruges was so expert he even executed fugues on those famous bells that hang in the cathedral of that ancient city. The rapidly-developing esthetic taste of our people is gradually bringing the use of chimes and the peals into our American churches in the places of single bells. In New York there are three sets of chime bells—those of St. Thomas's Church, on Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street, the chimes of Grace, on Broadway. The bells of St. Thomas's, ten in number, were cast in West Troy, and put up in the beautiful tower two years ago. They are the finest in tone and tune. Their music is wondrously beautiful. The bells of Grace, also ten in number, have a united weight of 10,300 pounds. The largest bell, called the Rector's Bell, or the tolling bell, weighs 2,835 pounds. This splendid chime cost $6,000. If you wish to enjoy a new sensation, go up into the bell-tower of Grace Church when Mr. Senia, the carillonneur, is practicing. He does not dance about amidst a forest of ropes, pulling one and then another and another, as the old-time bell-ringers of England did; but he plays on his carillon a clavier as they do in Holland. They are there, ten chime-ringing levers ranged in a row, like the keys of a piano forte. Those huge keys require the whole strength of his arm and hand to move them. To each of the levers is attached a rope, passing through the ceiling to the tower above, where it connects with its particular bell. Up in the light, airy, latticed tower, far above the roofs of the tallest houses, hang the ten wide-mouthed messengers of sound, that only await the master's touch to fill the air with melody. No untraveled American can appreciate it fully. It was the music of what Victor Hugo calls an opera of steeples.

What Is the Bible Like?

It is like a large, beautiful tree, which bears sweet fruit for those who are hungry, and affords shelter and shade to pilgrims on their way to the kingdom of heaven.

It is like a cabinet of jewels and precious stones, which are not only to be looked at and admired, but used and worn.

It is like a telescope, that brings distant objects and far-off things of the world very near, so that we can see something of their beauty and importance.

It is like a treasure-house, a storehouse for all sorts of valuable and useful things, and which are to be had without money and without price.

It is like a deep, broad, calm-flowing river, the banks of which are green and flowery, where birds sing and lambs play, and dear little children are loving and happy.

Children

CRY

FOR

Pitcher's

Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.

Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Billous Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.,

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book for the Million.

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, Conjugal Duties, [illegible], Love and Courtship, Impediments to Marriage, [illegible], Single Life considered, Law of Marriage and Divorce, Legal rights of married women, etc., including Diseases peculiar to Women, their causes and treatment. A book for private and considerate reading, of [illegible] pages, with full Plate Engravings, by mail, sealed, [illegible].

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhœa, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing Seminal Emissions, Nervousness, Aversion to Society, Physical Decay, Dimness of Sight, Defective Memory, Loss of Sexual Power, etc., making marriage improper or unhappy, giving treatment, and a great many valuable recipes for the cure of all private diseases; [illegible] pages, over [illegible] plates, [illegible] cents.

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 600 pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. The author is an experienced physician of many years practice, (as is well known), and the advice given, and rules for treatment laid down, will be found of great value to those suffering from impurities of the system, early errors, lost vigor, or any of the troubles coming under the head of "PRIVATE" or "CHRONIC" diseases.—Postage stamps taken in payment for books.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures chronic Diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

TRADE MARK

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons:

Indiana, April [illegible], 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. [illegible] young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. [illegible], 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

Mich., Jan. 25, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicines; send me another as soon as possible. That package stopped all apparent trouble, but there is a weakness yet, and I wish you would prepare this for the cure of that.

Iowa, Oct. [illegible], 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. I am just twice as much of a man as I was before taking. I was on the verge of the grave, I thought, and there was no cure for me, but now I am in good hopes of a cure.

West Virginia, Aug. 28, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. Inclosed please find $[illegible], for which please send me another box (No. 2), for a friend. You have done a great thing for me. I will send you all the orders I can.

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 20th, 1879.—Please forward me at once another box of the Pastilles. The patient on whom I have used most of one box, in addition to a sample box, is fast recovering, and I think another will set him all right.

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 2, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, and it has made a perfect cure of him. We have another customer now suffering in the same way, and wish by return mail one No. 2 box

READ! READ!!

Garfield's Credit Mobilier Record.

Republican Newspapers on the Republican Candidate's Corruptions.

[From Garfield's sworn testimony before the Poland Committee, Jan. 14, 1873.]

I never owned, received, or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobilier or of the Union Pacific railroad, nor any dividends or profits arising from either of them.

[From Judge Poland's Report, Feb. 18, 1873—Garfield's testimony perjured.]

The facts in regard to Garfield, as found by the committee, are that he agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the 80 per cent. dividend in bonds and sold them for 97 per cent., and also received the 60 per cent. cash dividend, which, together with the price of stock and interest, left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was the balance of dividends after paying for the stock.

HOW THEY VIEWED IT THEN.

All Guilty—Differing Only in Degree—Criticisms of the Leading Philadelphia Journals on Credit Mobilier in 1873.

[From the Public Ledger (Ind.), Feb. 20, 1873.]

If Oakes Ames is guilty of bribing or otherwise corrupting his fellow-members (and the evidence shows that he is), then some of them must have been bribed or corrupted. There is not one of them who made a public denial of his alleged connection with the "Credit Mobilier" who did not falsify the real facts by prevarication or by suppressing essential truth, or by false suggestion, or by direct falsehood—proved to be falsehood by the record evidence. * * * If these members did not feel that their Credit Mobilier transactions were dishonorable why did they resort to prevarication and concealment in their first denials?

THEIR MEAN, TRICKY, FALSE DENIALS.

[From the Public Ledger (Ind.), Feb. 26, 1873.]

* * * * * Then came their mean, tricky, false denials, shifts, evasions and fast-following explanations of their explanations, every change in which showed more and more their own sense of their own culpability. There never was an instance in which men holding a public trust were more thoroughly covered with proof of malfeasance in office. The guilty knowledge of all these men was as visible as the plunder of the Government moneys was stupendous. And Congress punishes all this by passing its partial resolutions of censure, letting the guilty go free upon the false pretense of having no jurisdiction. This is so transparent a sham that it will command the belief of no one possessing the commonest intelligence.

NOT ONE FIT TO SIT AS A LAW-MAKER.

[From the Evening Telegraph (Rep.), Feb. 18, 1873.]

* * * * * There is not one man whom the testimony of Oakes Ames has connected with the Credit Mobilier who is fit to sit in the seat of the law-maker. If Oakes Ames was the bribe-giver, they must have been the bribe-takers.

THE DELIBERATE AND WILLFUL LYING.

[From the Evening Telegraph (Rep.), Feb. 20, 1873.]

* * * The bribe-taker is as guilty as the bribe-giver, and Mr. Ames decidedly objects to being made a scapegoat for the sins of other people. For him to work corruption with his Credit Mobilier stock there must have been corrupt material for him to work with, and, admitting that the accused parties, from the Vice President down, were ignorant of Ames' motives in the first place, what can be said of the deliberate and willful lying they have indulged in from the time an exposure of this infamous business was first hinted at, through the whole progress of the investigation up to the present moment?

OAKES AMES' BRIBE-TAKERS AND LIARS.

[From the Evening Telegraph (Rep.), Feb. 27, 1873.]

* * * * Andrew Johnson, whatever might have been said of his sins of commission or omission, was an angel of light in comparison with Oakes Ames and his sneaking crew of bribe-takers and liars, from the Vice President down to the member from Ohio who spits his venom at the press because the press has done its duty in exposing a gigantic wrong.

DESTROYED SOME OF THE PEOPLE'S IDOLS.

[From the Press (Rep.), Feb. 19, 1873.]

* * * Its revelations shocked the moral sense of men of all parties, and destroyed some of the people's idols.

IDLE TO ATTEMPT AN IMPOSSIBLE VINDICATION.

[Editorial Letter in Press (Rep.), Feb. 19, 1873.]

* * * Their denial at the beginning has placed them and all those who desired to rescue them in the most embarrassing position, for that proved that they were ashamed of the transaction. And when the fact appeared that the accused had taken the stocks with a full knowledge of the exaggerated dividends, and when this fact was clinched and riveted by unfortunate contradictions before the committee, it was idle to attempt an impossible vindication. * * *

ALONE IN THE EXTENT OF ITS DEMORALIZATION.

[From the Inquirer (Rep.), Feb. 4, 1873.]

So many prominent men whom the country delighted to honor have thereby been stripped bare of their good names and compelled to appear before the world covered with the shame of their crimes and misdemeanors. It is right that the hypocrites should be exposed. * *

THE ONUS UPON THE COUNTRY.

[From the Inquirer (Rep.), Feb. 28, 1873.]

The responsibility of Congress is at an end in this business. It has been remanded to the country, and if again the convicted members are returned to the places they have disgraced, the onus of it will be upon the country.

THE NOTORIOUS, DOWNRIGHT LYING.

[From the North American (Rep.), Feb. 28, 1873.]

* * * And it may be properly added in the same lines that much dissatisfaction exists in the community that all the arguments and debates in the case have overlooked a point more universally condemned than the crimes alleged and more susceptible of proof—the notorious, downright lying of some of the individuals inculpate

Comments of Buffalo Republican Newspapers.

[From the Buffalo Commercial, Feb. 21, 1873.]

The prominent Congressmen whose names were first used in connection with the Credit Mobilier were Blaine, Dawes, Kelley, Bingham, Schofield and Garfield; and, beside these, Vice President Colfax. * * * Mr. Blaine comes out of it without a stain upon his record. His colleagues certainly did hold the stock and lied about it.

[From the Buffalo Commercial, Feb. 22, 1873.]

Influential Republican journals mention that every one of the Congressmen who dabbled with Credit Mobilier stock ought to be publicly censured.

[From the Buffalo Commercial, Feb. 27, 1873.]

Should Congress decide to let the culprits escape they must all know by this time that they have been condemned at the bar of public opinion.

[From the Buffalo Commercial, March 1, 1873.]

Now the case has gone to the people. They will not split hairs in finding out whether they can open the public record of a man who has certain pages that he would like to conceal from examination. The people will preside at the ballot-box as their tribunal. When those who have betrayed the confidence reposed in them come up for trial—if they ever dare to do so—they will be rejected as wicked and unprofitable public servants. This is the decree uttered by the voice of the press to-day. It says to some of those who are afraid to punish corruption, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting."

[From the Buffalo Express, Feb. 20, 1873.]

It is wrong to raise an indiscriminate howl against every one who ever looked at Credit Mobilier stock, or to make every man responsible for the guilt of others. Our own opinion, based on such hasty consideration as we have been able to give the facts, is, that Dawes is innocent; that Scofield and Bingham have been guilty of an impropriety which should subject them to censure; and that Kelley and Garfield have so misrepresented the facts, and endeavored to disguise the transactions as a loan, that a more severe punishment would not be out of place.

[From the Portland (Me.) Argus.]

Every member of Congress who deliberately handled Credit Mobilier stock is unworthy of future confidence.

[From the Indianapolis Journal, Republican organ, Feb. 26, 1873.]

Garfield not only handled the stock but lied about it. Is he not "unworthy of future confidence?"

JUDGE STALLO'S LETTER.

A German Jurist's Reasons for Supporting Hancock.

The following letter from Judge Stallo, of Cincinnati, the most eminent and most cultured German in the United States will bear to reprint. Judge Stallo, is an old Republican, and, though not as famous as an orator as Carl Schurz, has a stronger hold upon the hearts and affections of his countrymen than Carl has. The letter will bear reading carefully, and more than once:

MY DEAR SIR: I cannot attend your ratification meeting. But you may say for me that I regard the nomination of Hancock and English as of good omen for the republic, and sincerely hope and trust that this nomination will be ratified at the polls by an overwhelming majority.

You are aware that for many years—from 1856 to 1872—I acted with the Republican party. But the very purposes for which that party was founded now demand, as it seems to me, that the men who have controlled it, and through it the Government, during the last fifteen years shall be dislodged from power. The persistent usurpation by the National Government of powers beyond its constitutional sphere, and its conversion into an instrumentality of robbery and oppression, are not, in my judgment, conducive to the maintenance of its supremacy within its constitutional limits. I do not think that respect for and obedience to this Government can be enforced by using it to foster monopolies or to subsidize private enterprises at public expense. Moreover, I find it difficult to believe that the equal civil and political rights of our citizens and the purity of our elections are to be secured by placing the ballot box under the exclusive control of the party in power—even if this control be not immediately exercised by ruffians, hired for the declared purpose of suppressing adverse majorities—or by the methods countenanced and promoted by Gen. Garfield after the last Presidential election in Louisiana. And I am wholly unable to understand that the appointment of Madison Wells and his compeers to office as a reward for the most infamous political crime recorded in the annals of our country, or the attempt to place Chester A. Arthur in the chair of the Senate, afford very striking evidence of a sincere purpose to reform and purify the Government service.

Whether or not the Democratic party will make a worthy use of the opportunities which the control of the Government affords remains to be seen. For the present it is enough to say that I very much prefer the platform and its nominees to the platform and nominees of the Republicans. The Republican platform (which is, of course, to be interpreted in the Republican nominations), so far as it is more than mere senseless fustian and rodomontade, is simply an audacious sneer at public morality; and the Republican candidates appear to have been chosen for the express purpose of compelling the voters of the Republican party distinctly to indorse and approve the iniquities which have driven so many of its members from its ranks. Or in what other sense is James A. Garfield offered to us as the representative of Republican detestation of bribery and corruption, and Chester A. Arthur as an index of Republican enthusiasm and civil-service reform!

The Democratic platform on the other hand is, in the main, an accurate statement of my political creed, and, if your party will henceforth live up to it more faithfully than has been its wont in the sad days of its degeneracy and confusion, I shall feel proud to be enrolled among its members.

Of the Democratic nominees it is hardly necessary to say that they command the respect, if not the admiration, even of their political antagonists. Mr. English is distinguished by the courage with which he has stood up with and against his party for his convictions. And what American is there, native or adopted, Republican or Democrat, whose eyes do not glisten when he looks up to Hancock, the intrepid soldier, the patriotic champion of the indissolubility of the Union, the man without fear and without reproach, the citizen who is illustrious, not only by his public services, but by the unsullied purity of his life, whom I, for one, honor even more for his fearless vindication of the principles on which the American Union is founded than for his heroic defense of the Union itself.

The nomination of Gen. Hancock, however, is not only fit as a grateful recognition of his merits, but is peculiarly auspicious in view of the exigencies of the time. It is the most trustworthy assurance that the results of the late war are at least as safe in the keeping of Democratic as in that of a Republican administration. And, what is equally important, it is an augury of the restoration of peace and good will among all the citizens of this Union. The men of the South, who once bore arms against the Union, have not only laid them down, but they have renewed their allegiance to our common country with demonstrations of affection whose very sadness is the best proof of their sincerity. They have been for years struggling against the disorders necessarily consequent upon the complete subversion of their social and industrial system and the misfortunes entailed upon them by the war, misfortunes which certainly have not been alleviated by the practices of a majority of the men who came to the Southern States as the agents and representatives of the Republican party. And I cannot conceive anything more despicable than the attempt of certain Republican politicians who aspire to the highest honors and trusts of the republic to fabricate partisan capital by a constant reference to the inevitable incidents to the reorganization of our Southern communities as evidence of the continued disloyalty of the whole Southern people. With the election of Hancock all this will come to a speedy end. The insane vociferations about a "solid South" will be silenced, and I am not without hope that at the Presidential election in 1884 we shall have two parties at the South as well as at the North whose lines of division are no longer the line of color or of race. Truly yours,

J. B. STALLO.

Hon. JOHN F. FOLLETT.

Mr. English's Mortgages.

A Garfield newspaper prints two columns in display type of the mortgages which Mr. English has owned and foreclosed in Indiana during the last few years, with the names of the mortgagors, and the amounts claimed or realized. Foot-notes are added in which an attempt is made to show the unfeeling manner in which Mr. English has taken his due. If there is any moral conveyed by the catalogue in question it is, that whoever owns a mortgage and forecloses it when it is due and obtains a judgment for any deficiency is a rogue. These make very hard lines of financial doctrine for the national banks and for the ten thousand Republicans all over the country who loan money on bond and mortgage. A supplementary moral in this interesting tale may be that it is criminal and socially outrageous for a candidate who is a mortgagee to take his lawful interest and debt, while it is praiseworthy for another candidate to take $329 of dividends by way of a loan to which he was not entitled, or to sell his vote and influence for $5,000.—New York World.

THE NEGROES AND THE SOLID SOUTH.

A Candid Statement by an Alabama Conservative Democrat.

[From the New York Sun.]

The recent election in Alabama, in which the Democracy won so signal a victory, has again called the attention of the public to the solid South. The comments of the Republican press on the Alabama election, in the main, are bitter, violent, revolutionary and absurdly false. It has been suggested to me that a plain, unvarnished statement of the "true inwardness" of the matter would not prove unacceptable to the readers of the Sun, and might do some good. At least, as I humbly conceive, it can do no harm.

It is true I am a Southern man and a Democrat. This is unfortunate, to begin with; for is not every Southern Democrat a bulldozer and an outlaw? Can any credence be given his statements by the "loyal" Republican mind? We shall see. While I am a Southern man and a Democrat, I am not a Bourbon, so called, and never was. In 1860 I was a Douglas Democrat; in 1861 I was for compromise and conciliation; in 1862 and until the close of the war, like hundreds of thousands of others who had opposed secession, I was a soldier of the lost cause, and shrank from no sacrifice in its defense. Since the surrender of Lee I have known no flag but the flag of the Union, and have honestly labored for a restoration of constitutional liberty and the Union of our fathers. While opposed to the reconstruction acts and the methods of their enforcement, I have never been regarded as an ultra man, and have always advocated moderate measures. In 1875, when the people of Alabama determined to call a convention to enable them to rid themselves of the odious constitution forced upon them by Congress, and to form a new constitution more acceptable to the masses, I advocated the election of a non-partisan delegation to the convention, believing that a Constitutional Convention should know no party, and that partisan politics ought not to enter into the canvass. I offered myself to the people as a candidate upon that platform, and had opposed to me, as the regular Democratic nominee, the Hon. W. M. Lowe, the present Greenback Congressman from this district. I was defeated, simply because the Republicans refused to support me. At that time they were unwilling to vote for a Democrat under any circumstances. They have grown more liberal since, and are very eager now to vote for independent Democrats under any and all circumstances. In 1875 they had not realized to its full extent how damning was the record they had made in this State, and that the scepter of power had departed from their hands forever.

During the eight years they held control of our State Government they succeeded in nearly bankrupting our State and people, adding to our State debt nearly thirty millions of dollars. For this they had little or nothing to show. In 1874, thanks to the Civil Rights bill, the taxpayers of the State succeeded in electing a Democratic Governor and Legislature. At that time our State bonds were utterly worthless, and our State money was selling at sixty cents on the dollar. Now our bonds are at a premium, our State money has been redeemed at par, our people are prosperous in a remarkable degree, both white and colored, and the latter have at last realized that the Democrats are the best conservators of the peace, the best promoters of the interests of all classes, and the safest guardians of the public credit. Do not understand me to say that all the colored people have realized this truth; what I mean to say is that multitudes of the more intelligent ones among them have done so. Consequently, they vote with the Democrats, freely, intelligently, and oftentimes in despite of shameful bulldozing on the part of the ignorant masses of their own race. It is no "shotgun policy" which has effected this revolution. The simple truth is, the negro has proved himself to be more of a man than his heretofore would-be Republican masters believed him to be.

Let me furnish the readers of the Sun a little of the evidence I have at hand to support this statement.

There are now published in the State of Alabama several papers edited and owned by colored men. Two of these, and by far the two ablest, are edited in the interest of the Democratic party. The Herald, of Huntsville, is one of the two. It is edited by W. H. Councill, who is also the principal of the State Colored Normal School at Huntsville. Councill is not yet 30 years of age. He was born a slave, and has educated himself since the war. During the days of carpet-bag rule he was a violent Republican. He is a man of rare gifts, however, and is, besides, possessed of great force and independence of character. It took but a few years of Democratic rule to convince him of his early political blunders. He not only had the good sense to see that the State had been benefited by the downfall of his party, but he also had the manliness to confess as much. When he first began to give public expression of his change of sentiments his life was repeatedly threatened by his colored opponents. I have myself seen him, on the stand, face a howling mob of ignorant blacks with the dauntless courage of a Roman gladiator. This brave colored man is a born orator, and but few white men of his own age can surpass him as a stump speaker. During our late canvass he was on the stump constantly for the Democratic ticket. Among the counties visited by him was Lowndes—a county reported to be controlled by the "shotgun policy." The following is taken from his paper of Aug. 6, giving an account of what he did and saw in Lowndes. Let the Republicans of the North who are declaiming so furiously about the solid South read and ponder it well:

We went to Lowndes county week before last to assist in the canvass. On the night of our arrival we spoke to a small audience in the Court House. We never met kinder people than we found in Lowndes. The white people of the county are laboring earnestly by acts of kindness to convince the colored people that the tales circulated by their vicious leaders are untrue.

On Wednesday of last week a barbecue was given, to which all were invited, irrespective of race or color, and it was the finest affair we ever saw. The first people of the county were out, and the olive branch of peace was offered the colored people, and we are proud to say that the better class of the colored people at Lowndes were willing to forget the past and "clasp hands over the bloody chasm."

Up until last month colored men never voted their sentiments, because of the bulldozing carried on by the Radicals.

If a colored man voted the Democratic ticket he was afraid to confess it or let it be known. Dozens of colored men in Lowndes will testify to this. There may be places where the Democrats bulldoze, but we have yet to visit a place that comes up to this. This is owing to the wicked teachers in politics that these poor people have had among them. A young man, Frank Hamilton, said in our face, at Burksville, last Saturday, that any man who would vote a Democratic ticket "is a ———," evidently endeavoring to provoke a fuss. Austin Chappel, at the same time and place, said that if the other colored men were of his mind they would take the —— traitors (meaning colored Democrats) into the woods and hang them. It is a prominent fact that colored men in that county have been bulldozed and frightened into sticking to the Radical machine, and until recently dared not vote their sentiments and make it known. Let Mr. Hayes send soldiers down there to protect these honest citizens in the exercise of the elective franchise. But, thank God, the sun of liberty has arisen in Lowndes, and more than a thousand colored men voted the Democratic ticket there last Monday, and will hereafter be protected from the assaults of the bulldozer.

I might furnish the readers of the Sun column after column of the same sort, but I deem the above sufficient.

Yes, the South is solid to-day for honest money, honest Government, the constitution as it is, and the Union as it was; and solid it will be on next November for Hancock.

D. R. HUNDLEY.

MOORESVILLE, Ala., Aug. 13, 1880.

SUCCESS ASSURED.

Chairman Barnum on the Political Outlook.

In speaking of the campaign in Indiana, Chairman Barnum, of the National Committee, said to an interviewer the other day: "I am not one who believes in running a campaign on wind merely, and so I seldom say much; but on this subject I know what I am talking about. We shall carry Indiana without any question. The news I had from Indiana was not satisfactory, and so I determined to go over the ground personally. I did so, and the result, in my mind, is perfectly satisfactory."

"Is the State well organized?"

"You would be astonished to know how thoroughly it has been and is being done. Mr. English is earnestly at work. He is a man of great executive ability, and he is exercising it most effectively. He hires a man for each county, who goes to work as a matter of business and canvasses the county house by house. The position of every voter is put on record, and the information thus obtained is simply a matter of fact. In the cities, like Indianapolis, the canvass is made, not by wards, but by blocks. One man is assigned to each block, and makes it his business to know just the position of every man in the block."

"How about the importation of negroes?"

"The means which we have taken will prevent any of that. Then beside the colored vote will be largely neutralized by the white vote along the river. There has been of late a large demand for white labor along the river and there has been a large increase in the population in the shape of boatmen and men in that line of business."

"What do you think of the prospects in Maine?"

"The news from Maine is highly encouraging. There seems to be no reason why we should not carry the State. The people there are hard at work. They raised a very large sum of money themselves on the start, and have been going ahead all the while."

HE LOVED HIS GENERAL.

A Veteran's Admiration and Affection for Hancock.

[From the Whitehall Times.]

Yesterday our sanctum door opened and a man entered. He had but one arm and on his forehead was a deep scar. He said:

"Are you the editor?"

We answered in the affirmative.

"Well, sir," said he, "I am a veteran of the late war. I was with Hancock at the battle of the Wilderness. I was three years in service altogether, never getting a scratch or being sick a day until then. You see, my regiment belonged to the Second corps of the Army of the Potomac. At the hour of daylight we pounced upon the enemy, and drove him away with much loss of life. Unfortunately for me, a shell dropped over by me and burst. Then it sent its death-dealing fragments all about us. I was struck on the arm and forehead. Of course I dropped. How long I lay there I cannot tell, but when I awoke I was in the hospital in a cot-bed. The first words I heard were: 'Poor fellow, he has revived.' Then he quickly called to a nurse. 'Bring water, quick, to wet his parched lips.' He knelt down, and, with a kind voice, said, 'My poor boy, have courage; you will yet see your friends.' Turning, he left my cot, and as I listened I heard kind words spoken by him by the side of other cots. I could see men grasp his hand and cover it with kisses. I could hear many a 'God bless you, General,' uttered as if coming from an overflowing heart. That visiting angel was Gen. Hancock. Sir, I am a Republican. I never voted any but a Republican ticket, but I can tell you that Gen. Hancock will receive my vote, as well as the votes of four members of my family, all of whom are Republicans, for a man with such a tender heart cannot but make a good and wise President. Excuse me for troubling you, sir, but there is such love for the good and noble Hancock in my soldier heart that I must speak."

The poor war-worn veteran then grasped our hand, and, looking into his face, we observed his eyes filled with tears. This is but a single specimen of the enthusiasm the soldiers have for their old commander.

Judge Swayne and Gen. Garfield.

[Judge Swayne on "the Sale of Influence" in Case of Trist vs. Child, 21 Wallace, 441-453.]

An agreement, express or implied, for purely professional services is valid. Within this category are included drafting the petition to set forth the claim, attending to the taking of testimony, collecting facts, preparing arguments and submitting them orally or in writing to a committee or other proper authority, and other services of like character. All these things are intended to reach only the reason of those sought to be influenced. They rest on the same principle of ethics as professional services rendered in a court of justice, and are no more exceptionable. But such services are separated by a broad demarkation from personal solicitation and the other means and appliances which the correspondence shows were resorted to in this case.

[Gen. Garfield on His Own Relation to the De Golyer Pavement Lobby.]

Before the Glover Investigating Committee Gen. Garfield was a witness, and this is extracted from the official report:

Question by Mr. Nickerson—Gen. Garfield, did you file with the Board of Public Works of the District a brief or opinion, written, printed, or otherwise, upon the subject of the De Golyer patent pavement? A.—I could not say I did.

Q.—Did you at any time appear before the board and make any argument whatever? A. I do not remember that I did, but I did speak to Gov. Shepherd on the subject, giving my opinion in its favor.

Q.—Gov. Shepherd has testified that you once spoke to him casually on the subject. How much cash did you receive from De Golyer and McClellan, or either of them or their agents, at any time for your agency in the procurement of this particular contract? A.—Five thousand dollars.

In regard to this superiority of the pavement which Chairman Garfield advocated for $5,000 another witness, O. H. Quinby, who had been a Superintendent of Pavements under De Golyer and McClellan and Jenkins, thus testified (p. 947): The process of heating the binder was a fraud and a swindle.

Hardly Ever.

Garfield—Ames, can you let me have a small sum this morning?

Ames—Willingly, my boy; how much do you want?

Garfield—Well, I don't know; what you can spare.

Ames—All right, I can work out that sum. There are ten shares Credit Mobilier, Dr. 80 cents on the dollar, Cr. by rise in value. Ditto by dividend. 80 is 80; 97 is 97; $1,000, $1,400; $2,400; stock all paid for, balance of dividend due Garfield, $329; there, sir, that is just what you want. Three hundred and twenty-nine dollars. Here is your check.

Garfield—Thank you, thank you; but mind this must be considered a loan.

Ames—Oh, yes, and as fast as the stock rises and dividends accrue (which, between us, you can help amazingly by voting right in Congress) I'll "lend" you some more. You never took a bribe. No, sir!

Garfield—Never! Never!

Ames (aside)—Hardly ever.—Ypsilanti Sentinel (Dem.).

Patent Flour.

Almost everybody knows of patent flour, but not everyone understands what it is. Stripped of technicalities, this is about the story of its manufacture: The best flour used to be made of winter wheat. Spring wheat yielded either much less in quantity, or else so much of the bran got into the flour in its manufacture that its color was intolerably dark. The wheat would be ground and then bolted. In the refuse—the bran and middlings—would be included a large proportion of the spring wheat, and this would sell more particularly for feed for horses. Now the best of flour, and the most expensive, is made of this very refuse of the old-fashioned process. It all came out of the discovery of a way to draw out the bran. Under the new process the wheat is ground about as before. The first result is an ordinary flour sold for exportation. Then the remainder is taken and put upon great horizontal sieves, and while agitation is going on there an ingenious system of draft is rushing up through, and carries off the bran. What is left is the glutinous portion of the wheat, the most nutritious and most productive, and out of this, purified now by the drawing off of the bran, we get our new-process flour. The result of the discovery of the process has been to make the poor spring wheat of Minnesota and upper Wisconsin the most valuable of grain.

Effect of Climate on the Beard.

A singular effect of the dry air of Egypt, and one which, if supported by similar facts, has a scientific value, is thus recorded:

An Englishman who traveled up the Nile states that his beard, which at home was straight, soft and silky, began, immediately upon arriving at Alexandria, to curl, and to grow crisp, strong and coarse. Before reaching Es Souan it resembled horsehair to the touch and was disposed in ringlets. He accounts for this by the exceeding dryness of the air, and considers that in the course of many generations it permanently curled and crisped the hair of negroes. The hair on the traveler's head was not affected.

THE timber and lumber business in Georgia will amount this year to 300,000,000 feet, and will exceed $5,000,000 a year.

DON'T RENT

BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.

$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!

Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.

HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.

These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German. Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

FOND parent to his son: "Yes, San Francisco is the place to get on in. Look at James, he started without a penny, and has lately failed for $100,000. Of course that's an extreme case. I don't expect you to do as well as that. Still, with honesty and industry, I see no reason why you should not, in a few years, fail for $50,000."

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY

Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE Physicians in charge of this old and well known institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.

INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE Producing such maladies as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Orchitis, all Urinary Troubles and Syphilitic or Mercurial affections of the throat, skin or bones, treated with success, on scientific principles, without using Mercury or other Poisonous Medicines.

YOUNG MEN and those of middle age who are suffering from the effects of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, the result of self-abuse in youth or excess in matured years, are permanently cured. This disease produces some of the following effects—emissions, blotches, dizziness, nervousness, dimness of sight, cough, indigestion, constipation, despondency, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, defective memory, sexual exhaustion, impotency or loss of manly vigor, which unfits the victim for business or marriage.

PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is FREE and invited. List of questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application.

(Persons suffering from Rupture should send their address, and learn something to their advantage. It is not a truss.)

Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE

A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine

The only 25 cent

AGUE REMEDY

IN THE WORLD

CURES

CHILLS & FEVER

and all MALARIAL DISEASES.

Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 WOOSTER STREET, NEW YORK, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.

Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster St., N. Y. Circulars free.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT

An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box. Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.

Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.

Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport or J. R. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)

A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.

☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.

☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.

☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.

It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.

It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.

Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.

Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE

Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.

Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.

Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS

Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.

SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE

SAFE DIABETES CURE

SAFE BITTERS

SAFE NERVINE

SAFE PILLS

READ! SAVE THYSELF

H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

☞ Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

IN USE SINCE 1855

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS

A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.

An experience of twenty-five years proves it to be the greatest Antidote to Malaria and all other Ague influences known to the world.

The only absolute cure for all Affections of the Kidneys. In Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, all Disorders of the Bowels, and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs, it is equally efficacious, while as a remedy for complaints peculiar to the female sex it has no equal.

NOT A BEVERAGE

But an old reliable Household Remedy, thoroughly adapted to assist nature.

It supplies tone to the stomach, reinvigorates the digestive organs, stimulates the secretions, and promoting a regular action of the bowels, enables every organ of the body to perform its allotted work regularly and without interruption.

Its highest commendations come from those who have used it longest and known it best.

Nowhere so popular as in Lancaster, Pa., where it has been in use for more than a quarter of a century.

Highly commended as a General Tonic and Appetizer. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH

A large sized paper descriptive of disease, its origin and cure, will be mailed free to any address on application to

THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO. Lancaster, Pa.

☞ We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. It never fails, is easy to take, and no after-physic is required. Price, 25 cents.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c.

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil; 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c.

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains,

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind

The Love-Making Between a Young Lady and a Tramp.

[Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.]

Yesterday Robert Preston and wife, a couple who were happily united a few days ago, arrived in this city, on their way to Texas. The story of their marriage is rather a romantic one—not that it abounds in hair-breadth escapes or blood in large or small quantities, but that—well, that it is romantic.

About four years ago Miss Emma Roland, of Galveston, visited an aunt in Warren county, Kentucky. It was summer, the season was, and one evening the girl sat in the yard, half reading and half regarding the enormous bumble-bees that will attract attention anywhere. He can make you think that he is tangling himself in your hair, and, looking around, you will see him ten feet away, clinging to a thistle bloom. That's enough about the bee. A footstep didn't arouse the young lady. It was a voice that said:

"Can I get a drink of water?"

Two arms and the chin of a man leaned on the fence. He was dressed in a tramp's garb, a wardrobe at once so describable and indescribable.

"I say, can I get some water?"

"Yes," said the girl.

"Must I go around to the gate or climb over the fence?"

"Both, if you choose."

"That's the way I like to hear people talk," said the tramp climbing over and approaching.

"Now, where is the water?"

"I'll bring it."

"You'd better bring the well, for I'm dryer than a barrel of bromophyle."

The girl went to the house and returned with a bucket of water. When the man had finished drinking she did not think he had exaggerated his thirst. In fact, she did not think his comparison had been adequate.

"What book are you reading?"

"Mill on the Floss."

"Overrated. I never liked it. All depth or no depth; I don't know which. Strained characters or no characters; don't know which. The novelist has tried to write a story without a well-defined plot, and has failed. Goldsmith's success as a plotless and charming writer was a bad example."

"You shouldn't tear my favorite book to pieces. I like George Eliot and all her works."

"You don't like 'Mill on the Floss.' You have been nodding over it for the last half hour. You only pretend to read it because you imagine that in doing so you develop literary tastes."

"But truthful. Here's a book you should read," and the tramp took from his ragged coat a tattered copy of Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy." "Dr. Johnson said that this book was the only work that could induce him to get out of bed mornings sooner than his regular time of rising."

"And that's why you like it," remarked the girl, taking the book. "If Dr. Johnson hadn't made that remark you would not find the work so charming?"

"That's all right. Give me some more."

The conversation was pursued until the tramp accepted an invitation to supper. His idea of Burton and Johnson was soon covered up with batter cakes. The tramp, Mr. Preston, remained all night. Next morning, when he announced his intention of leaving, the girl accompanied him to the spot where he hailed her.

"Why do you tramp around? Have you no home?"

"Yes, as to the home. Don't know as to the tramping."

"Whisky?"

"Whisky."

"Why don't you quit?"

"I will."

"When?"

"Now, on one condition. That you will consent to be my wife. Meet me under this tree four years from to-day."

"I will."

"Good-bye," and he climbed the fence and was gone. No correspondence was carried on between them. The manly, handsome face of the tramp hung before the girl like a portrait. Deep, earnest eyes, a merry laugh, accompanied the tramp. Several weeks ago the young lady visited her aunt. One evening last week she sat under a tree in the yard where four years before she had nodded over a book. Bees buzzed around; the same bees seemingly. On her lap lay "Mill on the Floss;" near her a tattered copy of "Burton's Antomy of Melancholy." A buggy drove up. A man alighted and climbed the fence.

"Mr. Preston."

"Miss Roland."

There was no indication of a tramp in the handsomely-dressed gentleman. The clear, earnest eyes showed no lurid light, kindled by Satan's breath. Clasped hands, kisses, renewal of vows. That evening the buggy went to Bowling Green. Next morning a happy couple left on a southern-bound train. They are now in the city, stopping at the Grand Central. To-morrow they will leave for Texas.

About Time to Begin.

[St. Louis Republican.]

Secretary Evarts says that in due time he will contribute the aid of his voice to the election of Garfield and Arthur. It is about time for him to begin if he expects to finish his first sentence before election time comes.

Albany Argus: Mr. Conkling succeeds General Grant in republicanism as the "silent man."

THE "CO-OPERATIVE" DELUSION.

The Rise and Decline of the "Assessment" Life Insurance Folly.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

When Jay Cooke & Co. tripped and fell in 1873, and all the trade, commerce, and industry of the United States tumbled over them, and lay in dismal dullness for the next six years, there arose from the dust of panic two or three of the biggest delusions of this century.

One of these was the belief that the best way to obtain life insurance was for a number of men to "insure" one another on the "co-operative" plan. The fact that the experience of England and other European countries had proved this idea fallacious, and that competent financial students and thoughtful men pronounced it wrong in theory and unfeasible in practice, carried no weight.

Old line life insurance companies had failed and were still failing. It was useless to show, as was the fact, that only the imperfectly organized or rascally managed regular companies had gone to pieces, and that, in proportion to the extent of its business and magnitude of its assets, legitimate life insurance had suffered by the panic the least of all our nation's financial or commercial institutions. The fates had ordained another reign of delusion, and had fixed upon the domain of life insurance as its realm.

"Co-operative" companies increased and multiplied. They were started sometimes by those who had been unsuccessful or dishonest in the field of true life insurance, but more frequently by those who never claimed to have had the least experience at the work. Men who would have hesitated to boil potatoes or start a street corner apple stand, because of their inexperience with that sort of cookery or merchandise, did not halt an instant at the task of organizing "co-operative" life insurance companies. It was the new royal road to wealth for themselves, and to sure provision for the widows and orphans of their patrons. It called for neither experience nor capital from the projectors. The notions of accumulating reserves, and of having plenty of surplus wealth to guard against future contingencies, were declared old-fashioned, if not absolutely wicked, by these apostles of the new dispensation. All that was necessary to guarantee perfect life insurance at actual cost, was for a number of men to agree that when one of them died all the rest should pay a certain small assessment apiece, the aggregate sum thus gathered each time to be promptly paid over to the widow or other previously indicated beneficiary of the deceased. Of course a trifling fraction of this was to be kept for the expense of the "co-operative" president, secretary, and other officials; but the whole cost was to be much less than in the old form of life insurance, the latter institution being solemnly declared to be on its last legs.

Old-time delusions of Eldorado land, South Sea bubble, or tulip mania never grew faster nor counted more adherents than did this fallacy of "co-operative" life insurance, and it is to-day a broad-spread chimera, devoutly believed in by tens of thousands of people in every part of the United States.

"Co-operative" life insurance has the approval of no actuary of repute in any state in the Union; of no sound financial writer; and of no clear-headed, unbiased man who has taken the pains to examine carefully into its details. This vastly outweighs the fact that it has attained large popularity from a careless constituency, or that men with a direct pecuniary interest in the ephemeral success of its companies honestly believe it to be a good thing. The companies in Europe and this country have all necessarily been short-lived, twelve years being their maximum age, and close understanding estimates place the total number of them that have collapsed at over forty thousand.

Utilizing a Pest.

A Maryland farmer is making money out of an immense crop of potato bugs. Being opposed to the use of paris green, he rigged up a large wash-boiler in his field, and hiring six men, collected the bugs and soused them in boiling water. About two gallons were collected, and by accident an old piece of sheep-skin leather, used for lining shoes, went into the mess. After the cooking had been going on for half an hour, he was astonished to find that the leather had changed its color to the richest dark crimson. This arousing his curiosity, he inserted other materials, and ascertained another peculiarity of the liquid. The material placed in it changed first to a dark brown, then a greenish hue, then pure yellow, then light blue, changing to dark blue, then light red, terminating in the brilliant scarlet, which was the permanent color. Consequence: Formation of a stock company to make dyeing mixtures from potato bugs.

A fellow at Indianapolis recently announced that he wanted to bet $750 that Porter would beat Landers 750 votes for governor. A democrat promptly called around with a $1,000 bill; but the "betting man" was nowhere to be found.—Ligonier Banner.

FAIR,

AT

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA, 1880.

EXTRAORDINARY ATTRACTIONS!

$8,000 in Premiums! $1,000 in Speed Ring!

Fair commences September 6, and continues through the week. Liberal arrangements made with all the railroads. Send to W. W. Rockhill, secretary, for programmes and premium list.

Liquor License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Garrett, DeKalb county, Indiana, [illegible] vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, on the following described premises [illegible] lot No. 20, block No. 23, in the [illegible] in the town of Garrett, said county.

August 16, 1880. [illegible]

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Sheppard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O.21-tf

Estray Notice.

Taken up by Otis S. Blood, in [illegible] township, DeKalb county, Indiana, one dark red, lineback cow, about seven years old, with crop off the left ear, and had on a small bell. Appraised by Zina Hathaway and Jerry Andrews at nineteen dollars and reported to Isaac Gunsenhouser, justice of the peace, August 5, 1880, as returned by said justice to the undersigned, August 14, 1880.

JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.
W. H. Dills, Deputy.

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880

(Chicago Time.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn.

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:20 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:00; Angola, 5:20; Fremont, 5:48; Reading, 6:40; Bankers, 7:10 (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.); Jonesville, 7:40, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west Jackson, 9:20 a. m., there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:25, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 3:50 p.m.;

12:31 P.M.—From Fort Wayne 11:00 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:38; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, make close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35 (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:26; Toledo, 6:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Iona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.—

5:59 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:19; Summit, 6:31; Pleasant Lake 6:39; Angola, 6:55; Fremont, 7:13; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:50 p. m.; Buffalo, 8:00 a. m.; and New York, 10:00 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:30; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:08; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 32 P. M.—From Jackson 12:20 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:14, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:23, Reading, 1:35, Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:02; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:36; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:05 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26P.M From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:00 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 50; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3 50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail	3 Express	[illegible]
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 20 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 [illegible] pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 32 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 05 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 10 pm
Newcastle	2 30 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 35 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS.	GOING NORTH. 2 Mail.	4 Express.	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	[illegible]	6 40 pm	4 10 am
Cincinnati	8 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 [illegible]
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 31 pm	10 32 pm	8 15 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 05 pm	9 16 am
Fort Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible] am

Trains Nos. [illegible] run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati, without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and [illegible] and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Ass't Gen. Tick. Agt.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

WABASH ST. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	10:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	6:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:50 a. m.
M'lt'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'lt'n arr. at Logansport.	6:45 p. m

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To | Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager,
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
St. Louis or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880,

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 7, Pacific Ex.	No. 3, Night Ex.	No. 5, Mail'd ex
Pittsburgh lv.	[illegible] m	9.00am	1 50pm	7 50pm
Rochester	[illegible] m	10 00	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 55pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	3 05	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 50am	6 25pm	9 56pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	3 41
Lima	10 40	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	8 25
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST.

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex.	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, At. Ex.	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 10am	5 30pm	5 15pm	9 40pm
Plymouth	11 48		9 45	2 50am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 00am	5 55
Lima	4 20	9 40	3 35	8 55
Forest	5 23		5 12	10 00
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	7 15pm	5 pm	7 25am	12 05pm
Mansfield	7 45	12 25am	7 55	12 35
Orrville	9 38	2 30	9 56	2 26
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 22
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	3 25pm	7 30

Nos. 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv.	5 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 03		10 55
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 03	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 35	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 28am	6 23	4 05
Fostoria	1 08	7 25	4 58
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 15	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 10 Mail.	No 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 30am
Tiffin	10 03	7 55	12 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 35	11 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 32	1 08
Defiance	12 58pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 28	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 25
Avilla		12 20	3 35
Albion		12 45	3 55
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 30	4 30
Milford Junction		1 40	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar		6 10	8 20

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J. MARTIN, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points, on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Notice to Ditchers.

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest responsible bidder, the construction of the county allotment on the Baillett ditch, in Keyser township, in said county. Specifications of said ditch can be seen on the ground at the time of letting. Bidders will be required to execute a bond according to law.

By order of the Board.

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.
August 21, 1880. 35-3w.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General-News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 9, 1880. Number 37.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Ralston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 28 ly

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN, GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind.; manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn Indiana. 32-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn Ind.

GRAIN SEPARATOR
& CHAFFER
PAT'D BY J. GRUBE
MARCH 9 1880
AUBURN, IND.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Sure Enough.

[General Butler.]

If Grant could not be trusted with a third term, how can the republican party be trusted with a sixth term.

The Chief of Them.

[St. Louis Republican.]

A great many republican sinners have been converted this season, but no conversion so clearly foreshadows a democratic triumph as that of the redoubtable Benjamin.

An Honest and Truthful Admission.

[New York Truth, Independent.]

To-day republicanism means aristocracy, while democracy will carry out the immortal definition of Abraham Lincoln—Government of the people, by the people, for the people.

That Was in Order.

[Daily Union (Wilkesbarre, P.,) Leader.]

When the republican council of the city of Buffalo voted to name a street Garfield, a member of the opposition arose and moved that it be laid with De Golyer pavement and paid for in credit-mobilier stock.

The Old Ring Robbers.

[Washington Post.]

As a matter of course, Dick Harrington, the luminous genius of the safe-burglary conspiracy, has mounted the stump for Garfield. There is a natural affinity between the hero of the De Golyer swindle and the inventors and promoters of safe-burglary.

Thoroughly United.

[Harrisburg (Penn.) Patriot.]

The democratic party is now thoroughly united for the first time in twenty years. The nomination of Hancock and English has had the effect of silencing factions, restoring harmony, and of bringing back to the democratic fold many who have not acted with the party since 1860.

Fearfully Anxious.

[Louisville Courier Journal.

The New York Times is fearfully anxious about public education in the south, unmindful of the educational "desert wastes" in the northern states. When the republicans had control of every southern state, they did nothing for education there. Since they were bounced there has been gratifying progress in the work of extending the facilities for common school education. Under republican rule, the people were taxed for schools which never came into existence. The money was stolen by republican office-holders, by the million.

Vastly the Advantage.

[Buffalo Courier.]

A democratic exchange, after quoting General Garfield's statement concerning his wife, "that in all their married life she had never dropped a careless word which could be used to his disadvantage," comments: "Therein Mrs. General G. has vastly the advantage of the General. He has dropped many careless words which are now being used very greatly to his disadvantage; notably when he swore that he was not implicated in the credit-mobilier frauds, wooden pavement-steals, and so on. The republicans would have 'builded more wisely' had they made Mrs. General G. their candidate."

He of Glorious Fame.

[Boston Post.]

Robeson, he of glorious fame as ex-monarch of the sea, declares that he will hold himself personally responsible for the statement that Garfield is a good and pure man. This suggests the story of two young fellows who were at a dance in Indiana, and being strangers were unable to get partners, as none of the men present would introduce them to any of the ladies. At last they agreed to introduce each other, and walking up to a lady, one said: "Miss, permit me to introduce my friend. Smith." The lady looked at him scornfully, and remarked, "Young feller, hadn't you better get some one to introduce you first?"

Why We Are for Hancock.

[Elmira Free Press.]

He is higher, purer and fitter.

He is grander, cleaner, more honest.

He is more forgiving, more faithful.

He is larger, stronger, handsomer, fuller, freer.

He is braver, more generous, more just.

He is good, better best.

He is recorded, transcribed and approved.

He is more modest, more worthy, more truthful.

He is more patriotic, oftener and longer.

He is wiser, calmer, more courageous.

He is law-abiding, law-loving, law-protecting.

He has more friends, better and stronger.

FEMALE SOLDIERS.

Women Who Have Preferred Battlefields to Home.

The Elector-Maximilian Emmanuel of Bavaria, who died in 1726, left several natural children, one of whom was a daughter named Maximilian de Leithorst. Her parents seem to have been neglectful to her, but the girl's character was resolute. She dressed as a man, called herself Monsieur le Baron de Leithorst, and became page to the Baron De Halden, in Regensburg, the embassador of the bishop of Wurtzburg to the court in that town. Afterward she went to Vienne and enlisted as a soldier in the imperial army. She served seven years as a cadet in the regiment of Francis de Lorraine, in Hungary, and only during a sickness was her sex discovered. She became a lieutenant, and was dismissed from the service with a life penalty. She dressed in male attire until her death, in 1748.

Leonora Prohaska fell in an engagement on the Gorde, September 16, 1813, a bullet having pierced her breast. When she felt that she was dying she revealed to her comrades that she was a woman, and that her name was Lenora Prohaska, and not Charles Renz. Her friend, Carolina Peters, known as Charles Peterson, was more fortunate. She participated in the campaign of 1813 and 1814, was decorated with the Order of the Iron Cross on account of her bravery, and was honorably discharged from the army at the end of the war, when she declared her sex. She was afterward married to the captain of an English trading vessel, and with whom she visited her relatives at Stettin in 1844.

In the pages of All the Year Round, 1878, we read of one woman making her "field of fame" on the deck of a British man-of-war. On the 12th of April, 1781, in the West Indies, Lord Rodney gained his great victory over the French fleet, commanded by Admiral the Count de Grasse, and a daughter of England shared in the honors of that memorable day. After the surrender of the French flag-ship, Ville de Havre, one hundred guns, to Rodney's flag-ship, Formidable, sixty-four guns, "a woman who had, contrary to the rules of the navy, secreted herself in her husband's cabin, and fought a quarter-deck gun in the room of her husband, who was down in the cockpit, was discovered. Lord Rodney severely reprimanded her for breach of orders, but gave her immediately afterward ten guineas for so valiantly sustaining the post of her wounded husband."

The life of Mary Ann Talbot, an illegitimate daughter of the Earl of Talbot, was one of remarkable adventure. Born in London February 2, 1778, she was well educated at the expense of her father. When only about fourteen she was induced to run away from school by a Captain Bowen, with whom she lived a short time in London. She then went with his regiment to the West Indies; served afterward as a drummer at the seige of Valenciennes, where the captain was killed, and the intrepid girl left friendless. She contrived to reach the coast, and shipped as a boy on board a French privateer. This vessel was captured by one of the ships of Lord Howe's fleet, and, the opportunity being open to her, Mary Talbot entered the British navy. She served in many actions, was several times a prisoner of war, and finally, in 1796, when suffering from a shattered leg, was commissioned a midshipman and discharged from the service. Subsequently, Queen Charlotte granted her a pension of 20 pounds. When recovered of her wounds she went to America, working her way thither as steward of a merchant ship, on board of which, it is said, she was obliged to reveal her sex in order to repel the amorous advances of the captain's daughter. After a long absence, little being known of her exploits in the meantime, she again appeared in London. From this point her subsequent life was one of great wretchedness and poverty, and she was frequently in Newgate undergoing imprisonment for debt. Out of prison she assumed a variety of characters, being sailor, actress, peddler and footpad by turns. The date of her death is unknown. A few years ago there was a portrait in existence of Mary Talbot in a naval uniform, likely enough as a midshipman, and the artist has presented her as possessing a handsome appearance. This picture is said to be now in the United States.

* * *

Wants an extension.—Stephen Spencer, of Kingstown, North Carolina, has been sent to jail for thirty days for kissing another man's wife. The woman's husband is expected home about the time Spencer's sentence expires, and the latter wants the judge to make the sentence sixty days longer.

THE WORKINGMAN'S FRIEND.

General Hancock's Handsome Rebuke to a Toadying Landlord.

[Eureka (Ark.) Echo.]

In the good old days of 1860, in southern California, our esteemed fellow-townsman, Dr. J. M. Hoge, was practicing medicine in San Barnidino, and relates the following characteristic anecdote of Captain, now General Hancock, the next president of the United States:

"There was a sharp contest in the country between the Mormon and anti-Mormon factions, and on election day the doctor and others procured hacks and went out to San Gabriel to drum up Gentile voters among the miners. The miners, of course, were ready to accept a free ride, and took no time to don their best clothes; they were driven rapidly to Cocomungo, the nearest election precinct, and on arriving there the whole party stopped at a hotel for dinner. Soon after, Captain Hancock, quartermaster at Los Angeles, also arrived for dinner. The town gentlemen had on their "store clothes," while the miners were rough and dirty. The landlord was soon observed plucking first one and then another of the well-dressed gentlemen to go in and eat at the table with the captain, leaving the miners to wait for the second table. The captain, perceiving the situation, arose from the seat at the table, advanced to the door and invited all in; then seating himself he served the party to quail and toast, while the contemptible landlord slunk away and was seen no more."

The doctor, it is needless to say, has ever since been an unqualified Hancock man, and says he is certain that every one of the party there that day will support the man who thus respects the honest laborer.

As the Flowers in May.

All things have their appointed time and season, from May flowers to the sun spots which experts tell us are accountable for the meteorological topsyturviness of this year of grace, 1880. And prompt to its fore-ordained date, comes the new Premium List to Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly, full from end to end of tempting inducements to send your own subscription, and to persuade others to do likewise.

The ordinary magazine premium list is sufficiently familiar to need no description; but in this particular publication we note several novel features. Most of the premiums are selected with direct reference to the wants of ladies. A beautiful set of curtains is offered for 18 subscribers; and the corresponding lambrequins for 15. Lace ties, chemisettes and collars, silverware, bouquet holders, platters and trimmers, brooches and bracelets, head-dresses and books, are scattered through the list, until it really seems as though the publishers were seeking, not so much to extend their circulation, as to make a grand distribution of useful and pretty articles throughout the United States. And to crown all, the publishers strike boldly out in a new direction, and offer premiums for subscriptions to any magazines whatever. If the voice of the club-raiser isn't heard in the land during the coming month, it will be because the spirit of enterprise has perished from among American wives and daughters.

The premium list is issued by Ehrich Bros., Eighth avenue, New York, and will be sent free to any address, on application to the publishers.

The Policy of Madness.

[Julian at Indianapolis.]

Quarrel with the republican party to-day, because its machinery is kept in working order by unholy appeals to passions and animosities that need nothing so much as forgetfulness. It lives upon the consuming fires of sectional hate, and makes crimination and recrimination respecting dead issues the fuel of our politics. If anything could drive the people of the south into the madness of treason it would be the policy of the republican leaders in perpetually branding them with it, and arraigning them in the language and spirit of 1861. How can a quarrel ever come to an end if the parties to it, after a formal settlement, make it their constant business to taunt each other with their mutual accusations? If the ashes of the past are to be constantly stirred, and our parties rallied on the memories of the war to-day, who can predict the time when a real union of the sections will be possible? If the north and the south are to be dealt with as two hostile camps, who can expect emigration to flow into the states which else would invite it, and thus work out their redemption through an intelligent and homogeneous population?

HANCOCK'S PEN.

Mighty as His Sword in His Famous Order on the Principles of Constitutional Government.

I.

[1867—From Order No. 40.]

"The great principles of American liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and ever should be."

II.

"The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved."

III.

"Free institutions, while they are essential to the prosperity and happiness of the people, always furnish the strongest inducements to peace and order."

IV.

"Crimes and offenses must be referred to the consideration and judgment of the regular tribunals, and those tribunals will be supported in their lawful jurisdiction."

V.

[1867—His Order as Commanding Gen'l]

A demand was made on General Hancock for the appointment of a military commission to try an alleged offender against the peace of the state. The request came through his own subordinate officer in command of the district of Texas. General Hancock replied:

"At this time the country is in a state of profound peace. The state government of Texas is in free exercise of all its proper powers. Under such circumstances there is no good ground for the exercise of the extraordinary power vested in the commander to organize a military commission for the trial of the person named."

VI.

"The supreme court of the United States held in the Milligan case all such commissions contrary to law in states not actually in insurrection."

In that case, Judge David Davis uttered the memorable words:

"In war or in peace, the constitution is the supreme law of the land."

VII.

Major-General Mower, in command of the district of Louisiana, had issued an order removing one O'Rourke from office as clerk of district court.

General Hancock set aside the order and said: "If any charges are set up against the said O'Rourke the judicial department of the government is sufficient to take whatever action may be necessary in the premises."

VIII.

Hancock's order relative to jurors: "The commanding general has been officially informed that the administration of justice, and especially of criminal justice in the courts, is clogged, if not entirely frustrated, by the enforcement of the military order relative to the qualifications of persons to be placed on the jury lists of the State of Louisiana. The commanding general, in the discharge of the trust reposed in him, will maintain the just power of the judiciary, and is unwilling to permit the civil authorities and the law to be embarrassed by military interference. It is ordered that said paragraph, which relates to the qualifications of persons to be placed on the jury lists of the State of Louisiana be and the same is hereby revoked. December 5, 1867."

IX.

1876—In his letter to General Sherman General Hancock says:

"The army should have nothing to do with the election or inauguration of presidents. The people elect the president. The congress declares in a joint session who he is. We of the army have only to obey his mandates, and are protected in so doing only as far as they may be lawful.

"I was not in favor of the military action in South Carolina recently, and if General Ruger had telegraphed to me, or asked for advice, I would have advised him not, under any circumstances, to allow himself or his troops to determine who were the lawful members of a state legislature."

1880—In his letter of acceptance, General Hancock says:

"No form of government, however carefully devised, no principles, however sound, will protect the rights of the people unless its administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. When fraud, violence or incompetence controls, the noblest constitutions and wisest laws are useless.

"The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen. It is only by a full vote a free ballot and fair count, that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our government. Take this foundation away, and the whole structure falls."

A Party Divided Against Itself.

[Albany Argus.]

New York republicanism is in a bad way. The worst feuds that ever existed in this state are those between the radical leaders. If any of them was found dead, suspicion of his taking off would rest on some of his "colleagues," because of the malignancy the brethren have for one another. Nothing in the annals of antipathy among civilized men exceeds it.

Roscoe Conkling and Wm. B. Woodin would not be put into the same room. Wm. H. Robertson and A. C. Cornell are only officially on speaking terms. John F. Symth and Comptroller Wadsworth make the air blue with their opinions of one another Chester A. Arthur and George Wm. Curtis simply hate one another. Wm. A. Wheeler and Ellis H. Roberts head factions as independent of the main army as if they were bushwackers. At last Reuben E. Fenton finds the New York custom officials saying ditto to him. The lesser persons, such as J. W. Warren, E. D. Morgan, Ben. Manniere, J. W. Husted, Sheridan Shook, Albert Daggett, Senator Birdsall and Mr. Thurlow Weed are barren of any influence on the party, and in the party they are like the geometrical points which occupy position without space.

The papers of the day are at odds, too. The New York Times is continually stigmatizing the New York Tribune as corrupt and imbecile. The New York Commercial Advertiser is always calling the New York Evening Post an organ of federal malefactors and home idiots. The two republican organs in this city regard one another as monstrosities of loose and lavish unveracity and jobbery. The two organs of the party in Rochester exchange compliments unworthy of fishwives. The two in Buffalo go to the verge of liberal law in their abuse of one another. And so it is with all the lesser sheets, Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart, all over the state.

The Chicago result pleased none of them. Those that were not for Grant were for Blaine. Garfield's nomination was such a satire on all these organs as the utmost malignity and irony of fate could not have exceeded. They had educated their readers for seven years to regard Mr. Garfield as a bribe purjurer. Now they "eat crow" every time they put Mr. Garfield's name in types.

It is stated as common report among republicans that thousands of them have sent letters to these organs asking them to justify their support of Garfield now by refuting their censures for seven years past, or to justify themselves by dropping him. But no such letters ever appear. The laws of intercourse between subscribers and editors are suspended until after election. Apathy and nausea strike the readers of these papers through and through, because they know the conductors of the papers are supporting a candidate whom they believe disentitled to public respect or personal confidence.

Because of this, there is no unity or hope in the party. Its canvass legs are drags. Republicans, by common consent, abandon all idea of carrying this state by any effort addressed to the people of the state directly. They are seeking to carry other states, in hope of conjuring or coercing New York to follow them. They want the empire state to come in as a tender to lesser states, instead of making an appeal to her for an expression of her own. Their divisions and discord seem so great that they fear to try to form a line of battle here, let alone undertake the battle itself.

Rather an Urgent Case.

[Elmira Gazette.]

The second circular of the republican campaign committees, urging office-holders to send in their assessments, shows the case to be rather an urgent one. It reminds one of the rather irreverent prayer of the man who was falling from a high bridge into the stream below. "O Lord," said he, "if you are ever going to do anything for a fellow, now is the time to do it, and quick, too." The prayer of the man falling from the bridge was quite unavailing, but not more so than will be the appeal of these disciples of sectional hatred and malice.

Sensible Talk About the Census.

[Springfield Republican.]

There is no occasion as yet for the panic over southern dishonesty in counting noses. Let us wait until we get some really reliable returns. Second, let us be sure that the official returns are really unreasonable and fraudulent before we call names and make up faces, and, finally, let us conclude, if the south is keeping up with the north in population, not to feel bad about it. It only proves that emancipation was a great blessing and the war a complete success.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1880

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

On the Hartford racing course, last week, St. Julien beat his own record by half a second, making a mile in 2:11¼. He made the first quarter at a 2:11 gait, the half mile at a 2:10 gait, and reached the end of the third quarter in 1:38¼....Gabrail, Kelly & Humphreys flouring-mills at Mount Morris, near Rochester, N. Y., were set on fire by an incendiary, and totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

Dr. Charles Thomas Jackson, an eminent Boston physician and scientist, is dead....A distressing accident is reported from Lowell, Mass. Five boys who attended a picnic near that city got on a freight train in the evening with the intention of riding back to their homes. About two miles from Lowell the train passed under a bridge. It being dark at the time, the picknickers did not notice the bridge, and, being seated on top of the freight cars, they were swept off and instantly killed....A number of delegates while proceeding from Sutton, N. H., to the Free-Will Baptist Convention at East Ware, stopped at the house of a man named Daniels for refreshments, and were poisoned by eating potatoes on whose vines Paris-green had been used. Four of the parties are in a very dangerous condition, and the proprietor of the house cannot live.

Thomas Scott and Mrs. Heffner, walking on the track near Mt. Carbon, Pa., were killed by a fast express train.

Rev. Dr. Wm. Adams, President of the Union Theological Seminary, who has preached in New York since 1834, is dead. The death of the Rev. Dr. Adams deprives the Presbyterian Church of one of its wisest and ablest patriarchs, and the Christian world loses a man who was mighty in word, deed and example.

A fatal case of yellow fever is reported at New York. The patient arrived a few days since from Martinique.

THE WEST.

A committee of citizens of Norton county, Kansas, were in St. Louis last week, soliciting contributions for the starving people in their vicinity. They claim that 2,000 families are absolutely destitute, owing to the failure of crops....A furious storm recently visited Fort Mojave, Arizona. The military quarters were badly damaged, the officers' quarters and hospital and storehouse being almost wrecked, and three of the soldiers killed.

A large aerolite passed over Cleveland the other morning, brilliantly illuminating everything. When over the lake it exploded with such force as to severely jar many buildings, fragments shooting off in different directions like the bursting of a monster skyrocket. ....The side-wheel steamer Marine City, bound from Mackinaw to Detroit, was destroyed by fire on Lake Huron, off Alcona, Mich., on the afternoon of the 29th ult. She had 130 passengers on board. When the flames were discovered a panic ensued, and before anything could be done toward saving life a large number had jumped into the water. A tug-boat which was passing succeeded in rescuing many, and others got ashore in yawls. The steamer was valued at $30,000 and was insured for $15,000.

A dispatch from the West chronicles the death of Ouray, the famous Ute chief. He died of Bright's disease of the kidneys, after a long and painful illness.

A number of the creditors of Archbishop Purcell, in Cincinnati, have addressed a memorial to the Pope urging that he take action to effect a speedy settlement of their claims.... Gen. Grant has absolutely declined to accept the Presidency of the Las Vegas Mining Company....J. S. Morgan, senior member of the firm of J. S. Morgan & Co., job printers and bookbinders, of Cincinnati, committed suicide at Cleveland.... Chester Bardwell, a wealthy farmer of Cambridge, Ohio, was fatally gored by a bull at the State fair grounds in Columbus....Detroit papers chronicle the death of Robert McClelland, formerly Governor of Michigan and a member of President Pierce's Cabinet..... The completed census returns for Wyoming Territory show a total population of 21,900. The census of 1870 was 9,276.....The Chicago Tribune says that investigation shows that the statements recently circulated as to the bad effects of the wet weather on the corn crops of the Northwest have been greatly exaggerated.

Officers of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western road state that, owing to the probable construction of the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy from Peoria east, they will immediately extend their road from Pekin to Galesburg....Sapovonari has been elected chief of the Ute Nation, as successor to Ouray, whose friend and companion he had been for several years. He is about 50 years of age, has considerable ability and force of character, and is represented as being quite friendly to the whites.... The Southern Pacific railroad has been completed between Yuma, Arizona, and Benson, in the same Territory, a distance of 300 miles.... Information from the cranberry region of Wisconsin is to the effect that the crop this year is one of the largest ever known.

Two boys were killed by lightning near Martinsville, Ind., while sitting under a shade tree. Two young men were seriously injured by the same stroke....A young farmer named McDonald, living in Pickaway county, Ohio, has been hanged by his neighbors for general cussedness. He was not guilty of any violation of the law, but was of a quarrelsome, vindictive disposition, and the people of the neighborhood, who feared him, concluded to put him out of the way before he did some mischief.

Dispatches from the Indian country announce that the treaty with the Utes has been signed, and the act of Congress, which gives them lands in Northwestern Colorado in exchange for that they now occupy, has been ratified....A curious accident occurred at Grand Rapids, Mich., the other day. By the bursting of a water-main leading from a water reservoir situated on the top of the hill which overlooks the city about 5,000,000 gallons of water were poured into the city, flooding the houses and cellars by the way and doing much damage to property. The loss is estimated at $40,000 to $50,000.....President Hayes and party passed through Chicago last week on route to the Pacific coast.

THE SOUTH.

Dallas and Waco, in Texas, had hanging bees on the 27th ult., Allen Wright being the victim at the first-named place, and Lynchfield Burks at the latter. Roland Bucker was to have been executed at Palestine the same day, but he cheated the hangman by committing suicide in his cell the night previous....Four young white ruffians called at the house of a colored man near Cochran, Ga., broke open the door, and fired into the house. The occupant took down his shot-gun and blew out the brains of two of them. The others then made good their escape. Coroner's verdict—justifiable homicide.... Green Ellis, a negro, has been lynched at Guthrie, Ky., for assaulting and robbing a white woman....The large tobacco factory of L. J. Cottrell, and several adjacent buildings, at Owensboro, Ky., have been burned. Loss estimated at $350,000.

An exciting scene was enacted near the close of the Arnold murder trial, at Nicholasville, Ky. C. J. Bronson, who was prosecuting, denounced a certain part of the testimony for the defense as a forgery. Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, who was defending, said that no such testimony had been introduced. Some of the spectators took part in the dispute, and, during the confusion, a brother of the prisoner ran up to Mr. Bronson and attempted to shoot him with a revolver. The weapon was wrenched from his grasp after a hard struggle. When order was restored and the prisoner had been brought back into the court-room, his wife placed herself upon his knee and looked defiance at the Judge and jury. The jury, the same evening, returned a verdict of not guilty. Arnold's brother, who attempted to assassinate the Prosecuting Attorney, was then arraigned and fined $1,000 and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary.

Ex-Gov Paul O. Hebert, a prominent citizen of Louisiana, is dead.

A furious rain-storm visited Richmond, Va., flooding the lower part of the city, and doing a great deal of damage to property.

WASHINGTON.

According to figures furnished by the Bureau of Statistics, the value of the exports for the month of July of this year exceeded the value of the imports by $13,718,303. In July, 1879, the excess was only $9,644,349. The exports for the seven months ending July 31, 1880, were worth $44,878,178 more than the imports, while during the corresponding period of 1879 the exports exceeded the imports in value by $124,680,969. The value of the exports for the seven months of this year, however, was much in excess of the value of the exports during the corresponding period of last year, but, owing to the increased demand for luxuries, the imports increased enormously. The increased importation of specie has also slightly affected the figures. In July, 1880, the excess of the specie imports over the specie exports was $326,219, but in 1879 it was only $59,273.

Commissioner Bentley, of the Pension Office, furnishes the following interesting statistics: On June 30 last there were 245,000 pensioners. There were paid as pensions falling due during the year $36,000,000, and $21,000,000 arrears of previous years. Commissioner Bentley thinks the sum to be paid in pensions will yet reach $50,000,000 annually. There were before the Commissioner, July 1, 280,000 unsettled claims for pensions, involving an average first payment of $1,100 in each case, or a total of $308,000,000. The whole number of persons interested in the pensions, either as recipients or as claimants, is $532,000. The average number of claims filed each day since July 1 has been 150.

A Washington telegram says: "The census returns as they come in are being carefully examined at the census office in order to detect fraud or incompleteness. Particular attention is being paid to returns from those States where it is alleged that fraud has been committed and a wholesale inflation of population made. All returns are, however, subjected to the closest scrutiny. While some apparent incongruities and irregularities have been discovered in returns from South Carolina, nothing that positively shows fraud has been brought to light. If there has been fraud it will be detected and remedied. Gen. Walker says that nothing upon which official action could be taken has yet been discovered. When it is discovered action will be taken promptly."

The internal revenue receipts for August of this year have been $1,069,127 more than for the corresponding month of last year.

The customs receipts for August were $19,600,000, against $17,000,000 in July....A Washington dispatch states that since the passage of the Bland Silver bill there have been coined $68,189,750 in standard silver dollars. Of this sum only $19,886,443 is in circulation, the balance being in the treasury vaults. During the month of August, however, 1,285,488 silver dollars were put into circulation, which indicates an increased demand for that kind of money.

The regular monthly public-debt statement, issued on the 1st inst., is as follows:

Six per cent. bonds		$ 229,440,150
Five per cents		480,410,450
Four and one-half per cents		250,000,000
Four per cents		738,241,350
Refunding certificates		1,106,450
Navy pension fund		14,000,000
Total coin bonds		$1,713,198,400
Matured debt	$ 6,128,035
Legal tenders	346,741,896
Certificates of deposit	11,300,000
Fractional currency	7,181,995
Gold and silver certificates	20,825,940
Total without interest.		386,059,951
Total debt		$2,105,386,266
Total interest		15,951,139
Cash in treasury		196,668,332
Debt less cash in treasury		$1,924,669,074
Decrease during August		12,027,167
Decrease since June 30		17,603,221
Current liabilities—
Interest due and unpaid		$ 2,064,803
Debt on which interest has ceased		6,128,035
Interest thereon		771,413
Gold and silver certificates		20,825,940
United States notes held for redemption of certificates of deposit		11,300,000
Cash balance available		154,668,141
Total		$ 196,668,332
Available assets—
Cash in treasury		$ 196,668,332
Bonds issued to Pacific railway companies, interest payable in lawful money, principal outstanding		$ 64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid		646,235
Interest paid by United States		47,589,861
Interest repaid by companies—
Interest repaid by transportation of mails		13,643,833
By cash payments of 5 per cent. of net earnings		655,198
Balance of interest paid by the United States		33,291,329

GENERAL.

Young Jesse Grant, son of the General, will shortly lead to the altar Miss Lizzie Chapman, daughter of a wealthy California land-owner.

The Southern Pacific railroad track has reached to within 198 miles of El Paso, Mexico, and it is believed the rails will be laid to that point by Jan. 26.

Among the passengers by the steamer Herder, from Hamburg, which arrived at New York on the 1st inst., were the eight victorious American Turners on the way home from Frankfort, where they took part in the international amateur gymnastic athletic tournament. Among 400 competitors from England, France and all parts of Germany, the representatives of the United States Turnerbund carried off the greater part of the twenty-two prizes given for general excellency in gymnastics.

A Detroit dispatch of the 1st inst. states that at least ten lives were lost by the burning of the steamer Marine City.

Col. Grierson telegraphs the War Department at Washington that Victoria's band are in the Candelaria mountains, in Mexico, about 150 miles west of Fort Quitman. They have lost about forty men in skirmishing with our troops, and their cattle are nearly worn out. Col. Grierson thinks they must soon make terms with the Mexicans or yield unconditionally to the United States.

Over 40,000 people, it is estimated attended the Soldiers' Reunion at Canton, Ohio. President Hayes, Gen. Garfield, Secretary Ramsey, Gov. Foster, ex-Gov. Bishop and Old Abe, the Wisconsin war eagle, were a few of the attractions. The President made a speech, in which he treated of two subjects—education and the prosperity of the country.

POLITICAL.

The Republicans of Colorado have renominated Congressman Belford....The call for a Tammany State Convention in New York has been withdrawn and a convention of the regular Democracy will meet on the 28th of September.

The Democracy of Massachusetts, at their convention in Worcester, nominated Chas. P. Thompson, of Gloucester, for Governor on the first ballot, he receiving 536 votes to 449 for ex-Gov. Gaston. Gen. Butler was placed in nomination, but he peremptorily declined. The remainder of the State ticket is as follows: Lieutenant Governor, Alpha E. Thompson, of Woburn; Secretary of State, Michael F. Donohue, of Somerville; Treasurer, Francis J. Parker, of Newton; Auditor, Charles R. Field, of Greenfield; Attorney General, P. A. Collins, of Boston....The Republicans of Kansas held their State Convention at Topeka and nominated Gov. St. John for re-election on the first ballot by a majority of fifty-five over all other candidates.... The New Jersey Democratic Convention nominated George C. Ludlow for Governor....The Republican Convention of Nebraska, held at Lincoln, nominated Gov. Nance for re-election to the Gubernatorial chair. The remainder of the State officers, with the exception of Land Commissioner and Superintendent of Public Instruction, were also renominated.... The New Jersey Prohibitionists held a State Convention at Trenton, and nominated S. B. Ransom for Governor and adopted resolutions pledging support to Neal Dow for President and demanding the absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic....The Dakota Republican Convention nominated R. F. Pettigrew, of Sioux Falls, for Congress.

The State Convention of the Prohibition party of Michigan, held at Jackson, nominated the following candidates for State offices: Governor, Samuel Dickey, Albion; Lieutenant Governor, D. H. Stone, Holly; Secretary of State, John Evans, Bellevue; Attorney General, M. M. Burhorn, Holly; State Treasurer, Arthur D. Power, Livonia; Auditor General, Watson Snyder, Ypsilanti; State Commissioner of the Land Office, Porter Beal, Lenawee county; Superintendent Public Instruction, W. H. Moore, of Lenawee county; State Board of Education, N. B. Evans, Adrian.

The Democratic Convention of Iowa, at Des Moines, placed in nomination the following State ticket: Secretary of State, A. B. Keith, of Crawford; Treasurer, Martin Blim, of Blackhawk; Auditor, C. A. Barker, of Des Moines; Attorney General, C. A. Clarke, of Linn; Land Office Register, D. Daugherty, of Keokuk....The Republicans of Delaware have nominated John W. Houston for Congress.

FOREIGN.

All the great European powers have ordered the men-of-war detailed for the demonstration in Turkish waters to concentrate in the Adriatic. Advices from Constantinople show that the Porte is still obdurate, and that nothing further in the way of enforcing the treaty of Berlin can be expected in that quarter without the employment of force.... The Hares and Rabbits bill, which is intended for the protection of farmers from the inroads of these destructive little animals, has passed the House of Commons by a vote of 148 to 70. It now goes to the Lords, where it will probably be rejected....Roumania is torn up by internal factions as the result of Austrian and Russian intrigues. One faction favors alliance with Russia, another with Austria, while a third party, more patriotic than either, favors neutrality and independence.

Fine weather in England has benefited the crops to a considerable extent....A Rome dispatch announces that the Pope, on the recommendation of the sacred congregation, has promoted Rt. Rev. P. A. Feehan, Bishop of Nashville, to be the first Archbishop of Chicago, which has been created a metropolitan see with Alton and Peoria as its suffragan sees. Dr. Duggan, formerly Bishop of Chicago, long incapacitated for service by disease, is retired on a pension of $2,000 per annum.... Five Prussian officers, comprising representatives of the infantry, cavalry, artillery, and police, have left Berlin lately for Turkey, whither they go with the consent of the German Government to inaugurate improvements in the Turkish military and police service....The Mark Lane Express says that owing to the dry weather of the last three weeks the crop prospects in England have considerably brightened, and the harvest is now nearly ready for gathering.

Owing to scarcity of gold, the German Imperial Bank is paying its notes in silver.

Owing to the disturbed condition of affairs in Buenos Ayres, the International Exposition is postponed till next year....Advices from Afghanistan report that Gen. Roberts, commanding the column marching to the relief of Candahar, has arrived at that place. The British will halt in the vicinity of Candahar to prepare for an attack on the Afghan forces.... The active resumption of gold shipments from Europe to the United States is causing a decided sensation in London, and on the continent. Germany more than any other country feels the drain and has been compelled to stop gold payments at Bremen and Hamburg.

A dreadful accident is reported by cable from Spain. A wooden bridge over the River Ebro, near Logrono, fell while a battalion of troops were crossing, and ninety-seven soldiers, including five officers, were drowned....The steamer Hardwick, which plied between Odessa, on the Black sea, and Bristol, England, foundered at sea, and all on board but one fireman were lost.

The Grave of John Howard Payne.

A letter from Tunis, Africa, says: I must tell you of our visit to the Protestant Cemetery to see the grave of John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet Home." This man, who never knew the joys of real home, died alone and unhappy in this far-off land. We called upon our American Consul at Tunis, who told us of some interesting things in connection with the last years of our unfortunate countryman, who died in the same room in which we were then sitting. In a small inclosure, planted with cypress trees, and shut in with high walls, we found this quiet resting-place of the dead, among many tombs of foreign Consuls—English, German and other nationalities. Our attention was first attracted to the plain white marble slab, resting on a square foundation, and overhung by an immense pepper-tree, whose long, graceful branches reminded us of the weeping willow of our own land. We stood with uncovered heads as we read this simple inscription:

John Howard Payne,
Twice Consul of the United States,
Died April 1, 1851,
Born at Boston, June 8, 1792.
Sure, when thy gentle spirit fled
To realms beyond the azure dome,
With arms outstretched, God's angel said,
"Welcome to Heaven's Home, Sweet Home."

Destructibility of Human Bones.

An instance of the readiness with which human bones disappear is shown in the fact that the Dutch Government in 1853 drained off the great Haarlem lake, on which there had been many shipwrecks and naval fights, and where thousands had found a watery grave. The canals and trenches dug to a considerable depth through the rescued land are estimated to have an aggregate length of thousands of miles, and yet not a single human bone was exhumed from first to last. Some weapons and a few coins, and one or two wrecked vessels alone rewarded the efforts and researches of the curiosity-hunters. Here, as in cavern deposits and river gravels generally, works of art alone furnished evidence of the existence of man, even though no part of the deposit could be more than 300 years old, as the lake was formed by an inundation toward the end of the sixteenth century.

THE LAKE DISASTER.

Particulars of the Loss of the Marine City, on Lake Huron.

The steamer Marine City left Alpena, Mich., on the afternoon of the 29th of August, with a full load of freight and passengers. At about 4 o'clock p. m., while off Sturgeon point, fire was discovered in the hold, and before any assistance could be rendered the fire had gained such headway that nothing could be done to save her. The crew then commenced to launch the life-boats in order to save the passengers.

The tug Vulcan was in sight at the time, and came to the rescue as fast as possible, but before she could get there many had become panic-stricken and jumped overboard. The boat of the life-saving Sturgeon Point station, together with the boats of the Marine City and Vulcan, and a number from the shore, picked up a large number of persons. J. L. Jones, of Alpena, one of the passengers, gives the following details of the disaster:

"I was standing at the engine-room door on the port side talking with another gentleman when he smelt smoke. We looked into the fire-room door and saw the fire and flames in the starboard bunkers, among the wood and coal. We called the attention of the fireman and engineer to the same, and efforts were at once made to get a stream of water on the fire. The hose was promptly got out. I then went up into the cabin. As I opened the cabin door I found it full of smoke and immediately gave the alarm that the boat was on fire. The most intense excitement prevailed and a regular panic ensued. The passengers jumped into the water long before there was any need of doing so. The officers and crew behaved nobly, with the single exception of the second engineer, who acted like an insane man. Boats were lowered as soon as possible and filled at once."

Mr. Jones went forward and remained on the boat until rescued by the Vulcan. He can give no idea of the number of people on board or of the lost.

Mrs. A. B. Clough, of Marine City, and her son, Bert, were on board. Mrs. Clough says she was in the stateroom in the after cabin reading. She heard some one say "Fire!" and soon heard it repeated, but thought it was used in conversation. Bert then came running into the stateroom exclaiming that the boat was on fire. She at once went into the cabin and found it full of smoke. She then went aft. Bert was determined to jump overboard, but she restrained him. She found a life-preserver, but, before she could get it on, a large, strong man, a stranger to her, jerked it away from her. She then found Dr. Stockton, of Alcona, and, with his assistance, she and Bert and the doctor reached the main deck, getting down on the outside. There she picked up a boy about 6 years old who had been separated from his parents and who was nearly frightened to death. They all four got on the side of the gunwale and held on by the window of the porter's room. A line was thrown to them, but the doctor did not catch it, and lost his balance and went overboard, but was picked up. The three who were left held on to their position until rescued, Bert fainting at one time from the heat. The fire spread rapidly, and the boat soon burned to the water's edge.

Contradictory reports are made as to the number of lives lost. The trip-sheet is destroyed, and it is therefore impossible to get the names of all the passengers. It was at first supposed that all were saved, but there is no doubt now that at least eight lives were lost. The steward of the ill-fated vessel says that fifteen lives were lost. All accounts agree that the Captain and crew of the Marine City acted with great coolness and bravery, as did Capt. Hackett, of the tug Vulcan, and the crews of the life-boats.

A Tame Eagle that Worries Dogs.

Some three months ago, while hunting in the mountains east of the Twelve-mile House, Mr. Buffington captured a young American eagle. At the time the bird was quite small and from appearances but a few weeks old. Mr. Buffington has his pet confined in the yard back of his shop, and the many and curious monkeyshines indulged in by the mountain bird are really amusing. Measuring some eight feet from tip to tip and weighing forty pounds, with talons three inches in length, there is but small chance for any dogs residing in the neighborhood. For as sure as a canine makes his appearance, the eagle spreads his heavy wings, and with a loud scream he lights upon the back of his terror-stricken dog. The scene that follows is one of great interest. The dog, without further notice, darts through the side gate and out into the street, with the eagle attached to his back, and that too in a manner to stay. Down the street he goes at break-neck speed. At a distance of about two blocks the eagle bids the dog an affectionate adieu and quietly returns, as though nothing had happened. The same experiment is gone through with whenever the dog can be procured. It does not seem necessary to remark that dogs of any description are seldom seen in that part of the town, and the same dog never more than once. It would be a blessing to our city if we had one such bird on each block. It would save our pound-master much unnecessary trouble. —San Jose Mercury.

What to Say.

Say "I would rather walk," and not "I had rather walk."

Say "I doubt not that I shall," and not "but I shall."

Say "for you and me," and not "for you and I."

Say "whether I be present or not," and not "present or no."

Say "not that I know," and not "that I know of."

Say "return it to me," and not "return it back to me."

Say "I seldom see him," and not "seldom or ever see him."

Say "fewer friends," and not "less friends."

Say "if I mistake not," and not "if I am not mistaken."

Say "game is plentiful," and not "is plenty."

Say "I am weak in comparison with you," and not "to you."

Say "it rains very fast," and not "very hard."

Say "in its primitive sense," and not "primary sense."

Say "he was noted for his violence," and not "he was a man notorious for violence."

Say "thus much is true," and not "this much is true."

Say "I lifted it," and not "I lifted it up."

And last, but not the least, say "I take my paper, and pay for it in advance."

Always Polite to Ladies.

The conduct of some of the drivers on the street cars in Galveston is certainly very reprehensible. An old lady got on the street car, and as soon as she set her eyes on the driver she called out, "You are the very driver that refused to stop the car, and made fun of me."

"Yesterday afternoon?" he asked.

"Yes; yesterday afternoon."

"On the corner of Twenty-seventh street and Avenue L?"

"Yes."

"On the northwest corner?"

"Just about that corner."

"At 3 o'clock?"

"Yes, sir, at 3 o'clock."

"Was it a blue car with a bay mule?"

"Certainly; blue car and bay mule, and a feller with a red pimple on his nose and mouth like a catfish, just like yours, driving it."

"And you craned out your neck this way, and opened your mouth until one could read the maker's name on your false teeth, and bawled out, 'Stop—that—car! Stop—that—car?'"

"Yes, you scoundrel," she replied, drawing back to hit him with her umbrella.

"Then it wasn't me, for I am always polite to ladies, even if they are 95 years old, sport porcelain teeth and sass car-drivers. Ta! ta!" and he jumped over the dash-board to swap cars with the driver coming the other way.

Undisputed Facts.

When about to distribute Credit Mobilier shares where they would "produce most good" to the men who dreaded the action of Congress, Oakes Ames, who knew his colleagues well, selected Garfield, of Ohio, as one who could probably be bribed.

The letter addressed to the American people by the sons of Oakes Ames naturally denies the intent to bribe. But Oakes Ames himself, on Washington's birthday, 1868, wrote to Col. McComb, in regard to the shares distributed to Garfield and others: "We want more friends in this Congress, and if a man will look into the law (and it is difficult to get them to do it unless they have an interest to do so) he cannot help being convinced that we should not be interfered with." The Messrs. Ames offer, as a leading argument to show that there was nothing wrong in the transaction, the fact that no legislation was wanted of Congress at that time. Precisely so. As Oakes Ames' letter to McComb shows beyond the possibility of doubt, it was to prevent legislation that the shares were put where they would "produce the most good." On Ames' own construction of the matter, the Congressmen were to be hired to adopt his view of the meaning of the law by making their interests identical with the interests of the company. That is what was done; and that is what constitutes bribery.

Garfield's share in Credit Mobilier was not an investment in a promising stock recommended by a friend. Garfield was to pay nothing. He was assured that the stock offered to him for nothing would realize $2,400. He admits this, for in his defense, published not until after the death of Oakes Ames, he attempts to explain the memorandum of $2,400 in his own handwriting in this way:

> Before I left his room [the interview after the investigation had begun] he said he had some memoranda which seemed to indicate that the money I had of him was an account of stock, and asked me if he did not, some time in 1868, deliver to me a statement to that effect. I told him if he had any account of that sort I was neither aware of it, nor responsible for it, and thereupon I made substantially the following statement: "Mr. Ames, the only memorandum you ever showed me was in 1867-'68, when, speaking to me of this proposed sale of stock, you figured out on a little piece of paper what you supposed would be realized from an investment of $1,000, and, as I remember, you wrote down these figures:
>
> 1,000
> 1,000
> 400
> 2,400
>
> as the amount you expected to realize." While saying this to Mr. Ames I wrote the figures as above, on a piece of paper lying on his table, to show him what the only statement was he had made to me.

But, in the face of this declaration that he knew in 1868 of the enormous profits to be made out of Credit Mobilier stock, Mr. Garfield elsewhere claims that he did not know anything of the character of the stock or the nature of the profits to be forthcoming until warned by Judge Black, a year or two later, that the transaction was suspicious!

Leave entirely out of sight Oakes Ames' sworn testimony, which the Poland Committee believed and the country believed, that Mr. Garfield received a dividend of $329 on Credit Mobilier stock, understanding it to be such a dividend, and there is still evidence enough, in Garfield's own statements, to convict him of the bribe-taking and the perjury.—New York Sun.

Deep Mines in Nevada.

The depth attained is as follows: The Utah 1,980 feet, the Sierra Nevada 2,500, the Union Consolidated, Mexican and Ophir, each 2,500, Consolidated Virginia and California 3,300, Best and Belcher 2,000, Gould and Curry 2,200, Hale and Norcross and Savage 2,400, Chollar 2,400, Ward vertical shaft 2,168, Combination shaft 2,440, Yellow Jacket 3,000, Belcher 3,000, Crown Point 2,800, Overman and Caledonia each 1,900, Alta and Benton each 1,950, Silver Hill 1,300, Consolidated Imperial 2,800, Bullion 2,300.

A Test of Cashiers.

A Paris merchant, who has been several times robbed by unfaithful cashiers, has invented an infallible test of competency. The cashier presents himself, offers his services, shows his reference. Then the merchant: "Show me how you would erase a mistake in your figures." The aspiring cashier sets to work with scraper, ink-eraser, and what not, and, if he succeeds in destroying all traces of the erasure, he is invited to take his hat and his leave.

A Hawk Steals a Hat.

A few days ago, as a son of Mr. Nicholas Norrish, of Nassagaweya, was passing through the woods on his farm, he noticed a hawk hovering around near him. Thinking nothing about the matter, he walked on, when all at once, and before he had time to make any defense, the bird dived down and caught his hat in its claws and carried it aloft. When the bird got about the height of the trees it let the hat drop.—Montreal Witness.

The first duel in the United States was fought at Plymouth, Mass., on June 18, 1621, between Edward Doty and Edward Leicester, two servants, both of whom were wounded. For this outrage they were sentenced to the punishment of having their heads and feet tied together, and of lying thus twenty-four hours without food or drink. After suffering, however, in that posture an hour, at their master's intercession and their humble request, with the promise of amendment, they were released by the Governor.

The Young Man that Wins.

A certain brutality of manners, adopted from the English, is affected by some of our young men. They answer harshly, affect not to see a lady to whom they owe civilities, and try to become boors, even if they are not. This style is seen much in men of mixed blood, perhaps the half Germans, half French, half English. It is a very poor style and betrays the snob. It is not a common American fault, still it exists. It should be frowned down; it is the fault of mediocre men. But, as Houssaye says: "Young men are moderate nowadays, even in their follies. They are afraid of excess; they cut grooves for their voices to run in. They are bourgeois, who carefully avoid fatiguing, much more exposing themselves." Houssaye does not believe, evidently, that there are Sir Philip Sidneys, "admirable Crichtons," in these days, but he is wrong. A shipwreck, a battle-field, a field day in Wall street, brings them to the front. Men are as noble as ever; there are as many heroes. The occasion finds them, and in every office, every merchant's counting-room, in all the walks of the professions are the silent heroes. What a hero is the young doctor who works day and night succoring the wounded, helping the sick, tending the dying! What a hero the young soldier who has first thoroughly conquered himself! What a hero is the young bank clerk, preserving his honesty while there is temptation all around him! What a hero the young man doing honest work anywhere! He shames the pouncet-box hero; he is the Hotspur of the field of honor. Women love these heroes. They are the men to marry. The other kind do very well for the leadership of the German, but the true women do not care for them. One real man entering a drawing-room with his record of work behind him will scare away the fops as ghosts retire at cock-crow.—American Queen.

Deceived by Appearances.

A Hartford jeweler directed the attention of a friend to a rough appearing old farmer sauntering down the street, and remarked, "I've been worse sold on that man than on any other in my whole business life." The man, fully three score years and ten, wore shabby pantaloons, rough cow hide boots innocent of the slightest trace of blacking, a vest soiled in front and with the back partly in tatters; was in his shirt sleeves, without collar, and his head covered by a tile fashionable many years ago. "That was about his style," continued the merchant, "when he dropped in at my store one day during the war, and said he wanted to buy a watch. Judging from his appearance that he meant sometime in the future, after the scarecrow season was over, and that he had drawn his money, I didn't bustle around very lively to make a trade. I thought a $10 silver watch would about close out his pile, and shoved one across the to counter him. He merely glanced at it, and quitly asked, 'Don't you keep anything better?' This nettled me, and for a bluff I hauled out an American watch, one of the costliest we had in the store, worth $175 in gold, and gold was worth about 200 then. He examined it carefully, asked its price, and then to my amazement said, 'That'll do.' He dived down into his pantaloons pocket and after fishing out of the way a roll of greenbacks as big as your hat he hauled up a purse of gold, counted out the $175, shoved the watch into his vest pocket and walked out. You may imagine that this excited my curiosity, and after a while I ascertained who my strange customer was. He lived a few miles down the river and was worth enough to have bought out the whole establishment. Since then I haven't tried any more bluffs on plainly dressed men. You can't always tell by a man's clothes what he's got down in his pockets."

A Lover's Revenge.

The latest and worst case of lover's revenge comes from Australia. A young man whose affianced went back on him and broke her engagement received a note asking him to return the lock of her hair which he had. He looked over his trunk, collected a heap of tresses culled from various sources during his love-making career, and forwarded them in a bundle to his lady-love, inclosing a note to the effect that he had really forgotten which was hers, but she might select it from those forwarded and return the rest at her earliest convenience.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$6 50	@10 25
Hogs	5 25	@ 5 60
Cotton	12	@ 12¼
Flour—Superfine	3 30	@ 3 90
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 03	@ 1 04
Corn—Ungraded	50	@ 52
Oats—Mixed Western	35	@ 40
Rye—Western	87	@ 88
Pork—Mess	15 90	@16 25
Lard	8¼	@ 8½
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 75	@ 5 50
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3 60
Medium to Fair	4 25	@ 4 50
Hogs	3 80	@ 5 50
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 00	@ 5 50
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 25	@ 5 00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	89	@ 90
No. 3 Spring	77	@ 80
Corn—No. 2	38	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	26	@ 27
Rye—No. 2	75	@ 77
Barley—No. 2	75	@ 76
Butter—Choice Creamery	25	@ 26
Eggs—Fresh	12	@ 12½
Pork—Mess	16 50	@17 00
Lard	7¼	@ 7¾
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	92	@ 93
No. 2	88	@ 89
Corn—No. 2	38	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	26	@ 27
Rye—No. 1	76	@ 77
Barley—No. 2	75	@ 76
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	92	@ 93
Corn—Mixed	35	@ 36
Oats—No. 2	24	@ 25
Rye	75	@ 77
Pork—Mess	15 50	@16 00
Lard	7½	@ 7¾
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	88	@ 93
Corn	43	@ 44
Oats	29	@ 30
Rye	82	@ 83
Pork—Mess	15 75	@16 00
Lard	7¼	@ 7⅜
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	96	@ 96
No. 2 Red	95	@ 96
Corn—No. 2	42	@ 43
Oats—No. 2	28	@ 29
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 00	@ 5 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 04	@ 1 05
Corn—No. 1	42	@ 43
Oats—Mixed	33	@ 34
Barley (per cental)	1 00	@ 1 50
Pork—Mess	16 00	@16 50
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	89	@ 90
Corn	39	@ 40
Oats	28	@ 30
Pork—Clear	15 75	@16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 75	@ 5 00
Fair	4 25	@ 4 50
Common	3 25	@ 3 50
Hogs	4 75	@ 5 00
Sheep	3 75	@ 4 50

AUBURN COURIER.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
Editor.

During the year 1879 the earnings of the railroads in the United States were over $529,000,000, or nearly double the entire revenue of the national Government.

The figures furnished by the Internal Revenue Department show that Peoria paid last year over $10,000,000 of internal-revenue taxes. Cincinnati alone leads it in amount of internal taxes.

Several valuable historical relics, in the shape of autograph letters of George Washington and other famous Revolutionists, have been discovered in Washington, while clerks were hunting up the records in old law cases that came before the United States Courts.

Bonner claims that he has twenty horses in his stable that can be taken out any day and driven to beat 2:20. Since the 2:11¼ performance of Maud S. and St. Julien at Rochester, he and his drivers have boasted that it is no unusual thing for Barns and Forrest to make a mile in 2:10. As these remarkable exhibitions of speed are always given in private, the truth of the statements may be doubted.

Mrs. Susan J. Henry, widow of the late Capt. Patrick Henry, last surviving grandson of Patrick Henry, of Revolutionary fame, died a few days ago in Washington. Mrs. Henry inherited property which was lost during the war. For a number of years she was a clerk in the Treasury Department, and, at the time of her death, had just received an appointment in the Agricultural Department.

England, the executioner of Bennett, who killed Mr. Brown, the editor of the Toronto Globe, has led an unhappy life since. The whole town turned its back on him; the urchins gathered about his house with abuse at night; no one would employ him or associate with him; and, as a last resort, he had to apply to the Mayor for a pauper pass to get out of town. These same people would, most of them, have been glad to aid Bennett had he been turned loose.

Within the space of seven blocks in New York city there are in course of construction sixteen buildings, each of which is to be a palace in magnificence and to cost a fortune. Among these are the residences being built for W. H. Vanderbilt and his married daughters, for Cornelius Vanderbilt, Wm. K. Vanderbilt, and others of that family, among whom there seems to be a rivalry as to who shall have the most palatial dwelling.

In the spring of 1873 some intelligent women of a New England village announced that on a day named there would be the best dinner they could prepare for men who would come for a day's tree planting. The result was the setting out of thirty trees. The year 1874 was dry, and anxiety was felt about the trees. A few were cared for by those who lived near to them, but twenty-three remained to be looked after. Twelve women induced a man to send his horse with a water barrel, and, with their own hands, they gave each tree a barrel, and saved it. This is a proceeding which deserves wide imitation.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher some time since received a letter from a young man, who recommended himself very highly as being honest, and closed with the request, "Get me an easy situation, that honesty may be rewarded." To which Mr. Beecher replied: "Don't be an editor, if you would be 'easy.' Do not try the law. Avoid school-keeping. Keep out of the pulpit. Let alone all ships, stores, shops, and merchandise. Abhor politics. Keep away from lawyers. Don't practice medicine. Be not a farmer nor a mechanic, neither a soldier nor a sailor. Don't study. Don't think. Don't work. None of them are easy. Oh, my honest friend, you are in a very hard world! I know of but one 'easy' place in it. That is the grave.'

The dead walls of Munich broke out in all the colors of the rainbow with the announcements that the greatest wonder of the world would be submitted to public inspection, in the shape of a gorilla trained to perform on the violin. The Coliseum was crowded on the opening night of the performance. There was the gorilla, horrible of aspect, but unquestionably skilled in the production of sweet sounds from an ordinary violin. A skeptical spectator contrived to approach him unobserved, and made an incision in his hide with a penknife. The animal did not mind it. Encouraged in his suspicions, the doubter seized Pongo from behind and shook him roughly, whereon the seams of his skin gave way and a man stood revealed to an astonished audience.

Edward Atkinson, of Boston, says that we do not begin as yet to appreciate the magnitude of the wealth to be reaped from cotton culture in this country. He says the present crop of cotton will be 25 per cent. larger than the largest crop ever raised by slaves—that is, it will exceed 6,000,000 bales. If it be of that amount, it will produce 3,000,000 tons of cotton seed, besides seed for planting, which will yield 90,000,000 gallons of oil, 1,300,000 tons of oil cake, and 1,500,000 of hulls suitable for making paper. Each ton of oil-seed meal will keep five sheep six months. Thus the cotton-seed crop will support millions of sheep and return to the land the fertilizer needed to grow more cotton. He further says that the present cotton acreage of the South covers less than 2 per cent. of the cotton-growing area of the United States.

A will case has been decided by that curiously-mixed tribunal—the probate divorce and admiralty division of the law courts. About seven months ago a very old lady died who five years previously had made her will. Two years after the execution of the instrument she, between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning, ordered a servant to bring it to her, and with a pair of scissors deliberately cut it into shreds. The body of the document, however, was pieced together and the signatures of testator and witnesses, though mutilated, were not in dispute. The question for the court to decide upon was whether this constituted a revocation. That question is decided in the negative. The testator was shown to be sane at the time when she made the will, but had lost her reason when she evinced a disposition to cancel it. But upon what trivial circumstances do these questions of inheritance depend! The old lady might have burnt her will, or obliterated her signature, or hidden the document away, after the cunning manner of many insane people, with almost interminable litigation in consequence.

The New York World relates the following: A remarkable instance of the persistence of an impression, unquickened by repetition through more than forty years, is that of a gentleman living in New York. On Dec. 16, 1835, occurred the great fire which swept the First ward east of Broadway and below Wall street, and destroyed property worth about $18,000,000. At that time the guardians of the city's peace were not policemen clad in uniform, but constables dressed like common citizens and distinguished from them only by carrying long staves with which to admonish disorderly characters. The subject of the story, then a boy 10 years of age, was present at the fire, and there saw a young, black-haired constable strike with his stave a man who was raising a disturbance. A few days ago, while crossing the river in a ferryboat, the gentleman saw a gray-haired policeman, and it instantly occurred to him that this was the officer whom he had seen strike the man forty-five years ago. He spoke to him on the subject, and found that his recollection was entirely correct; the officer having been at the fire and remembering the occurrence perfectly; he gave, moreover, details which showed that there was no mistake of identity in the matter. The case is remarkable enough to find its way into the text-books, as the account is perfectly authentic.

A Baby Carriage in the Hall.

A baby carriage in the hall.

The happiest piece of furniture that any house can boast, always making an honorable exception in favor of the cradle.

That baby carriage means a home. Without it, only a place to stay in.

It means a "dear little dimpled darling"—that makes sunshine all the time—when it hasn't got the colic.

It means a happy mother, whose life is filled with all tender care, all sweet responsibilities, all wonderful hope for the future.

It means a father who holds his head up among men with the grandest dignity that any man may know.

To mother it is "Baby."

To father it is "My boy."

That baby carriage in the hall means all the wealth of rosy hours as mother sings lullaby songs—perhaps,

> "Hush my dear, lie still and slumber,
> Holy angels guard thy bed."

When all the time she is the angel that God appointed to guard it, as none of all high heaven's host could do.

It means a world of plans and projects which all center in that one little life.

It means a father that studies his bank balance with wonderful diligence, for "My son must have a good education, and a good start in life," you know.

And he goes home and catches the laughing toddler up, and reddens the dimples with his whiskers, and then putting sturdy little twelve-month's old on his feet, sets him at his a, b, c of walking, addressing him with comical dignity, "Well, Governor, where shall we go now?"

And although he only calls him "Governor," the mother's heart says—and the father wouldn't deny it were she to put it in words—that more likely it will be President, in that dim, beautiful and certainly very grand future.

Her choice, though, would be that he should be a good man and a happy one.

Between them both they parcel out for his manhood's years all that makes life worth the living.

That baby carriage in the hall means a good deal, does it not?

It means everything to the father and mother.

It means more than can be told.

If you have such a piece of furniture in use you know all about it.

If you haven't, it's a waste of raw material to bother with you.—Wheeling Leader.

Herbert Spencer will make the tour of the United States next year.

OUR CHIEF CITIES.

Where Our Urban Population is Located.

[From the New York Graphic.]

According to the late census, thirty-four of our States contain 161 chief cities. Of these cities Maine has eleven; four with a population of over and seven with a population of under 10,000. Those over 10,000 contain a population of 80,932, a gain of 1,806 over the census of 1870. New Hampshire has six chief cities, four over and two under 10,000. The four over have a population of 71,450, a gain of 15,894 over that of 1870. Vermont has only one city of any prominence. It has now 12,223, a gain of 3,389 since 1870. In Massachusetts there are nineteen cities, all over 10,000. The total population is 918,729, a gain of 235,339 since 1870. Rhode Island has five. Their population is 167,848, a gain of 57,824. Connecticut has sixteen. Thirteen of these have over 10,000, and have a population of 304,346, a gain of 88,366 since 1870. New York has thirteen cities over 10,000, whose population is 2,345,176, a gain of 549,719 since 1870. Pennsylvania has nine cities, with a population of 1,259,222, a gain of 299,535 since 1870. Delaware has one city with a population of 43,000, a gain of 12,159 since 1870. Maryland has also one with 340,000, a gain of 72,646. The District of Columbia has one with 160,000, a gain of 50,801. Virginia has three over 10,000, with a total of 100,843. West Virginia has one city with a population of 31,671, a gain of 12,683. South Carolina has one over 10,000 and one under. The one over has a population of 49,027, a gain of only .071 since 1870. Georgia has four, all over 10,000, with a total of 91,399, a gain of 23,164. Alabama has one over and one under. The one over has 29,166, a gain of 7,132 since 1870. Louisiana has one over and one under, the former 216,359, a gain of 24,941. Texas has three cities all over 10,000, whose population is 59,694, a gain of 24,238. Tennessee has four with a total of 103,845, a gain of 25,999 since 1870. Kentucky has but one city of any size; this has a population of 126,556, a gain of 25,800 in ten years. Ohio has six, all over 10,000; the total population of these is 571,601, a gain of 155,932. Michigan has four, all over 10,000, and they show a total population of 181,685, a gain of 67,090. Indiana has two, both over 10,000; their total is 101,125, a gain of 35,163. Illinois has nine over 10,000, with a total of 647,581, a gain of 231,480. In Iowa there are five all over 10,000, and they have a total of 85,523, showing a gain of 14,205. Wisconsin has three above 10,000 and one below; the three have a population of 147,490, a gain of 53,504. Minnesota has three above and one under 10,000; those above have a total of 100,077, a gain of 59,830. Nebraska has one with a population of 30,605, a gain of 14,522. Kansas has three, all over 10,000, with a total of 47,560, a gain of 26,843. Missouri has three, all over 10,000; total, 426,141; an increase of 63,452. Colorado has one with a population of 35,719, a gain of 30,960. Utah has one of 21,000, a gain of 8,136. California has six, all over 10,000; their total is 324,827, a gain of 123,754. New Jersey has eight over 10,000, making a total of 454,197, and a gain of 123,412. The total population of the 161 cities reaches 9,688,719. In 1870 it was 7,201,671, thus showing a gain of 2,487,048 people in the 161 cities during the last ten years.

Development of Forest Trees.

There exists a great diversity among trees in regard to their periods of development; some have a brief rotation. The coppice growths in European forestry are often utilized in periods of ten or fifteen years; in our own country, too, we have many trees of short rotation, and some of the most useful and profitable trees are of this character. Dr. Wardner, of Ohio, in a paper on "Forestry," says:

The black locust may be harvested after it has grown from twenty to thirty years.

The catalpa speciosa in the same period will make good cross-ties and fence posts.

The ailantus very soon attains a useful size, and for certain purposes has been highly commended both in this country and in Europe. Professor C. S. Sargent is advising its extensive plantation, and some years ago it was spoken of as the most promising tree for the arid plains of the Southwest.

The forest of Scotch pine in Germany are allowed sixty years to reach their useful size for fuel and for timbers.

The birch there reaches its maturity in about half a century.

The willow used for charcoal needed in the manufacture of gunpowder may be cut after growing twenty years or even less.

Chestnut, in its second growth, is most profitably cut every twenty or twenty-five years.

The beautiful wood of the wild cherry soon reaches a profitable size for many purposes, though for saw logs and lumber the tree should be larger.

Narrow Escape from Death.

"In my judgment that little fellow is doomed," said a gentleman to his companion in a Long island railroad car. The train was on a side track, and the little fellow referred to was a potato-bug crawling intently along across the crest of another track. "Yes," was the response, "when he encounters the down train he is apt to get considerably the worst of it." A black-eyed little girl heard these words and saw the bug, and her whole heart went out to the imperiled creature. "Oh, poor little thing!" she said; "why doesn't it climb down? I wish somebody would shoo it off." The train was coming. "Shoo!" cried the little girl; "oh, somebody make it get off the track! It doesn't hear the cars and it can't see very far! It will be killed!" The last words were almost screamed, and all the passengers in the car rushed to the interesting side, expecting to see a frightful accident or a narrow escape. Had a human being been in danger the little girl couldn't have been more deeply concerned. "Oh, it knows!" she continued, while everybody struggled to look where she did. "See, it's getting off! Oh, I'm so glad!" And, in fact, the bug, either by accident or seeing its danger, did turn from its course suddenly, and, when the locomotive wheels came up to it, they merely shook it from the rail to the ground. "Oh, it isn't hurt, it isn't hurt!" the child sang, and, turning to the gentleman who had first noticed it, she asked what sort of a thing it was. And he replied, somewhat louder than necessary, that it was a potato-bug, and the passengers all resumed their seats.

COUNTRY ROAD-MAKING.

A Matter That Is Indifferently Understood Everywhere.

[From the Hartford Courant.]

It is a matter of universal comment with travelers that country road-making in the United States is either a lost art or a to-be-acquired science. The average selectman or road-agent of a country town is usually deplorably ignorant of the first principles of making a good road. Nothing will so surely advance the growth and well being of a town as well-made and well-kept roads. No part of its domestic economy will more certainly repay the outlay. Nothing more bespeaks the intelligence and character or public spirit of its citizens. In England and most of its dependencies the roads are made directly by the state or under its supervision. As a result, the contrast between English roads and those of this country is much in favor of the former. A common and natural mistake of most towns in this country is that an intelligent farmer must necessarily know how to make a good road, but the reverse is the fact. Road-making is a subject requiring study and a knowledge of the nature of soils, not often considered by any but engineers, or those to whom such knowledge is a necessary adjunct of their business in life. A well-made road even in our climate and with the wide differences in soil ingredients, will last for years, whereas ordinarily the item of repairs on our roads means an entirely changed thoroughfare, the pitch, watersheds and general character being more in the way of experiment than a scientific and practical renovation. The country road-maker commences by throwing out the "big stones" on to the side of the road, retaining the smaller ones, when by thoroughly "bedding" the big stones the best possible foundation is had; and, with a covering of smaller stones mixed with gravel, or even with good loam carefully harrowed and scraped, a road-bed is formed which will defy both rains and heavy teams. Generally the tyro devotes his time to heaping up the material in the center with such a slope as often to interfere with locomotion, and which heap the first heavy team resolves into deep ruts, vitiating its usefulness for any but a similarly heavy team, and for it only with constantly-increasing strain on the horses. Yankee ingenuity has invented capital road-making tools, which need but intelligent application to developing such thoroughfares as would make them admired, in place of being a reproach and shame. Our country is rich enough to place the roads in the hands of such government as will insure their perfection, instead of leaving them to town officials without the education or experience necessary to an accomplishment of the object. Most of the roads east of the Connecticut river are sandy, and this fact, together with the indifference or ignorance of those in charge toward improving their character, necessarily impedes and retards the natural and growing tendency of city people for building and living in the country.

What is Nickel?

Since the convenient five cent coin which in common talk is called "a nickel," has come into general circulation, the question above is asked, either mentally or orally, hundreds of times every day, and but few get an intelligent answer. In China and India, a white copper, called pack-tong, has long been known and has been extensively used both there and in Europe for counterfeiting silver coin. About the year 1700 a peculiar ore was discovered in the copper mines of Saxony which had the appearance of being very rich, but in smelting, it yielded no copper, and the miners called it kupfer-nickel, or false copper. In 1754, Cronstadt announced the discovery of a new metal in kupfer-nickel, to which he gave the name of nickel. It was in combination with arsenic from which he could relieve it only in part. The alloy of nickel and arsenic which he obtained was white, brittle, very hard and had a melting point nearly as high as cast-iron. It was not until 1823 that pure nickel was obtained by analysis of German silver which had for a number of years, been produced at Suhl in Saxony. Its composition was ascertained to be copper 10 parts, zinc 5, and nickel 4. If more nickel be used the alloy is as white as silver and susceptible of a very high polish, but becomes too brittle and hard to be hammered or rolled, and can be worked only by casting. Pure nickel is a white metal with a tarnish readily in the air. Unlike silver, it is not acted on by the vapor of sulphur, and even the strong mineral acids attract it but slightly. Nickel has the hardness of iron and like it, has strong magnetic properties, but cannot be welded and is soldered with difficulty. Pure nickel has heretofore been used chiefly for plating, for which purpose its hardness and power to resist atmospheric influences, admirably adapt it. Within the last year, the French have succeeded in rolling the metal into plates from which spoons and other table furniture may be pressed. Nickel bronze, which consists of equal parts of copper and nickel, with a little tin, may be cast into very delicate forms, and is susceptible of a high polish. Mines of nickel are worked at Chatham, Conn., and Lancaster, Pa., and it is said to be found at Mine Le Motte, Mo., and at several points in Colorado and New Mexico, where but little attention is paid to it. It is extensively mined in Saxony and in Sweden, but the late discovery of a new ore (a silicate of nickel) in New Caledonia will probably supersede all the other ones. The inexhaustible supply of this ore, the ease with which it can be smelted and the richness of the ore will probably suspend the use of the arsenical ores, and yet bring nickel into common use. Switzerland, in the year 1852, made a coin of German silver, which is identical in composition with our nickel coin. The United States made nickel cents in 1856, and eight years later, coined the five cent pieces. Belgium adopted nickel coinage in 1860 and Germany in 1873. England has lately coined nickel pennies for Jamaica, but at home she and France adhere to the clumsy copper small change.

HOUSEKEEPERS' HELPS.

Twenty-four Proverbs in Cooking.

Miss Dod's lectures are full of little bits of information that might fairly be called culinary proverbs. Here are a few of them:

There is a greenness in onions and potatoes that renders them hard to digest. For health's sake put them in warm water for an hour before cooking.

The only kind of a stove with which you can preserve a uniform heat is a gas stove; with it you can simmer a pot for an hour, or boil it at the same rate for twenty minutes.

Good flour is not tested by its color. White flour may not be the best. The test of good flour is by the amount of water it absorbs.

In cooking a fowl, to ascertain when it is done, put a skewer into the breast, and if the breast is tender the fowl is done.

A few dried or preserved cherries, with stones out, are the very best thing possible to garnish sweet dishes.

Single cream is cream that has stood on the milk twelve hours. It is best for tea and coffee. Double cream stands on its milk twenty-four hours, and cream for butter frequently stands forty-eight hours. Cream that is to be whipped should not be butter cream, lest in whipping it change to butter.

To beat the whites of eggs quickly, put in a pinch of salt. The cooler the eggs the quicker they will froth. Salt cools and also freshens them.

In boiling eggs hard put them in boiling water. It will prevent the yolk from coloring black.

You must never attempt to boil the dressing of a clear soup in the stock, for it will always discolor the soup.

In making any sauce, put the butter and flour in together, and your sauce will never be lumpy.

Whenever you see your sauce boil from the sides of the pan you may know your flour or corn-starch is done.

Boiled fowl with sauce, over which grate the yolk of eggs, is a magnificent dish for luncheon.

Tepid water is produced by combining two-thirds cold and one-third boiling water.

To make maccaroni tender, put it in cold water and bring it to a boil. It will then be much more tender than if put into hot water or stewed in milk.

The yolk of eggs binds the crust much better than the whites. Apply it to the edges with a brush.

Old potatoes may be freshened up by plunging them into cold water before cooking them.

Never put a pudding that is to be steamed into anything else than a dry mold.

Never wash raisins that are to be used in sweet dishes. It will make the pudding heavy. To clean them wipe with a dry towel.

To brown sugar for sauce or puddings, put the sugar in a perfectly dry saucepan. [If the pan is the least bit wet, the sugar will burn, and you will spoil your saucepan.]

Cutlets and steaks may be fried as well as broiled, but they must be put in hot butter or lard. The grease is hot enough when it throws off a bluish smoke.

The water used in mixing bread must be tepid. If it is too hot, the loaf will be full of great holes.

To boil potatoes successfully: When the skin breaks, pour off the water and let them finish cooking in their own steam.

In making crust of any kind, do not melt the lard in flour. Melting will injure the crust.

In boiling dumplings of any kind, put them in the water one at a time. If they are put in together they will mix with each other.

Popular Ideas of the Cross.

In the West of England there is a tradition that the cross was formed of the mistletoe, which before that event used to be a fine forest tree, but has since been doomed to lead a parasitical existence. The gypsies believe that it was made of the ash tree. The nails used at the crucifixion, said to have been found by Helena, are reported to have worked many miracles. One of them was thrown by her into the Adriatic during a storm, and produced a perfect calm. Another placed in the crown or helm of Constantine, was found in a mutilated state in the Church of Santa Croce. The third is said to be in the possession of Duomo of Milan, while that of Treves claims the fourth. In the time of Charlemagne a new relic was discovered in the shape of a sponge soaked in the blood of Christ. In Cheshire the Arum maculatum is called "Gethsemane," because it is said to have been growing at the foot of the cross, and to have received some drops of blood on its petals. The dirpe of Mamre died at the crucifixion! "Christ's thorn" is a very common plant in Palestine. In Scotland it was formerly believed that the dwarf birch is stunted in growth because the rods with which Christ was scourged were made from it. These are the popular ideas of the material of the cross, some of which will, perhaps, never be entirely obliterated until the last great day, when "all things shall be made plain."—All the Year Round.

Inherited Tendencies to Disease.

The present article is based on a valuable paper by Dr. J. R. Black, in the Popular Science Monthly. Seventy thousand persons in America yearly die of consumption, most of whom have inherited the disease. Vast numbers inherit a tendency to rheumatism, epilepsy, insanity, cancer, indigestion, migraine, neuralgia, asthma, and to early loss of sight and hearing. No other cause of grief and suffering compares with that due to organic defects handed down from parent to child. Of our 40,000,000 of people probably 26,000,000 inherit some constitutional defect. But hitherto little has been done to arrest these tendencies. Physicians are called only to the sick. On the contrary, those who have inherited tendencies to disease are generally as careless of their health as others, while, in the case of those who already show the tendency, their friends are apt to pursue just the course most likely to strengthen it. For instance, a consumptive is shut up from the outdoor air and gentle exercise, though these are his only hope. Moreover, the whole influence of our social life and practices encourages the thoughtless squandering of vital reserve.

As a consequence, we are degenerating as a people. The death-rate and birth-rate are steadily approximating. The difference is already less in New England than in any country of Europe, France alone excepted. Yet there is no inherent difficulty in the way of extirpating hereditary disease. Hygienic care would accomplish it—such care as can come only from a medical expert, and such as we are all ready to resort to in acute diseases. Able physicians have thus been able to extirpate tubercular consumption from themselves, their families and descendants.—Methodist.

ALL SORTS.

A London magistrate sent a man to prison for cutting off a cat's tail.

George Peabody's London poor-fund has increased from $2,500,000 to $3,500,000.

Dr. Mary Walker says that the time is coming when she will be elected to Congress.

A plain small marble slab marks the grave of Gen. Sam Houston, at Huntsville, Texas.

Cape May has a veteran hack driver who has driven a hack there for sixty-five years. He is now 82 years old.

Mrs. Swan, of Lafayette, Ind., a devout Roman Catholic, killed herself because her son married a Protestant.

The equipage used in South Africa by the Empress Eugenie has just been sold at Natal. The price it brought was $505.

Work is now progressing rapidly on the railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and the road will probably be completed by next year.

Trenor W. Park, of Bennington, Vt., who, forty years ago, was peddling popcorn and candy through the streets of town, is now 45 years old, and worth all of $15,000,000.

At Oglethorpe, Ga., two large trees have grown up like pillars under a rock shelf, in which they are imbedded. The rock is loose, and can be made to sway. It is called the shaking granite.

August Dehn was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in Baltimore for drunkenness, on the complaint of his mother. Before his term was over she died and left him by will $10,000.

Fond parent to his son: "Yes, San Francisco is the place to get on in. Look at James, he started without a penny, and has lately failed for $100,000. Of course that's an extreme case; I don't expect you to do as well as that. Still, with honesty and industry, I see no reason why you should not, in a few years, fail for $50,000."

Mrs. Gov. Lew. Wallace, in describing a ride in New Mexico, says that the Mexican driver occasionally leaped from his seat for a pocketful of stones, and throwing them at the heads of the mules, "at the same time muttering, on the ledger lines below, sacred words mixed with names of saints." The Mexican insists a mule cannot be made to understand without such urging, and they have a proverb, "An ass's ears are made long in order to catch oaths."

A massive walking-stick more than 150 years old, once the property of Thomas Hancock, uncle of John Hancock, is now in the possession of Mr. Alexander Williams, of Boston. This venerable cane, which is in perfect preservation, bears its first owner's name on its finely-carved head. Thomas Hancock was one of the eminent merchants of New England. He built the famous old Hancock House on Beacon street, in 1737.

Recording the Motion of Trains.

It would be a curious catalogue that would set forth the number of inventions that have been applied to railroads, for railroads have been the prolific mother of a great many contrivances, and have given inventors thousands of opportunities to exert their genius and ingenuity. The next time you are on a palace drawing-room car or a sleeper, look about you and try to take an account of the patent arrangements that are applied to contribute to your comfort or tend to your safety, from the Westinghouse air brakes and the Miller bumpers to the little catch that holds the window curtain at your side. One of the latest inventions and one that seems to us could be made very useful, is called the "Wythe Speed Recorder." It is named from its inventor, who is said to have made and lost several fortunes in inventions. A stock company owns this patant. The machine makes an indisputable record of the movements of a train, and this record could be used in evidence in cases of collisions and accidents. It is placed in the caboose. A gear to the axle moves a roller, over which a paper, marked in small squares, runs. A pencil is adjusted to the surface of this paper, and when the axle turns, the paper is moved under its point and receives a mark. This pencil has two movements, one lengthwise of the paper, showing distance, and a second crosswise on the paper, showing time. When the train is in motion the pencil mark is diagonally across the squares, and when at rest the mark is up and down across the squares. The instrument records stops, backings and all motions of the train. It tells how often, how fast and how far every move is made, and in cases of disputed evidence would do much towards fixing responsibility for accidents. It shows just how long the train stands at any point, and is to a train what a log-book is to a ship.—Elmira Free Press.

She Heard the Roman Empire Fall.

The Demopolis (Ala.) News tells the following story: "Our census enumerator reports a colored woman on Martin Rice's place 114 years old. Seeing that the old woman was proud of her age and her recollections of antiquity, he asked her some questions touching Gen. Washington's horse and the Revolutionary war, all of which being satisfactorily answered, he said: 'Old lady, you must have heard the Roman empire when it fell?' 'I don't sackly member de circumstance you spoke of now, but I heard a mighty rumblin' noise de year de stars fell, and I spec it must a been dat. Things was constant fallin' dat year, and if it fell in old North Carolina you bet your bottom rag, honey, I was dar.'"

Mrs. Hutchinson threatened, at Sligo, Ohio, to do something that would "make Oscar feel right bad." Oscar was her husband, and they had quarreled. That night she eloped with a negro neighbor.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., SEPTEMBER 9, 1880.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District—JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM. P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

THE Hancock boom in Pennsylvania is encouraging.

AND even Ben. Butler's conscience will not let him support Garfield.

A NEWSPAPER, in speaking of a certain mine in Colorado, says: "Its owners now hold six mining claims, a town site and three mill sites." Suppose they own a dam sight, then.

WISHING to pay the highest compliment possible to General Hancock, the Philadelphia Times says that he is even better than his party. Garfield is just like his party.

THE Arkansas state election came off last Monday, and the indications are that all state and county officers and members of the legislature were elected by the usual majority. The republicans claim the election of a sheriff at the capital.

THIS is said to be the gist of John Sherman's speech at Cincinnati: "I, the republican party and Almighty God have done the handsome thing for the United States, and if we three let go our hold the whole concern will go to the demnition bow-wows."

THE attention of Irishmen is called to the fact that James A. Garfield, as a member of the fortieth congress, voted against the following resolution on March 8, 1867: "Resolved, that the house extend its sympathy to the people of Ireland in their struggle for constitutional liberty.

"IS HANCOCK in favor of the Jeffersonian heresy of state rights?" Well, to tell the truth, we suspicion that he is really in favor of the states having all the rights not surrendered to the general government. This man Hancock is also in favor of maintaining all constitutional rights, which is a violation of the established practice of the republican party.

LONGSTREET, the confederate general who fought Hancock at Gettysburg, is now, by grace of the republican party, minister to Turkey, with a salary of $7,500 in gold. The loyal and disloyal elements of the south are distinguished by the way they vote. Those who support the perjured and bribe-stained Garfield are patriots, while those who support Hancock, the hero and statesman, are traitors.

THE holy Henry Ward Beecher, the saint with such big holes in his reputation, will be heard in the land for Garfield. Beecher is not only a perjurer, but he is guilty of what is worse than murder; under the cloak of his holy name, and while administering spiritual advice, he ruined the character of a woman, and up-set the domestic relations of a peaceful, happy family. For details, address Theodore Tilton.

THERE is not much poetry, but a good deal of dry truth in this paragraph from the Albany Argus:

"At the beginning of reconstruction, the only republican senators from the south who were born in the south were Thomas J. Robertson, of South Carolina, and John Pool, of North Carolina. It is also unhappily true that they were the only republican senators from the south who were not regarded as common thieves. They are now both supporting Gen. Hancock, while most of their southern republican colleagues in their period of senate service, are fugitives from state and federal laws."

Other Lies.

We hear it is reported in remote parts of the county by certain republican candidates and their friends, that such solid democrats as Major Sprott and son, George Barney and sons, John W. Dills and others, will scratch the democratic ticket, and vote for certain republican candidates. We have assurances—which are entirely useless—that all of such statements are lies out of whole cloth, and we will make this offer: That for every scratch made by the persons named upon the democratic ticket this fall, we will agree to pay to the county treasurer, for the benefit of the public school fund, the sum of ten dollars. Democrats, whenever you hear such statements pronounce them lies; they are only made to induce you to believe that our candidates are weak, and their's are strong, which is also false, and to get you to scratch your ticket. They know they cannot get an office in this county by 300 votes, unless the democrats vote for them. This is not the year that democrats intend to scratch their tickets. Democrats who elected republicans two years ago caught tartary, got their fingers burned and now know better.

Mr. Landers in his speech at Fort Wayne, speaking of state affairs, remarked: "We have saved you in the insane asylum, $41,000. We have saved you in the deaf and dumb asylum, $8,000. We have saved you in the blind asylum, $8,000. Now this is in round numbers. We have saved you, during the year, $94,000. Where is the man who will say that your business has not been done? We took your state administration when it was run in the most extravagant manner by this republican party. We brought it down to economy. Your state is managed today with more economy than any state in the Union. I ask you to-day what reasons have you for voting for this republican party in preference to the democratic party, that has brought about these great reforms? That is the question. Is there any?"

IN 1873 Garfield was a corrupt man who was no longer worthy of the confidence and support of his party. At least that is what all the leading republican papers said. But now he is a candidate for president, and they never reproduce those charges, and the New York Sun says that "they can hardly be expected to do it. When they held Garfield up to public reprobation as a corrupt man and a perjurer he was not a candidate for any office. Now he is the candidate of their own party for president of the United States. No, they can not reproduce their honest expressions of opinion in 1873 without proclaiming that their candidate is an unfit man to vote for. Silence is their only course."

WE find the following telegram in a recent issue of the Indianapolis Sentinel:

AUBURN, IND., August 31.—General L. J. Blair, formerly republican treasurer of this county, a gallant soldier and a fine stumper, made a ringing speech last Friday evening at Garrett, and boldly proclaimed his intention to vote for Hancock and abandon the party of hate and corruption. He will make an active canvass for the democracy, and give his reasons for the step he has taken. DeKalb county is alive to the great interests of democracy, "and don't you forget it." Congressman Colerick is meeting with large crowds at all his appointments in this district, and will give a good report in October.

THE Fort Wayne Sentinel announces the death in Colorado last Saturday morning of A. V. D. Conover. This gentleman, up to a few months ago, was connected with the Fort Wayne Sentinel, and was a journalist of considerable ability, and had a warm heart and many friends. He had gone west in the vain hope of finding a climate more friendly to the disease of hemorrhage, with which he was afflicted, and from which it is supposed he died. His remains will probably be brought to Fort Wayne for burial.

MOSBY was a confederate guerrilla. He is now, by virtue of republican favor, consul to Hong Kong. It does not matter that he fought under the black flag during the war, so long as he remains faithful to the republican party. There are no bloodstains on this guerrilla's hands. His affiliation with the party of God and morality has thoroughly cleansed him. Mosby, Longstreet and Key are not among the "traitors" and "rebel brigadiers" of whom we hear so much. Ah, no! They are noble, patriotic souls. O, Consistency," etc.

SINCE the passage of the silver bill there have been coined up to September 1, 808,189,750 in standard silver dollars. Of this amount $19,880,443 is outstanding in circulation; the balance, $48,351,307, is in the treasury vaults. During the month of August there were paid out from the mints $1,235,483 in standard silver dollars against $814,826 in July. The customs receipts for August were $19,600,000, against $17,000,000 in July.

Work For The Cause.

The election is near at hand. It is a little over a month, or just thirty-three days until Indiana holds her state election. Every citizen should feel personally interested in this contest, for upon its results depend the weal or woe, not alone of the people of this state, but of the entire Union. In view of this fact, we wish to especially urge upon the democrats of DeKalb county the importance of their zealous co-operation. Let us work assiduously from this time forth. Do not be lukewarm. Do not sit supinely by as though you had no interest in your country's welfare. The eyes of the people of the entire Union are eagerly watching us. Let us feel that each one of us has a direct and personal interest in this struggle for democratic ascendancy. The principles of this party were the principles of Jefferson and Madison; they were the principles of our forefathers, and shall we not cherish them as sacred? Every one should realize how much depends upon his individual action in this matter, and subordinate every selfish personal consideration and go to work for our county and state tickets; work early, work late, work long and work zealously, and when the 12th day of October comes, go and vote, not often, but early, and when you have done this, go and hunt up your indifferent neighbor, if there should be such, and the lame and the decrepit and see to it that they reach the polls. With this kind of zealous work our county ticket will surely be elected, and Landers will be governor, and in November the joyful tidings will be proclaimed to the world that General Winfield Scott Hancock, the soldier and statesman, has been elected president of the United States.

A Great Change!

The present campaign is a fight for constitutional liberty as against centralization. A fight of the honest people of this country against a dishonest horde of office-holders. The party of popular government is led by Gen. Hancock; the party of centralization and spoils is headed by Garfield, the man who was so vigorously denounced by the New York Tribune and others of his party papers in 1873, and which do not now apologize for or mention the charges then made. If Mr. Garfield was guilty then, is he not guilty now? There was a time when the republican party professed some regard for the rights and liberties of the American people. It was a long time ago, however. In the national platform adopted June 17, 1856, when Fremont was nominated, the following resolution was contained in the republican platform:

Resolved, That while the constitution of the United States was ordained and established by the people to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense and secure the blessings of liberty, and contains ample provisions for the blessings of life, liberty and property of every citizen, the dearest constitutional rights of the people have been fraudulently taken from them; their territory has been invaded by armed force; spurious and pretended legislative, judicial and executive officers have been set over them, by whose usurped authority, sustained by the military power of the government, tyrannical and unconstitutional laws have been enacted and enforced; the rights of the people to keep and bear arms have been infringed; test oaths of an extraordinary and entangling nature have been imposed as a condition of exercising the right of suffrage and holding office; the right of an accused person to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury has been denied; the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures has been violated; they have been deprived of life, liberty and property, without due process of law; the freedom of speech and of the press has been abridged; the right to choose their representatives has been made of no effect; that all these things have been done with the knowledge, sanction and procurement of the present administration; and that for this high crime against the constitution, the union and humanity, we arraign the administration, the president, his advisers, agents, supporters, apologists and accessories, either before or after the facts, before the country and before the world; and that it is our fixed purpose to bring the actual perpetrators of these atrocious outrages and their accomplices to a sure and condign punishment hereafter.

Twenty years ago, then, the republican party howled for constitutional and local self-government and against the use of the military power, for this resolution says that "their territory has been invaded by armed force; spurious and pretended legislative, judicial and executive officers have been set over them, by whose usurped authority, sustained by the military power of the government, tyrannical and unconstitutional laws have been enacted." This same party now howls against local self-government and surrounds the polls with bayonets. The charges in the above resolution were made against the democratic administration of President Pierce, and were false; the charges the republican party bring against the democrats to-day are false. As this party changes its principles, so it as readily changes its opinion of its candidate. Seven years ago its organs denounced him as a thief and purjurer, and now he is a fit man for president. Twenty-four years ago it favored local self-government, but now a centralized government is what is wanted.

That Confederate Flag.

The Indianapolis Journal and other radical organs of this state, which have large capacities for willful misrepresentation, have struck on what they consider a bonanza in the way of material for the campaign in Indiana. They have discovered that a newspaper down in Arkansas recently appeared with a cut of a confederate flag at the head of an article. Even the editor of the Republican, over Sim. Tarney's butcher-shop, is tickled way down in his boots, at what he affects to consider as positive proof of a fresh outbreak of the old rebel spirit. His asinine voice is now heard in clearer tones, and he looks grander and more patriotic as he yells "traitors! murderers! villians!" We are willing to do even him the credit of saying that we do not believe that he is so lost to all sense of honor, so entirely conscienceless as to make such mendacious publications without feeling just a little mean about it afterwards. His looks immediately after the last issue of his paper, containing a cut of the flag, warrants us in paying him the above compliment.

In an editorial of the Journal, headed with a confederate flag, and which was copied by the DeKalb County Republican and all the rest of the organs, is this item:

"The Little Rock Evening Telegraph comes to us floating the 'stars and bars,' a fac simile of which is above, over a long account of a democratic barbecue in Arkansas, at which, judging from the account published, there was general rejoicing at the prospect of the election of Hancock and English. All reports agree that 'away down in Dixie' they look upon the presidential election as already settled. The south is so solid that no question is entertained of the result, and there is tumultuous rejoicing thereaway. The old rebel yell is heard in all its savage fierceness."

The Indianapolis Sentinel contains the following explanation of the accident which will be sufficient to convince all intelligent, fair-minded persons of the object of such vile publications as the one in question:

"There was a democratic barbecue at Hot Springs, Ark., August 23. No confederate flags were displayed, and no rebel sentiments were uttered. But the Hot Springs Telegraph, edited and owned by a union soldier, in giving an account of the barbecue, placed at the head of the column the confederate flag. Mr. W. A. Webber, editor of the Telegraph, in his issue of the 24th of August, gives a full explanation of the occurrence. The error was committed by the foreman of the Telegraph office. Prefacing the explanation, Mr. Webber says:

'We admit it. The Telegraph man made an ass of himself yesterday in allowing the error to creep into the local columns of this paper. He is deserving of all the kicks he will get for allowing the error to occur. He deserves it. Any man who runs a first-class newspaper like the Telegraph and who allows such an error to creep in ought to be kicked, and kicked like thunder. We refer to that flag which preceded the account of the great democratic barbecue at Chalybeate Springs yesterday. The radicals chose to make some sport and spent their money freely to buy up the edition of yesterday, asserting that in the first instance that that flag, printed in the shape it was, would be a good campaign document in Indiana and Ohio and other September and October states.

* * * *

The blue suit which we wore in 1862, and for our faithfulness to the Union and laws of the fathers through all the years of our manhood, should and will be a guarantee of the truth of the explanation that we make in the following statement. More than this, the political position that we assumed and have maintained since we have been grown to manhood, i. e., that this country has no north, no east, no west, no south; that the war is over; that if we profess to be people of one nation, we should so act, and in truth feel toward one another as to at least convince ourselves that such is the case; that the conquering party should in truth take its feet from the necks of the conquered, as they profess to do; that the doctrines of the fathers, measured by the Jeffersonian standard, and the true progress of the country can but be promoted by the success of the democratic party; will be further, a guarantee among our friends that we intended to run up a United States flag, and that the mistake was made through a piece of miserable carelessness, and almost inexcusable blunder in any live newspaper man.

THIS IS OUR STATEMENT:—Yesterday was a very, very busy day about the office. The editor of this paper was preparing to run out a pretty, genuine United States bunting flag—store made—presented to him by some young gentlemen and democrats of this city. Also he was preparing to make a full report of the great democratic barbecue, held yesterday; also preparing copy for the composing room, and also attending to the routine duties of the business of the office. Among other things, he instructed the foreman of the composing room to hunt from among the stock for a cut of a cannon, to be used to display the account of the barbecue. The foreman returned and reported that there was no cut of a cannon, but there was one of an American flag. This he was instructed to use, without a thought being had that it was other than the genuine stars and stripes, the good old flag of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson. No further attention was given to the subject until about dark, when the rads 'read proof' close, as they are in the habit of doing now-a-days, and caught us with the wrong flag up in the paper, but the genuine old time red, white and blue one over our door. It is well to mention that in the Telegraph office there is much material that belonged to old offices of the valley and bought by former owners. In looking it over this morning we find that we are richer than we knew, that we have not only confederate flags, but cuts of fine stallions, eminent men, uniting bonds, etc. That old cut was among this lot of rubbish.'"

We know Mr. Webber personally, and know that he never had any sympathy for the southern cause. He is a northern gentleman, who since the war cast his lot with the people of the south. He fought four years for the stars and stripes, and there is no man in all this section who was truer to his country's interests than was he. Next time, rads., you should hatch up something not quite so thin.

Ben. Harrison's Speech at Garrett.

EDITOR COURIER:—Politics is in full bloom here. We are thankful to the republicans for their assistance in uniting the democrats of Keyser township, they have rendered good services. Every person was expecting to hear a grand oration last Wednesday evening when it was announced that Ben. Harrison, of "kid-glove" fame, was to address the citizens of Garrett on that evening. But, Oh! such an oration, and what a disappointment! The republicans, after draining the towns of Kendallville, Corunna, Waterloo, Auburn, St. Joe, Avilla, Swan and LaOtto, succeeded in gathering together 303 torch-lights. We believe they claimed 400, but we stood and counted them as they marched across the bridge at the school-house; and 303 were all that there were in the procession; we did not count those stationed along the streets and in the saloons.

Judging from Ben. Harrison's talk on the stand, and his personal appearance, no person can help but to come to the conclusion that if he were divested of his earthly wealth and left dependent on his literary qualifications he would scarcely pass as a third-grade teacher in a log cabin school-house in a new country. And as to his political ability, if he did not have slavery, war and rebel to fall back on he would be nothing but a shadow; his whole speech was nothing but watered milk—water having the predominance. As to the torch-light procession, it was about as thin and irregular as the speech. No music worth speaking of except the Garrett band; there was nothing attractive about any of the torch companies except the Garrett Garfield and Arthur club, and the only thing that attracted attention with it was their captain. When he got his "plumage" on and steam up to the second gauge, and made a dash out into the street, he reminded us very much of one of "Dan Rice's stripped clowns;" he lead the club to the grove near the school-house then returned to town. We presume when the trees got to running around he was afraid he would get his bay window knocked off. Several become so disgusted with the speech and the general proceedings that they threw their torches away and declared that they would never vote with such a party. If the republicans would send a few more items to the Chicago Tribune and bring in a few more such speakers as Harrison, they would do more for the democracy of Keyser township than we can do ourselves.

M. B.

School in Dress-Making.

I will teach the cutting and fitting system by chart, also styles of trimming, etc., to a class beginning on Monday, September 6. For terms, enquire at my rooms, up stairs, right side of hall leading to Gordon's art gallery.

35-2w Miss R. A. CANON.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing a sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short, the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial Affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external or internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Mathews. 34 cow-1y.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Enas Smith, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

37-3t. PETER MOODY, Administrator.
September 8th, 1880.

J. A. BAXTER, ATT'Y. FOR ESTATE.

Final Settlement.

Notice is hereby given that John McCurdy, late guardian but now administrator, of the estate of David Swihart, deceased, has filed his final settlement report in my office, and the same will be heard at the next term of the DeKalb circuit court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Petition to Sell Real Estate.

STATE OF INDIANA, DeKalb county, ss:
[In the DeKalb circuit court]

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Oberlin, administrator of the estate of Cyrus Koontz, deceased, has filed a petition to sell the real estate of the decedent, the personal being insufficient to pay his debts; and that said petition will be heard at the next term of said court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested, that the county surveyor or his deputy will, at my request, proceed to re-locate the corner at the north end of Marian street, as shown in the original plat and survey of Auburn.

The surveyor will meet said interested persons at the house of Isaac Cool, on Saturday, at 10 o'clock a. m., October 2, 1880.

ISAAC COOL, Applicant.
J. J. VanAuken, Surveyor.
Per C. E. VanAuken, Deputy.
Auburn, Sept. 6, 1880. 37-3w.

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Burglars.

The burglars are on the rampage again, and have called on a number of our citizens the first of the week. Their first visit was at the residence of W. H. McIntyre, between two and three o'clock Monday morning, with the evident purpose of capturing a national bank. Johnny McIntyre was to leave that morning to attend school, and the family had risen early to help him off. While near a window a stream of light from a dark lantern was turned into Mrs. McIntyre's face. At first, thinking it some member of the family, she spoke to them, when they beat a quick retreat. Mr. McIntyre says that, had his wife not spoken, he would certainly have lodged some lead in their carcasses. The missing of such a rare opportunity to slay a burglar is a matter of no little regret to Mr. McIntyre. Monday night they came again, but effecting no entrance, they took Mr. McIntyre's ladder and proceeded to pay their respects to Mr. Philip Fluke, who lives in the large brick just south of the Jackson depot. By the aid of the ladder they got into the house, and, finding that gentleman soundly sleeping, if not sweetly dreaming, the happy hours away, they confiscated his pants, with which they appeared to have been satisfied, as they left without disturbing anything else. The pockets of the pants contained a small amount of change and some keys, and the loss of the latter has caused Mr. Fluke the trouble and expense of changing some locks about his house. They also visited the residences of A. L. Hollopeter, W. L. Penfield, Guy Plumb and Enos Casebeer. At Mr. Casebeer's they instituted a pretty thorough search, and departed without disturbing anything, and leaving the doors wide open. There are supposed to be two of the burglars, and money is evidently the object of their raids.

practical enforcement of Gen. Gar-d's avowed principles.

n Nov. 11, 1876, Gen. Garfiled wrote is friend Hinsdale :

st evening the President telegraphed me
Philadelphia requesting me to go to New ans and remain until the vote is counted, g as a witness of the count. I was a good embarrassed by the request. I did not who else was going, and I might find my-associated with violent partisan Repubs who meant to count our side in, right or evertheless, his embarrassment yield-nd did not even return when he d himself among the visiting states-at New Orleans, or when he after-found himself on the Electoral mission at Washington "associated violent partisan Republicans who nt to count our side in, right or g." And only a week after the of this letter to Hinsdale he was ng from New Orleans to his friend of Boston, in a frame of mind

h showed the writer to be amenable e specific and unanswerable critiwhich ex-Gov. Hendricks recently in his speech at Marion, Ind. :

ield went to New Orleans to assist his in making up a case, and after his return shington, of all his associates he was the an who took his seat upon the Electoral ission. By every sentiment of fair play uld have been excluded from the jury.
By his own sworn statement of what he New Orleans Garfield had charge of the from West Feliciana parish. In one of er rooms of Packard's Custom House he a work, examined the affidavits, and, hey were not sufficiently full, he prepared prepared additional interrogatories to bem within the rules adopted by the Re-

What in whi are th

Facts

Col.
State, i attemp and a s appear benefit tures w
Democ
The las publica fiscal y work of ing the precisel below publicat showing ed und premium —for ea for whic appropr expendi which h tions ha
Congres

1873.......
1874...

Ohio and Indiana.

A grand democratic rally of the citizens of Defiance, Williams and Paulding counties, Ohio, and of DeKalb and Allen counties, Indiana, will take place at Hicksville, Friday, September 17. This will be the grandest democratic meeting of the season. Those two great statesmen, Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks and Allen G. Thurman, will speak in the afternoon, and Hons. A. P. Edgerton, W. G. Colerick, Benj. Patton, John M. Haag, John J. Hootman and S. T. Sutphen will speak in the evening. Besides marshal music, the brass bands from Defiance, Hicksville, Edgerton and Auburn will be in attendance. Special trains from Avilla and Defiance will carry passengers at half fare. There will be a large torchlight procession in the evening.

COL. GRAY AT AUBURN.

A Large and Enthusiastic Crowd of People.

The announcement that Lieut.-Governor Gray was to speak at Auburn last Saturday evening, brought a crowd of several thousand people from neighboring towns and the surrounding country. Owing to the demonstrations made by a large torch-light procession, the speaking did not commence until a late hour, but the people were so much interested in the eloquence of the speaker and the facts presented, that he was urged to continue his remarks until nearly eleven o'clock, when the crowd dispersed amidst the greatest enthusiasm. The convincing argument of Col. Gray made a number of votes for the democratic ticket. Let us have more of the same kind.

A Big Time at LaOtto.

LaOtto is bent on having a grand rally and torch-light procession next Saturday evening, September 11. Our distinguished congressman, W. G. Colerick, Geo. Blair, of Waterloo and Capt. Fisher, of Rome City, will address the people on the occasion. Large crowds from Kendallville, Waterloo, Butler and Garrett will be there, and it is requested that as many of the citizens of Auburn as can will be in attendance.

Local and Miscellaneous

—The handsome catalogue containing a list of premiums of the third annual fair of the Northeastern Indiana and Northwestern Ohio District Fair Association, printed by Thos. A. Starr, of the Hicksville News, is at hand. This fair will be held on their grounds at Hicksville, Defiance county, Ohio, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 21, 22, 23 and 24. Three thousand dollars in premiums are offered. The Hon. Schuyler Colfax will deliver an address Sept. 23, at 2 o'clock p. m., and will lecture at Commercial hall in the evening. The B. & O. railroad will carry passengers at reduced rates. For futher information, address Thomas A. Starr, Secretary.

—We have received the catalogue containing the premium list for the ninth annual fair of the Northeastern Indiana Agricultural Association, to be held at Waterloo, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. Premiums to the amount of $5,000 are offered. All railroads centering at Waterloo, and connecting lines will carry passengers at half fare. Premium lists, containing rules and regulations, will be furnished on application to the secretary, James A. Barns.

—The ladies of the M. E. church will have a floral fair and bird concert in Ensley's hall, commencing September 16, and closing on the evening of the 17th. Flowers, plants, fountains, aquariums, etc., will be exhibited. A great variety of fancy articles will be sold cheap. Refreshments served each evening. A cordial invitation to everybody. Admission only ten cents.

By order of COMMITTEE.

—The Presbyterian social will be entertained in the basement rooms of the church next Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at the usual hour. Members of the society are requested to meet at 3 o'clock promptly, for the purpose of transacting business connected with the society.

MRS. J. E. ROSE, Sec'y.

—Dr. F. Thayer, who for some time past has been engaged in the successful practice of his profession at St. Johns, has decided to locate in Fort Wayne. The doctor was appreciated for both his social qualities and his professional skill, and the citizens of that vicinity part with him regretfully.

—List of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., September 6, 1880:

Ann M. Boone,	W. M. Newson,
G. B. Cunningham,	Dan. Overaulter,
Lizzie Craymer,	R. L. Pratt,
Perry Myers,	Wm. Stanley,
John W. McKeen,	John Walsh.

JOS. RAINIER, Postmaster.

—Will. Shaffer, after a seven day's excursion to Niagra, points in Canada and Put-in-Bay, returned Tuesday, much pleased with the trip. He saw the electric light which, he says, beats Forepaugh's bad.

—The Hotto troupe, which played under the auspices of our band here last week, is at North Manchester this week. The boys say they made fifteen or twenty cents over and above all expenses.

—The republicans expect to have a big time in Auburn this evening. They will have a torch-light procession and addresses by the Hon. Charles Chase, a former member of congress.

—The floral fair, to be held in Ensley hall, under the management of the ladies of the M. E. church, will be held Thursday and Friday, September 16 and 17. Admission 10 cents.

—Rev. H. Johnson returned Tuesday evening, after a pleasant sojourn at Grand Haven, Mich. He will hold services in the Presbyterian church Sunday, morning and evening.

—The democrats of Auburn Junction will plant a Hancock and English pole this evening. There will also be a speech on the occasion.

The new plank sidewalk being put down by the commissioners in front of the public square will, when completed, be a substantial improvement.

—The secret of long life is to keep the liver perfectly healthy, which is best accomplished by using only "Sellers' Liver Pills."

—Oh! were you ne'er a schoolboy, And did you never strain, To bring high-sounding sentences From out of a schoolboy's brain?

—Biliousness cured by Rinehart's Liver Pills. Only one for a dose. Sample dose free. Ask your druggist for them.

—A large and new line of millinery goods, including the latest styles in ladies' hats, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—A new line of velvets of all styles, trimming silks in all colors, laces and lace ties, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Blowing soap-bubbles is becoming a favorite amusement with fashionable young ladies and gentlemen.

—$200 worth of choice trimming fringes for cloaks, dolmans and dresses, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Remember the M. E. church floral fair to be held at Ensley hall September 16 and 17.

Johnny McIntyre left Monday morning to attend school at Sandwich, Canada.

—County commissioners are in session this week.

County Affairs.

EDITOR COURIER: In last week's Press occurred over a column of matter upon the above subject, in answer to my statements in your issue of Aug. 26, 1880.

Let us go back and see what was the starting point of this controversy, as I want to hold the Press to its text, and if I prove it untruthful, then, as the boys say, "it will let me out." He, in the Press of August 19, said that "the last republican board of county commissioners left the county government running upon a levy of 35 cents on the $100 valuation." He said further that "the facts were not doctored up," etc., and that "they (the facts) are shown by the official records of the county." In my answer to this in your paper I showed that in 1868 the democrats came in power, and have had it ever since, and that the levy for county purposes in 1867 was 70 cents on the $100. In his editorial last week he acknowledges it. He says August 19th, the last republican levy was 35 cents, and on September 2nd he says it is not true, what he said August 19th. He says August 19th that the county records show the last republican levy to have been 35 cents, but September 2nd he shows again by the county records that his first statement was not true. And he gives as his excuse for his falsifying the record his "living remote from the county-seat and depending upon memory." Is not that passing strange?" Does he want anybody to hereafter believe him? He also states that I "as much as intimated" that the expenditures by the circuit court spoken of, wherein I showed that in less than one year that court ordered to be paid out of the county treasury about one quarter of the county revenue of 1879, was "a source of waste." Now, I challenge him to prove his assertion, and to produce in his paper the statement I made upon that point. Or will he say again that his memory is at fault, and that he did not have the record—my statement—by him to look at? Let me say to him I have more respect for the courts than he and his party, who a few years ago spat upon the decision of the U. S. supreme court, and are in this campaign attempting to bring into contempt and derision the supreme court of our own state, charging them with corruption and political tricksterу.

He makes other statements, some of which he indirectly charges to be true, others directly, but the record he no longer appeals to. The record will not bear out his assertions, and therefore flings it to one side, and bases his other statements upon that excellent memory of his. His little fling of the building of a pavement at the public square, the most beautiful public grounds in northern Indiana, and of which the people of the county are proud—except those who have the "Waterloo gripes"—is probably one of the idiosyncracies of that remarkable memory. No, I will think it would not have looked well to have been building pavements at the public square in 1877-8, when the county was still in debt for the building of the court-house, and for other reasons which the editor of the Press well knows, as well as others, the then condition of our county treasury, for which the democratic party was not responsible.

I attempted, and probably did show in my first article, that in consequence of the reduced assessment for the year 1880, as compared with 1879, that, although the levy for county purposes was increased, yet the person who last year paid a certain sum as taxes upon his farm, would this year only pay an equal sum. This the editor of the Press does not deny. If what I stated is so, why does he growl about enormous taxes, increased levies, etc., when the taxes upon the same farm or thing are not increased?

Now, Mr. Editor, I want to give another statement for the benefit of your readers, and if the Press man wants to, he may tackle it. I think I can show that when the people come to pay their taxes for the year 1880—now, I mean their whole taxes, such as state, county and township, all told—that on an average the taxes throughout the county will not be in advance of what the taxes were last year, unless it be in those townships where the township trustee has increased their taxes for local purposes, and in some townships the whole taxes will not be as great as last year. Let us see:

Total taxables in the county in 1879, 7,079,000.

Total taxables in the county in 1880, 6,661,600.

Average levy of all taxes in the county in 1879, $1.26 on the $100.

Average levy of all taxes in the county in 1880, $1.49 on the $100.

Now, in those townships where the levy exceeds $1.49 on the $100, there will be an increase over such average, and where the total levy this year is less than $1.49, there will be a decrease in such average.

Here is a table giving each township. The first figures show the levy of 1879; the second for 1880; the third for the increased levy by the township trustees for local purposes, and the fourth the actual increase or decrease of this year over such average.

Butler........	1.30	1.60	10c.	increase	1c
Jackson......	1.25	1.55	10c.	decrease	4c
Concord......	1.30	1.70	20c.	increase	1c
Newville.....	1.40	1.50	5c.	decrease	4c
Stafford........	1.10	1.30		"	19c
Wilmington..	1.30	1.40		"	9c
Union.........	1.00	1.25		"	24c
Richland......	1.25	1.55	10c	"	4c
Fairfield......	1.25	1.55	5c	increase	1c
Smithfield....	1.10	1.40	10c	decrease	19c
Franklin.....	1.35	1.35		"	14c
Troy...........	1.30	1.70	25c	"	4c
Keyser........	1.50	1.55	5c	increase	1c

This table will therefore show that when you take out the increased levy for township purposes, there are four townships in the county that this average levy is actually increased, and each increase is only one cent on the $100 valuation, while in all the other townships there is a decrease on the average levy.

One more statement I will notice. The Press says: "How has 'Justice' misrepresented the facts? We said that the last republican board expended only half the money expended by the democratic board during the year closing last June. 'Justice' denies this, etc." Now, that is the barest fabrication. He makes a man of straw only to knock him down. He tries to put words into my mouth I never said. And this is the only place in his article that he claims I made a misstatement, which I never said, and he can't prove it. The controversy is not, I presume, to be determined by a comparison of expenditures of any years, and especially of years twelve years apart. A comparison between the years 1840 and 1880 would throw just as much light upon the subject. In the government of county affairs, previous years of economy, nor of extravagance is a criterion, but what are the legal wants of the people. Of course when the population is double, the valuation of taxables more than double, the necessary expenditures would be greater. In 1867 we had 21 miles of railroad in the county; in 1879 we had at least 85 miles. Therefore, what was expended in 1867, and what in 1879, does not enter into the controversy. The question of the illegal appropriation of moneys by the county board for the year 1879, has not in all this controversy been asserted by the Press man, nor will he dare assert and show it. And should it be attempted I want him to get through with his first assertion, that the last republican board left the county with a levy of 35 cents for county purposes. Keep to your text, Mr. Press.

A person reading the articles in the Press, in which so many astounding statements are made, and all on a par with those noticed by me above, would think our county was on the eve of bankruptcy, and he closes up by a general statement that "contracts are let to day while the county has no means in its treasury to pay them." He does not state that these contracts are not legal or proper; nor does he say that it is illegal to contract debts before the money is in hand to pay, but wants to have it understood that bankruptcy is staring us in the face through extravagance. To show the value of our county orders, that the terrible extravagance and the bankrupt condition of the county of which he wails so lustily is a myth, and entitled to the same credit as his 35 cent republican board, I will state that during the last three months the republican auditor, the republican school superintendent and a democratic ex-sheriff have been buying our county orders and paying 100 cents on the dollar for them, and get only 6 per cent. interest when they can readily loan out their money for 8 per cent. interest. Mr. Press, take another text, and see to it that you stick by it.

JUSTICE.

St. Joe.

[Last Week.]

—Farmers are all busy with their seeding.

—An average of 400 bushels of grain per day for the last week at the elevator. Wheat prices range from 91 to 93 cents; oats 24 cents.

—J. J. VanAuken and Mr. Boland showed their blooming faces here on Thursday last. Jay is strong in the faith.

—The democrats are rejoicing over an accession, to the banner of Hancock and English, a life-long republican. Still they come.

—O. H. and C. C. Walters took in the democratic meeting at Garrett, Friday night last, and were highly pleased with the proceedings.

—Several stalwarts are on the fence, and almost persuaded to follow Hancock and English. Let them come, there is room for each and every one.

—W. D. Hill and W. G. Colerick addressed the people at Newville Monday of last week. A good crowd was in attendance and good order maintained, except by one individual.

Grumbler, Shut Up!

The great and good editor of the Republican last week did not deign to reply to my article in your paper of two weeks ago, wherein, I think, I effectually cut short his shooting off his mouth about the county commissioners attending to their legal business, and in which he sought, by his prejudiced, partisan assertions, to override the sworn acts of the county board. His word, he knows, does not go far. He is like the mean little boy "caught in a lie," who goes off mumbling and says, "Just you wait till I catch you out some dark night, then I'll give you thunder." He knows he can't make good his assertions, but sulkily says, "We will give it to you after a while."

ANTI-GRUMBLER.

Wanted—To Rent

A good dwelling house containing from six to eight rooms; one within easy walking distance of the school-house preferred. Enquire of

W. P. MYERS, Principal of School.

Neighborhood Nippings.

Kendallville has two prospective brass bands.

The Noble county agricultural society is sending out neat premium lists of the fair to be held October 6, 7, 8 and 9, at Ligonier.

The little daughter of Mrs. August Menzie, of Fort Wayne, strayed from home a short time since, and was found one hour afterwards drowned in a cistern.

The Waterloo fair will be held the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th days of October, 1880. The management have made unusual preparations, and there is no doubt but what the fair will be better than it was last year. Now is the time to make preparations for that event.

The Bryan Press says: "Fred. Koos, a well to do farmer, living near Delta, went to Toledo, Friday, September 3, to transact some business and returned on No. 5, which does not stop at Delta. In attempting to jump off the train, he was drawn under the wheels and instantly killed, his head being cut off just above the nose, and his body mangled in a shocking manner."

Kendallville News, Sept. 2: "Last Srturday at Englewood, Ill., S. M. Kline, of this place, met with a horrible death by having both of his legs taken off above the knees by the cars. His remains were brought home last Sunday night and were buried in the Lutheran cemetery. He leaves a wife and family of five children to mourn his loss. His life was insured for $1,500.

The Wabash Plain Dealer of Sept. 3, contains this item: "Last Monday evening as the C. W. & M. passenger train bound north neared Foxe's station, a point four miles south of Lafontaine, the engineer saw an object on the track that at first he thought was a sheep on the track. He blew the whistle for the brakes to be put on, but the train passed over the object before it halted. Going back he found the train had run over a man, who proved to be Tyrie Harrell, a laboring man living with his brother near by. The body was cut entirely in two and the skull crushed, and had been rolled along under the cow-catcher for several yards and presented a horrible sight. The body, when examined, was found to be quite cold and bled but very little; this gave rise to a report that he had been killed and then placed on the track, and there are several rumors about his life being threatened by a jealous rival in the affections of a girl living near Lafontaine. But a half pint bottle of alcohol nearly empty, found in his pocket, explains why he was on the track. In a bundle near the body was found all of Harrell's clothing, two hats and other trinkets. It was a horrible death to die; if he died under the wheels of the train, and another warning not to go to sleep on the railroad track.

Spencerville.

—Items scarce this week.

—Mr. Prosser and lady visited Spencerville Tuesday.

—The temperance crusade continues with great enthusiasm. Last Sunday night Mr. John Provines and Mr. S. Barney delivered rousing speeches which were greeted with storms of applause by the blue ribboners.

—There was a party Saturday night at Mr. Daniel Butler's. The guests report a splendid time. Your reporter was among the fortunate number of those invited, but circumstances prevented his attendance.

—Dan uses emphatic language to express his contempt for the nefarious scoundrels who stole his watermelons. Aspirants for sheriff of DeKalb county should come this way and organize regulators, which would make a "boom" for them in the next campaign.

Wanted—To Trade.

A good two-story frame house with L and two lots, on west side of Main street, in Auburn, for 40 or 60 acres of land in DeKalb county. Will pay money difference. Apply to 34-3t. THOS. H. SHOTT.

$100
Reward
For any case of
CATARRH
That cannot be cured with
HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co.,
Druggists, Toledo, O.
11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

School Suits
100 STYLES. ALL GRADES.
UNIFORM LOW PRICES.
Largest Stock of Boys' and Children's Clothin in the City.
—FULL LINE OF—
Boys' Hats and Furnishing Goods
Now on Sale at the
C. O. D.
One-Price CLOTHING HOUSE of
A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
9 East Main Street.
Look for the Big Flag.

GARLAND
STOVES & RANGES
MICHIGAN

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS!
Largest and Most Complete Line Manufactured.
ADAPTED FOR BURNING ALL KINDS OF FUEL.
EVERY STOVE WARRANTED A SUCCESS.
None their Equal—Acknowledged Favorites.
ALWAYS AWARDED FIRST PREMIUM.
☞Buy the Best.☜
Sold by W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

OLD PRICES!
NEW GOODS!
AT
SAM, PETE & MAX,
The Star Clothing House,
Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FEASTING VERSUS FASTING.

BY C. M. LEFFLER.

There was a doctor named Tanner,
Whose wife's name they say it was Hanner,
Who loved Early York,
With corned-beef or pork,
Three times a day with servants to fan her.

Now the doctor vowed it was awful,
In any one keeping their craw full
Of fat, fancy dishes,
As oysters and fishes,
Cabbage and pork, short-cake and waffle.

And the faster fell to impeaching
His wife for ignoring his teaching;
"You'll do your soul good,
By eating less food,"
Was the doctrine of Tanner's pet preaching.

'Twas fearful, he said, to be livin'
With woman to eating thus given;
She sued for divorce,
And got it of course,
For she would have cabbage, by heaven.

"Why, I'll go forty days minus repast!"
Vaunted Doc, the day he met his wife last.
"You can't! and you know it!"
"I can! and I'll show it!"
Forthwith he began a forty days' fast.

Martyr-like clung to his supperless post,
Starved himself down to the shade of a ghost,
For "science" or money?
Gosh! ain't it funny,
We'll pay to hear the lecturer boast?

Yet 'rah for the doctor named Tanner,
Who thus bore the abstinence banner
By power of will—
Of praise got his fill,
But lost a sweet Eden with Hanner!

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.

THE GOVERNOR'S DAUGHTER.

We had been sailing sixty-four days—a longer time than it usually takes to come from Rio Janeiro to any port of France. How gladly we hailed the ending of the voyage and our near approach to land! Thus far, until to-day, nothing had appeared in sight, and when the welcome sound of "land ahead!" fell upon our ears, with one bound, and moved, as it were, by an electric current, every passenger in the ship, forgetting his occupation, stood upon the deck to greet mother earth again. Only they can tell who have looked on sea and sky until the days become weeks and months how good it is to meet the land, and in the meeting leave behind the monotony that in long sea voyages falls down upon the ship like a pall.

We entered the harbor of Horta, chief city of Fayal, one of the Azores. No time was lost in getting ashore. Every-one sought out his best suit. From the hold of the ship great trunks were yielded up, and silks and diamonds and costly costumes, long unused, were eagerly brought into requisition. At last we were ready, and soon our feet touched the long-desired land.

Horta as a harbor is scarcely worth describing. Lying idly, swinging on the waters, were a few fishing smacks; the hulk of an old American ship told a story of wreck and disaster, while a small Danish brig, lately come in for a supply of fresh water, said plainly enough in its loneliness that few vessels entered this solitary harbor, and then only when they could not help it, as in the case of the India merchantmen coming hither for a renewal of provisions and some fresh meat. The town itself looked as dreary and as lonesome as the harbor. Here and there a group of men might be seen talking, laughing and jesting with one another, but evidently, as far as occupation was concerned, practically unemployed. Some lay on the wharves, indolent as the lazzaroni of Naples, while others again went up and down the narrow streets, heedless of purpose and caring little, to all appearance, how soon the day might end. A few old women, in long blue cloaks and heavy hoods, were in the streets; and some barefooted sisters from a neighboring convent made up the picture presented for our inspection on our arrival in Horta. To account for the small number of persons we encountered is not difficult, since the people of these islands seldom come out in the daytime, leaving until the cool evening the enjoyment of their recreation and what business transactions they contemplate.

The news of our coming, however, soon spread, and curious faces of more-curious people were to be seen at every corner, eagerly eying the lately-arrived strangers. Nor were the natives unfriendly in their manifestations in their professions even, of friendship. The Governor of the island sent some of his slaves to offer us baskets of oranges and other tropical fruits. This kindness we interpreted as a good omen, reminding us, as it did, of the hospitality of Guacangagari to Columbus on his arrival at St. Salvador. Calling upon the friendly and kind-hearted stranger, we returned our very sincere thanks, and were in turn received with most generous and polite attention.

The Governor's name was Fernandez Correjo. A Brazilian by birth, he had been a long time at the court of Lisbon, where by his intelligence and breadth of view he had become distinguished, endearing himself to all the court and making hosts of friends. He soon acquired place and power, and was named Governor of Fayal in token of his many services and the esteem in which he was held by the Government of Donna Maria. The Governor invited the ship's company to a grand banquet. Nothing was left undone to make our sojourn pleasant as possible. Our host entertained us with princely courtesy; variety of dishes vied with the excellence of their preparation, while the best wine that Spain can boast crowned a repast truly royal in all its service. We thanked our stars for coming to that island. Fernandez Correjo had three daughters. One of them, the oldest, was of dazzling beauty. She was just 18, with a perfect figure and dark, piercing eyes. The expression of her face bore an inexpressible charm. Her hair fell in long ringlets, outshining in brilliancy the raven's wing.

A rumor was current in the island that this young lady was shortly to marry a rich American, who had taken up his abode at Horta. Her youthful heart, however, had never yet experienced that strange sentiment called love, and never yet had the magic words, "I love thee," passed her ruby lips. Innocent and pure, this young girl knew not how strewn with thorns is life's weary path; how bloom the roses, fresh in their fragrance, yet hiding the sting. Careless of to-morrow was she, heedless of strife; so far she had only read a gilded book, turned a golden page. Alas, poor child! dream on thy dream of peace. In a few days thou shalt awake to misery, if not to despair. When the repast was over Donna Leonia (this was the lady's name) sat down at the piano, and in a moment our hearts were entranced by the most exquisite tones I have ever heard evoked from that instrument. I imagined that I was again at home. Visions of my native country came a will—the old homestead, my mother's face, my playmates of younger years, my sister's voice, my brother's friendly call—all, all came up before me, and once more, though so far removed, I was in France again. Illusion of an hour! I was and would yet be long separated from all my friends, and little did I know, as music wove its charms about me, how much happiness, how much wretchedness, still awaited me in the island. At last our first visit was at an end, and, bidding a reluctant good-by to our host and his charming daughters, we put back to the ship, not, however, until, according to the Governor's pressing invitation, we had promised to return on the following day.

Once on board there was nothing spoken of among all our party but the gracious reception we had met with, the charm of the Governor's family and the anticipated pleasure of to-morrow's renewal of agreeable associations. For my part I could join in no conversation. I had not a word to say. I became suddenly dull, and, not to appear morose, I retired as early as possible to the seclusion of my stateroom. What was going on within me was a singular feeling I had never experienced before; but in looking down into the bottom of my heart the germ of my love for Leonia soon told me that I was no longer free, that my heart had been left behind a willing captive to the charms of the beautiful daughter of the Governor.

Just as the sun was pouring the first rays of purple and gold from his throne in the East, I rose the next day, and, dressing myself with scrupulous care, sought the early breeze on deck. I was anxious, though I carefully guarded my secret, to leave the ship and once more set foot in Horta. A light wind that was blowing had gone down, a ripple kissed the water between our good ship and the land, and everything promised a most glorious day. With bounding velocity our boat cleared the distance separating us from our friends, and we were on shore in a few moments. As we drew near, I knew not why, my heart beat with a mad impulse and singular contradiction more than once, much as I burned to see the object of my love. I wished a hundred times I had never left the ship's side. But this can be explained. When a man is only 20 years of age, love is a very remarkable antithesis; at 40 he understands it better, and later on in life well.

Before entering the Governor's house I saw my beloved at the window, her eyes bent in the direction of the ship. "Why is she there?" I said, in my inmost heart, "and does she expect any one in particular." One glance told me all. In a moment I understood the reason. What happiness awaited me! I was going to spend an entire day in the society of her my heart adored. Such a day is an eternity. How many men have never in the course of a long life had twelve hours of such bliss!

Fernandez, when breakfast had been partaken of, showed us over his vast estates. My immediate companion was Leonia. A thousand little occasions during the day gave me the opportunity I so much sought to tell my love; never, however, boldly, but silently and only after the fashion that lovers know so well. Finally, making an allusion to the country through which we were passing, I venture to exclaim: "What a charm reigns in this island, and how happy I should be to live here!"

"If the country pleases you so much," replied Leonia, "why not remain here? But you are only joking. Moreover, I have heard so much of your beautiful country of France that I can scarcely believe in the desire you express. Besides, I remember all you said yesterday concerning love of country and the happiness of serving it. You see you gave me reasons to doubt you."

"Yes," I rejoined, in faltering tones, "there are many things that make us love our country—for instance, a mother's love, a sister's devotion, the kindness of old friends, the old house where we were born, the trees on the green where we played—all these things inspire us with a longing for and a love of home. I can explain yesterday, though what I said then I will not say to-day."

"Were I not afraid of being indiscreet," replied Leonia, "I would ask the reason of your sudden change of opinion."

"And I, Donna Leonia, already thought you had guessed the reason, but, since you have not, allow me to keep my secret."

The embarrassment visible in the face and in every movement of my companion revealed more than any answer she might have given. Fearing to wound or annoy her, I remained silent, and for a long time we walked on, no word escaping our lips. At length we sat down at the foot of a little hill. Straightway in front of us was an immense field sown all over with daisies.

"In the country I came from," said I, "this pretty flower is much prized, and lovers use it to find out the degree of love existing between them. Here's how it's done." Saying which, I threw aside, one by one, the petals of the flower and repeated, at the same time, the mystic words. I stopped at the words "just a little."

"I did this on purpose," said I. "So you love me 'a little?'"

Leonia blushed.

"Then you deny it, do you?"

She gave me her hand and placing it in mine, this was the choicest answer I could have sought.

The day was just closing. In our ramble we had been left far behind; all our friends had gone on, and, not knowing whither we had strayed, were coming back to meet us. We followed them, still pursuing our leisure. On the morrow the ship was to set sail from Horta. When Leonia heard this she turned pale. While the Captain and the passengers were saying a last farewell to Fernandez, quietly approaching Leonia I whispered in her ear:

"I shall not go with them to-morrow. At 9 o'clock, expect me. I shall return."

The day of sailing came. With a favoring wind the ship that bore me to Horta started for the coast of France. I stood on the shores watching her retreating lines until her masts grew smaller and smaller on the horizon. Then at last she became a speck and then all was level with the sea, and sky and water met and no ship was there—to me. Hope seemed fled, but the image of my beloved came as the rainbow after the storm, and peace was restored to my breast.

At 9 o'clock I repaired to the house of Fernandez. A mulatto woman opened the door. The first glance at Leonia gave me to understand what a sleepless night she must have passed; nay, how ill she must have been, since the lines in her face revealed intense suffering. Will I relate it? Must I say it? I was really not displeased at witnessing the evidences of this suffering. I had almost wished to see her sick, so strange a thing is love and so near akin is vanity to this very love.

"Ah! my dear friend," said Leonia, "are you indeed come? Your ship, then, has not yet gone?"

"Yes, gone," I said, "and already miles distant from these shores."

"But what excuse did you make? what reasons did you give?" eagerly asked this child of innocence and sincerity.

Knowing that I must be candid, as honest as my best friend, I told my story just as I had done the previous evening to the Captain of the ship. Avowing all to this excellent man, I told him that it was utterly impossible for me to return to France; that I loved the eldest daughter of the Governor; that I was in return beloved, and that some excuse must be made that I should, at least for the present, leave the ship and remain on the island. In vain the Captain urged, dissuading me from my purpose. I became furious. At last, finding that any attempt to keep me aboard was useless, like a man of experience he gracefully yielded, and, assuring me that all his advice had been well intended and for my best interests, he allowed me to depart, with a prayer that I might be happy.

Leonia listened until I had told all, and, looking into my soul with her dark eyes, exclaimed:

"Then you will always remain—you will never leave us."

"All my dreams," I replied, "could never be compared to such a reality as that. O, would it were given me to know that here I might live and die! Some men are unfortunate; some may do as they please. Such a man, for instance, is William Torris, the American, lately settled here. He needs no eternity to wait for happiness, for he may enjoy even here all the delights of the promised land."

"I beg of you," said Leonia, "not to mention that man's name in my presence. I have never given him my heart and his eyes have never looked down into my inmost soul. I have always been indifferent to him. Now I hate him, and in future I shall put an end to all his visits; no nuptial ring of his shall bind me to him, no matter what promises my father may have given." Placing her hand over her heart: "There is something stronger here," said she, "than any human will. Last night an angel with golden wings came to me in a dream. He brought me a casket of diamonds and precious stones. No doubt the spirit whispered joy and future happiness by these gifts."

This singular admixture of weakness and energy was not to be wondered at in Leonia. Her mother was born in Granada, and on her side she was of Moorish extraction; added to this was a most amiable natural character, and her Spanish pride and African impetuosity made her charming. She had read but one author, Camoens, and no doubt the inspiring lines of the Portuguese poet had inflamed her soul. She wept over the misfortunes of Inez and Dom Pedro, and the faithfulness as well as the courageous resignation of the former was in her eyes perfection.

I told all my plans to Fernandez, who received me with the greatest kindness. He would not hear of my leaving his house, and ordered for my accommodation a special apartment. The only difficulty I found was to be alone with Leonia. Noemi, however, the little mulatto girl I have already mentioned, was her waiting-maid, and through her we managed to have long and private interviews. She also carried our letters, which were not written, but symbolical. In Brazil I had learned the language of flowers—and what delicious poetry is contained in these silent messengers; speaking more than articulate language, conveying the longing of the soul and what seems infinite in love! A fortnight went by. Noemi was trustworthy and had wonderfully succeeded in keeping our secret to herself and our relations safe from prying eyes. But this supreme happiness was not to last forever.

Fernandez Correjo was not a man to be deceived. Besides, the extreme coldness of Leonia toward William Torris and her repeated denials of his suit made matters worse, awakened his suspicions, and one night when I was on bended knees before my adored, Fernandez appeared. Passing by, however, on his evening walk, he seemed to take no notice of what was going on. The next day I was summoned to his presence. I walked with a firm step and quiet nerve, for, although I knew he might reprimand me severely, I felt sure he would never despise me. "Sir," said he, "I have desired to see you. Sit down. You love my daughter, she loves you. All this I know. But perhaps you are not aware that before your arrival she had already been engaged to marry William Torris. Sir, I respect an oath with all the honor of an old Castilian, but, as the happiness of my child must not be sacrificed even to the sacredness of an oath, I now ask you, sir, who you are, for I do not know you, and if my love for my daughter makes me forswear an honorable principle, it cannot at any cost make me forget my authority and my duty."

"Sir," I replied, "I thank you for the courtesy with which you have treated me. God knows how much I love your daughter, and there is nothing I am not prepared to do to obtain your consent. This is the answer to your first question. In the second place I am obliged to avow that I have no fortune. I come from a good family, honored in France, and all I possess is the education I have received and what I have been able to acquire of the world's knowledge."

"You must obtain the consent of your family before any union with my daughter can take place," mildly answered Fernandes, and at the same time he added that as a ship was about to sail in a few days I might take passage in her.

Fernandez Correjo was too proud-spirited, too much of a man to make allusion to any want of fortune; on this account he suggested my speedy departure, arguing, no doubt, that absence and separation were the best remedies to end a love that seemed to him, at least for his daughter, fraught with hidden dangers.

In a few days I started. Arriving in Marseilles I decided to go no further. Wandering often to the seashore, I confided my longings, my desires to the wild ocean breeze, trusting that some day its idle course spent, perhaps half relaxed, a message might reach my Leonia. But the breeze sped on its way. My treasure heard no word of love from me and down in her heart secretly blamed me.

Returning home, I was received as the prodigal. When I had told my adventures, all my father and mother asked was that I might leave them no more. Growing old, these good parents needed all my loving care, and I promised them to remain a month, when I should again set sail for Horta. But fate had ordered otherwise. I fell in love with a charming woman, whose face made me forget that of the distant Leonia. I was not happy, however. I had promised to return—I had sworn it.

Two years after my return I received the following letter from Leonia:

> SIR: I believed in you. I have been deceived. My father had determined to welcome you as his son-in-law, but you came not. Now that all hope of earthly happiness is gone, I have made perpetual vows at the Convent of Santa Anna. Leaving all behind me, I have yet prayed to Heaven that you may be happy. Farewell forever. LEONIA.

In the fourteenth century the troubadours would have immortalized such constancy as this, while legend and poetry would have vied to hold the name of such a woman in solemn reverence. To-day, in the year of grace 1880, many will say: "Why did she not marry William Torris? She might have been rich and happy." This latter is the reasoning of the financiers in our day.

O, tempora! O, mores!

Badly Perplexed.

Nothing is more savory to a Southern negro's palate than a roasted fat opossum. One old negro hunter captured a fine specimen the other day, and, feeling hungry, stopped to cook it in the woods. He built a fire and dressed and spitted his meat; but, being very tired as well as hungry, he fell asleep while the 'possum was roasting.

As he slept, a "low-trash" negro came upon the scene, doubtless attracted by the fire and the smell of roasting meat. The new-comer approached cautiously, with one eye on the 'possum and the other on Uncle Eph, who slumbered.

First, he shook the old man, who turned to an easier position, but would not wake. The stranger took in the situation, and then proceeded to take in the 'possum. He, too, was a 'possum-eater, and he made short work of the dainty roast. He ate and ate till but the bones were left.

Uncle Eph was still sleeping, and it occurred to the vandal that he would make Eph think he had been to supper, so that when he awoke he would not suspect the theft. Then the "sow-trash" negro proceeded to 'polsum-grease Eph's hands and face and mouth, and to pile in the old man's lap the gnawed bones.

Nights have mornings, and sleep must have its waking. Uncle Eph awoke and immediately thought of his 'possum. It was not on the fire; it was not anywhere to be seen; but there in his lap were the bones that had been gnawed. On his hands, lips and beard was grease and the smell of 'possum. He was self-convicted. He concluded that he had eaten the 'possum, yet he could not remember the pleasure the eating had given him.

Weighing all circumstantial evidence carefully, the old man slowly pronounced judgment:

"Dat's a fac'. I'se been eatin' dat 'possum. I'se been eatin' it in my sleep."

But then his stomach; why did it not stand out as a witness in the case? It felt empty, and yet it should be full.

"It's certain sho'r I've done eat up that 'possum. Must have done it when I'se sleep. But," and the old man placed his hand sadly over his really-empty stomach, "but it interferes less'n any 'possum I ebber did eat."—New Orleans Picayune.

Obstacles to the Census in St. Louis.

Fatty McMartin, the census-taker, says that he was going up O'Fallon street, the other day, searching for names, and while engaged in that occupation he happened into a house where a colored man and woman were having a fight. They suspended hostilities upon the approach of the census man, and gazed with astonishment at him and the big covered book which he carried.

"What do you want?" the colored man asked McMartin.

"I am taking the census," said McMartin. "I want your—"

"You can't git ours, kase we ain't got any," said the colored man. "Do you see dat pot on de stove yonder? Look into it. You don't see nuthin' in it, do you? I went to work on the levee dis mawnin', and foe I lef I gib Julia a dollah an a quater to git dinna wid. White man, it's dinna time now, ain't it? Of couse it is, but dinna ain't redy, nor likely to be. Dere ain't no provisions in de house, neider, and de dolla an' a quater's gone. Julia's done spent it for whisky. Do you s'pose if she'd had sense she'd a spent dat dolla an' a quater for whisky? Do you s'pose if I'd had sense I'd give her de dolla an' a quater? I guess not."

The census man explained that it was not that kind of senses that he was looking for, and the negro, upon the explanation, gave him their names.—St. Louis Republican.

A California Irishman in Paris.

The French republic has borne with weightier attacks, but it has at last ordered out of France at twenty-four hours' notice Baron Harden Hickey, born Patrick Hickey, the editor of Triboulet, the comic paper supporting the legitimate cause. That Henry Quatre, the French Bourbon pretender, the pink of old-fashioned royalist respectability, should be supported by a comic paper at all is funny; but that the editor should be a naturalized American Irishman, fresh from San Francisco, is queerer still. Hickey comes of a family which made its money in bonanza shares and went to Europe to enjoy itself after the California fashion, which Hickey has done by buying a title of the Pope, marrying a wife in the exclusive legitimate colony in Paris, and then editing a comic paper in French to please the new royalist friends who had adopted him. Probably nobody but a California Irishman could have succeeded in all this. His paper has a circulation of 50,000 a week, it has been prosecuted forty-five times, and at last the thin-skinned French Government has clapped the crown of martyrdom on his head by banishing him.

Fly and Spider—the Tables Turned.

An old subscriber in Australia sends to the Gentleman's Magazine the following: "Australia is the land of contrariety in regard to animal and vegetable life—such as black swans, the duck-mole, fish which climb trees, cherries with the stone outside, and veritable wooden pears!—but one fact regarding spiders and flies is equally strange, for here there is a fly which catches spiders. He is a wiry, energetic, hard-looking customer; body, longish and narrow; color, literally half mourning, and about three-quarters of an inch long; he builds a clay nest for his larvæ, generally inside locks, under veranda heaves, or even in cracks of wood-work, and sometimes in the folds of curtains or clothes. In one case, while staying at a friend's house about twenty miles from Sidney, I left my water-proof coat hanging untouched for about four days, and on taking it down there was a nest neatly built in one of the folds, of about the size of one's little finger and three or four inches in length. On replacing the coat and leaving it for another few days, and then examining it, the nest was finished; it had three compartments, with one little white grub in each, and for its food several small green spiders, not then absolutely dead, but apparently in a state of coma. These spiders were evidently taken out of the orange orchard, as there were plenty of the same kind alive about the trees; but last week, while up in the mountains, I watched one of the flies carrying off a black house-spider quite as big as itself; and during the course of the day saw him three separate times, and on each occasion with a large spider. I could not find the nest; but the farmer tells me that he has occasionally done so and found as many as twenty good-size spiders of various kinds, all apparent dead, but not decayed, and genera five or six larvæ of the fly.

"There is also a large spider whi actually catches small birds occasionall and kills and devours them! He is li a wasp in color; body, shape and size a small hazel-nut; legs, long and wir and he also looks like a hard-skinn customer. The web is always doub one about half as large again as t other, and made of such a strong y lowish fiber that, if accidentally walkin into it, you feel a sensible stoppage your way for the moment. One bird—the wreck of which I myself saw left the web—was rather smaller than t English wren, and the web was stro enough to stand all its struggles, althou a little broken here and there.

"As regards size of some spiders, w have a flat-bodied, gray-colored one he which builds no web, but lives und bark of dead trees, behind boards, et the body of which is about the size of shilling and not much thicker, but t legs of which are quite as long as t fingers of an ordinary-sized hand, a the whole spread of the brute is about hand's breadth. This is for the fulles sized ones; but the common run of the are five to six inches across, and t style in which they pounce upon a double up the smaller cockroaches is what our Yankee cousins would call caution.'"

Observation.

No line can be drawn between common knowledge of things and scientific knowledge, not between common reasoning and scientific reasoning. In strictness all accurate knowledge is science, and all exact reasoning is scientific reasoning. The method of observation and experiment in which such great results are obtained in science is identically the same as that which is employed by every one every day of his life, but refined and rendered precise. If a child acquires a new toy, he observes its characters and experiments upon its properties, and we are all constantly making observations and experiments upon one thing or another. But those who have never tried to observe accurately, will be surprised to find how difficult a business it is. There is not one person in a hundred who can describe the commonest occurrence with even an approach to accuracy. That is to say, either he will omit something which did occur and which is of importance, or he will imply or suggest the occurrence of something which he did not actually observe, but which he unconsciously infers must have happened. When two truthful witnesses contradict one another in a court of justice, it usually turns out that one or the other, or sometimes both, are confounding their inferences from what they saw with that which they actually saw. A swears that B picked his pocket. It turns out that all that A knows is that he felt a hand in his pocket when B was close to him, and that B was not the thief, but C, whom he did not observe. Untrained observers mix up together their inferences from what they see with that which they actually see in the most wonderful way, and even experienced and careful observers are in constant danger of falling into the same error. Scientific observation is such as is at once full, precise and free from unconscious inference.—Professor Huxley.

A COUPLE of disbelievers in spiritualism attended a seance in San Francisco, last week, and after the materialized spirit of an Indian maiden named Star Eye had given one of them a lot of glucose "from his dead sister," though he never had a sister, he slipped a policeman's nippers on the wrist of the "spirit" and held her till his friend turned up the gas. The spirit proved to be the wife of the medium. The medium then appeared with a materialized club, and wafted the man over the head with the subtle influence, cutting a hole in his scalp, and the two barely escaped with their lives. The "manifestations" were very "strong" that evening, all the conditions being highly favorable, for a row.—Peck's Sun.

CENTAUR LINIMENT

always Cures and never Disappoints The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly ased, has filed a petition to sell the real te of the decedent, the personal being in-ficient to pay his debts; and that said petition be heard at the next term of said court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
ept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice.

otice is hereby given to all persons interest-that the county surveyor or his deputy will, ay request, proceed to re-locate the corner he north end of Marian street, as shown in the ginal plat and survey of Auburn.
he surveyor will meet said interested pers at the house of Isaac Cool, on Saturday, at o'clock a. m., October 2, 1880.
ISAAC COOL, Applicant.
J. VanAuken, Surveyor.
er U. E. VanAuken, Deputy.
uburn, Sept. 6, 1880. 37-3w.

LE FOR AUGUST

h. Low prices will do it. Take ad-ome bargains. Rich Silk Para-less of cost. SUN UM-to clear them out.

OBES.

50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mos-us for Windows, all sizes, at low f and pin Mosquito Bar nt is wanted this her.

ROOT & COMPANY.

SUITS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

THE Book for the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, Conjugal Duties, Confinement, Love and Courtship, Impediments to Marriage, Science of Reproduction, Single Life considered, Law of Marriage and Divorce, Legal rights of married women, etc., including Diseases peculiar to Women, their causes and treatment. A book for private and considerate reading, of 312 pages, with full Plate Engravings, by mail, sealed, 50 cents.

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhœa, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing Seminal Emissions, Nervousness, Aversion to Society, Physical Decay, Dimness of Sight, Defective Memory, Loss of Sexual Power, etc., making marriage improper or unhappy, giving treatment and a great many valuable receipts for the cure of all private diseases; 224 pages, over 50 plates, 50 cents.

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 536 pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. The author is an experienced physician of many years practice, (as is well known), and the advice given, and rules for treatment laid down, will be found of great value to those suffering from impurities of the system, early errors, lost vigor, or any of the troubles coming under the head of "PRIVATE" or "CHRONIC" diseases.—Postage stamps taken in payment for books.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures Chronic Diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons:

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 18, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

Mich., Jan. 25, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. That package stopped all apparent trouble, but there is a weakness yet, and I wish you would prepare this lot for the cure of that.

Iowa, Oct. 10th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. I am just twice as much of a man as I was before taking. I was on the verge of the grave, I thought, and there was no cure for me, but now I am in good hopes of a cure.

West Virginia, Aug. 29, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. Inclosed please find $5, for which please send me another box (No. 2) for a friend. You have done a great thing for me. I will send you all the orders I can.

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 20th, 1879.—Please forward me at once another box of the Pastilles. The patient on whom I have used most of one box, in addition to a sample box, is fast recovering, and I think another will set him all right.

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 4, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, and it has made a perfect cure of him. We have another customer now suffering in the same way, and wish by return mail one No. 3 box.

A CASE OF MORAL SUICIDE.

Garfield, as a Public Man, Unworthy of Public Confidence.

Conspicuous Examples of His Moral Cowardice.

[From the New York World.]

Daniel Webster, in one of his speeches at Boston, in referring to the tergiversations of a certain public officer, said that when a man went back upon his friends it was called ingratitude, or upon his enemies it was called revenge, but when a man went back on his own principles which he had avowed it ought to be called moral suicide. Daniel Webster referred to John Tyler, but he might have used even stronger language had he lived to witness four of the conspicuous tergiversations of Gen. Garfield upon decided questions of principle. One was in regard to "reconstruction;" one in regard to the disputed election of 1876; one in regard to freedom of elections, and one in regard to reviving the issues of the war. On New Year's day, 1867, Gen. Garfield wrote to his friend Hinsdale:

> I am less satisfied with the present aspect of public affairs than I have been for a long time. I find that many of the points and doctrines which I believe in and desire to see prevail meet with more opposition than heretofore, and are in imminent danger of being overborne by popular clamor and political passion. In reference to reconstruction I feel that if the Southern States should adopt the constitutional amendments within a reasonable time we are literally bound to admit them to representation. * * * My own course is chosen, and it is quite probable it will throw me out of public life.—Bundy's Biography, page 77.

Nevertheless, within two months after the utterance of these brave words, Gen. Garfield was in line with the extremists of his party in worrying the South with special statutes on reconstruction; and when the Southern States had adopted the constitutional amendments he still kept them, as long as his vote could keep them, from representation. He even introduced the bill which was intended to abolish Gen. Hancock's office as Major General in punishment for that General's practical enforcement of Gen. Garfield's avowed principles.

On Nov. 11, 1876, Gen. Garfiled wrote to his friend Hinsdale:

> Last evening the President telegraphed me from Philadelphia requesting me to go to New Orleans and remain until the vote is counted, acting as a witness of the count. I was a good deal embarrassed by the request. I did not know who else was going, and I might find myself associated with violent partisan Republicans who meant to count our side in, right or wrong.

Nevertheless, his embarrassment yielded, and did not even return when he found himself among the visiting statesmen at New Orleans, or when he afterward found himself on the Electoral Commission at Washington "associated with violent partisan Republicans who meant to count our side in, right or wrong." And only a week after the date of this letter to Hinsdale he was writing from New Orleans to his friend Hill, of Boston, in a frame of mind which showed the writer to be amenable to the specific and unanswerable criticism which ex-Gov. Hendricks recently made in his speech at Marion, Ind.:

> Garfield went to New Orleans to assist his party in making up a case, and after his return to Washington, of all his associates he was the only man who took his seat upon the Electoral Commission. By every sentiment of fair play he should have been excluded from the jury-box. By his own sworn statement of what he did in New Orleans Garfield had charge of the returns from West Feliciana parish. In one of the inner rooms of Packard's Custom House he did his work, examined the affidavits, and, when they were not sufficiently full, he prepared or had prepared additional interrogatories to bring them within the rules adopted by the Returning Board. The testimony so received by Garfield went back to the Returning Board, and the result was that West Feliciana with its Democratic majority was thrown out. In Washington Garfield's vote was that Congress could not go behind the returns thus made. As agent for his party he helped to make returns by manipulating the evidence; and, as juryman for the nation, he held such evidence as conclusive and binding.

On April 21, 1880, Gen. Garfield again wrote to his friend Hinsdale, and in the course of the letter said:

> I am just now in antagonism with my own party in legislation in reference to the election law.

Indeed, of the Bayard bill as to Federal participation in elections, Gen. Garfield was practically an author, for he had entirely favored its principle, its theory and its formulas at the time of its introduction, and it was in regard to this measure that he wrote himself down as "in antagonism to his own party."

Nevertheless, when the vote came upon the bill his vote went upon the roll along with his party colleagues, against all his previous speeches and declarations.

A few days before the meeting of the Chicago Convention Gen. Garfield, in the course of a speech in Congress, said:

> The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support.

But when he had himself become a candidate upon a platform which had no other vital idea in it than an attempt to galvanize the issues of the war, fifteen years after its conclusion, Gen. Garfield had no word to utter in deprecation of that which he had to all appearances earnestly deprecated from his place in Congress, and, since his nomination, no member of his party has taken more pains to revive "the old sectional issues" than Gen. Garfield whenever he has been called upon for a speech at a serenade or upon a car platform.

The inference from any one of these actions would be and ought to be injurious to Gen. Garfield as a public man. But when these things are considered together no inference can possibly be drawn from them except that Gen. Garfield as a public man is not entitled to public confidence. His is a case of moral suicide, to repeat Webster's phrase, and it proceeds from moral cowardice, as all suicides may be said to proceed from cowardice. He is not a partisan from the temper of his mind. He is both too scholarly and too apathetic a man to lose his head in times of not more than ordinary excitement. He is a partisan because he is a moral coward and because he cannot withstand the pressure of men whose knowledge is less and whose wills are stronger than his own. He is one of those unhappy men to whom it is given always

> To see the right and to admire it, too;
> To loathe the wrong, and yet the wrong pursue.

It is true that a very active hostility to the wrong is inconsistent with everything that is known of Gen. Garfield's public career. But his intelligence generally suffices to make him at least "see the right," and his weakness always allows him to be bullied into doing wrong. His political use to his party has been to furnish plausible reasons for what violent and unscrupulous men like Thaddeus Stevens and Zach Chandler had forced him into doing. He knew, as well when he was trying to remove Hancock as when he wrote to Hinsdale bemoaning the excesses of the extreme men in his party, that the policy which Gen. Hancock was pursuing in Louisiana was the only lawful and the only patriotic policy for the commander of a military district to pursue. He knew, as well when he was cooking affidavits in New Orleans or ruling out the evidence of the cookery before the Electoral Commission, as he did when he was communicating to Hinsdale his fears of the violent partisans who "meant to count our side in, right or wrong," that Tilden had been elected President. He was simply driven by the violent partisans whom he was too timid to oppose, as he was driven by them into voting against his own proposition on the Deputy Marshals bill, and as he would most assuredly be driven by them if the voters of the country were misguided into electing him to the Presidency. One at least of the charges against his personal integrity owes most of its sting to the same moral weakness. If when Ames told the story of Gen. Garfield's connection with Credit Mobilier Gen. Garfield had come out like a man and confessed the truth, he would have been thought guilty, at most, of an indiscretion. It was his prevarication on the stand and his attempt to induce Ames to assist him in getting it accepted that ruined him before the country. Whenever an emergency has confronted him he has met it in the same shuffling and timid way. After announcing, sometimes in the private ear of Hinsdale and sometimes to the public, what ought to be done, he has fallen into the rear ranks of the men who were advancing to do the precisely opposite thing, and has "followed a multitude to do evil." What sort of man is this for a position in which courage and aggressive honesty are the first requisites?

DEMOCRATIC ECONOMY.

Facts and Figures from the Record.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

Col. John Hay, Assistant Secretary of State, in a recent speech at Cleveland, attempted, by a distortion of some facts and a suppression of others, to make it appear that the country had derived no benefit from the control over expenditures which has been exercised by the Democracy during the past four years. The last appropriations made by a Republican Congress were those for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1876. The work of Democrats was first felt during the succeeding fiscal year. To show precisely what the facts are we present below statements, taken from official publications of the Treasury Department, showing the total expenditures—included under the headings of net ordinary, premium and interest on the public debt—for each of the last four fiscal years for which a Republican Congress made appropriations, and the corresponding expenditures for the four fiscal years which have expired for which appropriations have been made by a Democratic Congress:

FOUR REPUBLICAN YEARS.
1873	$ 290,345,245
1874	302,633,873
1875	274,623,392
1876	265,101,084
Total	$1,1[illegible]2,703,594
FOUR DEMOCRATIC YEARS.
1877	$ 241,334,474
1878	236,964,326
1879	266,947,883
1880	267,642,957
Total	$1,012,889,640
Net saving in four Democratic years	$ 119,813,954

But, perhaps, some Republican organ will say that a portion of this reduction is attributable to the decrease in the public-debt charge. While it would be a fair response to say that this reduction was effected under Democratic Congressional control, would have been impossible without Democratic concurrence and assistance, and that the very fact that it was effected gives the lie to the Republican charge that Democratic control of the legislative department is detrimental to the financial interests of the country, we waive it for the present, for the purpose of presenting the exhibit of the net ordinary expenditures of the Government for the years of Republican and Democratic control, included in the above table:

UNDER REPUBLICAN CONTROL.
1873	$180,488,636
1874	194,118,985
1875	171,529,848
1876	164,857,813
Total	$710,995,282
UNDER DEMOCRATIC CONTROL.
1877	$144,209,963
1878	134,463,452
1879	161,619,934
1880	171,885,202
Total	$612,178,551
Net Democratic saving	$98,816,731

These are the figures as they appear in the exhibits of Republican officials. Upon their face they appear conclusive. But it should be said, to remove all misapprehension and to disarm all criticism, that the expenditures for 1874, as given in the treasury books, are $15,500,000 more than they really were, that being the sum received from the British Government in payment of the Alabama claims, and which is credited in both the receipts and expenditures of the treasury. It is partly offset in one of the years under Democratic control by the payment of $5,500,000 for the Geneva award, and by several millions of deficiencies contracted before appropriations were made by the Democratic House. Deducting the $15,500,000, and making no offset whatever, the reduction in total expenditures is nearly $104,000,000, and in net ordinary expenditures, so-called, of upward of $83,000,000.

And, notwithstanding this large reduction, the Democratic Congress paid nearly $31,000,000 more for pensions to Union soldiers than was paid during the preceding four years of Republican control, as the following statements will show:

REPUBLICAN EXPENDITURES FOR PENSIONS.
1873	$ 29,359,426
1874	29,038,414
1875	29,456,216
1876	28,257,395
Total	$116,111,451
DEMOCRATIC EXPENDITURES FOR PENSIONS.
1877	$ 27,963,752
1878	27,137,019
1879	35,121,482
1880	56,677,174
Total	$146,899,427
Excess of Democratic expenditures	$ 30,787,976

If a Democratic Congress had made no change in the Pension laws, the expenditures for pensions for the four years in which they had control would have been only $110,000,000, and the net difference, in the net ordinary expenditures in favor of Democratic control, would be $135,000,000.

It will be seen by the above tables that the net ordinary expenditures for 1880 were in excess of those for 1876—the last year of Republican control, when the Republicans boastfully proclaimed that they had economized to an extent which Democrats could not improve upon. But it will be noticed that Democrats in 1880 expended $28,000,000 more for pensions than the Republicans did in 1876; and that aside from this there is a difference in favor of the Democrats of $21,000,000. Democratic economy in other quarters made generous treatment of the soldiers possible.

It will also be observed that the total expenditures for 1879 were slightly larger than for 1876. This was occasioned by three items, none of which are chargeable upon the Democratic House. The first was an excess of $5,000,000 in the public-debt charge, caused by double interest in the refunding process; the second, $5,500,000 in payment of the Geneva award; the third a Robeson deficiency of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 in the Navy Department. These sums, aggregating $13,000,000, if deducted from the Democratic total would make nearly that difference in Democratic favor in 1879 over 1876, and this, although the Democrats in 1879 authorized an increased expenditure of nearly $7,000,000 for pensions.

During the four years of Democratic control, there was an average increase in the population of the country over the preceding four years of about 5,000,000, or fully one-ninth. An increase in net ordinary expenditures in proportion to population would have brought the total for the four years from 1877 to 1880 inclusive up to $790,000,000, against $710,995,282 for the preceding four years of Republican control. But the Democrats, notwithstanding the large increase in pension expenditures, kept the total for four years down to $612,178,551, a reduction of nearly $100,000,000. They did this in the face of intense Republican hostility, and with the national administration in their hands could make an even better showing. But upon the showing as it is the Democratic party can well afford to claim the confidence of the people.

A SCRAP OF HISTORY.

How Gen. Garfield, in 1868, Sought to "Improve the Army" by Removing Gen. Hancock.

[Washington Letter.]

It has been announced with a flourish that the Republican Congressional Committee are issuing the speeches of Gen. Garfield as campaign documents. He risks nothing in saying, though, that one of his speeches that would be as greedily devoured by the public as anything he ever said, and which is peculiarly pertinent just now, was overlooked by the committee in preparing their oracular list, and, had not Senator Wallace come upon it to-day, it is hardly likely that the omission of the Republicans would have been corrected. As it is, the Democratic Congressional Committee will apply themselves industriously to its circulation. The famous order No. 40 was issued by Gen. Hancock Nov. 29, 1867. Early in the ensuing session of Congress—Jan. 13, 1868—Mr. Garfield, according to the Congressional Globe, page 489, asked unanimous consent in the House to introduce for immediate consideration and action a bill "To reduce and improve the military establishment by discharging one Major General." The bill provided that the army should be reduced by the discharge from military service of the Major General who was the last commissioned in that grade before January, 1868, the bill to take effect from its passage, so that there should remain but four Major Generals in the army. As soon as the bill had been read, Mr. Garfield expressed the wish that it might be acted upon the next morning. Objection being made, Mr. Garfield then said that he should bring it up the first thing on the following Monday. The bill was aimed directly at Gen. Hancock, who had been commissioned Major General July 26, 1866, and was the last commissioned in that grade before January, 1868. Thus it is seen that within six weeks after Hancock had issued order No. 40, Garfield, Chairman of the Military Committee, moved a bill to punish him for issuing it—not by retirement or pension, but by removal. The Garfield bill was not heard of again for the reason that on the same day, Jan. 13, Mr. Bingham, from the Committee on Reconstruction, reported a bill that answered nearly the purpose sought by Garfield. It was in three wordy sections, but its purport was to compel Hancock to obey Grant, the General, rather than Johnson, the President, and investing in Grant the power to remove Hancock if he obeyed Johnson. It also gave Grant the power to do anything he might see fit in each of the military departments, regardless of the President. In broader terms, it meant that the powers granted the President by the constitution should be overthrown by statute. The bill was put upon its passage Jan. 17, and on that day Garfield made a speech from an alleged constitutional standpoint. After he had disposed of what he called its constitutionality, he let the light in on his real purposes by arraigning Hancock for issuing order No. 40. Mr. Bingham's bill passed the House, after Mr. Garfield's speech, by a strict party vote of 124 Republicans to 45 Democrats—Garfield of course voting yea. It was not heard of again in Congress, for the reason given by Garfield to Hinsdale that Hancock afterward "kept his place." The speech, however, places Garfield in square antagonism, not only to Gen. Hancock's doctrines, but also to those which he has permitted his party associates of late to attribute to himself, at least so far as it embodies what he was pleased to consider his opinions of the relations of the civil and military powers as warranted by the constitution.

Why Col. Forney Is for Hancock.

Having decided to support Hancock for President of the United States, however, I find that there is another audience not quite as anxious to hear what I have to say; that one decides against me in advance. The parties to this proceeding are gentlemen who think that it is an offense for an independent Republican to have any voice in public affairs that is not set to the chorus of the Republican ring. As long as you sing in their choir, and echo their sentiments, and obey their covenants, you are a saint; but if you utter a discordant note you are a traitor. I am a traitor now because I do not swing the censer to Gen. Garfield. I am inconsistent because I spoke well of Gen. Garfield after his nomination for President. I am glad I did. His nomination was a relief from the men who assassinated Grant at Chicago. Garfield was better than the office-holding and office-hunting politicians, who, after hunting down the lion, expected to drink his blood, to feed upon his fame and to rally the party he had saved twice from ruin to their support. Garfield was better than the hypocrites who, howling civil service and holding up a third term, as they said, sought the Presidency only for themselves, after having been longer in office than four times the length of one term. But I did not know Gen. Garfield's record; I had never examined it. It was not my business to keep a list of his jobs. I have not been five times in Washington in ten years, and I do not know what the new leaders of the Republican party have done—certainly not their secret work to help themselves. Till his nomination for President the country was almost as ignorant as myself. What it is all men know now; and, if I revolted from it, it was because I found it different from what I honestly believed it to be. Gen. Garfield's accusers were not Democrats. He was brought to the bar by his own party, by the Republican press and the Republicans of his own county; by the Republican committees of his own Congressional district, by the Republican Congress of which he was a member, and by a Republican court of justice. Had this record been known at Chicago, Gen. Garfield would not have been nominated. Full information enables me to speak by the book when I assert that there was not a Republican leader of any note, equally those on the ground to stay and those who came to save Grant, that did not admit, on reflection, that Garfield's selection was a blunder, and that that blunder was worse than a crime.

Mr. English's Mortgages.

[From the New York Nation, Republican.]

Mr. English seems, like many other men, to be in the habit of investing considerable sums on mortgage, which is usually considered a business transaction, the object of the mortgage being to enable the creditor to get his money back in case the interest is not paid. But the esteemed Republican contemporaries seem to think that the mortgage is something which is drawn up either for fun or to save the debtor's dignity, and which no creditor fit to be Vice President would think of taking seriously. So when Mr. English treats his as real security, and enforces it, they denounce him as a humbug and hypocrite, and as "no poor man's friend." This is a sorry business for a paper like the Cincinnati Commercial to take up, and would be much better suited to Denis Kearney's organ. When the editor takes a mortgage we wonder what he does with it.

[From the Rochester Union, Democratic.]

Some of the Republican newspapers are making the charge against Mr. English, Democratic candidate for Vice President, who has for many years been a large banker and extensive business man of Indianapolis, that he has been compelled by foreclosure of mortgage overdue to collect money owed him by persons to whom he had loaned it. All individuals, firms, banking associations, savings banks, insurance companies, etc., that loan money on bond and mortgage and are obliged to go to the trouble and expense of collecting it when due and payment is refused by the debtor, will understand that in Republican newspaper estimation they are extortioners and robbers who deserve public execration, and that the Republican newspapers do not desire their presence in the Republican party. This is what the Republican newspapers mean if they mean anything by this charge against Mr. English.

Goodman's Bluff Game.

On Aug. 5 the Republican papers of this city published a card, signed by John W. Goodman, making the following offers: "I will bet $5,000 that Pennsylvania will give Garfield 20,000 majority; $5,000 that New York will give Garfield 5,000 majority; $15,000 that Garfield will be elected." Goodman said he would be at the Seventh Avenue Hotel on Aug. 20 to make these bets. When the offer was first printed one man from St. Louis and one from Pittsburgh, representing different parties, sought Goodman, but found him not. To-day half a dozen Democrats were seeking Goodman and found him not. John L. Foster, of Point Creek, W. Va., has offered, by postal card, to take all Goodman's bets and to double the amount. Joseph Bradley, of Chillicothe, Ohio, makes the same offer. A citizen of Garrettsdale, N. Y., also wants to take bets. Beside these gentlemen half a dozen others from different sections of the country have written Goodman at the Seventh Avenue Hotel, and, though the contents of the letters are unknown, it is believed they are offers to take bets. Goodman indulged in a big game of bluff, which wouldn't work with enthusiastic Hancock men.—Pittsburgh Cor. Chicago Times.

INDIANA NEWS.

Sullivan has overwhelmingly rejected the proposition to organize a city government.

In the past eighteen months three grown daughters of Collin McKinney, of Salem, have died of consumption.

It is calculated that the dome of the Indiana State House will contain 327,667 cubic feet of stone, weighing 25,389¼ tons.

Scarlet fever is raging fiercely among the children of Hancock county. Six well-developed cases are reported in Greenfield.

The city of South Bend offers for sale, at not less than par value, $25,000 additional water-works bonds, bearing 5 per cent. interest.

Joseph M. Goble, of Rushville, has brought suit for malpractice against two doctors, alleging that they were negligent and not competent to set a broken leg of his last January.

A cow belonging to Bennett Baumer, a farmer who lives near Richmond, gave birth a day or two ago to a calf that has no eyes, and no place for them, and there is no sign of a tail.

Mrs. Adam Porter, who died at Camden, Carroll county, a few days since, was a sister of the late Joseph Holman, of Centerville, the last surviving member of the Indiana Constitutional Convention of 1816.

Large quantities of fine walnut lumber, and timber, a good deal of it cut into shape for shipment to Europe, are being received in New Albany, where the business has grown into great importance.

The Jeffersonville Plate Glass Company has made a plate of glass for the Louisville Exposition, measuring 110 inches and 230 inches wide. It is the largest plate of glass ever cast in this part of the country.

The breech-loading flint-lock gun, which was recently found in the ground, several feet below the level of the bed of Graham creek, Jennings county, is supposed to have been lost on the old Indian trail by soldiers or trappers as early as 1812.

David Shell, a wealthy farmer livin three miles northwest of Hagerstown, has been beaten out of $2,500 by confidence men, who offered him a bonus of $500 for the use of that sum for ten days, to complete the purchase (as they said) of an adjoining property.

County Auditors of Indiana do not seem to have as much interest in the corner-stone of the Capitol as the State House Commissioners would like for them to have. So far but four counties have responded to the circular of the Commissioners asking for memorials.

While Mrs. Conner, of Vincennes, was eating supper with an infant daughter in her arms, she attempted to pour out a cup of tea from the urn, when the handle broke and the boiling tea poured over both. The child died next morning, and the mother is severely scalded.

The Chicago and Bedford Stone Company, at the railroad junction in Bedford, have begun the erection of an immense establishment for sawing, cutting and planing stone. The power will be furnished by a 100-horse-power engine, and the entire cost of the enterprise will be $20,000.

Dogs raided the flock of fine sheep owned by Mr. Martin McCulloch on his farm near New Albany, killing thirteen and mangling several more so they had to be killed. The loss is $60. In the last twelve months over 200 head of sheep have been killed by dogs within a radius of two miles of the city.

Near Shidler's Station, on the Ft. W., M. & C. R. R., not long since, Alexander Snyder, who was engaged to marry Miss Sarah Freeman, asked her to marry him at once, but she refused, and persisted in keeping company with another person, when Snyder told her she would never again see him alive, went into the field near the house, tied one end of a handkerchief about his neck and the other to the limb of a small tree, and when found soon afterward was dead. A few days later Miss Freeman, after having a few words with Snyder's mother, committed suicide by hanging herself to an apple tree with her apron. The young man was 20 years old and the girl 19, and both were respected in the county where they lived. Miss Freeman was in the employ of Snyder's stepfather.

John B. Coyner, a farmer, residing near Palestine, Hancock county, relates a singular incident which happened at his farm a few days since. His hired man was in the act of watering the cows, nine in number. They were standing around the pump-trough, awaiting his action, when all at once, with tails erect, they made a stampede down the lane as fast as their legs would carry them. The cause of this sudden freak was a mystery to the hired man, but it was not long before he was let into what appears to have been the secret of the stampede. Suddenly, although the sky was clear and the atmosphere still, a young cyclone, not over twenty feet in breadth, darted down from the sky, and, striking the earth near the pump, twisted off five large beech shade trees, standing near by, as though they had been mere weeds. When the cows made the stampede there was no indication of its approach, and by what mysterious rule of foresight the cattle "smelt trouble in the air" is one of the things which "no feller can find out."

Gustave Dore is engaged upon a picture painted on a colossal scale like the majority of his scriptural subjects, and illustrating the text, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden."

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.
Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

When Quin was at a certain dinner party there was a pudding on the table of a peculiarly attractive character. One of the guests helped himself to a huge piece, when the host, wishing to have Quin's opinion, pushed the dish toward him and invited him to "taste the pudding." "Pray," said Quin, looking first at the gentleman's plate and then at the dish, "which is the pudding?"

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
THE Physicians in charge of this old and well-known institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.
INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE Producing such maladies as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Orchitis, all Urinary Troubles and Syphilitic or Mercurial affections of the throat, skin or bones, treated with success, on scientific principles, without using Mercury or other Poisonous Medicines.
YOUNG MEN and those of middle age who are suffering from the effects of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, the result of self-abuse in youth or excess in matured years, are permanently cured. This disease produces some of the following effects—emissions, blotches, dizziness, nervousness, dimness of sight, cough, indigestion, constipation, despondency, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, defective memory, sexual exhaustion, impotency or loss of manly vigor, which unfits the victim for business or marriage.
PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is FREE and invited. List of questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application.
Persons suffering from Rupture should send their address, and learn something to their advantage. It is not a truss.
Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.
Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE
SAFE DIABETES CURE
SAFE BITTERS
SAFE NERVINE
SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THYSELF.
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
☞ Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

IN USE SINCE 1855
MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS
A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.
An experience of twenty-five years proves it to be the greatest Antidote to Malaria and all other Ague influences known to the world.
The only absolute cure for all Affections of the Kidneys. In Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, all Disorders of the Bowels, and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs, it is equally efficacious, while as a remedy for complaints peculiar to the female sex it has no equal.
NOT A BEVERAGE
But an old reliable Household Remedy, thoroughly adapted to assist nature.
It supplies tone to the stomach, reinvigorates the digestive organs, stimulates the secretions, and promoting a regular action of the bowels, enables every organ of the body to perform its allotted work regularly and without interruption.
Its highest commendations come from those who have used it longest and known it best.
Nowhere so popular as in Lancaster, Pa., where it has been in use for more than a quarter of a century.
Highly commended as a General Tonic and Appetizer. Sold by Druggists everywhere.
THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH
A large sized paper descriptive of disease, its origin and cure, will be mailed free to any address on application to
THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO.
Lancaster, Pa.
☞ We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. It never fails, is easy to take, and no after-physic is required. Price, 25 cents.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Beugal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16–tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains.

Casters, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE:ABRICHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind

Garfield's Petty Warfare on Hancock Baffled.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

Winfield Scott Hancock will be the next president of the United States. It is written in the book of fate, and there will be no electoral tribunal to reverse the returns. Hancock was born both handsome and lucky. He is a man of destiny. Why, just look at the record. In 1868 Garfield brought a bill into congress to drop the junior Major General. That was Hancock. It passed both houses of congress and was signed by the president. But before it could be carried into effect George H. Thomas, the senior major-general, died, and Hancock going up one grade, was no longer the junior major-general, and so the law could not reach him. Then the republicans, still led by Garfield, passed an act reducing the major-generals to three. This was signed by the president, but before it could be carried into effect Meade died, and the major-generals were then reduced to three by God Almighty. Finally, a law was passed authorizing the president to drop one of the major-generals. Before it could be carried out and Hancock could be dropped, Halleck died, and Hancock becoming the senior major-general, could not be dropped. The man who survived all these attempts to retire him cannot be retired. The man who led them—Gerfield—will, as a fitting consummation of his act, fall a victim to his intended victim. Hancock will be elected president. Garfield will be retired—at least from the presidential field.

Figuring on a Frog.

[Border Minstrel.]

Colonel John Caldwell tells an anecdote well. He applies the following to the radical party: An old-field schoolmaster had among his pupils a sprightly boy who had figured through the double rule of three, and who thought he could work almost any sum the teacher could give him. On Friday evening he called the boy up and told him he had a sum for him to work—which was this: "In a well forty feet deep there is a frog, and this frog jumps ten feet up every day, and falls back twenty feet every night, how long will it take the frog to get out of the well?"

The boy said he would take it home with him and bring the answer Monday morning. Accordingly on Monday he came into the school-house with both sides of his slate covered with figures and his copy-book figured all over. In addition to all this, he had several shingles under his arm, and they were also full of figures.

The old teacher asked him if he had been at work on this sum, and if so, "where is the frog now?"

The boy replied that the frog was now in three-quarters of a mile of hell, and is still jumping in that direction.

Horrible, But Not the Worst.

[New York World.]

The latest charge brought against the democratic nominee for vice-president is that he sometimes obtains money belonging to himself by process of law. This is indeed horrible, but after all it is less reprehensible than the republican practice of taking people's money without process and in spite of law.

The Line Drawn on Bernhadt.

[Petroleum World.]

Sara Bernhadt is perfectly welcome, and can stay as long as she pleases; provided, of course, that she does not attempt to palm herself off as sweet little "Buttercup." In the matter of "Buttercups," we draw the line at Sara.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind. Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

Garfield's Prayer.

[Gafield's Letter to B. A. Hinsdale, Dec 31, 1872.]

The credit-mobiler scandal has given me much pain. * * * Let us pray to be delivered from that condition where life and nature have no fresh, sweet sensations for us.

Double teeth.—John McDarby of Salmon Falls, N. H., is a man whose teeth are all double ones. He thinks nothing of chewing up a lot of kitchen furniture before breakfast—just to work up an appetite—after which he finds no trouble in getting outside of a tree stump or a section of a stone wall.

"Hark ! I hear an angel sing !" sang a young man in an outside township school exhibition. "No 'taint," shouted an old farmer in one of the back seats, "it's only my old mule that's kicked outside !" The young man broke down and quit.

Senator Conkling will make several speeches in Indiana for the bribe-stained candidate. He will be followed up by Senator Thurman. The democrats will have a series of grand rallies during the month of September, two to each county.

Very suspicious.—When a woman knows that her husband has his life insured for a heavy amount it looks very suspicious in her to be continually keeping the table supplied with green fruit, cucumbers and watermelons.

"What did the Puritans come to this country for ?" asked a Massachusetts teacher of his class. "To worship God in their own way and make other people do the same," was the reply.

A MOTHER'S MISTAKE.

She Kills Her Son for His Money and Becomes a Raving Maniac.

Some fifteen years ago a young Austrian left home to seek his fortune in America. He left a large family of younger brothers and sisters to be reared by his mother, an energetic woman, who kept a small country hotel. The young man arrived in America almost penniless. He went west, and after fifteen years work in the mines, was worth $80,000. As he did not know how to read and write, he did not correspond with his family, and the latter believed him dead. In the spring of 1880, he determined to return to this country and share his wealth with his family. He converted his gold into drafts upon the chief banking-houses of Vienna, and sailed from New York, enjoying, in anticipation, the surprise of his arrival would cause his folks at home. He reached Vienna without accident, had his drafts cashed, and left at once for his native village. As was natural after an absence of fifteen years which he had spent in the mines of California, no one recognized him. He finally made himself known, and spread before his two brothers the handsome roll of bills of which he was the owner, and which he announced he would share with them and his mother. The latter had now moved to the village about 100 miles away, where she kept an inn. After a couple of days of revel with his brothers, the traveler resolved to visit his mother incognito. It was arranged that he should not reveal his identity until his brothers should join him.

The Austro-American made his appearance at his mother's hotel. When he saw the old woman he could scarcely forbear discovering himself to her. But he managed to conceal his relationship, of which, of course, the woman was in total ignorance. The pair had various long talks during the day. When night came, before retiring, he called her to the room that had been assigned to him stating that he had a very important secret to communicate to her. Then he told her that he had in his possession a large sum of money, and begged her to take charge of it, as he deemed it imprudent to keep it in his room, particularly as the latter could not be locked. The woman hesitated a moment, saying that she had no place in the house where the money would be perfectly safe; but she finally consented to receive it. When the stranger counted over 300,000 florins in bank notes—a sum such as she had never dreamed of—she again declined to assume the responsibility.

But, as he insisted, she at last took the money and disappeared. What passed within the brain of that wretched woman during that night is more readily imagined than described. Upon reaching her bed-room she hid the treasure under the mattress. But the temptation to look at the enormous roll of bills was too strong for her, and she spread the bills out on the table. The sight of the money so excited her that she became mad, and, jumping from her seat, she took a razor from her bureau drawer, and stealing up to the room where her son was fast asleep, cut his throat from ear to ear, killing him almost instantly. She then put the razor in her son's hand, so as to make it look as though he had committed suicide. Next morning her sons arrived and inquired for the stranger. She sent them up to his room, saying he had not yet come to breakfast.

They found him dead, and yells of despair filled the house. The mother, like all the other persons in the house, went up-stairs, feigning to be utterly ignorant of the cause of the disturbance. She then learned that the murdered man was her son. The effect that startling intelligence had upon her mind need not be told.

"My son?" she exclaimed. "Kill me, my children, kill me! It is I who murdered him!"

The woman became a raving maniac, and was sent to a lunatic asylum.

Tom Ochiltree, of Texas.

When Tom approached young manhood the old judge determined to sober him down by study, and so he took him into his own law office, where he kept him pretty closely at his books for about three years. Tom was a good scholar, made satisfactory progress, and was finally admitted to the bar and taken into partnership by his father. A few months after this, the judge, as he was starting for Dallas one morning to attend a long session of the court, looked up at the old, weather-beaten sign which had been above his office door for a quarter of a century, and told Tom he thought it was about time to have a new one, "and, Tom," he said, "suppose you attend to it—get a good sign, and have the name of the firm painted upon it."

The old gentleman went to Dallas, and was gone several days. Returning, when he came in sight of the little frame office, he thought it looked strange, and riding nearer he found stretching clear across the building an immense sign-board, on which was painted in hugh letters:

"T. P. Ochiltree and Father, Counselors and Attorneys at Law."

Tom was at his desk deeply absorbed in working up a case, and never could understand why the old man should have caused that sign to be taken down.

Wanted—To Trade.

A good two-story frame house with L and two lots, on west side of Main street, in Auburn, for 40 or 60 acres of land in DeKalb county. Will pay money difference. Apply to 34-3t. Thos. H. Sprott.

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O. 24-tf

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880
(Chicago Time.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:20 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:20; Angola, 5:28; Fremont, 5:46; Reading, 6:15; Bankers, 7:10; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 7:25, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west Jackson, 9:27 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:3[illegible] p. m;

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:28; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, make close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

3:59 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:10; Summit, 6:21; Pleasant Lake, 6:31; Angola, 6:45; Fremont, 7:13; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:50 p. m.; Buffalo, 8:50 a. m.; and New York, 10:00 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:40; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 22 P. M.—From Jackson 12:20 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:18, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:23; Reading, 1:45; Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:00; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:36; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:05 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p. m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p. m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 50; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 20 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3 50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 10 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 39 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	8 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 10 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

Geo. W. Mullen, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. Worthington, Gen. Supt.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m	Accom'n	6:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:15 p. m.	Local F't	6:58 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:16 p. m

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT. WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis or

LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880,

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 7, Pacific Ex.	No. 3, Night Ex.	No. 5, Mail.
Pittsburgh lv.	[illegible]	9 10am	1 50pm	7 30pm
Rochester	[illegible]	10 00	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 45pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	3 05	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 50am	6 25pm	9 55pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	2 44
Lima	10 10	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	6 25
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex.	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, Atl. Ex.	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 10am	3 30pm	5 15pm	9 10pm
Plymouth	11 48		9 45	2 50am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 10am	6 55
Lima	4 20	9 40	3 35	8 55
Forest	5 23		5 12	10 08
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	7 25am	[illegible]
Mansfield	7 45	12 35am	7 55	[illegible]
Orrville	9 38	2 30	9 50	[illegible]
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 22
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	3 25pm	7 30

Nos 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv	8 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 05		10 50
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 03	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 33	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 25am	6 23	4 05
Fostoria	1 08	7 23	4 58
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 15	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 10 Mail.	No 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 20pm
Tiffin	10 03	7 55	11 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 35	11 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 32	1 08
Defiance	12 58pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 33	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 25
Avilla		12 20	3 35
Albion		12 45	3 55
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 30	4 30
Milford Junction		1 40	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar.		6 10	8 20

C. H. Hudson, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J Martin, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MacIntosh,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Notice to Ditchers.

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest responsible bidder, the construction of the county alotment on the Ballatt ditch, in Keyser township, in said county. Specifications of said ditch can be seen on the ground at the time of letting. Bidders will be required to execute a bond according to law.

By order of the Board.

Attest: Albert Robbins, Auditor.
August 24, 1880. 35-3w.

SUPPLEMENT

HON. GEORGE A. BICKNELL.

Speech Delivered at North Vernon, on Saturday, August 14, 1880.

Ladies and Gentlemen: On this day, throughout the State, in every County, the Democratic campaign for 1880 is opened.

A contest now begins, the issue of which, for good or for evil, will control the destiny of this entire Republic.

Fifty millions of free people are preparing peaceably to change their rulers.

No spectacle has been presented to history more momentous in results; for the election of 1880 involves not only the welfare of this country, but, in its remote consequences, may change the fortunes and the career of every civilized nation.

THE TWO PARTIES.

The political history of this Country reveals the continued existence of two prominent leading political parties, the Democratic party and its opponents.

These opponents, by whatever name they have been called, whether Federalists, or National Republicans, or Whigs, or Republicans, have always been solid against the Democratic party, and the contest of these two great adversaries have repeatedly shaken the Country from centre to circumference.

There have been other smaller organizations, we have had an anti-Masonic party, a know nothing party, a temperance party, a greenback party, and a labor party, but these have generally stood upon a narrow basis, some of them soon died, none of them ever took a very firm hold of the great masses of the people. Undoubtedly the contest of 1880 will be, as heretofore, chiefly between the Democratic party and its old adversaries, now called Republicans. In all free countries there must be parties. Even if there were no difference of principles there would always be the two great parties, the ins and the outs. People would never agree that the same men should exercise the offices always, but differences of opinion are as common as differences of complexion, and where men are free to talk and to act, such differences of opinion will always beget parties, and such parties promote the public welfare, they stimulate investigation, they spread information, each watches and checks the excesses of the other, they make mischief, when, in the imperfection of humanity, zeal degenerates into passion and prejudice; "the web of your life is a mingled yarn of good and evil together." We can not forego the advantage of parties notwithstanding the mischief they sometimes involve.

A CHANGE DEMANDED.

The Republican party has been in power for about twenty years. We Democrats think it is time for a change. The New York Times lately asserted that "up to this day no human being has ever given a valid reason why the Democrats should be entrusted with the administration of the Government." I now propose to show briefly and plainly why we think the administration should be changed, and why we think the Democratic candidates for President and Vice President deserve your votes rather than the Republican candidates.

We know that the long continued exercise of power has a corrupting influence in many ways; it deadens the sense of responsibility to the people—it creates a bold and reckless selfishness, it inspires a desire and a determination to maintain that power by any means however questionable, it persuades the leaders of a party that their own supremacy is essential to the well being and even to the existence of the Government, and when this point is reached, the conclusion easily follows that their party is substantially the Government, and that they only have rightful authority to rule.

I shall not stop to point out the particulars in which these results have been exhibited in the Republican party, you know the facts, you can make the application for yourselves, what I say is that, after twenty years of Re[illegible] administration because the natural results of long continued power have appeared in the Republican leaders in a very conspicuous degree.

WHY A CHANGE IS NECESSARY.

But further, we demand a change of administration because the Republican leaders have been faithless to their pledges and false to their trusts in all the several matters to which I shall now specially call your attention, namely:

1. They have disgraced themselves, their party and the nation by unparalleled fraud and corruption.
2. They have grossly mismanaged the public finances.
3. They have unlawfully interfered with popular elections.
4. They have violated their own professed principles in relation to civil service reform.
5. They have deliberately and persistently striven to build up on the ruins of the constitution an imperial despotism inconsistent with the great principles of American liberty and at war with all the teachings of the fathers of the Republic.

As to fraud and corruption, I suppose it will be admitted that the eight years of Grant's administration exhibited the most astonishing examples of all-pervading official corruption that ever existed in any civilized land. No European government could match it; no Asiatic despotism could surpass it. The official misdeeds of Williams, the Republican Attorney General, Belknap, the Republican Secretary of War, Babcock, the private secretary and confidential friend of the President, Robeson, the Republican Secretary of the Navy, have gone into history together with the credit mobilier scandal, the whisky frauds and the [illegible] claims; and they have furnished [illegible] a chapter of bribery and perjury and [illegible] disregard for truth and honesty and [illegible] obligation as was never known in this [illegible]ry before.

NO REFORM WITHIN THE PARTY.

[illegible] I was canvassing Bartholomew [illegible] in 1876, my competitor, Mr. Newsom, [illegible]ted publicly that there had been a great [illegible] much fraud and corruption in the [illegible]lican administration, "but," said he, "[illegible] Republican party will reform itself;" he [illegible] not, however, point out any instance in [illegible] the corrupt leaders of any party had [illegible] reformed themselves, and the result [illegible] the folly of expecting such a reform; [illegible] as it was ascertained that Tilden [illegible]ted by 250,000 majority, the Republi[illegible] statesmen, Garfield among them, [illegible] Louisiana and Florida and there had [illegible] changed by fraud and perjury so [illegible] Tilden out, and they followed up [illegible] the still greater fraud of the electoral [illegible]mission—in which Garfield and [illegible] Republicans voted that the commission, although organized for the very purpose of [illegible] the evidence and ascertaining [illegible] fraud was, had no right to hear any [illegible], but must take the fraudulent returns [illegible] they stood. By this disreputable [illegible], in which Garfield was a principal, [illegible] accomplished the greatest theft of [illegible] times, the theft of the Presidential [illegible] they claim that Hayes had nothing [illegible] with the frauds, that he at least was [illegible] immediately after his election, he [illegible] to some lucrative office, every man [illegible] in these fraudulent returns, [illegible] forty of them, and when one of [illegible] money and claiming it on the ground [illegible] and his friends had got all the [illegible] the fraudulent count, while he had [illegible] any of the fruits," the ringleaders [illegible] him the money demanded, [illegible]self contributed $1,000 of it. These [illegible], show conclusively, that the Re[illegible]ders, they who control the action [illegible], have been faithless to their [illegible] have violated their trusts by cor[illegible] fraud, and therefore we Demo[illegible] a change of administration.

[illegible]CIAL MISMANAGEMENT.

[illegible]publican leaders have grossly [illegible] the national finances. This sub[illegible]cussed at length, would take all [illegible] speech. I can state only the [illegible], and they will show that from [illegible] entire financial legislation of [illegible] party has been in the interest [illegible]holder and the capitalist, and [illegible]terest of the great body of the [illegible]

[illegible] were originally lawfully pay[illegible], under the act of February [illegible] bondholder then had advantage [illegible] bonds were not taxable; he had [illegible] greenbacks at par, which [illegible] 40 to 60 cents on the dollar; [illegible], and the Republicans, by [illegible] 18, 1869, made all the bonds [illegible]. This was done on pretence [illegible] the public credit;" but it [illegible] the bondholder—a bid for [illegible]port of the money-power; [illegible] the toiling masses an additional [illegible] of more than 500 millions of [illegible] being paid in coin, [illegible] being compelled to take pa[illegible] special provision was made, [illegible] at about $1.30 and paper [illegible] and thus the Republican administration was giving a gratuity to its untaxed bondholders, while it caused all others to lose about two-thirds of every debt coming to them while they were paying the taxes to procure the coin for the bondholders; thus far the bonds were payable in coin—gold or silver. All the gold and silver coin in the world does not exceed 700 millions of dollars, and it is about equally divided; take away the legal tender quality of silver, you destroy half the money of the world, and you double the purchasing power of the other half. In order to give the bondholders this advantage, the Republicans took away the money quality of silver, then the bonds could be paid only in gold, the purchasing power of which was thus vastly increased. Here again the Republican party yielded to the demands of the capitalist.

In the meantime they had been contracting the greenback currency, destroying every month about four millions of dollars of it, and the result was the artificial contraction, combined with the other public burdens, was universal distress and bankruptcy and ruin.

The distress prevailed until Democratic legislation prevailed.

When the Democrats remonetized silver and put an end to the artificial contraction of the currency, and provided for the partial coinage of silver, these acts brought the greenbacks up to par immediately, the made our limited specie resumption possible, and combined with the expectation of still further reforms, and aided by bountiful crops, enabling us to export from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 a year or more than our imports, have thus restored public confidence and given us a start again.

The Republican leaders, urged by the capitalists, have all the time demanded the contraction of the greenback currency which bears no interest, and have increased the bonded debt which bears interest, while at the same time they were expanded into the National Bank currency.

You can easily see that every form of public indebtedness rests ultimately on the credit of the people, and you can see that the credit of the people properly managed would sustain $300,000,000 of Greenbacks at par, just as well as $300,000,000 of interest bearing bonds and all their National Bank notes besides. This review shows that the Republican leaders have grossly mismanaged the National finances, first by changing the bonded debt originally payable in Greenbacks, to a coin contract, second by changing that contract to a gold contract, third by a forced and unnatural contraction of the currency, and fourth by combining with the bondholders to destroy the Greenback currency altogether and substitute for it the National Bank currency, the guarantee of which by the Government is very dearly paid for and which is not the equal of United States notes in any respect whatever, and for this mismanagement of the public finances we demand a change of administration.

UNLAWFUL INTERFERENCE WITH ELECTIONS.

But further, the Republican leaders have lost our confidence by their unlawful interference with popular elections and by their determination to use the army to control elections and defeat the popular will. We remember the use made of the army in South Carolina and other southern States where troops were stationed at the polls and no man could vote without their permission. We remember the spectacle presented in North Carolina where the federal soldiers surrounded the State House, and denied even to members of the Legislature the right to enter their own halls. We remember the odious laws passed by the Republicans authorizing federal supervisors and deputy marshals to preside over State elections and determine the qualifications of voters and their rights at the polls. With authority to arrest at discretion without any process, to challenge man's vote, and then arrest him for offering to vote, and upon any bystander protesting then to arrest him. We know that Davenport the chief supervisor at New York of 1878 arrested nearly four thousand voters of foreign birth, on the false pretence that their naturalization papers were irregular. His action was downright villainy from beginning to end, the courts have decided it was wrong, but it had the desired effect, it prevented thousands of Democrats from voting, and defeated in that one city, three Democratic Congressmen and six assemblymen.

We know that when the democrats in congress undertook to repeal and modify these laws and stop the use of the army at the polls, their bills were vetoed by the republican president and the vetoes defended by all the republican leaders. Mr. Garfield at first admitted that much of this legislation was born of the war and in time of peace might well be mustered out, but his party soon whipped him into the traces again, some of them declaring on the floor of congress that military power was the basis of civil liberty, and that the government could not be maintained without soldiers at the polls. I say no such leaders ought to be in power; we need a president who will be in harmony with the senate and house of representatives, and aid them in restoring the old constitutional Democratic liberty.

SHAM CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

As to civil service reform, the false pretences of the present administration have become the laughing stock of the nation. The men who nominated Hayes at Cincinnati declared that their own practices ought to be reformed. They said they "rejoiced at the quickened conscience of the people" on this subject; they declared in their platform that "appointments to office should be made with sole reference to the honesty, fidelity and capacity of the appointees." President Hayes, in his letter of acceptance, said: "If elected I shall conduct the government on these principles, and shall employ all my constitutional power to establish this reform."

Again, in his inaugural address, Hayes declared that "appointments to office were not to be made or expected merely as rewards for partisan service," and in his famous civil service order he declared that "office-holders should not be permitted to take part in political conventions or election campaigns," and that no assessment for political purposes, on officers or subordinates, would be permitted.

This was a beautiful programme; but now look at the performance.

While we were yet listening to these professions, the visiting statesmen in Louisiana and Florida were promising the Returning Board men that they should be provided for by the President; and do we not know that they were provided for—all of them—rewarded for their partisan services with public offices? Do we not know that the yellow fellow, Casanave, assessed Sherman $750 and Hayes $1,0[illegible], and got his money by a threat to expose the entire villainy of the Louisiana count?

The truth is, these professions meant nothing; the famous civil service order meant nothing.

Republican assessments for political purposes were renewed in 1878; they are in full force now.

The Republican Congressional Committee in 1878 say in their circulars: "We deem it proper in thus appealing to Republicans generally, to inform those who are in Federal employ that there will be no objection in any official quarter to such voluntary contributions." They call it a voluntary contribution instead of an assessment; that is all the difference; the penalty for not paying it is the same—pay the money or you lose your office.

The present assessed rate of these so-called voluntary contributions is two per cent. of the annual value of the salary.

The difference between republican professions and republican practices is richly illustrated in the case of Arthur and Cornell—Arthur was collector and Cornell naval officer at the port of New York; they were both removed for violating republican principles as to civil service reform—they had conducted their offices as political machinery and made the custom house a centre of partisan political management.

But notwithstanding this heinous guilt and this removal, they lost no standing in the republican party; Cornell is governor of New York, Hayes, who removed him, said he would have voted for him, and Arthur is the republican candidate for vice president. Now, gentlemen, I submit that these things show beyond all question, that the professions and promises of the republican administration and its party leaders as to civil service reform were all false pretences and have been violated all the time, and for this reason also we demand a change of administration. We don't want 100,000 officeholders assessed two per cent. of their salaries to raise a fund to corrupt and control popular elections.

EFFORT TO CHANGE THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

The last point to which I shall call your attention is this: The Republican leaders are not satisfied with the Government as established by our fathers, they are demanding a stronger Government, a grand central consolidated imperial dominion in which the constitutional rights of the States and local self-government shall have no place. In 1865 General Garfield, declared in the House of Representatives that "the fame of Jefferson was waning, and the fame of Hamilton waxing in the estimation of the American people, and that we are gravitating toward a stronger Government," and said he "I am glad of it." This was in the 38th Congress, 2nd session; it will be found in the Globe of January 28th, 1865, p 446. When you remember that Hamilton advocated a Senate for life, and regarded the British constitution as the neplus ultra of perfection, you will see the full meaning of Garfield's declaration.

When he said, "we are gravitating toward a stronger Government," he was speaking the truth as to his own party. The Government was never strong enough for Hamilton and the federalists, and it is not strong enough for their legitimate political descendants.

The same general sentiment was re-echoed by the republicans last winter in congress, when they said that "federal troops at the polls had no terrors for them."

We see the fruits of that sentiment in the control now claimed and exercised by the federal government over state elections. It is true this power has been exercised as yet only in cities having 20,000 inhabitants or more, but if it is right there it is right everywhere. The number of people to be controlled makes no difference in the principle. The president already commands the army and navy, he controls the patronage of 100,000 offices. He appoints the judges of the United States courts. Give him by these election laws the power of procuring a subservient congress, and you will have the strong government advocated by Garfield and his friends, but it will be irresponsible despotism.

This desire for a stronger government appears also in the great concentration of power in the federal courts, and in the unwarrantable interference with the judicial authority of the states. In the last fifteen years the jurisdiction of the United States has been increased by the removal of causes from the state courts, and otherwise, more than fourfold. Judge Dillon says, "The small tide of litigation that formerly flowed in federal courts has swollen into a mighty stream." This has been done by republican legislation; the pretext for it is that the states are unable or unwilling to do the work confided to them by the constitution, and that therefore the United States must do it. We are told that the states can not or will not maintain their own peace, but the United States can and will.

We are told that State officers can not or will not secure fair elections, but that the United States supervisors and marshals and soldiers can and will. We are told that State courts will not give honest and impartial decisions, but that United States courts will. These are the pretexts; but the real cause of all this extraordinary legislation is what Mr. Garfield calls "the gravitation of the Republican party to a stronger government." We think it is time this thing should stop. We want no such stronger government; the world has been governed too much. We believe in a distribution of power, and in local self-government; in the constitution as it is; and for this reason we demand a change of administration.

AS TO MR. GARFIELD.

Now, let me say a word or two about the candidates of the two parties.

Mr. Garfield and Mr. Arthur are representative men in their party.

Of all the objectionable measures and legislation to which I have referred, they have been the active advocates and supporters.

Mr. Garfield has been a chief spokesman of the Republicans on the floor of Congress for the last sixteen years.

He is a man of large brain-power, but he has breathed and lived and thrived in the corrupt moral atmosphere that has pervaded certain Republican circles in Washington.

He has the low moral sense of some of his associates without the moral courage of some of them.

A Republican of high moral sense could not have left the army in 1863, giving up the position of a general officer in that war, to take the place of a Congressman.

Such a man, easily influenced by his surroundings, without much rigidity of character, becomes an easy victim of designing intriguers. It is not surprising that such a man was caught in the credit mobilier scandal, nor that he took $5,000 to advocate the DeGolyer pavement when his business was as a Congressman to investigate it and oppose it. It is painful to dwell on these things, it is enough to say that, a man stained with such transactions "has no record to run on" for President of the United States.

I said he lacked moral courage; let me give an example of that. Mr. Blackburn was in the chair in the 45th Congress. Mr. Garfield said "why waste time in debate when the chairman sits there simply to register the decrees of an irresponsible caucus?" No greater insult than this could be offered to the chairman of a deliberative body. Mr. Sayler called Garfield to order and moved that his words be taken down. Mr. Blackburn said he would prefer to have the opportunity to answer the charge on the floor. As Blackburn left the chair to take the floor, Mr. Garfield exclaimed, "I mean nothing personal against the chairman!" And the result was Mr. Blackburn compelled him to take back his words, he had not the moral courage to stand upon them, although his party was ready to back him.

Afterward when we were trying to amend objectionable Republican legislature, Mr. Garfield admitted the necessity of amendment, he offered an amendment of his own which we immediately adopted. It was not all we wanted, but we were glad to get any relief. We incorporated Mr. Garfield's amendment in our bill, but when came to vote, Mr. Garfield was bulldozed by his party, and voted against his own amendment. He had not the moral courage to stand up to his own convictions.

He is a great orator and he can talk largely about the grandeur of ideas, as he did lately in New York when he quit the business on hand and went to the eulogizing again his great beau ideal, Alexander Hamilton. He and his party claim that they are the party of great moral ideas, but the people will judge him and them not by what they have claimed, but what they have done.

MR. ARTHUR'S RECORD.

Mr. Arthur, the candidate for Vice-President, is not generally known in this part of the Country, his reputation has been confined to the neighborhood of New York, but Mr. Sherman knows him and Hayes knows him, and here is what they say about him.

"With a deep sense of my obligations under the constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you, in order that the office may be honestly administered."—R. B. Hayes to Collector Arthur, January 31, 1879.

"Gross abuses of administration have continued and increased during your incumbency."—Sherman to Collector Arthur, January 31, 1879.

"Persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no service; the expenses of your office have increased, while its receipts have diminished. Bribes, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in several branches of the Custom-house, and you have in no case supported the effort to correct these abuses."—Secretary Sherman to Collector Arthur, January 31, 1879.

Now, this man who was too dishonest to be a Republican collector, is the Republican candidate for Vice President, and Hayes and Sherman are both supporting the ticket. It was a leading Republican in Cincinnati who said that "Garfield had no record to run on." I think we Democrats, in view of the foregoing testimony, will agree that Arthur has no record to run on.

GEN. HANCOCK AS A SOLDIER.

Gen. Hancock, our candidate, was a graduate of West Point, one of the adopted children of the nation. He went at once from the school to the battle-fields of Mexico, and was immediately promoted there for daring valor at Contreras and Cherubusco. In the war of the rebellion he was a brigadier general, illustrious throughout. At Williamsburg, at Antietam, at Fredericksburg, at Chancellorsville, at Gettysburg, he was everywhere the same sagacious and able commander, the same brilliant and desperate fighter. He came out of that war a Major General, covered with wounds and with glory. Afterward, he commanded the expedition against the Indians of the plains. He was thus the hero of three wars; but glorious as was his military record, his civil record outshines it. When the republicans undertook to reconstruct the southern states and govern them by military law only, Gen. Hancock was appointed military commander of the 5th military district, embracing the states of Louisiana and Texas.

HIS RECORD AS A STATESMAN.

He had full authority to suspend all civil laws and govern by his own discretion alone. He was surrounded by carpet-baggers and greedy adventurers eager to profit by the confusion that would follow the abrogation of the civil laws, and urging him to abolish existing tribunals and govern by his will alone. He was beset with letters and false statements from all directions. A man of less firmness or feebler intuitions might well have been shaken, but his comprehensive patriotism and sound judgment were equal to the emergency. He knew the right, and knowing, dared maintain it. He alone, of all the military governors of that day, took the clear constitutional ground, and asserted the rights of American citizens who had laid down their arms and were keeping step to the music of the Union.

Listen to general order, No. 40:

"The general announces that the great principles of American liberty are the natural inheritance of this people and ever should be. The habeas corpus, the trial by jury, the freedom of speech, the liberty of the press, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved."

Listen to special order, No. 203:

"The commanding general will maintain the just power of judiciary and will not permit the civil authorities and laws to be embarrassed by military interference."

Hear now special order, No. 213:

"Military interference with elections is forbidden by law, and no soldiers shall be allowed to appear at any polling place unless as citizens of the State they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting."

The issue of such orders, at such a time and under such circumstances by a man having supreme authority was a wonderful example of lofty patriotism, sound judgment and supreme self-control.

We have had no such combinations of great civil and military abilities since the days of Andrew Jackson.

Look at General Hancock's letter to General Sherman and his comments upon the monstrous use of Federal troops in South Carolina! Supreme wisdom in every line.

Gentlemen, if the character of General Hancock could be brought fairly before the people, and they could be made fully to understand it in all its severe simplicity and majesty, there would be an outbreak of popular enthusiasm never before known in this country, and he would be carried into the Presidency by unanimous and re-echoing acclamation.

MR. ENGLISH'S RECORD.

Mr. English, our candidate for Vice President, has never been dismissed from office for dishonesty. Starting a poor boy in an adjoining county, he has been successful alike in politics and in business. He was successful because he deserved success. We know him about the falls of the Ohio. He represented us when he was a clerk in one of the departments at Washington. He represented us when he was clerk of the Constitutional Convention in 1851. He represented us for eight years in Congress. We are proud of him; we always delighted to honor him; and we believe he will represent us again as Vice President of the United States.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, I will detain you no longer. I submit that I have shown you, briefly but plainly, why there ought to be a change of administration, and why our candidates for President and Vice President are better than the Republican candidates. I thank you heartily for your close and undivided attention.

STATE FINANCES.

An Exhaustive Speech on the Subject by Judge Lewis Jordan, Made at Indianapolis, August 12.

In a speech delivered before the Democratic Convention of Marion County in 1878 I said that "the discussion of national questions has for years engrossed the minds of the people, and that we have eagerly looked for the day when this should no longer be necessary." That day has not arrived; but in the present canvass the Democratic party of Indiana can well afford to point with pride and satisfaction to the excellent record made since it assumed control of the State Government in 1872. While the election of Thomas A. Hendricks as Governor was the occasion of great rejoicing to his political friends, his administration was so wise and pure that our political opponents have cheerfully accorded to it the praise it so richly merited. And it is a matter for congratulation that the administration of Governor Williams has maintained the high standard of his predecessor, so that Indiana stands to-day at the head of all her sister States in the pure and economical administration of her State Government. I claim that Governor Hendricks introduced reforms which have been of great and lasting benefit to the tax-payers of the State, and to some of these I will call your attention.

REFORM IN KEEPING ACCOUNTS.

Prior to 1875 there had been much confusion in keeping the accounts of the State, and on the 6th of September, 1875, Governor Hendricks addressed a letter to Hon. B. C. Shaw, Treasurer of State, calling his attention to the act establishing a Treasury system, and requesting him in his official report to make the exhibit contemplated by law. The Treasurer cheerfully complied with the request, and new books were opened by the Auditor of State, which clearly set forth the various accounts with the particular fund to which they belong. This was the commencement of a reform in keeping the accounts of the State, which was perfected in 1877, when the Legislature, at the suggestion of the Democratic State officers, adopted a financial year commencing on the 1st of November. To this financial year all the Departments and Institutions were required to conform, so that now any taxpayer of the State can take up the Auditor's report and in a few moments learn what have been the expenditures of the State for the year, and on what account the money has been paid out.

A COMPLIMENT.

A few weeks since the Indianapolis Journal said that "Indiana and Iowa rank about alike for economic administration." This was a compliment coming from an opposition paper which the Democratic administration of the last seven years well merits, and which the figures so fully substantiate.

After reading this compliment I concluded to look into the financial condition of the State more closely, and I need only say I was interested and delighted in the investigation.

Every citizen of the State will be proud of the fact that the ordinary current expenses of the State, including all our institutions, are very little more than those of a city of 100,000 inhabitants.

But let me give you the figures:

The current and ordinary expenses of the State government for the year ending October 31, 1879, as shown by the report of the Auditor of State were as follows:

Executive and administrative		$65,620 11
Benevolent institutions, to wit:
Insane Hospital	$120,708 76
Deaf and Dumb Institution	63,042 91
Blind Asylum	26,232 45
House of Refuge	42,500 00
Female Reformatory	27,889 49
Soldiers' Orphans' Home	33,585 43	$319,959 07
PENAL INSTITUTIONS.
State Prison South	$70,860 80
State Prison North	34,540 45	$105,401 25
JUDICIARY.
Salaries Supreme Circuit and Superior Judges; Prosecuting Attorneys; Sheriff's mileage in conveying prisoners to States Prison, etc		$196,409 93
EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.
State University	$23,000 00
State Normal School	8,000 00
Purdue University	6,000 00
State Board of Education	1,500 00	$34,000 00
AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES.
State Board of Agriculture	$5,800 00
State Horticultural Society	300 00	$6,100 00
State printing		19,641 81
State Board of Equalization		632 60
Repairs on State buildings, rents, etc		9,958 97
Bureau statistics		1,136 14
Total current expenses		$750,985 50

But in order to determine the exact amount of this sum which is collected from the people in the shape of taxes, there should be deducted the earnings of the several institutions, which are now required by law to be paid into the State Treasury, and also the docket fees, insurance fees and tax, as follows, to-wit:

Earnings of the Insane Hospital	$1,152 48
Earnings of the Deaf and Dumb Institution	76 22
Earnings of the Blind Asylum	201 73
Earnings of the State Prison North	36,954 73
Earnings of the State Prison South	57,061 71
Earnings of the House of Refuge	6,340 71
Earnings of the Female Prison	[illegible]
Docket Fees	27,179 48
Insurance Fees	12,457 50
Insurance Tax	21,327 64
Making	$161,920 73

It is proper to say that at the time the Auditor filed his report the accounts of the Northern Prison were not all in, but as the amount earned by the prison about balances the amount of expenses the result is not changed.

WHAT THE STATE GOVERNMENT COSTS THE TAX-PAYERS.

Deduct the $161,920.73 from the $750,985.50, and we have $589,064.77, which represents the true amount that it cost the taxpayers of Indiana last year to administer our State Government, support our benevolent, penal and educational institutions, and pay the expenses of the Judiciary and State printing, the latter item alone under a Republican administration costing about one-sixth of this amount. This record is without a parallel in the history of this State, and no other State in the Union can beat it. It is the result of the wise, prudent and economical administration of the State Government inaugurated by Governor Hendricks and successfully continued by Governor Williams.

THE RECORD OF LAST YEAR BEATEN.

But excellent as is the record for the year ending October 31, 1879, the present fiscal year of the State will make a better showing. The law reorganizing the benevolent institutions passed by the last Legislature, after a bitter opposition by the Republican members, did not go into force and effect until half of the fiscal year had passed, and it was only during the last half of the year that the new Boards organized under it efficiently carried out its provisions, and saved thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of the State.

The honest administration of the benevolent boards and the savings effected in other departments will keep down the expenditures of this year to what they were last, although we have this year to provide for the new Insane Hospital for Women. In other words, the will pay the additional expenses caused by the opening of this splendid Hospital, and no increase of taxation will be necessary to support it. Well may the people of the State, without regard to party, be proud of our State Government.

SAVINGS

SOMETHING NEW.

It is a trite saying "that there is nothing new under the sun." You know that not a dollar can be taken out of the State Treasury without an appropriation is first made by the Legislature. At every session an appropriation is made for the different departments and institutions, and the expenses can not exceed the amount appropriated. The rule is to spend every dime appropriated; but this rule was badly fractured last year by the officers composing the present Democratic administration in our State. If the saving had been only in one department it would not have attracted much attention, but I propose to show you that economy has been practiced so uniformly by the Governor, State officers and members of the Boards controlling the Institutions of the State, that it may well be said that we have something new in Indiana to be proud of.

APPROPRIATIONS NOT USED.

The following appropriations were not exhausted last year, and the figures given represent the amount saved: Insane Hospital, $30,455.55; House of Refuge, $10,500; public printing, 10,358.69; Blind Asylum, $5,198.42; Governor's military contingent expenses, $3,714.87; Deaf and Dumb, $4,703.67; Governor's civil contingent expenses, $3,192.72; fuel and lights, $607.37; Soldiers Orphans' Home, $414.57; incidental expenses, State Library, $297.17; books and binding, $264.70; State Board of Equalization, $167.40; Governor's office expenses, $45.28.

In this connection let me [illegible] a good word for the Legislature. When that body met, a bill appropriating $125,000 for pay of members and expenses was passed unanimously, but both branches being practically Democratic, that party controlled the expenditures, and $38,949.76 of the appropriation was not expended. No charge of extravagance was ever made against the Legislature, but on the contrary it is entitled to credit for rigid economy.

What a beautiful and pleasing pyramid these figures will make, and they should be written on the blackboard of every school house in the State. The record is so good the figures will bear repeating in the inverse order given before. The amount saved by the Legislature is so unusual the figures should be given the place of honor and support the PYRAMID.

$45.28.
167.40.
264.70.
297.17.
414.57.
607.37.
3,192.72.
3,714.87.
4,703.67.
5,198.42.
10,358.69.
10,500.00.
30,455.55.
38,949.76.
$108,870.17.

This pyramid will gladden the heart of the taxpayer, and is so grand in its proportions that the farmers of Indiana will see it and congratulate themselves that no additional hills of corn and potatoes or acres of wheat and oat need be raised this year to pay State taxes. I challenge our Republican friends to show such a record when they had control of the State government. They used up every appropriation made, although they were much larger in many cases than those of 1876.

STATE TAX.

The annual tax levy for State purposes in Indiana is 12 cents on the $100 of assessed property. In consequence of the rigid economy practiced by the present administration in all departments of the public service, a surplus accumulated in the treasury. In other words, the 12-cent tax levy was more than enough to meet all the current expenses of the State Government, and the Legislature wisely appropriated $300,000 of this surplus to aid in building the State House. It will thus be seen that the savings of an honest administration contributes largely to the building of the Capitol, and to a considerable extent relieves the tax payers of a special tax for that purpose.

This result is in striking contrast with the management under Republican rule. The Legislature which elected O. P. Morton to the Senate, fixed the tax levy at 15 cents on the $100.

THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTIONS.

The Hospital for the Insane, the institutions for the education of the blind and the deaf and dumb are known as the three benevolent institutions of the State. The people of our State have contributed liberally for building up and supporting these noble charities, and are justly proud of them, but at the same time they demand that they shall be conducted with proper economy. There is no more excuse for wasting public money under the pretense of charity than there is for any other purpose. The time has passed when the Boards controlling public institutions can be extravagant and hope to escape censure because they are administering a public charity.

The law reorganizing the institutions passed by the last Legislature provides that the Governor shall appoint the members of the Boards, and he thus becomes responsible to some extent for their proper management. This I think is a great improvement, as the administration in power should have the privilege of selecting its own officers. The increasing expenses of the benevolent institutions attracted the attention of Governor Hendricks, and in his last message to the Legislature he made use of the following language:

"I call your particular attention to the recommendations of the Auditor of State in respect to the management of the benevolent institutions. I agree with him that they should be much more economically administered. The expenses should be reduced at least in proportion to the reduced cost of the supplies and to correspond somewhat to the habits of close economy which the people have been compelled to adopt in their private expenditures."

The Governor argued the question at length, but very little attention was paid to his advice. But public attention had been called by this message of the Governor to the extravagance in the management of these institutions, and there was a general demand that some reforms should be instituted, and the result was a law passed by the last Legislature reorganizing the Boards, and now let us see what has been the result in the way of economy.

THE INSANE HOSPITAL.

There was saved of the appropriation last year the sum of $30,455.55, although the new law was only in force during the last seven months. From a calculation made by the President of the Board, I find that in former years it required an expenditure of $19,059.10 per month to maintain one Hospital with an average population of 748 persons, while under the present law and new management the old Hospital, which is now used exclusively for men and the new Hospital for women, the expenditure is only $20,718.13, with an average population of 1,084. In other words, it costs only $1,659.03 more per month under the present law to run both Hospitals than it cost to run one under the old law.

It would be unjust to the Board, and the officers in charge of the Hospitals to attribute this result exclusively to the passage of the law, for they have aided, by their honest and efficient management, to secure this large saving to the taxpayers, and are entitled to the thanks of the people of the State.

It will be the crowning glory of the [illegible] Democratic State administration th[illegible] Counties have been relieved of the [illegible] expense of many of their incurable [illegible] and that they have have been made [illegible]able in our State Hospitals, and th[illegible] noble work of humanity has been [illegible]plished with very little additional cost [illegible] people of the State.

COST OF CLOTHING FOR INSANE.

But it is not alone in the current expe[illegible] the Hospital that a large saving has [illegible] made. The clothing purchased for p[illegible] and charged up to the respective Counti[illegible] 61 per cent. less than formerly, and this [illegible] interests the citizens of every County in [illegible]portion to the number of insane [illegible] from the County. Under the old law [illegible] amounts derived from the Counties [illegible] part of the fund belonging to the Institu[illegible] and was used by the Board in addition to re[illegible]lar appropriation made by the Legislature. [illegible] new law changes this, and the amounts p[illegible] by the Counties for clothing goes directly [illegible] the State Treasury. This same provision [illegible] the law now applies to all Institutions of [illegible] State. The Legislature was urged by the De[illegible]ocratic State officers to adopt it, and thousa[illegible] of dollars are annually saved to the Coun[illegible] funds. This is only one of many reforms t[illegible] have been made under a Democratic adminis[illegible]tration of the State Government.

THE DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTION.

The unexpended balance of the appropri[illegible] tion for this Institution last year was $4,703 [illegible] That this result was accomplished by the new law and the change in management there can be no doubt, for the former Superintendent estimated that it would require $2,000 more than the appropriation to get through the year. Under the new management it was not needed, and there was saved of the appropriation the amount before stated. In 1877 this Institution expended $65,264.62, and this year the expenditures will not reach $50,000, thus showing a saving of about $15,000, which can be placed to the credit of the new management. The change in the Superintendency was severely criticised by the Republican papers at the time it was made, but the result has shown that the taxpayers of the State have been greatly benefited by it, and the efficiency of the school has not been impaired. The ablest teachers were retained and consulted by the Superintendent in regard to the management, and through their counsel the school has steadily improved.

Perfect harmony prevails between the Superintendent and teachers, and the Institution was never in better working order or the children more contented and happy.

INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND.

The Blind Asylum has been managed with the same economy that has prevailed at the Insane Hospital and Deaf and Dumb Institution. There was returned to the State Treasury last year $5,198.42 of the appropriation. As in the management of the other Institutions, so in this. The new law was not in force until the latter part of the year. The Trustees say in their report that "the amount covered into the Treasury is quite large, and with the exception of a small amount covered into the State Treasury one year ago, is without precedent in the financial history of the Institution." Nine months of the present fiscal year have passed, and, estimating from the expenditures for that period, the savings this year will be $7,437.[illegible], thus reducing the expenditures about one-fourth.

THE BENEVOLENT BOARDS AND SUPERINTENDENTS.

It is a matter for congratulation that the members of the Benevolent Boards and the Superintendents of the Institutions are all gentlemen of character, and that they have brought unusual ability and faithfulness to the discharge of their duties. Their work speaks for itself and reflects credit upon themselves and the party which selected them for their responsible duties.

THE HOUSE OF REFUGE.

Next to the benevolent institutions the House of Refuge at Plainfield occupies the most prominent position of the State Institutions. It was established for the reformation of juvenile offenders, and now contains 230 boys from all parts of the State. Being a member of the Board of Control, I shall not institute a comparison of expenditures with former administrations, but will merely state that for two years in succession $10,000 of the appropriation has not been used, and $20,000 has been saved and returned to the Treasury. I have maintained ever since I became a member of the Board that the same economy should be practiced in the management of the Institution as a prudent business man would use in his private affairs, and, I think I may say, without laying myself liable to criticism, that the Institution is conducted on that principle.

THE FEMALE REFORMATORY.

While a member of the Board of Visitors of his Institution, I recommended to the Governor, in my report, that the Female Reformatory and Prison should be governed exclusively by women. The law was changed, and I am happy to know that the change was a wise one, and that the Institution is economically and ably managed by a Board of Ladies, assisted by excellent lady officers. There is no politics in this Institution and I hope there never will be.

THE SOLDIERS' ORPHANS' HOME.

The Legislature, at the last session, provided that this Institution should gradually be merged into an Asylum for Feeble-Minded Children. Institutions of this character are in successful operation in many of the States, and the Legislature acted wisely in providing for this unfortunate class in our State. The Institution was opened in November last, and is now in successful operation. The same Board appointed by the Governor controls the Orphans' Home and the Asylum for Feeble-Minded Children. There was saved of the appropriation for the Soldiers' Orphans' Home last year $414.57, but the Superintendent says in his report that while the average expenses are apparently as large as in former years, yet $6,000 was expended in the construction of an extension of the main building, for cisterns and other improvements, milch cows, etc., and when this amount is deducted a fair reduction in actual expenses is shown.

THE STATE PRISONS.

The Legislature makes appropriations for both prisons, and all the earnings are required to be paid into the State Treasury. The reports show that the amounts paid into the Treasury as earnings about equal the amounts drawn out, so that in point of fact the prisons are self-sustaining. Judging from the reports the prisons are well managed, and have efficient boards and officers. As a citizen of the State I very much regret that the excellent law for the government of the prisons, introduced by Senator Winterbotham and passed by the last Legislature, did not become a law. It was presented too late to the Governor at the regular session, and the biannual squabble about the Prison Board prevented its passage at the special session. The Governor appoints the Boards for all the other institutions in the State, and this prison bill gave him the power to appoint the Prison Boards, which, in my judgment, would be a great reform, and ordinarily secure better men for this position. I would not have you draw an inference that the present Boards are not composed of good men, for I know some of them personally, and know them to be well qualified and honorable gentlemen.

STATE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

Trustees for the State Normal School at Terre Haute, Purdue University at Lafayette, an Agricultural College, and for the State University, are appointed by the Governor, and the gentlemen selected have all been qualified for the positions, and these Institutions are well managed and doing a great work for the people of the State. The only point that I desire to make is that under Democratic administrations they have increased in proficiency, and are a credit to the State.

INCREASE OF SCHOOL FUND AND COMMON SCHOOLS.

The people of the State are proud of our magnificent school fund, and the number and proficiency of our common schools. For seven years the fund has steadily increased, and is now $9,069,581.90. In addition to the interest derived from this fund, every County in the State has been liberal in levying special taxes for school purposes, and last year this tax amounted to $1,118,293.03.

It is a gratifying fact that while there has been an increase in the number of children attending the schools and in the number of days taught, the per capita cost of common school education in this State has for several years been decreasing. No better evidence can be produced to show that the common schools of the State have been in safe hands for seven years.

There are still a very few persons in the State who have never enjoyed the benefits of common schools, and who charge that the Democratic party does not favor education. To enlighten these and to gratify those who take an interest in the progress of our school system, I have collected the following facts, by which it can be seen at a glance that there has been an increase in attendance, in school houses er-

SUPPLEMENT.

…, in number of school days and in the … houses, grounds, etc., since 1872.

COMPARISON.

	1872.	1879.
[illegible]	631,549	703,101
… into schools	459,451	503,…
… houses	9,080	9,4…
[illegible]	12,133	13,…
… in which schools taught	9,080	9,2…
… without schools	70	8
… graded schools	164	22…
… graded schools	31	1…
… days	116	1…
… houses, grounds, etc.	$9,199,489	$11,378,7…

… have in Indiana more than half as … schools as there are elementary … in England and Wales, there being … of the latter. The schools have greatly … in character and efficiency, and … has been the order of the day. … now presented to you the financial … of our State and the record made by … public servants. I submit to your candid … whether there is a better, cheaper or … economical State Government in the … If you answer impartially and unbias… party feeling you must say that all the … of good government have been … met by the present Democratic State … of Indiana. Then where is the … for a change? There has been sys… order and economy introduced into every … of the public service, and we have … the result a good State Government that our … without regard to party, are proud of. Our resources are more varied than any … in the Union, and must continue to … capital and labor, and now we can add … inducement of a good and honest State … and low taxation.

You will soon be called upon to select your public servants. The Democratic party, that is now so successfully administering the affairs of our State, has nominated for Governor Franklin Landers. A distinguished Republican has recently said, in discussing the civil service rules of the general Government, that "the efficiency of such regulations has been distressed mainly because they have seemed to make mere educational and abstract tests above general business capacity, and even special fitness for the particular work in hand. It seems to me that the rules which should be applied to the management of the public service may properly conform in the main to such as regulate the conduct of successful private business."

Mr. Landers has been a successful farmer and business man, and fills the bill for Governor. Of his election there can be no doubt, and Indiana will continue to be governed on business principles.

Keep It Before the People, and Don't You Forget It.

[Indianapolis People.]

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that General Garfield, Republican candidate for President of the United States, was bribed with $5,000 to open the purse of the United States, which he did, as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in Congress, in behalf of De Golyer and McClellan, pavement contractors, whereby they might be enabled to make over $400,000 clear profit.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that in a suit brought in a Republican court in Chicago, by one of the De Golyer ring, Chittenden, for $10,000, being his share of the money from the Government which General Garfield had asked to be appropriated, Judge Farwell refused to entertain the suit, because General Garfield had been given $5,000 to favor that ring, and the Judge declared the argument was "void as against public policy."

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that any company of swindlers who employ a Congressman to obtain an appropriation of money, which appropriation is, in fact, made, and said Congressman paid his price for his influence in said behalf, if any one of said swindlers fails to get his share of the swag, the courts will not entertain the action, because of the interest of such Congressman. Such a combination of men being against public policy and such contract void. General Garfield was the Congressman in such a case, as shown by the records in Judge Farwell's court.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that these facts proved to the mind of Judge Farwell, a strong Republican, that General Garfield was a convicted bribe taker.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that if General Garfield had been before Judge Farwell as a criminal he would have held that he was a bribe-taker, and would have convicted him.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that General Garfield was associated with Boss Shepherd in the De Golyer pavement swindle.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that Garfield never returned said $5,000 back into the treasury of De Golyer & McClellan, although he would have the people believe the $5,000 extra pay to Congressmen known as the "Salary Grab" did hurt his conscience, and although he voted for it and drew the money, he afterwards gave it back. He keeps the fruit of crime, but gets frightened at taking what were lawfully his wages as a Congressman.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that General Garfield still has the $5,000 paid him for his influences, although he did return the Government his "Salary Grab" of $5,000; that in the latter case he tried to make the people believe he was first to cover the amount into the Treasury—which was false.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE that the Indianapolis Evening News, the Indianapolis Journal, and all the Republican papers in the country, dare not publish the facts as they have been proven against Gen. Garfield.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that the facts as proven and published to the world, and as pleaded in court, which have been published to the world, show that Gen. Garfield is not an honest man—that he is totally unfit to be trusted. All friends of good government and an honest administration will vote against him.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that in 1873 the Evening News, and also the Indianapolis Journal published many things against Gen. Garfield, Oakes Ames, Kelley, Colfax, and others convicting them all of the crime of bribe-taking, and that the proof against Garfield was as as strong either of his partners, and that up to this time neither of said papers has dared to publish one word of what they took pleasure in publishing in 1873.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that the recent meeting called by General Garfield, or in his interest, and attended by him, with many others in the City of New York, was only intended as a "dish of sop" to the Grant men, and that General Garfield had signed the mortgage giving his soul to the Grant party, in case he should ever be elected and inaugurated President.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, that General Arthur, Republican candidate for Vice-President, was "kicked out of the New York Custom House" by President Hayes for dishonesty.

KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE, and don't you forget it, that no such charges as the foregoing have ever been made against General Hancock or Mr. English, and that all charges of dishonesty, unfitness, or trifling with the affairs of Government, fall harmless at their feet, and that the friends of good government, friends of prosperity, friends of good trade, friends of law and order, and friends of constitutional liberty, will vote for Hancock and English.

THE CREDIT MOBILIER.

What it was—General Garfield's Connection With it—The Judgment of the Investigating Committee—The Condemnation by His Constituents and its Effect in Each Election Since.

WHAT IT WAS AND GENERAL GARFIELD'S CONNECTION WITH IT.

During the Presidential campaign of 1872 Horace Greeley, in one of his celebrated speeches, condensed the entire Credit Mobilier case in a nutshell, exposing the fraud and shame of those Congressmen who shared in its profits. Since then the details of the job have been almost forgotten; and it is well to reproduce the facts. It will be remembered that enormous subsidies of public money and public lands had been granted to the Union Pacific railroad to secure its construction. The idea was conceived of forming a separate construction company composed of the stockholders of the Union Pacific, and this company, so organized, was to receive immense sums for building the road west of Omaha. The Union Pacific Company contracted with the sub-company, called the Credit Mobilier, or in other words, contracted with themselves, to build the road for about twice or three times its legitimate cost. Of course the profits from the job were enormous. The stock in the Credit Mobilier Company was worth a premium of two, three and four hundred per cent. This fact, however was kept secret by the stockholders who feared a Congressional investigation and exposure. Though the stock was so valuable it was distributed among Congressmen at par with interest only added. But some members did not have, or pretended not to have, the money to pay for it even at par. General Garfield was one of them. In his case, and in other cases like his, Oakes Ames held the stock for them until their dividends paid for the principal and interest. In a short time the stock assigned to Garfield was not only paid for in this way, but there was also a balance of over $329, which was paid to him in cash, leaving him entitled to the amount of stock assigned to him with a check for $329, without his paying a cent out of his own pocket.

Oakes Ames was aided in these transactions by Durant and McComb; and it was the letters of McComb published by the New York Sun, that led to the exposure of the job. McComb wrote that he intended "placing the stock where it would do the most good," and in another famous letter, he urged a strict adherence to the policy of "addition, division and silence." Another member wrote, "we want more friends in this Congress;" and yet another said, "he found no difficulty in getting men to look after their own property"—meaning that those Congressmen who held the stock were to protect it by suppressing any movement looking to investigation and exposure. There were two or three attempts made to have the matter investigated, but they were promptly choked in the dark, Oakes Ames having judiciously distributed the stock "Where it would do the most good." But the scandal continued to grow in proportions as the scandal leaked out, and with the feeling of alarm which followed, there was a general disposition on the part of the Congressional stockholders to drop it. This they did in eager haste, Garfield particularly pretending that he never held it. But the testimony of Ames is conclusive if trustworthy; and the production by Ames of his memorandum book showing the amount of stock held by Garfield and the amount of dividends paid him makes the case against him too strong to be resisted.

GENERAL GARFIELD'S TESTIMONY—THE REPORT OF THE REPUBLICAN INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE TOGETHER WITH THE JUDGMENT OF REPUBLICAN PAPERS AT THE TIME.

[From His Own Sworn Testimony before the Poland Committee, January 14, 1873.]

I never owned, received, or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobilier or of the Union Pacific Railroad nor any dividends nor profits arising from either of them.

[From Judge Poland's Report, February 18.—Garfield's Testimony Perjured.]

The facts in regard to Mr. Garfield, as found by the committee, are that he agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the eighty per cent. dividend in bonds and sold them for ninety-seven per cent, and also received the cash dividend, which together with the price of the stock and interest, left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was the balance of dividends after paying for the stock.

[From the New York Times, February 19, 1873.

Of the members referred to Messrs. Kelley and GARFIELD present a most distressing figure. Their participation in the Credit Mobilier affair is complicated by the most unfortunate contradictions of testimony which the committee do not undertake to unravel. The only possible comment on their case is that had they taken a perfectly upright course in the matter, and refused to have anything to do with the stock, no occasion for contradiction could have arisen.

[From the New York Times February 20, 1873.]

The character of the Credit Mobilier was no secret. The source of its profits was very well known at the time Congressmen bought it. Though Oakes Ames may have succeeded concealing his own motive, which was to bribe Congressmen, their acceptance of the stock was not on that account innocent. The dishonor of the act, as a participation in an obvious fraud, still remains.

Some of them have indulged in testimony with reference to the matter which has been contradicted. The committee distinctly rejects the testimony of several of the members. This can only be done on the ground that it is untrue. But untrue testimony given under oath is morally, if not legally, perjury.

It is the clear duty of Congress to visit with punishment all who took Credit Mobilier stock from Oakes Ames.

[From the New York Tribune, February 19, 1873.]

Let us gather up the ends from all this snarl of testimony and see, if possible, just where we stand. Read the evidence. With varying degrees of guilt or guilty knowledge, every man of them, with one exception (Mr. Blaine) has been obliged to confess that at some time he has held this stock, and at some time—under stress of conscience, let us hope, that is not fully proven—got rid of it. Now let us go slowly over the list:

* * *

JAMES A. GARFIELD, of Ohio, had ten shares; he never paid a dollar; received $329, which after the investigation began he was anxious to have considered as a loan from Oakes Ames to himself. * * *

Well, the wickedness of it all is that these men betrayed the trust of the people, deceived their constituents, and by their evasions and falsehoods confessed the transactions to be disgraceful. Pass no resolution. Drop it where it is. Remand the whole business to the people.

[From the Indianapolis Journal, February 20, 1873.]

As to the other members of the House who are more or less complicated in the business, viz., Bingham, Kelly and Garfield, the Committee report the act to the House without recommending any action. * * * Every honest man will say that they did a wrong thing. * * * The people do not elect men to Congress to enable them to enrich themselves by investments opposed to the public interests. * * * They do deserve censure, and whether Congress administers it or not, we entertain no doubt their constituents will. * * * Every member of Congress who deliberately handled Credit Mobilier stock is unworthy of future confidence.

[From the Indianapolis News, February 26, 1873.]

If the Credit Mobiliers are to be punished, it will be unfair to stop with A and B in the alphabet. Go clear through. Ames and Brooks are bad, but no worse than Colfax, Dawes, Garfield, etc.

THE CONDEMNATION OF HIS CONSTITUENTS AND ITS EFFECT UPON HIM IN ELECTIONS SINCE 1873.

The Nineteenth Ohio District, which Mr. Garfield has represented in Congress, has always returned him without opposition in his party for either the nomination or the election from 1863, to 1872 inclusive. The credit mobilier operations became known in 1873 and the next year Mr. Garfield was a candidate for renomination as usual, in the face of the Poland report. His vote in 1872 was 19,189, and his majority 10,935. In 1874 one Wikoff—a man without any particular strength—was at the head of the Ohio Republican State ticket as a candidate for Secretary of State. The vote received of Wikoff and Garfield in the nineteenth District may be seen of the following table:

	Garfield.	Wikoff.	Garfield Behind.
Ashtabula	3,578	4,375	797
Geauga	1,795	2,451	656
Lake	1,925	2,321	196
Portage	2,548	2,781	241
Trumbull	2,847	3,749	9 2
Totals	12,591	15,483	2,892

Here, it will be seen, Garfield ran behind his ticket in every county in his district—even in his own county—an aggregate of 2,892. His majority at that election was only 6,346 against 10,935 at the previous Congressional election. It will be seen also that while he received 19,189 votes in 1872 he polled only 12,591 in 1874.

In 1876 he was again the candidate of his party and even in that Presidential year ran 1,748 votes behind Hayes in his own District. On the 17th of September, 1876, the Republicans of his District who were opposed to his re-election, held a convention at Warren, Ohio, and adopted resolutions concerning Mr. Garfield's course. The following resolutions condemnatory of his general course were adopted:

"4. That there is no man to day officially connected with the administration of our National Government against whom are preferred more and graver charges of corruption than are publicly made and abundantly sustained against James A. Garfield, the present Representave of this Congressional District and the nominee of the Republican Convention for re-election.

"5. That since he first entered Congress to this day there is scarcely an instance in which rings and monopolies have been arrayed against the interests of the people, that he has been found active in speech or vote upon the side of the latter, but in almost every case he has been the ready champion of the rings and monopolies."

The 6th Resolution of that convention related to his connection with the Credit Mobilier iniquity and was as follows:

"6. That we further arraign and denounce him for his corrupt connection with the Credit Mobilier, for his false denials thereof to his constituents, for his perjured denial thereof before a committee of his peers in Congress, for fraud upon his constituents in circulating among them a pamphlet purporting to set forth the finding of said committee and the evidence against him, when in fact material portions thereof were omitted and garbled."

On the 10th of September, 1876, the committee appointed by this convention issued an address to the Republicans of the district, of which the following extracts are presented:

* * * * *

"The Republican party has done much to purify itself within itself. Its whisky-ring revenue officers are convicted and imprisoned; Belknap is deposed and impeached, and only escapes conviction by a technicality. Its salary-stealing, Credit Mobilier, pavement jobbing Congressmen are mostly retired. James A. Garfield remains. Richard C. Parsons, his compeer as a great patent-pavement lawyer, nominated without opposition in a district Republican last year by 6,800 majority, was buried at the polls by Henry B. Payne, a Democrat, by 2,500 majority. The office-holders nominated him, but the brave, honest people rebuked them.

"JAMES A. GARFIELD fell from 10,935 majority in 1872 to 2,536 majority in 1874. 'Oh! what a fall was there, my countrymen!'

"REBUKED, SHORN OF CHARACTER FOR TRUTH AND INTEGRITY, ALL THAT IS NOBLE IN MANHOOD, ALMOST DEFEATED, HE STANDS A SAD AND BLACKENED MONUMENT OF AVARICE AND GREED.

"By the arts of the orator and demagogue, of which he is a consummate master, he is striving and struggling and may postpone the day of his final doom; but he bears upon his front the writing on the wall—'Mene, mene, tekel upharsin!'"

The history of his connection with this infamous measure is thus complete. It can be seen how the coils tightened around him; how he was condemned by an investigating committee, the majority of which was composed of members of his own party; how leading Republican newspapers in the country and in Indiana condemned him at the time, and conceded that the charges were proven; and finally how he was condemned by his own constituents, both in convention and at the polls. There is no escape for him from these damaging facts—facts which have never yet been met. Together they make up a record for Mr. Garfield which must condemn him with the fair, honest-minded, thinking people of this country.

William H. English.

[Translated from the Indianapolis German Telegraph, Aug. 18.]

When in 1876, the Republicans discovered that their attacks upon the public career of Mr. Tilden would avail nothing, they turned to his private and business affairs, for the purpose of raising prejudice and suspicion against his character. They denounced him all over the Union as a wrecker who plundered failing railroad companies, and while his personal and business character stood so high that he was sought for as an advisor and coadjutor in all enterprises, which needed the greatest confidence and the highest integrity and ability, they attempted to represent him before the mass of the people as a man who misused the confidence bestowed upon him for the purpose of robbing, like the keeper of a den of thieves, those who had came to him with their confidence and for his assistance. Thus it was attempted to break down the trust in Mr. Tilden's high public character, which could not be shaken by attacks upon his public record, by slandering his private character in the most infamous and systematic manner.

Mr. English seems to have been selected to be dealt with in a similar manner, and thus to create a diversion of the attacks upon the public records of Garfield and Arthur, which offer so many vulnerable places.

There has been prepared a list of suits which Mr. English in the course of his financial activity as President of the first National Bank of this city, and as a capitalist has caused to be entered and prosecuted in the courts of this city. Mr. English was for almost two decenniels the head of the most prominent bank of our city. In this capacity he acquired the reputation of being one of the safest and most successful financiers.

We suppose that Mr. English in his capacity as president of a bank, and also in his own personal transactions, has strictly adhered to certain rules and regulations which have been taught by long experience. and are recognized by all financial business men. But what have the private business transactions of Mr. English to do with his position as a candidate? We do not suppose that the people of the United States desire to borrow of Mr. English after they elected him as Vice President, or that they would elect him for that purpose. And it is absolutely impossible to understand what connection exists between his position as a representative and candidate of the Democratic party for a public office with his private business, or, more especially, with the the good opinion which he and his customers entertained of each other when they interchanged their money and their notes, and the poor opinions which they conceived of each other when the one failed to honor his promise at maturity and the other brought suit for its enforcement.

The use of such means—the dragging of private and business transactions into a battle between public parties—is contemptible in the extreme, because it opens all the flood-gates to the worst influences, and is a low and demagogical resource.

But Mr. English has a public career behind him. We do not pretend to claim, nor would Mr. English probably claim himself, that everything he has said or done during his public life would to-day be accepted as being without exception, correct and praiseworthy. Mr. English need not be ashamed of his past public life. He may be, and is justified in looking back thereon with satisfaction. There is no pernicious or damning spot on his political past or his public character.

And the adopted citizens of this country especially have no reason for discontent with Mr. English's public character. In the days of Know-Nothing and Maine law persecutions, 1852 to 1857, Mr. English carried the liberal banner of his party high and aloft, and he came out victoriously from the hottest and most dangerous battles. His Congressional District was on this side of the Ohio, opposite Louisville, where the Know-Nothings, notably, practically carried their doctrines to some of their last conclusions by killing adopted citizens by the dozen on the public streets or roasting them in their private dwellings. And in Indiana too, Know-Nothingism was at that time powerful and victorious. Democratic meetings were attacked and dispersed, Democratic speakers sneered at, abused and maltreated. The Know-Nothing ruffians of Louisville came in crowds during the campaign and election on this side of the Ohio, but Mr. English did not allow himself to be intimidated.

His District had only a weak Democratic majority. In fact, Mr. English was the first Democrat elected from there into Congress. His opponents, who at that time by a fusion of all the opposition elements revolutionized our Democratic State, thought they would have an easy time with him. At that election only two Democrats were returned from our State into Congress. But of the two Mr. English was the only one who had been able to increase his formerly weak majority. Mr. English has done as much as any Democrat of Indiana to destroy that proscriptive party.

He remained in Congress till 1860, and he showed the necessary sense and courage, to prophesy to the blind secessionists of his own party the consequences of their folly. In 1860 he retired from public life, but as a citizen, and as a financier he has upon every fitting occasion identified himself by his actions with the cause of the Union.

DE GOLYER PAVEMENT BRIBERY.

A Succinct History of the Case, and the Judicial Determination of the Fact that a Bribe was Offered by the Contractors and Received by Mr. Garfield.

The attention of the public is called to the fact that the bribery of Garfield in the matter of the DeGolyer & M'Clellan wood-pavement contract stands judicially determined and affirmed. DeGolyer & M'Clellan were a Chicago firm, who employed an agent named Chittenden to operate for them in obtaining jobs in Washington from the "Boss" Shepherd ring, that then (1872) ruled and robbed the District of Columbia—or, rather, the "paternal government," at whose pap it sucks the substance of the Federal treasury. Chittenden, through the purchased influence of Garfield with "Boss" Shepherd, obtained a contract for 200,000 cubic yards of pavement at $3.50 per yard, which the superintendent of contracts testified under oath could be put down at $1.50. Here was a job of $700,000, of which $400,000 was clear plunder. And so overjoyed was Chittenden when Garfield's influence was secured that he wrote DeGolyer & M'Clellan: "To-day's and to-night's work has secured the assistance of General Garfield. You can not overrate this accession. He is the chairman of the Committee of Appropriations, and HOLDS THE PURSE STRINGS OF THE NATIONAL TREASURY. THROUGH HIM MUST COME EVERY DOLLAR OF APPROPRIATIONS. I need not say that I now feel certain of success!" Now, for the sequel.

After the job had been finished, and De Golyer and McClellan had received their money for it, a dispute arose between them and their agent, Chittenden, as to a division of the spoils, and a law suit in an Illinois court followed; just as a dispute arose between McComb and Oakes Ames in the Credit Mobilier swindle and a suit followed in a Pennsylvania court and uncloaked the "Christian statesmen," Garfield among the number, who had taken bribes. An action was brought by Chittenden on the Circuit Court at Chicago, May Term, 1875, Judge Farwell presiding, to recover from DeGolyer and McClellan his portion of the profit of $400,000. His case was conducted by the eminent Republican counsel, E. A. Storrs who figured so conspicuously in the recent Republican contest in Illinois, and Ex-United States Senator James R. Doolittle appeared for defendants. The declaration filed by Mr. Storrs set forth the facts of the case and the terms of the contract. These Mr. Doolittle did not dispute, but on behalf of the defendants made the plea:

Firstly—That the contract was void on its face.

Secondly—That it was obtained by the plaintiff through improper influence, against public policy, and therefore was void. The plea set forth that it was secured mainly through the official influence of James A Garfield, then a member of Congress and Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives; that Garfield was to receive a fee of $5,000 for obtaining it; that the contract contained a clause for 50,000 additional square yards contingent upon an appropriation to be made by Congress; and that by the usual course of business all bills for such appropriations came from the committee of which Mr. Garfield was then chairman; that he did subsequently report a bill appropriating $1,241,000 out of which said pavement could be paid for; and that for his influence and services he did receive the sum of $5,000.

Thirdly—that the said plaintiff, and said Garfield, and said Board of Public Works then well knew that it was not the arguments of said Garfield as a lawyer, but his influence as a member of Congress having power over the appropriations to be made, that the plaintiff had sought and obtained and paid for; and therefore, the contract was illegal, against public policy and void.

The plaintiff demurred to these pleas; the defendants joined in demurrer. THE COURT SUSTAINED THE PLEAS AND HELD THAT THE CONTRACT WAS VOID AS AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY! We quote from the written points of Mr. Doolittle:

"Fourth—the pleas are good. They set out in substance that the contract was obtained by the plaintiff of the Board of Public Works of the District of Columbia by improper influences. That the contract was in part—to the amount of 500 square yards—upon its face, contingent upon a future appropriation to be made by Congress; that the plaintiff JAMES A. GARFIELD, then being a member of Congress and Chairman on Appropriations of the House of Representatives agreeing to pay him a contingent fee of $5,000, provided he would obtain the said contract of the Board of Public Works; that by his influence and persuasion he did procure the same, for which he received the sum of $5,000. That afterward a bill was reported from the committee of which he was chairman and did pass the House, and pass Congress, and become a law, appropriating the sum of $1,241,000; out of which the pavement under the said contract could be paid for by said Board of Public Works; that the plaintiff and the defendant, and the said GARFIELD, and the members of said Board of Public Works, well knew at the time of his said employment, and at the time of his service in procuring said contract, that said GARFIELD, from his official position, did and would have a potent influence in procuring the passage of such appropriation to carry such contract into effect by said Board of Public Works, and that by means of the premises the said contract was, in fact, obtained by improper influences, against public policy, and is void.

"Fifth. It is no sufficient answer to say that GARFIELD was at the same time a member of the legal profession. His being a member of Congress at the same time, any employment as counsel upon a contingent fee, or otherwise, to obtain a contract from a board of public officers, dependent upon the future action of Congress to fulfil, is against public policy and void."

"Sixthly. That the plaintiff Chittenden well knew and intended that General GARFIELD, as a member of Congress, was to be used in procuring the contract, rather than his arguments as a counsellor at law, is evident from his letters to the defendants, set out in their special plea, in which he says: 'The influence of General GARFIELD has been secured by yesterday, last night, and to-day's labors. He carries the purse of the United States—the chairman of the committee on appropriations—and is the strongest man in Congress, and with our friends my demand is to-day, not less than one hundred more—two hundred in all. Everything is in the best shape, the connections complete and, I have reason to believe, satisfactory. * * * I can hardly realise that we have General GARFIELD with us. It is rare, and very gratifying. All the appropriations of the district come from him.' In the recent case of Burke vs Child, not yet reported (May, 1875), decided at the last October term of the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Justice Swayne, in a very able opinion, reviews all the cases, and holds: 'That a contract, expressed or implied, for purely professional services, is valid.' Within the category he includes drafting a petition, attendance on taking testimony, collecting facts, preparing arguments, and submitting them orally or in writing to a committee or other proper authority. But such services are separated by a broad line from personal solicitation, and from official influence. The agreement with General GARFIELD, a member of Congress, to pay him $5,000 as a contingent-fee for procuring a contract, which was itself made to depend upon a future appropriation by Congress—which appropriation could only come from a committee of which he was chairman—was a sale of official influence which no veil can cover, against the plainest principles of public policy. No counselor at law, while holding high office, has a right to put himself in a position of temptation, and, under pretext of making a legal argument, exert his official influence upon public officers, dependent upon his future action. Certainly the courts of justice will never lend themselves to enforce contracts obtained by such influence."

As before stated, THE COURT OVERRULED THE DEMURRER OF THE PLAINTIFF, HELD THE PLEA TO BE GOOD, AND DECIDE THAT THE CONTRACT WAS VOID, AS AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY! ALL BECAUSE OF THE PROCUREMENT OF THE CONTRACT BY THE BRIBERY OF MR. GARFIELD! these matters are of judicial record, in the Circuit Court, Cook County, Illinois, Case No. 12, 161. They are submitted to the consideration, particularly of such Republicans as may have been laboring under the delusion that injustice has been done to the nominee of their party for the Presidency.

☞ Our next Supplement will be a pictorial cartoon of "Republican Editors in Desperation Hunting a Bad Record for Hancock."

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

Summary Treatment of Some Tall Republican Stories—Disposition of the Tax Title Story, and that Street Railway "Outrage."

To the Editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer:

One of the campaign stories recently published in the Cincinnati Commercial, in relation to purchases of property at tax sales in Marion County, Indiana, by Hon. William H. English, is very effectually squelched by the following card, voluntarily published by the two very respectable Republican citizens of Indianapolis who made the purchases for Mr. English:

TO THE PUBLIC.

In reference to the publication recently made in the Cincinnati Commercial in relation to purchases of property at tax sales in Marion County, Indiana, in the name of William H. English, we know that said publication is unjust to Mr. English. We were the agents that made all these purchases, and they are all cases where Mr. English owned or had an interest in the property, and bought solely for the purpose of saving himself from penalty, and not for purposes of speculation. We had express instructions from Mr. English not to bid off any property on speculation. We are both Republicans, and make this statement as a matter of justice.

WALTER [illegible],
D. M. [illegible].

INDIANAPOLIS, August 16, 1880.

The statement in the same article about foreclosure of mortgages is of like character. It is well known that Mr. English never forecloses a mortgage if it can be avoided, and is one of the most indulgent of creditors. The foreclosures referred to were in many instances bankrupt and other like cases where it was necessary to perfect title; nor is this number of foreclosures at all remarkable when Mr. English's immense business is taken into consideration. The papers of Indianapolis have not copied The Commercial's stuff, nor has the publication done Mr. English the least injury.

The second batch in the Commercial is signed "John ✕ Smith, His Mark," carrying on its face the evidence that it is the work of a malicious Republican, who probably deluded this ignorant man into saying what he did not intend to say, and which was in some respects certainly untrue if did say it. Mr. English is the last man to have used the language attributed to him, and did not use it. The suit referred to was not with Mr. English at all, but with a railroad company of which Mr. English was neither president nor owner of a controlling amount of the stock, as stated by the Commercial. He aided in securing Smith $1,200 in a compromise, one-half of which it seems was gobbled up by a Republican law firm. And thus ends the Commercial's second abortion.

A Campaign Lie Nailed.

The Republican journals have been giving free circulation to the charge that Hon. William H English contributed the small amount of $1 to the sufferers by the great Chicago fire of 1871. The following statements, made at the time this silly story was started, stamp it as a malicious falsehood. These statements were sent out by the Associated Press to correct the misstatement now going the rounds of the Republican press. The first is from Judge E. B. Martindale, until recently editor and proprietor of the Indianapolis Journal, the leading Republican paper of Indiana:

INDIANAPOLIS, October 16, 1871.

To the Press:

A statement purporting to be a telegram from this city, published in some newspaper west of St. Louis, and perhaps elsewhere, to the effect that W. G. English, the wealthiest man in Indianapolis, contributed but one dollar to the Chicago relief fund, is not correct. There is no wealthy man of that name in Indianapolis. W. H. English contributed $100, which is the amount generally contributed by our more wealthy citizens.

E. B. MARTINDALE,
Chairman Chicago Relief Committee.

To this, at the same time, another member of the committee added the following testimony:

About noon of the 10th of October Mr. W. H. English called at the Chamber of Commerce and handed the Chicago Relief Committee a donation of $100, and I will add he was one of the first who paid. This was the morning after the meeting was held at the Chamber of Commerce to inaugurate measures for the relief of the Chicago sufferers.

C. W. BROUSE,
Member of Committee.

More Campaign Lies Disproved by Republican Evidence.

[From Indianapolis News, Sep.]

We confess surprise at seeing a paper so well informed as the Cincinnati Gazette to … upon Indiana men and politics, copying in … most prominent place such an extract as … from the Des Moines Register:

"But as regards Hancock's associate, W. H. English, of Indiana, there is little … complimentary to be urged, and the Demo… racy, while praising their leading candidate's service in arms against secession, will have a very uncomfortable time of it in explaining the record made by English, which was of an entirely different sort. Wherever he has been known at all he has been … as the rankest of Northern … heads. Indeed, his only notoriety has been gained, not by his ability, but from his … sive and noisy disloyalty. From his pro… ent connection with the Knights of the … Circle in Indiana during the war, and … forts, in unison with that organization, … feat the great war governor in that state … his efforts for the Union, as well as his … perhead record in Congress, he … name as infamous to all loyal men as … the rankest rebel."

The Republicans are not likely to … much by such misrepresentations … above. The tendency will be right … way. Mr. English was an active and … ent Union man during the whole of the … and met with no little abuse from … former party friends because he was … ernor Morton offered him a colonelcy … frequently consulted him upon … in the prosecution of the war, partic… reference to raising means to carry … State government. The charge that … had anything to do with the Knights … Golden Circle is a baseless fabrication … within the last week. His bitterest … never was foolish enough to start … before.

The talk about Mr. English's … tion to the relief of sufferers … the Chicago fire is of the same … amount he subscribed was one hun… lars, and was made the first morning … fire, and was about the amount … scribed by our wealthier citizens … this class of warfare alone.

Home Testimony.

[From Indianapolis People.]

As we expected, the misrepresentation … abuse of Hon. W. H. English by the … nati Commercial and some other … papers, has disgusted many Repub… the better class and has undoubted… Mr. English's popularity and strength … class is Doctor W. Clinton Thom… and favorably known as any … Indianapolis and a brother-in-law … John C. New, Chairman of the … State Central Committee. Dr. Th… Republican. To show his position … and in his party, we will say that … he was a Brigade Surgeon, appointed … ident Lincoln. He has served … State Senator from the city and … dianapolis, and was physician to … ton during his last illness. The … cently interviewed by a newspaper … as follows:

We asked if he knew Honorable … English, the Democratic candidate … President?

I know Mr. English well; he … of mine, and our business … brought us intimately together … of years.

Have you any objection to … to the character of Mr. English … mean, stingy, penurious man … ed as being by the Republican … he a Shylock—oppressive to … fortunate?

I have no objection to stating … to be a fact relative to Mr. … no objection to its publication … of large business capacity … traits of character, and is … large minded. In all his … is strictly honorable; kind … poor—always considerate … As a business man he has … much certainty, to advance … Indianapolis as any … there.

He was a poor boy, but … his ability, industry and … man of enlarged views … and a man into whose … the government may be …

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 16, 1880. Number 38.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Halston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 29 1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

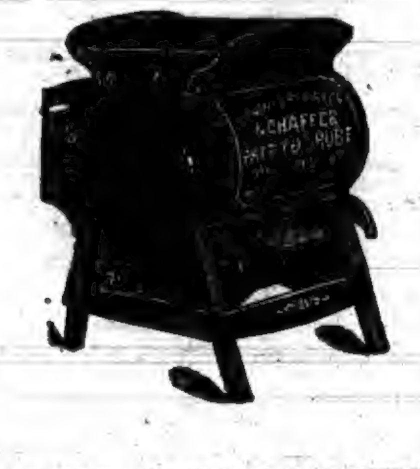
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn Indiana. 32-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
-tf Auburn Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

LORD'S LATEST.

The B. & O. Red-Book—Its Value as a Text-Book for Political Reference and its Exceeding Beauty as a Work of Typhographical Art.

[Chicago Tribune.]

The Baltimore & Ohio, since Lord assumed sway of the passenger department, has most emphatically come to the front in taking, and at the same time elegant, advertising matter. Recognizing the elevation of taste in matters of an advertising character, and the demand as well for something of more value than the mere setting forth of the advantages of the road, the B. & O. has just issued what it terms the "Red Book." It is beyond all comparsion the cleverest thing of the kind ever issued by a railroad company, and not only this, but as a specimen of typographical art it is a perfect gem. The cover, designed and engraved by the American Bank Note Company, and the book itself, from the press of Knight & Leonard, of this city, very many persons will keep it for its beauty alone. But while the artistic has been the aim in the external appearance, the contents of the little work will be found of the utmost value from now until the close of the present political struggle. Without pretensions, and simply setting forth facts, the B. & O. Red-Book is beyond all comparison the handsomest and most compact political text-book of the campaign. Compiled, results reached and arranged by an old journalist of many years' experience in political statistics, the states are so placed, and the detail so carefully attended to, that at a glance one comprehends the situation in each state. First, the vote of each party for president in 1876 is given, with the total vote of the state, the majority and the electoral vote. Next come the details of the latest election for state offices, followed by the political complexion of the legislature, with the fact noted that a United States senator is to be elected this winter, if such be the case. Then comes the result in each congressional district, with foot-notes so clear and concise that the situation in the different districts is at once apparent. Finally, the population of the state in 1870 is noted, followed by the vote for president in 1872, with the ratio of votes that year to the population of two years before. This is made the basis of a calculation of the total vote of each state this year, the figures given of the population, 1880, being from the latest obtainable information from the census bureau. As these statistics cover every state in the Union, and the book so indexed as to permit of instance reference, the great value of the little work may readily be appreciated. It is not on sale, nor will it be distributed without regard to use. All wishing a copy have but to drop a note or postal to C. K. Lord, Baltimore, Maryland, and it will be promptly mailed to the address given.

* * *

A Doubtful Case.

[Louisville Post.]

A citizen of Louisville, so the exchanges say, bitten by a licensed dog, brings a suit against the city for damages, which he lays at $10,000. This is practically a damage suit against the dog, represented by his next best friend. To gain the suit the complainant will have to prove that the dog was licensed to bite. He will also have to prove that he exercised the utmost agility in getting over the first convenient fence, or climbing a lamp-post. The rate of speed at which he propelled himself down street will be an important point. Did the complainant do anything to excite the dog? Has a dog any rights, even if he wears a standing-collar? There are interesting questions involved in the case, and as the dog cannot testify, the case is a difficult one.

* * *

Democratic Policy Brings Immediate Prosperity.

[New York World.]

Secretary Sherman put a conundrum in Ohio which Senator Conkling ought to be able to answer in Indiana when he takes the stump there. He asked, "Has President Hayes given any cause for a change from republican to democratic measures?" According to Senator Conkling, President Hayes has given cause for a change from democratic to republican measures. Senator Conkling has condemned President Hayes to "infamy," with all his following, on the express ground that President Hayes having got into the presidency (Mr. Sherman enthusiastically calls it being "elected") forthwith took up with a democratic policy—as indeed he did.

* * *

Wanted—To Rent

A good dwelling house containing from six to eight rooms; one within easy walking distance of the school-house preferred. Enquire of

W. P. MYERS, Principal of School.

Lost Sheep.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

We sincerely wish the northern republicans well. We want to see them prosperous and happy. It is a never failing source of sorrow with us to witness their pertinacity in error touching the people of the south. But the republicans of the north can never attain their full growth until they learn to practice the virtue of minding their own business and leaving other folks to mind theirs.

This is a lesson they not only have not learned, but which their party and its organs are resolved they shall not learn. To peak their noses; to poke the noses thus peaked into matters that don't concern them; and, so employed, to ignore their domestic shortcomings, is the single-rule-of-three by which they expect to gobble up everybody and everything while they live, and to go to heaven when they die. There can be but one end to this prancing vanity—this hypocritic exaltation—destruction.

We grieve to say it, but there really is no hope for them. The republican newspapers have, by their incessant and wholesale abuse of the south, worked the members of the republican party up to such a pitch of complacency that they are totally unable to consider themselves except as a race of superior beings, who, enjoying certain special exemptions, moral, legal and political, are not to be hedged in, nor judged, by the ordinary rules which regulate the operation of society in other parts of the world.

It is amusing to note the absurdities to which this self-adulatory spirit carries them. To see one's self as others see one, is, confessedly, as uncommon as it is desirable; but these blind followers of false lights carry their fatuous folly to the extent of seeing in others the very faults of which they furnish the most striking illustration in their own walks and ways of life.

We showed in these columns some time ago how the good Deacon Richard Smith, mounted upon a stack of bibles and throwing his whole visual being through a spy-glass into Kentucky, was insensible to the crimes which, unchallenged and unchecked, stained the escutcheon and disgraced the name of Ohio. The deacon did not catch the point at all. Neither did the average citizen of Ohio. They took it as a joke. The idea that anybody could seriously mean to insinuate that Ohio is not a sort of earthly paradise—a seed-garden for Sunday-schools, bible societies and charitable institutions—could not penetrate the Ohio mind; and, ever since, and in spite of us, murder, arson, rape, seduction, abortion, bigamy, forgery and the like offenses against nature and the law, have proceeded to redden and darken the every-day existence of the people of Ohio, until nowhere in that unhappy state is securety from some of these scourges to be found. And still the republican papers are making themselves wretched about Kentucky, about Georgia, about Tennessee; about every region they can think of except Ohio, where the lion roareth and the whangdoodle mourneth for her first-born. The heart of Ohio is alternately rent by Alabama and Mississippi. The liver of Ohio is distended about Texas. Arkansas has been known to stick for weeks in Ohio's gizzard. All the while a swarm of home vermin has been preying upon Ohio's vitals; her "lights" are gone; her "bowels of compassion" are gone; and presently we shall see the whole framework, rotted at every joint, fall headlong into the vortex of a hopelessly diseased abdominal cavity.

But they can't see it. They won't see it. They are too busy looking after other people's morals to attend to their own. They have pampered themselves into the conceit of being what they set out to pretend to be, GOD'S people possessed of GOD'S country. The devil has given them thus far a good deal of margin and mighty good luck. But—

"The wind is a-shiftin', SUSAN GRAY."

* * *

Life.

The mere lapse of years is not life. To eat, drink and sleep—to be exposed to the darkness and to light, to pace round in the mill of habit and turn through into an implement of trade—this is not life. In all this humanity is awakened, and the sanctities still slumber which make it worth while to be. Knowledge, truth, love, beauty, goodness and faith alone can give vitality to the mechanicism of existence. The laugh of mirth that vibrates through the heart—the tears that freshen the dry wastes within—the music that brings childhood back—the prayer that calls future near—the doubt that makes us meditate—the death that startles us with mystery—the hardships which forces us to struggle—the anxiety that ends in trust—are the true nourishment of our natural being.

The Campaign in Indiana.

[From the New York World.]

In answer to an inquiry in relation to the republican story about Indiana, "that the state committee of that state had notified the national committee that no further aid was required in that state to pay the expenses of the campaign," Hon. W. L. Scott, of Pennsylvania, said last evening:

"The republican reports to which you allude seem to imply that we have heretofore been furnishing the pecuniary aid to the democracy of Indiana. This is not true. We are sending there documents of the kind usually distributed from the national headquarters during the presidential campaign, and have assigned some few speakers to that state. But even in this way we have done comparatively little about Indiana, for the reason that the democracy of that democratic state seems abundantle able to take care of itself. We have not, from first to last, given any pecuniary aid to Indiana, nor has any been asked for. In that state, as elsewhere, the people seem to have taken the canvass so much into their own hands that ordinary campaign machinery is comparatively at a discount. Although the approaching election in Indiana has, of course, a great bearing upon the presidential contest, it is, nevertheless, a state election, and we are quite willing to accept the assurances of the Indiana democrats when they say they can take care of their own state, and are sure of carrying it. All that we hear from Indiana, through our letters and through the press, confirms this view. The meetings are enthusiastic. The people are ardently at work, and Governor Hendricks, Mr. English, both of our Indiana United States senators, and the almost unequalled array of able and eloquent Indiana democratic statesmen, are addressing immense audiences throughout the state. If these men, with their people to back them, cannot carry Indiana, no one else can. I do not, therefore, see any use in our troubling ourselves with the Indiana state canvass, simply because our opponents seem to be so much worried about it."

"It seems to me," continued Mr. Scott, "that in this canvass the several states are likely to take very good care of themselves. The democratic masses look with suspicion upon cliques or leaders who seek to perpetuate trouble in the party, or are slothful in the canvass. I see that in this state the call for a Tammany state convention has been withdrawn, as it was understood it would be. There is bound to be union among democrats everywhere on all matters and questions bearing upon the national contest. The people are determined to complete the chain of reforms and economies in the federal government, which began when the democrats obtained control of the house of representatives in 1874, and to which new links have been added since congress has been entirely democratic. The coming election will reverse the iniquitous and corrupt verdict of 1876 and 1877, put an end to sectional hatreds and feuds, and re-establish constitutional and honest government. The law-making power is already democratic. The coming election will simply put the executive branch in harmony with the peaceful, patriotic, economical and conservative policy of congress. This is not revolution in governmental principles, or even a radical change in men or measures. It is simply a too-long postponed carrying out of the will of the people which was thwarted by the electoral swindle four years ago. In such a canvass the people do their own thinking, and save the headquarters of the popular party much anxiety."

* * *

Show the Books.

[Utica Observer.]

The republican party has been in power five terms—twenty years. During that time it has had charge of the books. Fully one-half the men intrusted with responsibility during fifteen years are known of the people to have been venal and corrupt. The naval secretary stole whole millions outright; the vice-presidents of two administrations were clothed with shame; the war secretary took bribes; the interior secretary, Delano, post-traderships; and Garfield, who "carried the purse of the nation," as Crittenden phrased it, was a bribe-taker and perjurer. What we want now is a chance to look at the books.

* * *

The Republican Organ Pipes Retreat.

[New York Tribune—Republican.]

The adjustment is a shrewd one for the democracy. It will not do for republicans to underestimate the strength of this coalition. It means a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull of the democracy all together to carry the state. While there will still be jealousy between the factions, the followers of each will exert themselves to see which can cast the largest vote for Hancock.

The Three Heroes.

The three heroes of the victory of Gettysburg in 1863 were Gens. Meade, Reynolds and Hancock. Reynolds was killed on the field, and Meade subsequently died. Now read the closing paragraph of an eloquent appeal made by Col. Forney to the Philadelphians the other night to support the survivor.

"Suppose Andrew Jackson, who saved New Orleans from the British invader on the 8th of January, 1815, were alive to-day and a candidate for the presidency of the United States? He was a citizen of Tennessee, yet his name is worshiped from the Gulf of Mexico to the sources of the Mississippi as the unforgotten savior of Louisiana and all that region, and if he were living now no honors, no adoration, would be too great to express the deathless gratitude of the southern people [Applause.] Is it so, then, that the only spot on earth in which illustrious services are to be forgotten is the city of Philadelphia? Shall it be said that the great city saved by Hancock and his soldiers shall be set apart as the city that shall pronounce a stinging curse upon his name, and that here only shall our people deny him the cold tribute of their gratitude? I appeal in conclusion to all classes and all parties to honor the man now as they honored him before. He is the legatee of the great soldiers they have worshiped, for what he has done Reynolds died, Sherman paid him tribute, Lincoln honored him, Grant applauded him, congress celebrated him, poets have song, artists have painted, historians have written. Shall Philadelphia alone be silent? [Applause.] Let our merchants who are to be rallied against this superb soldier recall their praises on the morning of the Fourth of July, 1863. Let our bankers, who were packing up their treasures to fly; let our preachers pray over the prayers they said; let our manufacturers remember how they thanked God that Hancock had come at the critical hour. Let them all go back in imagination to that morning of relief and of thanksgiving. Above all let the working classes of Philadelphia, who are too often hounded away from their convictions and their affections, take themselves back to the anniversary of American independence seventeen years ago, when, amidst their tears over the dead body of Reynolds and their pride over the tranquil intrepidity of Meade, they recollected that Winfield Scott Hancock, who saved the stricken field, although supposed to be bleeding to death from wounds received at Gettysburg, was their neighbor, born in an adjacent county, the son of poor parents and the graduate of the people's military college at West Point. If all these classes, unlike other people and nations, forget those who served them best, let them remember Hancock is the living favorite son of Pennsylvania."

* * *

The Real Issue.

[New York Star.]

We must not loose sight of the great issue of national government in discussing the merits of presidential candidates.

General Garfield might be an angel of light—endowed with all the virtues that dignify humanity unstained by peculative frauds and impervious to complaints of corruption or chicanery in congress, and yet republicanism would be, as it is to-day, the synonym of plunder and profligacy and perjury—of a power that used the public purse for private purposes—and made the interests of the country subordinate to the advancement of a clique.

The real issue is between democracy and radicalism—between constitutionalism and usurpation—between a restored government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and a constitution of that absolute rule by which popular suffrage became a sham in our electoral system, and popular industries were made to bend beneath excessive taxation in the interests of the monopolists and millionaires.

It makes our task the more easy that a corrupt party has put forward as its representative a corrupt standard-bearer, and the question of indelicacy is thrown aside when official record—indeed, self-confession—proclaims that the candidate is worthy of the cause and the cause of the candidate. When we advocate the claims of General Hancock we can see shining through the brilliant record of the man the traditional glories of the Jeffersonian idea—a thorough determination to restore the principles of the immortal declaration of 1776, and so, in his case too, but without sarcasm or reservation, we deem the cause honored in the representative and the representative dignified by the cause.

We cannot rid the campaign of the personal issues, but still, the great question is the redemption of the country from radical misrule. What we would ask then is a remembrance that it is not merely in the interests of Hancock as against Garfield—it is for peace and prosperity against fraud and falsehood—the nation struggles.

Taken From the Street.

Many a boy is ruined by bad company, who might have been saved by attention and hearty sympathy—kind and hearty sympathy. A kind look, at the right moment, may shape an entire life. Nearly a century ago, a warm-hearted Irish minister stopped in a village street to watch a groupe of boys play marbles. One of them, dirty and ragged, amused him by his ready wit. The minister talked with the boy and invited him to his house. In spite of dirt and rags, he felt drawn to him by admiration of his brightness. The boy had not been to school, and the minister agreed to give him private lessons. Progress was so rapid that he was soon sent to a neighboring school, and held his own with the best scholars. Many years afterward, the boy, grown to manhood, and recognized as a brilliant lawyer and leader in parliament, found, one day, an old gentleman in his room. He recognized the friend of his boyhood, and, rushing to his arms, said:

"This room is yours; you gave me all these things; you made a man of me."

The minister listened with delight to his brilliant conversation, but his tears flowed freely in the evening, as he sat entranced by the eloquence of Curran, in the house of commons. He felt that boys were worth saving.

* * *

A Jewish Legend.

According to the Jewish and Mohammedan tradition, King Solomon, who was wise beyond all other men, knew the language of animals, and could talk with the beasts of the field and the birds of the air.

A rabbinical story is told of him, which is in this wise:

One day the king rode out of Jerusalem with a great retinue. An ant-hill lay directly in his path, and Solomon heard its little people talking.

"Here comes the great king," he heard one of them say. "His flatterers call him wise and just and merciful, but he is about to ride over us and crush us without heeding our sufferings."

And Solomon told the queen of Sheba, who rode with him, what the ant said.

And the queen made answer, "He is an innocent creature, oh, king! It is a better fate than he deserves, to be trodden under our feet."

But Solomon said, "It is the part of wisdom to learn of the lowest and the weakest."

And he commanded his train to turn aside and spare the ant-hill.

Then all the courtiers marveled greatly, and the queen of Sheba bowed her head and made obedience to Solomon.

"Now know I the secret of thy wisdom. Thou listeneth as patiently to the reproaches of the humble as to the flatteries of the great."—John G. Whittier.

* * *

An Unimpressible Woman.

A colored Adonis in Virginia City is in love with a buxom German woman, who keeps a saloon in the northern part of the town, and has been using every art and rule laid down in "Self-Helps to Courtship," to induce her to reciprocate his affection. But she is obdurate and refuses to receive his attentions, and he is therefore bowed down with woe. On Monday night he determined to resort to desperate means to arouse pity in the fair one's breast, and posting himself in a vacant lot adjoining her residence, awaited her appearance at the window. The Teutonic beauty soon appeared, and the colored Romeo raised his pistol and fired, and dropped heavily to the ground.

"Mein Gott! That fool has shot himself," screamed the object of his affection, and a crowd soon gathered at the spot.

They caught hold of the inanimate form and dragged it over the oyster-cans, bricks and other resusitating debris toward the house.

"Don't bring dot thing in here," screamed the hard-hearted one, whereupon the disgusted remains got up and fled, leaving an astonished crowd.

* * *

How to Get Along.

Pay as you go.

Never fool in business matters.

Do not kick any one in your path.

Learn to think and act for yourself.

Do not stop to tell stories in business hours.

Keep ahead rather than behind the times.

Use your own brains rather than those of others.

Do not meddle with business you know nothing of.

Have order, system, regularity and also promptness.

A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond.

No man can get rich by sitting around stores and saloons.

If you have a place of business be found there when wanted.

More miles can be made in one day by going steadily than by stopping.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1880

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

HENRY KINGMAN, a drunken brute living at Hartford, Ct., shot and killed his hard-working wife as she sat at a sewing-machine.

THE Dudley House and twenty-one other buildings at Salamanca, N. Y., have been destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at about $160,000....A New York telegram says that an underground railway for rapid transit will soon be begun in that city, the tunnel to run under Broadway and Madison avenue.

THE rivalries and bickerings between the two Exposition or World's Fair Committees of New York have been settled at last, and there is now a good prospect that the fair will be held in 1883....The obelisk has been successfully drawn out of the hold of the steamer Dessoug, at New York, and will soon be placed in position in Central Park.

GEORGE W. KNAPP, an elderly man, stood on the Goat Island bridge, at Niagara, shot himself in the head, and jumped into the angry flood. His body was swept over the falls and has not yet been recovered.

THE Manhattan market building, at New York, which covered an entire block, and had over 200 tenants, has been completely destroyed by fire. The loss to the occupants alone will be $1,000,000. The building was valued at $500,000.

DR. TANNER is not meeting with great success as a lecturer. His first lecture, delivered in Booth's Theater, New York, drew an audience of about 100....The coast of New Jersey has been swept by a northeast gale blowing at the rate of sixty miles an hour. It is pronounced the severest September gale that has visited that coast since 1854. The damage along the shore is great.

THE WEST.

A RACE to test the comparative speed and endurance of horses and men came off in Chicago last week. The contest grew out of a wager that a horse could cover thirty miles in less time than three men could go the same distance, each man going ten miles. The horse came in ahead, making the distance in 3 hours, 7 minutes and 38 seconds. The three men made the total distance in 3 hours, 25 minutes and 5 seconds.

GEN. GRANT visited the Wisconsin State Fair at Madison, as the special guest of the managers.

SIXTEEN miles from Fort Cummings, New Mexico, a party of Indians attacked a stage-coach and killed the driver and two passengers....A fire at St. Louis destroyed six ice-houses and a portion of the buildings of the Excelsior Manufacturing Company, involving a loss of about $140,000. Pat Lynch and Ed Saunders, two firemen, were killed, and Pat Conway and John Collins were fatally and three other firemen seriously injured, while trying to check the flames....It has been ascertained that E. B. Hall, whose term of office as Treasurer of Lucas county, Ohio, has just expired, is a defaulter to the amount of $47,000.

A SENSATIONAL tragedy was enacted at the railroad depot in Salt Lake City, the other day. Dr. B. C. Snedaker was sitting in a car, when R. T. Smith entered. Snedaker arose and fired, Smith falling with a bullet in his lungs. The doctor was promptly arrested, but before the officer had conveyed him to the door Smith sprung to his feet and fired twice at his assailant, both balls taking effect and causing instant death. Smith was removed to the hospital in a dying condition. A woman was at the bottom of the trouble.

TROOPS from Fort Cummings overtook the savages who recently captured a mail-coach in New Mexico and killed the passengers, and had a short fight with them. Three of the soldiers were killed, and several wounded. The savages then fled in the direction of Mexico.

AN express train on the Indianapolis and St. Louis railway was thrown from the track on a bridge thirty feet high, at St. Mary's Station, Ind., a few nights ago. The conductor was killed, and several passengers were injured. It is thought the disaster was caused by train-wreckers bent on robbery....Two citizens of Hannibal, Mo., named Daniel Camery and Samuel Shields, descended a mine shaft near that city too soon after the explosion of a blast, and were suffocated....The Presidential party arrived at San Francisco on the 9th of September, and were given an enthusiastic greeting, nearly the entire population turning out.

THE SOUTH.

COMMISSIONER BENTLEY, of the Pension Office, furnishes the following interesting statistics: On June 30 last there were 245,000 pensioners. There were paid as pensions falling due during the year $36,000,000, and $21,000,000 arrears of previous years. Commissioner Bentley thinks the sum to be paid in pensions will yet reach $50,000,000 annually. There were before the Commissioner, July 1, 280,000 unsettled claims for pensions, involving an average first payment of $1,100 in each case, or a total of $308,000,000. The whole number of persons interested in the pensions, either as recipients or as claimants, is $582,000. The average number of claims filed each day since July 1 has been 150.

A TERRIBLE tragedy is reported from Newberry county, S. C.: Mr. Henry Grier, an old citizen and great fisherman, went to Little river to indulge in his favorite sport, and, finding that the fish were slow in biting, he proceeded to examine the water. He made out the body of a man lying upon the river bottom. Getting help the body was taken out, and proved to be that of the old man's youngest son. While overcome at the sickening discovery, one of the men said, "Here's another," and a second body was taken out, and this, too, proved to be the other son of the grief-stricken father. It was evident that both young men had been murdered and then their bodies put in the water....A fire in the business quarter of Mobile, Ala., destroyed the buildings occupied by D. R. Dunlap, T. P. Miller & Co., Overill & Bestor, I. W. Porter & Co., J. B. Hazard & Co., A. G. More & Co. and F. Gomez. The loss is $360,000, and the insurance $230,000.

DISPATCHES from Louisville state that "two stages, which run between that town and the Mammoth Cave, were stopped by highwaymen, and all the passengers robbed. The stage to the cave was first attacked about four miles east of Cave City, and the one passenger on board was rifled. The other coach, coming the other way, was shortly afterward met by two men on horseback, heavily armed, who ordered the driver to stop. They then compelled all the passengers to get out and stand in line, and ordered them, at the pistol's point, to give up all their property. The travelers were unable to resist successfully, so they had to shell out. The robbers took possession of all their money, jewelry, and valuables, aggregating in value about $1,200. After the exploit they made the victims take a drink of whisky with them, and rode off."

A JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) dispatch says: "Twelve wrecks by the same cyclone that struck the Vera Cruz have been reported—two steamers and ten sailing vessels—among them the schooner Ada J. Simonton, from Pensacola for Boston, laden with lumber. The crew was saved. Twelve of the crew of a Norwegian bark got ashore near St. John's bar. The coast for 100 miles is strewn with goods of all descriptions from the wrecks."....A negro murderer, named Wash Taliferro, disappeared from a convict camp at Millican, Tex., in company of an armed mob, who took him to the woods and hung him.

A JOINT discussion in the Danville (Va.) district, between Cabell, the Democratic, and Stovall, the Readjuster candidate for Congress, assumed a personal phase, and finally culminated in blows, and both candidates left the stand with bloody faces and damaged optics.

YOUNG De Jarnette, who, some time last July, killed his sister Mollie, an inmate of a house of ill fame at Danville, Va., in order to wipe out the stain on his family escutcheon, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree.

WASHINGTON.

GEN. WALKER, the Superintendent of the Census, has issued an order forbidding any employe of the Census Bureau from giving out any information to the public. Dismissal is, of course, the implied penalty of a violation of the order.

WASHINGTON dispatches state that Gen. Walker's investigation of the manner of taking the census in South Carolina has convinced him that wholesale frauds have been perpetrated. The evidence is sufficiently conclusive to warrant prosecutions under the law.

THE internal revenue office has completed its analysis of the internal revenue for the last fiscal year, showing the sources whence it came. Illinois heads the list of States in respect of the amount of revenue paid to the Government, her total being in round numbers $23,000,000, $19,500,000 of which was from spirits. Ohio comes next with a total of $18,000,000, of which $13,000,000 was from spirits and $3,000,000 for tobacco products. New York paid $16,000,000, of which $3,000,000 was for spirits, $7,700,000 for tobacco, and $4,300,000 for fermented liquors. The latter amount is four times greater than that reported from any other State in the same article. Virginia paid $5,700,000, all but $400,000 being for tobacco. Kentucky paid $8,800,000, all but $2,000,000 being upon spirits. Indiana paid $6,000,000, $5,500,000 being for spirits.

A FOREST fire near Upton, Canada, has caused a terrible catastrophe. A fertile and attractive region, several miles in extent, has been converted into a desolate waste, four or five persons burned to death, and over fifteen hundred people rendered homeless. The flames spread with such rapidity that the farmers and their families escaped with nothing but the clothes they wore. More than 120 farms were swept over. The victims are represented as in a pitiable condition, and will be dependent largely upon charity during the coming winter.

CENSUS SUPERINTENDENT WALKER has sent three census agents to South Carolina to investigate the alleged frauds in the enumeration in that State.

GENERAL.

BURNED: Several buildings at Schaghticoke, N. Y., loss $150,000; a grain warehouse in Alameda county, Cal., loss $250,000; the organ factory of A. B. Chase, at Norwalk, Ohio, loss $70,000; the carriage factory of Anderson, Harris & Co., at Cincinnati, Ohio.... Hanged: Achille Thomas and Villiers Powers—both colored—at New Orleans, for the murder of a merchant at Longview, near that city; Stephen Richardson—also colored—at Wilmington, N. C., for the murder of his mother-in-law. All three confessed their crimes, admitted the justice of the punishment, and made speeches from the gallows admonishing their hearers to lead Christain lives.

HANLAN, the Canadian champion with the oars, has sailed for England to row Trickett, the Australian oarsman.

W. H. GREENWOOD, a celebrated American railroad engineer, has been murdered by unknown persons near the City of Mexico.

ADVICES from Mexico state that President Diaz has been elected to the Senate, and Benetiz, one of Gonzales' prominent opponents for election to the Presidency, has been chosen member of the House of Deputies. Leading opposition papers concede the election of Gonzales, although some of the opposition still hope the election will be thrown into the House of Deputies.

POLITICAL.

THE Republicans of South Carolina have held a convention at Columbia, and decided to place no State ticket in the field.

THE Greenbackers of Nebraska have placed the following State ticket in the field: For Governor, O. T. B. Williams; Lieutenant Governor, B. Lansing; Secretary of State, B. F. Allen; Treasurer, A. V. Herman; Attorney General, Noah A. Sheckler; Land Commissioner, David Neal; Superintendent of Education, Dr. Mansfield....After a stormy session the Georgia Republican Convention passed a resolution declaring it inexpedient to nominate candidates for Governor and other State officers.... The New Hampshire Republicans have placed in nomination the following candidates: Governor, Charles C. Bell; Railroad Commissioners, James E. French, Charles A. Smith and E. J. Tenny; Presidential Electors, Nathaniel White and E. H. Winchester.... Arkansas and Vermont held State elections, the former on the 6th and the latter on the 7th of September. The Democrats carried Arkansas by a majority estimated at this writing at from 40,000 to 50,000, while the Republicans swept Vermont by about 25,000 majority.

THE Massachusetts Prohibitionists' Convention at Worcester indorsed the nominations of Neal Dow for President and the Rev. H. A. Thompson for Vice President, adopted a resolution declaring in favor of female suffrage, and nominated the following candidates for State officers: For Governor, Chas. Olney, of New Bedford; Lieutenant Governor, Timothy K. Earle, of Worcester; Secretary of State, Sol. T. Root, of Dalton; Treasurer, Thos. J. Lathrop, of Taunton; Auditor, Jonathan Buck, of Harwick; Attorney General, Samuel M. Fairfield, of Malden.

FOREIGN.

IT is authoritatively denied in London that gold payments for notes have been suspended at any of the branches of the Imperial Bank of Germany....Dispatches from Afghanistan, dated Sept. 3, say that Gen. Roberts attacked and dispersed Ayoob Khan's force and captured twenty-seven guns. The Cabulees have retreated up the Organdab valley.... A party of disguised men entered a house in the county of Kerry, Ireland, from which a family had been evicted, and cut off the ears of two men who had been left in charge of the premises....A cable dispatch states that the harvest throughout France, Baden, Switzerland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Holland, South Russia, Servia, and Egypt will be fully up to the average; that in Upper Italy, Roumelia, Bavaria, Swabia, South Italy, Hungary, Poland, and Belgium will be from 5 to 25 per cent. above the average; but that in Great Britain and Ireland, Saxony, Northern and Rhenish Germany, and Central Russia it will be from 10 to 40 per cent. below the average.

IN regard to Gen. Roberts' recent victory over Ayoob Khan, a dispatch from Afghanistan says: Ayoob's camp was captured, and two lost guns of the Royal Horse Artillery, taken by Ayoob at the defeat of Gen. Burrows, were recovered, and several wheeled guns of various caliber captured. The attack upon their camp was evidently a surprise to the Afghans, who apparently did not dream of being assaulted and defeated so easily in their stronghold.... By the capsizing of a boat belonging to Prince Galitzin, off the coast of Finisterre, on the 3d inst., Viscount Fleury, Mrs. Hennessy, an American lady, and two English people were drowned.

THE steamer San Salvador, in the South American cattle trade, was lost in the late hurricane off Florida. Her crew, with the exception of the Captain and first mate, was colored.....Yellow fever is spreading through the interior of Cuba.

DURING the recent visit of the Czar to Livadia the track was guarded night and day by about 50,000 troops....Greece has called all adult male citizens under 30 to her army.... Several lives were lost at Serinagur, India, by a conflagration which destroyed 130 houses.

THE British Parliament was prorogued on the 7th of September, after an unusually long session....A Lisbon dispatch says that a steamer from Loanda brings the following news: The Portuguese steamer belonging to the recently-established Coanza Company had steamed up the Congo river to Noki, two hours' sail from Bibi, headquarters of Henry M. Stanley's expedition. Stanley told the Captain of the steamer that his object was not commerce, but to open a path for future traders.

A LONDON dispatch of the 9th inst. says that an explosion in the Seaham colliery, near Durham, England, imprisoned 230 men in the pit. Measures were promptly taken to rescue the unfortunates, but it was feared that at least three-fourths of them had perished.

A LONDON dispatch reports that the arrangement between Bismarck and Von Haymerle contemplates an alliance between Germany and Austria to raise Roumania to the rank of a kingdom, the independence of which the two empires will guarantee. This would interpose the new kingdom between Russia and the Balkans.... A cablegram from Constantinople announces the arrival there of the murderers of Dr. Parsons, the American missionary. Their speedy trial is promised....A terrible tragedy was lately enacted in the Opera House at Melbourne, Australia, during the performance of the "Huguenots." A new arrival, McGregor Greer, maddened by jealousy, shot his own wife and Soudry, a member of the French Exhibition Commission, and himself. The two former received severe head and face wounds, but are now recovering. Greer died.... A Paris cablegram states that the French Government has decided to enforce the decrees against unauthorized religious establishments without awaiting the result of the suits brought in the courts by the Jesuits to test the validity of the law.

DISPATCHES from London of the 10th place the loss of life by the Seaham colliery explosion in Durham at between 130 and 140. Very few bodies had been recovered up to that date. It is thought the explosion originated in the lower seam, and that gas was driven over the furnace. The explorers for a time had to suspend the work of bringing up the survivors in consequence of the stables being on fire. A woman dropped dead on hearing of the death of her brother in the pit.

SEVERAL European powers have invited Gladstone to take a holiday within their dominions. He would visit the United States but for the exciting political campaign....The Prince of Wales was induced to forego his contemplated visit to Australia in consequence of the great distance from his Queen-mother in case she should become ill.

LOSS OF THE VERA CRUZ.

The steamship Vera Cruz, of the Havana and Mexican line, which sailed from New York on the 25th of August, foundered in a hurricane off the coast of Florida on the morning of Sunday, the 31st. She had a crew of forty-one, and carried twenty-nine passengers. Of these seventy persons all but thirteen perished. Dispatches from San Augustine, Fla., give the following particulars of the catastrophe:

"The hurricane that occasioned the disaster precluded all chance of succor from other vessels. Saturday afternoon the steamer encountered a strong gale, which soon increased in fury. Then the steamer was running on her course, being in about 80 degrees west longitude and 40 minutes north latitude. The sea ran very high, and the City of Vera Cruz labored heavily but sturdily for some hours. Every effort was made to keep her before the wind, but it was found necessary at 1 o'clock on Sunday morning to throw out a drag to keep her head about. This secured the desired result for the time being, but the gale had now grown to a hurricane, and immense waves began breaking over the doomed steamer. Each succeeding wave tore away pieces of her upper works until her deck was finally swept clear, even the rigging being torn and shattered. The drag ceased to fulfill its functions, and as the seas rose over her bows and deluged her decks they soon reached the furnaces and extinguished the fires, the hatches having been torn from their fastenings by the billows. The fires being out, soon put a stop to the engines, and the City of Vera Cruz lay at the mercy of the waves and storm. Not even the donkey-pump could be worked to relieve the vessel of the water she was rapidly making in her hold. In this extremity Capt. Van Sice ordered men to throw overboard the deck-load, a task that had been begun about midnight. But the sea was too heavy to permit the crew carrying out their Captain's orders, for, while thus engaged, several of the men were carried off their feet by incoming seas, and many of them washed overboard.

"Capt. Van Sice and his officers acted courageously in the performance of their several duties, but were one by one washed overboard from their stations as the steamer labored in the trough of the sea. As near as can be ascertained the Captain perished fully an hour before the vessel finally succumbed, and, as nearly all the hands were lost, the few remaining alive on board saw that there was no hope, so they took to the life-preservers, the life-boats having already disappeared; in fact, every boat and life-raft was stove in when the top hamper went by the board. The sailors and the passengers then seized fragments of spars, state-room doors, or any other movable article that would float, and awaited the end all knew to be at hand. The surviving sailors state that the vessel was about thirty miles off shore at this time, the hurricane being one of terrible fury. By the time the shipwrecked men and women had equipped themselves with their impromptu buoys the final catastrophe occurred, it being then about half past 5 a. m. With one awful and tremendous lurch the steamer suddenly sank into the ocean, the swirl carrying down many of the living. Of the seventy souls on board before the storm began only thirteen have reached the land alive. These thirteen were all men—three of them passengers, eight deck hands, one engineer, and one oiler. They were all in the water, buffeted by the tempestuous sea, for from twenty-four to twenty-six hours, and there is no doubt that but for this ordeal many more would have been saved, for there can be but little doubt that several perished after the foundering of the vessel through exhaustion."

Among the passengers of the Vera Cruz was Maj. Gen. Alfred T. A. Torbert, who distinguished himself during the Rebellion as a cavalry commander. Gen. Torbert was attached to the Army of the West, and was a strong friend of Gen. Grant.

A Passenger's Thrilling Story.

Mr. A. K. Owen, one of the surviving passengers of the ill-fated steamer Vera Cruz, tells the following story of the disaster:

At 1 p. m. last Saturday, I heard Capt. Van Sice say to First Officer Harris: "I have just noticed that the barometer is falling rapidly. We are going to have a hurricane." Orders were given to cut up and throw overboard some cars for a Mexican railroad and some barrels of oils and acids, constituting the deck load. The cyclone struck us on the port bow a few minutes later. It was accompanied by a terrible rain, and lifted the ship almost on her beam ends. It was almost impossible to get about without support. All movable articles were thrown from port starboard. The wind was northeast, and the vessel was steering south by east during the evening. The windows of the main saloon were carried away; the waves broke over the ship, filling the saloon and state-rooms. At midnight the passengers were lying or sitting on the floor talking with or assisting each other. Many of them had been severely cut and bruised against the furniture. Good cheer prevailed, and all were quiet and composed. The servants were kind and attentive. Gen. Torbert had been washed out of stateroom No. 5 early in the evening, and his right cheek was badly bruised. At 1 a. m. Sunday the engine-room was still dry. A drag was put out, but it reversed, and was useless. It had not been gotten ready till then, and was too small to render service. At 3 a. m. the ship took a heavy sea, the water putting out the fires and stopping the engine. The donkey engine was started at the pumps, and was working when the steamer sank. The purser came below, calling for Gen. Torbert, and said that the Captain wanted the assistance of the passengers or the vessel would sink. I immediately got up and went to the deck, and the engine-room and assisted in bailing for one hour, Capt. Van Sice also passing buckets. The sea was constantly breaking over the vessel, coming between the decks in large quantities, the donkey engine going to no purpose. Finally we abandoned all hope of saving the vessel. There was no excitement on board, and each man assisted his neighbor in arranging life-preservers. Gen. Torbert was a perfect sunbeam, encouraging and assisting everybody. The storm was most terrific, such waves and wind as cannot be described. The ship was listed over on her beams by every wave. It was only possible to crawl from one point to another. The storm was so thick we couldn't see 100 yards; and it was impossible to face the wind and rain. At 4:12 a. m., the sea broke into the engine room, making a crash like a battery of artillery and dashing passengers and furniture into one mass. The passengers crowded Social Hall, at the top of the stairs, said their farewells, adjusted their life-preservers, and expressed words of sympathy. They took my advice, and remained on the ship till she went down. The Captain was seen just before 4:12 a. m., when the sea smashed the port side of the upper deck. Whether he left the ship or was washed overboard, I do not know. Harris, the first mate, and one or two seamen took the boat at the starboard bow, but were killed before the boat could be lowered. Miller, the first engineer, and his assistants stuck to the ship till she sank. O'Neil, the quartermaster, and a seaman whose name I do not know stood at the wheel till the vessel sank, about 6 a. m. The ship broke in half, filling the sea with wreckage of all descriptions. No idea can be formed of the appearance of that immense quantity of freight dashing together, with men, women, children and horses swimming or sinking through the surging mass, and with the waves fifty feet high, not in swells or ridges, but in peaks, breaking like surf toward each other. When we rose on one, it was not to go down on the other side, but to be whirled over the top and sent rolling or flying through the air to the opposite wave, and so backward and forward. This lasted two or three hours. Then the waves began to come in swelling ridges, and we rolled or fell down on the opposite side.

The wind was so terrific that planks were lifted by it, dropping among the living and dying people. All were bleeding from wounds, and half were dead and dying in fifteen minutes. The scene was appalling. I and Thomas Dumgoole, fourth assistant engineer, got on a piece of the dining-saloon, twenty-five by ten feet across. We were in the water twenty-two hours. We both went blind at night from the salt water in our eyes. When we struck the breakers at 4 a. m. Monday our craft went to pieces. We were whirled through the breakers to the beach, twelve miles north of Mosquito inlet. I think we had drifted fifty miles.

Gen. Torbert came ashore near New Britain, six miles above me. His body was discovered in the surf at 8 o'clock on Monday morning. He still had on his life-preserver. When Mr. Pitts caught him his heart was still beating and warm, fresh blood was running from a wound over his right eye. Everything was done to restore him, without avail. He was probably hurt among the breakers, being struck by a plank to which he was clinging. I brought the body to Halifax river and buried it in a palmetto grove.

A Fat Dog.

People who have no regard for truth are sometimes not very happy in their choice of lies to gain a point; and after they have told the wrong one, it is generally too late. The Kennebec Journal revives the old story of the boy who brought the dog-skin to the tanner to sell:

"Was he a fat dog?" asked the man of leather.

"Yes."

"Was he very fat?"

"Yes."

"How fat was he?"

"He was the fattest dog I ever see."

"Well, my boy, if he was so very fat, his hide is not worth any thing."

"Come to think of it," returned the boy, "I don't know as he was so very fat, after all!"

IT has been asserted that in St. Augustine, Florida, is the oldest dwelling in the United States, built there in 1565 by Philip Melendez, a Spaniard, but in Santa Fe, New Mexico, is an ancient pueblo dwelling still occupied by a number of native families, which a priest reported standing at the time of his visit in 1539.

THE hop crop in the State of New York and throughout the country this year will exceed that of last year 25 per cent., or about 150,000 bales.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$7 00	@10 50
HOGS	4 50	@ 7 15
COTTON	11¼	@ 11¾
FLOUR—Superfine	3 25	@ 4 00
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 01	@ 1 04
CORN—Ungraded	50	@ 53
OATS—Mixed Western	30	@ 42
RYE—Western	87	@ 88
PORK—Mess	16 00	@16 75
LARD	8¼	@ 8½
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 85	@ 5 15
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	4 50	@ 4 65
HOGS	4 00	@ 5 85
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50	@ 6 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex	4 25	@ 5 00
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	87	@ 88
No. 3 Spring	78	@ 80
CORN—No. 2	39	@ 40
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29
RYE—No. 2	77	@ 78
BARLEY—No. 2	75	@ 76
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
EGGS—Fresh	12	@ 12½
PORK—Mess	17 25	@17 50
LARD	7¾	@ 8
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	99	@ 1 02
No. 2	87	@ 88
CORN—No. 2	39	@ 40
OATS—No. 2	27	@ 28
RYE—No. 1	76	@ 77
BARLEY—No. 2	74	@ 75
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	88	@ 89
CORN—Mixed	35	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
RYE	77	@ 78
PORK—Mess	15 50	@16 00
LARD	7¼	@ 7
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	87	@ 92
CORN	44	@ 48
OATS	33	@ 38
RYE	84	@ 86
PORK—Mess	15 75	@16 00
LARD	7¾	@ 8
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 1 White	93	@ 94
No. 2 Red	91	@ 93½
CORN—No. 2	43	@ 44
OATS—No. 2	30	@ 31
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	4 75	@ 5 00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 02	@ 1 03
CORN—No. 1	45	@ 46
OATS—Mixed	33	@ 34
BARLEY (per cental)	1 00	@ 1 51
PORK—Mess	16 75	@17 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	89	@ 90
CORN	40	@ 41
OATS	28	@ 30
PORK—Clear	15 75	@16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	4 75	@ 5 00
Fair	4 25	@ 4 50
Common	3 50	@ 4 00
HOGS	4 90	@ 5 45
SHEEP	3 25	@ 4 60

IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING STATEMENTS.

Read, Mark and Inwardly Digest—Something for Everybody.

ASHBURNHAM, Mass., Jan. 14, 1880.

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I shall take two more; by that time I shall be well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made. Yours,

MRS. JULIA G. CUSHING.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan. 31, 1880.

I have used seven bottles of Hop Bitters, which have cured me of a severe chronic difficulty of the kidneys and have had a pleasant effect on my system.

RODNEY PEARSON.

WALDEND, Kansas, Dec. 8, 1879.

I write to inform you what great relief I got from taking your Hop Bitters. I was suffering from neuralgia and dyspepsia, and a few bottles have entirely cured me, and I am truly thankful for so good a medicine.

MRS. MATTIE COOPER.

CEDAR BAYOU, Texas, Oct. 28, 1879.
HOP BITTERS CO:

I have heretofore been bitterly opposed to any medicine not prescribed by a physician of my choice. My wife, fifty-six years old, had come by degrees to a slow sundown. Doctors failed to benefit her. I got a bottle of Hop Bitters for her, which soon relieved her in many ways. My kidneys were badly affected, and I took twenty or thereabouts doses, and found much relief. I sent to Galveston for more, and word came back none in the market, so great is the demand; but I got some elsewhere. It has restored both of us to good health, and we are duly grateful. Yours,

J. P. MAGET.

NEW BLOOMFIELD, Miss., Jan. 2, 1880.
HOP BITTERS CO:

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicines that they could use on or with me. I am old and poor but feel to bless you for such a relief from your medicine and torment of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

HENRY KNOCHE.

MILTON, Del., Feb. 10, 1880.

Being induced by a neighbor to try Hop Bitters, I am well pleased with it as a tonic medicine, it having so much improved my feelings, and benefited my system, which was very much out of tone, causing great feebleness.

MRS. JAMES BETTS.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 22, 1880.
HOP BITTERS MFG. CO:

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

J. J. BABCOCK,
Physician and Druggist.

KAHOKA, Mo., Feb. 9, 1880.

I purchased five bottles of your Hop Bitters of Bishop & Co. last fall, for my daughter, and am well pleased with the Bitters. They did her more good than all the medicine she had taken for six years.

WM. T. MCCLURE.

Double and Twisted.

A laughable circumstance once took place upon a trial in Lancashire, where the Rev. Mr. Wood was examined as a witness. Upon giving his name, Ottiwell Wood, the judge addressing the reverend person, said, "Pray, Mr. Wood, how do you spell your name?" The old gentleman replied:

"O double T,
I double U,
E double L,
Double U,
Double O, D."

Upon which the astonished lawyer laid down his pen, saying it was the most extraordinary name he had ever met in his life, and after two or three attempts, declared he was unable to record it. The court was convulsed with laughter.

Are You Not in Good Health?

If the Liver is the source of your trouble, you can find an absolute remedy in DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR, the only vegetable cathartic which acts directly on the Liver. Cures all Bilious diseases. For Book address Dr. SANFORD, 162 Broadway, New York.

could throw you, and offered him $10. That's why I wanted the wrestling to take place in the dark. After he had thrown you, I rushed forward and raised you up."

The Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich., Will send their Electro-Voltaic Belts to the afflicted upon thirty days' trial. See their advertisement in this paper, headed, "On Thirty Days' Trial."

AMUSE the children with the Puzzle Cards. See advertisement in another column of this paper.

VEGETINE will regulate the bowels to healthy action, by stimulating the secretions, cleansing and purifying the blood of poisonous humors, and, in a healthful and natural manner, expels all impurities without weakening the body.

READ the Puzzle Card advertisement in another column of this paper.

VEGETINE.—The great success of the VEGETINE as a cleanser and purifier of the blood is shown beyond a doubt by the great numbers who have taken it, and received immediate relief, with such remarkable cures.

PUZZLE CARDS, new and novel. See advertisement in another column.

LYON'S Heel Stiffener is the only invention that will make old boots as straight as new.

WILHOFT'S Fever and Ague Tonic. This old reliable remedy now sells at one dollar.

Children
CRY
FOR Pitcher's
Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. In both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Haward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.
Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book of a Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 500 pages, and over 100 illustrations. [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures chronic diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO., MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patients.

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 18, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. [illegible]

Mich., Jan. 25, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. [illegible]

Iowa, Oct. 10th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. [illegible]

West Virginia, Aug. 28, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has saved me, for which I am very thankful. [illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 2d, 1879.—Please forward one of your Pastilles. [illegible]

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 2, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, [illegible]

MEASURES AND MEN.

Eloquent Speech of George W. Julian at Indianapolis.

The Records and Candidates of the Two Leading Parties Discussed.

Hayes' Civil-Service Practice Compared with His Preaching.

Garfield's Connection with the Salary Grab, Credit Mobilier and De Golyer Affairs.

His Double Part in the Electoral Controversy of 1876-7.

Let us consider the issues of the pending canvass. What are they? The platforms of the two parties give us little help in answering this question. They are as nearly identical as those of four years ago. If there was any party issue then it related to the question of finance; but both parties declared in favor of specie payments, and they do now, and, while the Democrats demanded the repeal of the Resumption act, the Republicans voted down a resolution in favor of carrying it into execution. In the last Congress Republicans and Democrats united in the effort to repeal it, and they were jointly entitled to the honor of defeating that effort. The financial question has since been complicated by the silver agitation, but the silver bill received the overwhelming support of both parties, while the Republicans now totally ignore the question and its vital connection with the continuance of our paper currency at par. As to the constantly-boasted achievement of resumption, the simple truth is it has not come through legislation, but as the natural result of favoring conditions, just as the gratifying reduction of our national indebtedness has been made easy and almost inevitable by our marvelous resources. I am glad to see in the platforms a well-defined issue respecting our tariff policy; for sooner or later our stupid and vicious tariff laws must be thoroughly overhauled and reformed; but no intelligent man of either party feels that the contest of this year is to turn upon that question. Nor is any issue tendered on the subject of civil-service reform, Chinese immigration, or the reservation of the public domain to actual settlers; while in the matter of maintaining the purity of the ballot and the principles of political morality both parties are wanting. The complexion of our politics, in fact, is peculiar. We have outlived the era in which clearly defined questions of policy formed the pivot upon which the action of parties turned, and justified their existence as the means through which they sought the adoption of their cherished views by the Government. In a political dispensation so anomalous the army of independent voters should be largely reinforced; but, since one of these parties will certainly rule the country for the next four years, the question submitted to the popular judgment is a general one, involving simply the choice to be made between them, and the personal qualities of their standard-bearers. How should the sincere friends of administrative reform and the purification of our debased politics cast their ballots?

The answer to this question necessarily invites a comparison of these parties; but the task is not altogether free from difficulties. One of them has been in power for nearly twenty years, and has thus supplied us with very ample means of forming an opinion; while the other has been out of power nearly the whole of this period, and has necessarily left us with a comparatively meager data of judgment. Senator Hoar, in his opening speech at the Chicago Convention, told us that the parties which confronted each other in 1860 confront each other now, "unchanged in purpose, in temper, and in character." If this is true, the question is greatly simplified, and can be readily decided. But the assertion is an affront to common sense and a reckless defiance of facts, and if he believed it he is pitiably infatuated by party blindness. The attitude of these parties twenty years ago, at all events, has no necessary connection with the question of their fitness for civil administration to-day. The Democratic party was then divided on two rival candidates for the Presidency, and after the election of Lincoln a very formidable division of it appealed from the ballot to the bayonet as its last and desperate method of preserving the ascendency of slavery. The result was the overthrow of secession, the extirpation of slavery, the enfranchisement of the negro, and the reconstruction of the Government. The resistless force of events completely changed the political horizon; and now, in the new heavens and the new earth which we witness, we find the Democratic party, North and South, East and West, united as one man under the banner of one of the foremost heroes in the war for the Union. It is not the Democratic party of 1860, but the Democratic party of 1880, inevitably molded and instructed by great historical events; and we are to judge it in the light of to-day and the interest of the people of all sections in national unity and peace. We have no right to reproach it for an administrative record which it had no opportunity to make, nor condemn it on Mr. Hoar's ingenious theory of constructive guilt and imputed depravity. The same reasoning applies to the Republican party. Twenty years ago it disavowed any right or purpose to interfere with slavery in the States. It denounced John Brown's raid into Virginia as "the gravest of crimes." At the beginning of the war it was willing, for the sake of peace, to abide by the Dred Scott decision and the enforcement of the Fugitive Slave act. If I have not forgotten, it was ready to surrender the principle of Congressional prohibition of slavery in all our national Territories. It even favored an amendment to the constitution making slavery perpetual in the States of the South. For nearly two years after the war began it did its best to save the Union and save slavery with it, and after the war was over it offered to make a complete surrender of the freedmen to their old masters on the single condition that they should not be counted in the basis of representation. The fitness of the party to administer the Government now is not to be judged by these facts, nor is it by any means established by the grand achievements of the party in crushing the rebellion and abolishing slavery, in which it had the powerful and indispensable co-operation of the Democrats. We are now in the sunshine of peace, and must be mainly guided in our judgment by the facts which make up the civil administration of the Government since the close of the war and the settlement of the questions it involved. What claim has the Republican party to a longer lease of power, founded on the record it has made during the past dozen years? This is the question which now concerns us, and, in seeking an answer to it, let us remember that it is the future, and not the distant past, which chiefly interests us, and that the reformation of great political abuses has become the vital issue and pressing demand of the time.

In its National Convention of 1868 the Republican party adopted the following resolution as a part of its platform:

> The Government of the United States should be administered with the strictest economy; and the corruptions which have been so shamefully nursed and fostered by Andrew Johnson call loudly for reform.

These were timely words. The responsibility laid at the door of the President was exaggerated, but the hand of reform was urgently invoked by the situation. All the great industries of the country demanded a thorough reorganization. Our tariff legislation called for a thorough revision. Our finances invited a prompt and complete overhauling. Our civil service was becoming a shameless system of political prostitution. Roguery and plunder, born of the multiplied temptations which the war furnished, had stealthily crept into the management of public affairs, and claimed immunity from the right of search. What the country needed was not a stricter enforcement of party discipline, not military methods and the fostering of sectional bitterness and hate, but oblivion of the past, both North and South, and an earnest, intelligent and catholic endeavor to grapple with the problems of practical administration.

But what did the leaders of the party do? After the freedom and enfranchisement of the negro had been established by constitutional amendments in which all parties acquiesced, they seemed utterly incapable of realizing the fact. They were not willing, for a single moment, to relax their hold upon the party machinery. The animosities engendered by the war were to be nursed and coddled as the appointed means of party unity, while the party itself was regarded as a permanent establishment, like the Christian religion, divinely appointed and necessary to salvation. It was not to be maintained for the legitimate purpose of embodying certain doctrines and policies in legislation, but chiefly on the score of its general blessedness, and its immense usefulness in holding in check a purely satanic opposition. This view was openly avowed by some of its great champions, who declared, as they do to-day, that the party is no more responsible for the corruptions and defalcations of its leaders than the church for the individual sins of its priests and prelates. Of course, the continued existence of such an organization was indispensable, not only to the welfare, but the life of the republic, against which the "rebels" were still plotting, while it was strangely taken for granted that its disruption would immediately be followed by the translation of the honest men who belonged to it to another and better world, instead of leaving them among us to serve the country under some other banner and a better leadership. This concubinage of politics and theology was a very tempting contrivance, since it would place the administration of the Government in the hands of the Republicans forever. It is true that the corrupt and venal elements of society would inevitably gravitate into such a party through its prolonged hold on power, and finally form a perfect hierarchy of knaves and reprobates, while the good men in its ranks would be obliged to keep their places, instead of joining the other side or becoming the nucleus of a new party; but this would be less dreadful than the ruin of the country in the hands of an organization hopelessly disloyal and depraved.

The management of public affairs during Gen. Grant's first term was in accord with this new theory of politics. The mercenary and trading element of the party naturally came to the front, and became a regular purgatory of political uncleanness. I need not recite the story of its shameful performances. You know it by heart. The people will not soon forget the exploits of Tom Murphy in the New York Custom House, and the plundering of New York merchants by Leet and Stocking; the sanctioned rascalities of Casey in New Orleans; the executive assumption of the war-making power in the affair of San Domingo; the violation of the President's oath of office in the appointment to civil places of men in the military service; the official corruption of Orville Grant, Powell Clayton, Gen. Babcock, Boss Shepherd and kindred spirits, who shared the smiles of the President; the party expulsion of Charles Sumner from the Chairmanship of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the installation of Simon Cameron in his stead; the action of the famous "Senatorial group" in denouncing every proposition looking to the reform of administrative abuses, and branding as enemies of the Republican party the distinguished members of it who demanded such reform; and the open and systematic repudiation of all attempts to purify the civil service, while falsely pretending to espouse them. All this has become a part of the history of the Government, and forms the first half of that "moral interregnum" in our politics which is best indicated by the word "Grantism," and fairly entitles it to a place in our growing dictionary of Americanisms. Indeed, so flagrantly did the prophets of this new dispensation belie all their professions that nearly a year before the end of Gen. Grant's first term the chief founders and pre-eminent representatives of the party were obliged to desert it as the only means of preserving their honor and self-respect.

But the men who had so marvelously succeeded to the leadership of the party which signalized its early life by its championship of the rights of man had now only entered upon the threshold of their career. Nothing daunted by their record, and holding fast their theory that the existence of the party was absolutely necessary to save the country from rebel ascendency, these body-guards of the President intrenched themselves behind its early achievements and previous good character, while plotting his nomination and election for a second term. He was renominated as their standard-bearer by the National Convention of 1872, which incorporated into its platform the following resolution:

> "Any system of the civil service under which the subordinate positions of the Government are considered rewards for mere party zeal is fatally demoralizing, and we therefore favor a reform of the system by laws which shall abolish the evils of patronage, and make honesty, efficiency, and fidelity the essential qualifications for public positions."

On this platform Gen. Grant was nominated unanimously. Notwithstanding the revolting record he had made, he was chosen by 286 electoral votes, and a popular majority of nearly 750,000, carrying thirty-one of the thirty-seven States, while Horace Greeley, for refusing to follow his party and earnestly seeking the reform of great abuses which had found shelter under the strife of sections, was branded as a traitor, and hunted to his grave by political assassins. But what was the record of the party during Grant's second term? In comparison with it his first administration was next to immaculate. I hope you have not forgotten the Republican "Rogue's Gallery," which I painted four years ago. You will remember that the civil-service rules, which had been framed during his first term, now became a more glaring political mockery than ever before. You have not forgotten his disgusting prostitution of the civil service in connection with his brother-in-law Casey; the prompt appointment of Shepherd as one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, after its Government had been abolished in order to get rid of him; his sympathy with the safe-burglary criminals, and official aid to his brother Orville in making merchandise of post-traderships; the disgrace of the Department of Justice by Atty. Gen. Williams, which was followed by his appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; the crime of Secretary Belknap, and the unsavory performances of Secretary Delano; the President's hostility to Secretary Bristow and his subordinates for their efforts to hunt down whisky thieves, and his undisguised sympathy for Gen. Babcock and other criminals; his personal lobbying in both houses of Congress for the passage of the salary theft; his defense of the moiety system, by which the revenues of the country were farmed out to his favorites; his friendship for the horde of thieves and demagogues who had fastened themselves like leeches upon the people of the South, and were backed by the whole power of the administration; and the entire system of carpet-bag spoliation and bayonet rule under which that section was given over to lawlessness and crime. I need not pursue these recitals, and would gladly draw a veil over the sickening picture if the lessons of political wrong-doing could safely be slighted. In fact, the spectacle of our public affairs became so revolting under this dynasty of huckstering politics and personal government, of groveling purposes and ravenous greed, of bribery and nepotism and shamelessness, that before the middle of Grant's second term all the great Republican States of the North were lost to the party, while leading Republicans began to agitate the question of remanding the States of the South to Territorial rule on account of their disordered condition. In 1866 the Senate contained a Republican majority of 54 members, and the House of Representatives 104, but at the end of Gen. Grant's second term the majority in the Senate had dwindled from 54 to 17, while in the House the majority of 104 had been wiped out to give place to a Democratic majority of 77. These were the inevitable fruits of Grantism, for its career had been inaugurated in its overwhelming ascendency, and with the amplest possible opportunities to demonstrate its capacity to govern the country. While they completely vindicated the greatly-maligned Liberal Republicans of 1872, they summoned to the bar of history the party whose fatal blunder then brought disgrace upon the nation and a stain upon republican institutions throughout the world.

But let us still further continue our survey of the Republican party in the clear perspective of its history. Notwithstanding the perfectly deficient repudiation of its professions, the party faced the country in its National Convention of 1876 with the following declaration, embodying its confession of faith on the subject of reform:

> "Senators and Representatives who may be judges and accusers should not dictate appointments to office. The invariable rule for appointments should have reference to the honesty, fidelity and capacity of appointees, giving to the party in power those places where harmony and vigor of administration require its policy to be represented, but permitting all others to be filled by persons selected with sole reference to the efficiency of the public service, and the right of citizens to share in the honor of rendering faithful service to their country."

On this platform Gov. Hayes was nominated, and he emphasized it in his letter of acceptance, in his inaugural address, and in his famous civil-service order, which followed a few months later. By these documents he unequivocally pledged himself that Senators and Representatives should not dictate appointments, and that they were no longer to be made merely as rewards for partisan services, that no officer should be required or permitted to take part in the management of political organizations, caucuses, conventions, or election campaigns; that no assessments for political purposes on officers or subordinates should be allowed, and that this rule was applicable to every department of the civil service. Here were promises and pledges quite as sweeping as those which had been invariably trampled under foot for eight years. How were they carried out by the party under its new leader? Some of you may remember the prophecy I made four years ago, and my quotation from Senator Morton, that "in a Government of parties, like ours, the President must have his friends," and that "the administration of any President will be, in the main, what the party which elected him makes it." That this would prove true in the case of Mr. Hayes was rendered certain during the canvass. Morton, Conkling, Blaine, Cameron and Chandler assumed exactly the same leadership as if a politician of their school had been nominated. The administration of Gen. Grant which had brought the party to the verge of ruin, was indorsed by the National Convention which nominated his successor. The managers of the canvass studiously avoided all reference to civil-service reform and the letter of acceptance of their candidate, while their conduct constantly assumed that his administration, should he be elected, would be a continuation of that of Gen. Grant. The canvass, in fact, was merely a renewal of the struggle between the policy of hate and the policy of reconciliation which had so long divided the people, and under cover of which the Republican leaders were still determined to maintain their hold on power. Gov. Hayes himself serenely looked on, and, if he did not expressly sanction this mode of conducting the canvass, he certainly could not have been ignorant of the issue on which the battle was being waged and the methods employed to secure the victory. His election, in short, was the unquestionable triumph of the "machine politicians," and they had a perfect right to claim it as logically redounding to their glory and advantage.

It was not a matter of the least surprise, therefore, that the civil-service policy of the new President proved to be a perfect travesty of the party platform and his own declarations. Indeed, the very beginning of his administration was signalized by acts of the most shameless recreancy to his pledges. For several months following the election the result was in doubt. It depended on the votes of Florida and Louisiana, and these were to be counted by State officials of exceedingly bad repute. M. L. Stearns was Governor of Florida at the time, and, contrary to law, withheld from the Tilden electors the certificates to which the returns entitled them, and gave certificates to the Hayes electors, who had not received a majority of the votes of the State. Stearns was defeated for Governor at the same election in which Hayes was held to have carried the State, and was subsequently appointed one of the Hot Springs Commissioners, with a compensation of $10 per day. McLin was one of the State canvassers, without whose arbitrary acts in throwing out Democratic votes Florida would have been counted for Tilden. He was rewarded by the office of Justice of the Supreme Court of New Mexico at a salary of $3,000 per annum. Dr. Cowgill, another member of the Board of Canvassers, received an appointment in the Treasury Department, which, for some reason, he declined, while L. G. Dennis, Chairman of the Republican Committee of Alachua county; Richard H. Black and Thomas H. Vance, who acted as Inspector and Clerk at the election in that county; Joseph Barnes, Inspector of Elections in Leon county; James Bell, of Jefferson county, and J. W. Howell, a slippery employe in the office of the Clerk of Baker county, all received official recognition for diversified acts of rascality and fraud connected with the election. These were remarkable illustrations of the rule which made "honesty, fidelity and capacity," and not partisan service, the test of fitness for office. Nor were the visiting statesmen from the North, who gave their attention to the Florida count, overlooked. Gov. Noyes was appointed Minister to France, Gen. Lew Wallace was made Governor of New Mexico, and John A. Kasson Minister to Austria.

The facts as to Louisiana are still worse. Without the vote of this State Hayes could not be counted in, and the count devolved upon a Returning Board of precious political cherubs, of which J. Madison Wells was President. Their work was done with infernal fidelity to the Republican party, and gave further occasion for the display of civil-service reform. Until recently Mr. Wells held the office of Surveyor of the Port of New Orleans, at a salary of $2,500 per annum. One of his sons, whom Mr. Hayes recently nominated for the position held by his father, occupied the place of Special Deputy Surveyor at New Orleans, at a salary of $2,000 per annum. Another son holds the position of Inspector at New Orleans, while a son-in-law is a clerk in the Custom House. Thomas C. Anderson, another member of the Returning Board, is Special Deputy Collector at New Orleans, at a salary of $3,000 per annum, and his son, his father-in-law, and his brother-in-law all hold important places under the Government. Louis M. Kenner, a colored member of the Returning Board, is Deputy Naval Officer at New Orleans, on a salary of $2,500 per annum, while two of his brothers hold subordinate positions. Cassanave, the remaining member of the board, strange as it may seem, has never been rewarded with an office, though his brother holds the position of United States storekeeper at New Orleans. But, in justice to the administration, it should be said that after a heavy judgment had been rendered against him for counsel fees he had agreed to pay for his defense against an indictment for fraudulent conduct as a member of the Returning Board, and when, after an execution had been levied upon his property for the satisfaction of the judgment, he came to Washington and appealed to the President and his Cabinet for financial relief, very touchingly reminding them of the services he had rendered in counting the vote of his State, and their obligation to befriend him, the required amount was contributed, and Cassanave sent home with an unburdened mind. I need not say that the honors and emoluments heaped upon these men, through whose official action the administration mounted to power, would have been an insult to political decency and a vile caricature of civil-service reform if there had been even a well-founded suspicion as to their integrity. I must add that Gov. Packard was finally rewarded for his disgraceful career in Louisiana by the best consulate in Europe, and Mr. Stoughton made Minister to Russia, as a reward, undoubtedly, for his services in carrying the State for the President in defiance of "clerical errors;" while the ringleader of the gang of visiting statesmen who went to New Orleans "in the interest of a fair count" was made Secretary of the United States Treasury.

But the civil service of the new administration has supplied still further illustrations. Mr. Filley, a politician and intriguer of bad repute, was reappointed Postmaster at St. Louis. Gen. Babcock continued to bask in the sunshine of executive approval. The office of Consul General at Frankfort-on-the-Main was treated as a personal perquisite by bestowing it upon his private secretary. A Kentucky lawyer and partisan was made Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States for timely services rendered in the Cincinnati Convention, in securing the nomination of his chief, and afterward in settling the dispute in Louisiana. The offer of the English mission to the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress was a palpable disregard of civil-service reform as the President himself had defined it, and so was the offer of the German mission to the delegation from Illinois. He has allowed his First Assistant Postmaster General to send out blanks through the mails to members of Congress, to be filled by them with the names of such persons as they may see fit to recommend for office, just as if he had made no public pledge that this practice should be discontinued. I give him credit for the removal of Mr. Arthur from the New York Custom House, for the excellent reason that he had made it "a center of partisan political management," and that it was necessary "in order that the office may be honestly administered." These reasons were reinforced by Secretary Sherman, who said to the Collector that "gross abuses of administration have continued and increased during your incumbency;" that "persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no service;" that "the expenses of your office have increased, while its receipts have diminished;" and that "bribes, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in several branches of the Custom House, and you have in no case supported the effort to correct these abuses."

But notwithstanding these grave charges the removal of Mr. Arthur was only made after great and inexcusable delay, and was then accompanied by the offer to him of the Paris Consulate, being an evident maneuver of the President to keep on both sides of the civil-service question. I must also give the President due credit for removing Mr. Cornell from the office of Surveyor, on account of his defiance of the civil-service order. He did this in the face of Senator Conkling's denunciation of the administration, and his insolent remark that "reform is the last refuge of a scoundrel." But when Mr. Cornell, at Conkling's dictation, was nominated for Governor of New York, last year, and was known to be in alliance with the Tammany wing of the Democratic party, Mr. Sherman entered the canvass and earnestly advocated his election; so did Secretary Evarts, while the President himself caused a statement to be made in the newspapers that if he were in New York he would cordially give Mr. Cornell his support. During this canvass Mr. Sherman wrote to Appraiser Dutcher: "I cordially approve of your taking part in the Cornell and Hoskins campaign and will do all in my power to favor their election. I have no objection to the Government employes making contributions to the fund." So pitiful a game of fast and loose is more detestable than the absence of any pretense of principle or consistency, and forcibly illustrates the omnipotent foolishness of this administration. Every feature of the civil-service order of three years ago, every phase and similitude of the reform, is openly disregarded, and everywhere treated with contempt. So completely, in fact, has the civil service become the mere foot-ball of scheming party managers, and fashioned itself into the old warp and woof of Grantism, that in the late Chicago Convention the Committee on Resolutions, halting before the accusing party record, repeatedly voted down the proposition to allude in any way to the subject. When the convention afterward was compelled to deal with it on its introduction by a Massachusetts delegate, the resolution offered, according to George William Curtis, "was pared into the utmost possible harmlessness," and then practically blotted out by the nomination of a man for the second place on the ticket whose management of the New York Custom House had been the beau ideal of the spoils system, and an insult to the administration which afterward crouched at his feet in atonement for the only decided spasm of virtue which had exercised its conscience. If anything was wanting to round out and beautify these closing acts of the convention, it was the keen irony embodied in the hungry and wolfish inquiry of the patriot Flannegan, of Texas: "What are we here for if not for office and patronage?" and if any political fact could be made absolutely certain, it is that civil-service reform, after a life of great travail and sorrow, was at last in its grave; while you all know that Gen. Garfield himself, in his letter of acceptance, has preached its funeral and written its epitaph.

This, gentlemen, is the record of the Republican party since the close of the war and the settlement of the questions it involved. This is the sum total of its promised achievements in the work of "reform within the party;" and it shows how entirely safe Secretary Schurz is in predicting that the millennium will not follow the election of the Republican ticket. I have spread out before you its reiterated professions and promises, and the unfailing violation of them which has followed as the night the day; and I ask any fair-minded Republican to give me a single reason, or even a respectable pretext, for believing that the long-delayed work will be accomplished. It violated its pledges made in 1868. It proved equally false to those made in 1872. It has defiantly mocked its plighted promise in 1876, which still kept alive the hope of many Republicans, and now, as the climax of its unrebuked recreancy, it even musters the courage to disavow the stock professions which have so long masked its real character. If any honest man is still inclined to trust it, I point him to these danger signals all along its pathway, beckoning to beware. By its fruits it must be judged, and if so it will be nailed to the pillory by an overwhelming popular verdict. The Republican leaders understand this perfectly; and hence, at the very threshold of this canvass, we find them resorting to the old game which they played so skillfully in 1872 and 1876. They are asking us to excuse or condone their multiplied acts of misgovernment for the last twelve years, on the score of what the party did during the war; and they insist, with their old-time vehemence, upon the total depravity of the Democratic party and the exhaustless saving grace of their own. The key-note of the canvass was struck by the Republican candidate for Governor in his opening speech at Indianapolis. He gave us to understand that, should Gen. Hancock be elected, Utah, with her polygamy, would be admitted as a State, and thus give the party two Senators; that the Indian Territory would be carved into another State, with two more Senators; that Texas would be divided into five States, and thus give the party eight additional Senators; that the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States would be duplicated, and three-fourths of them selected from the South; that then the reconstruction acts and constitutional amendments would all be pronounced unconstitutional and void; and, finally, that we should be saddled with the rebel debt and rebel pensions, and be compelled to pay the value of the slaves unconstitutionally set free, who, of course, would be put back into slavery. This brilliant unfurling of the "bloody shirt" at the opening of the canvass by a gentleman of Mr. Porter's coolness and proverbial moderation, seems a little remarkable, and suggests the suspicion that his picture of Democratic diabolism may have been painted with a pencil bequeathed by the late Senator Morton. Mr. Porter says this is "no fancy sketch, no picture of the imagination, but a sober danger, which may, before we know it, become an appalling one." If he really believes this, his friends should provide him with a guardian or responsible committee to take charge of his person and estate, instead of trying to make him Governor. If he does not believe it, but is simply seeking a party advantage by a base appeal to popular ignorance, he is a demagogue of very considerable promise, and should be rebuked by the people according to his deserts. But this is the Republican argument, and Mr. Porter is only one of the many leaders who are giving it voice. When Secretary Sherman was in Maine he told his audience that "questions of money, labor, and property sank into insignificance in the presence of the great sectional issue." Senator Hoar, as we have seen, treats the Democratic party to-day, united under a famous Union General, as imbued with the same treasonable purpose and spirit which animated the revolt against the Government in 1861. Even Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, lends himself to the same madness. These ideas will shape and inspire the Republican canvass in every section of the Union. I quarrel with the Republican party to-day because its machinery is kept in working order by unholy appeals to passions and animosities that need nothing so much as forgetfulness. It lives upon the consuming fires of sectional hate, and makes crimination and recrimination respecting dead issues the fuel of our politics. If anything could drive the people of the South into the madness of treason it would be the policy of the Republican leaders in perpetually branding them with it, and arraigning them in the language and spirit of 1861. How can a quarrel ever come to an end if the parties to it, after a formal settlement, make it their constant business to taunt each other with their mutual accusations? If the ashes of the past are to be constantly stirred, and our parties rallied on the memories of the war to-day, who can predict the time when a real union of the sections will be possible? If the North and the South are to be dealt with as two hostile camps, who can expect emigration to flow into the States which else would invite it, and thus work out their redemption through an intelligent and homogeneous population?

The best and only possible way to inaugurate political reform is to drive the Republican party from power, and place the Government in new hands. By no other means can the era of sectional estrangement be closed, and the orderly and healthy administration of affairs be re-established. This conclusion is not at all affected by the conduct of the Democratic party years ago in its relation to slavery and the war, nor by its record since. It has not been charged with the administration of national affairs for many years, with the slight exception of its recent ascendency in Congress, during which the power of the lobby has been broken, the political and social atmosphere of Washington greatly improved, and the annual expenditures of the Government greatly reduced. But I do not rest the case upon these facts. The Democratic party is not innocent of very grave political mistakes and offenses. This has been especially true in particular States and districts during the dispensation of plunder and misgovernment which marked the two administrations of Gen. Grant. During the years of sectional bitterness unavoidably resulting from the war, and needlessly aggravated by demagogues, the Democratic party had a very trying experience, and often sadly failed in meeting the obligations of patriotism and statesmanship. I am not here to defend it where its conduct is not defensible. I do not disguise the fact that should it now regain power it will have on its hands a work of exceeding difficulty. I do not believe in the power of any party to work miracles, but it is the only instrument through which the Government can now be rescued from the depraved dynasty which now controls it, and which, as I have shown, has completely lost the power of self-recovery. We cannot afford to postpone the work of saving the country till a perfect party shall offer to undertake it; and it is always wiser to run the hazard of possible, or even probable evils, than voluntarily to accept those which are certain. Twenty years of power would demoralize a party of angels. It would convert them into a governing class, with interests wholly apart from those of the people, and the complete overhauling of their misdeeds would only be possible through a new party, stimulated in its work by a political victory, and having complete control of their records.

In following out the line of argument indicated in my opening statement let me now briefly refer to the personal character of the candidates. Of Gen. Hancock I need say but little. It is the singular good fortune of his country and of himself that he does not need to be defended. In private life he is above reproach. His honor is unsullied. There is no stain of bribery or official greed upon his garments. His loyalty to the Union has been tried by fire, and demonstrated by acts which will make his name as imperishable as the history of his country. His subordination of the military to civil power, while holding an important command, is a guarantee that, if elected, the arbitrary methods which have brought shame upon the Government under Republican rule will cease, and that statesmanship, and not mere brute force, will guide the conduct of public affairs; while there is no reason whatever for believing that he will imitate the conduct of Gen. Grant by surrounding himself with political bummers and knaves. He is a clean man, and, if political reform should not be thoroughly accomplished under his administration, it will at least be made possible by breaking up the organized machinery which now stands in its way, and assuaging the bitterness of sectional strife.

As regards the Republican candidate, I know him pretty well, having served with him in the House of Representatives eight years. Our personal, as well as political, relations were at all times friendly, and I have no disposition whatever to do him any injustice.

But the character of Gen. Garfield is involved in certain particular charges, to which I propose to refer. Among these I shall briefly refer to the Retroactive Salary act, the De Golyer pavement swindle, and the Credit Mobilier developments. In dealing with these it may be well to remember that every one of them has a Republican pedigree, and, therefore, when complaint is made about throwing "campaign mud," I refer the account for settlement to the Republican leaders and journalists who made these charges, years ago, and are now so ready to brand them as Democratic lies. They dumped this "mud" on the doorsteps of their candidate, and it is their business to cart it away if they can. Let me say, further, that I wish to deal only in facts. I shall indulge in no denunciation, no personal abuse, and no extravagant assertions as to Gen. Garfield's criminality. If his early accusers and present champions had shown more candor and less partisan bias in dealing with his conduct, I should have felt less disposition to arraign it. If, instead of attempting to prove his character stainless, they had been willing, like the Springfield Republican, to admit his weakness, and refer his conduct to the corrupt atmosphere of the period in which he yielded to temptation, and the charitable judgment of the public, there would have been less motive and less inclination to overhaul the facts and sift the evidence. The people have a right to know the truth respecting the character of a candidate for the highest office within their gift, and, if it cannot pass their scrutiny unscathed, no amount of whitewash should be allowed to conceal the fact.

The material facts connected with the Retroactive Salary bill may be briefly stated. On the last day of the Forty-second Congress this measure appropriated nearly $2,000,000 to pay the members of that Congress for salaries they had never earned. It was regarded by the people as a naked legislative theft. Gen. Garfield was Chairman of the committee of conference having charge of the appropriation bill containing the retroactive provision, and as such engineered its passage and voted for it. It is true that he had previously and repeatedly voted against the salary increase as a separate proposition, but this does not relieve him of the responsibility of finally voting for and urging its passage. It is also true that he attempted to justify his action on the plea that, if the appropriation failed, an extra session of Congress would be necessary. But this was a pretense, and not a justification. If the measure had failed through his opposition, there was time enough for another committee of conference, and a further effort to save the treasury. If, however, he clearly saw, or could have seen, that an extra session of Congress would be the result, it did not justify him in so flagrant a game of robbery. He should have washed his hands of it, and scouted the Jesuitical principle which invited him to pick the nation's pocket to avoid a greater evil. That Gen. Garfield was really in sympathy with the measure is shown by his false pretense that it was not a robbery or a theft at all, but justified by legislative precedents, and by the fact that he allowed the salary to stand to his credit, and, of course, meant to retain it. Six or seven weeks afterward, it is true, he covered it into the treasury, and thereby confessed his guilt. But this was in the midst of a popular indignation which had spread like fire throughout the Union, and a few days after a Republican Convention at Warren, in Trumbull county, in his Congressional district, had censured him for his action respecting the measure, and requested him to resign. He only dropped his swag when he found the police on his tracks. These are the simple facts bearing upon his connection with this transaction, and the people will decide whether they do not signally fail to relieve him of his conspicuous responsibility for this memorable legislative outrage.

The De Golyer pavement matter is connected with the scheme of street improvements in Washington, inaugurated by the Board of Public Works in 1872. In response to bids which were invited by the board, De Golyer & Co. applied for a large contract for laying their patent wooden pavement, which was rejected by the Board of Engineers. They thereupon determined to raise a large fund through which to influence the action of the board in their favor, and the evidence taken before two Congressional investigating committees shows that sundry influential parties in Washington were enlisted in the work, including R. C. Parsons, then Marshal of the Supreme Court, who was to receive a large fee for his services, contingent upon an appropriation by Congress. Out of this fee Mr. Parsons agreed to pay Gen. Garfield $5,000 for professional services before the board, in behalf of the application of De Golyer & Co. for a contract. If Gen. Garfield was at that time known to the people as a lawyer, it is quite certain that he had won no celebrity. The question to be decided involved the character and comparative value of many patents, both wooden and concrete, and could scarcely be considered a judicial one at all. There was no case in court, because no one had been sued. It was a matter for experts, and not for lawyers, and it was not to be tried by a judicial tribunal. Gen. Garfield never appeared before the board, and never filed any written argument. If he prepared one, as he declares he did, it strangely failed to find its way to the tribunal it was intended to influence. He once spoke to Gov. Shepherd on the subject, in behalf of his clients, and received $5,000 for serving them. I think he must have known that his opinion of wooden pavements was not worth this sum. That he received it for his factitious influence as a member of Congress and Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is as perfectly manifest as any fact can be, short of a mathematical demonstration. If, as he declares, he did not himself know it, nor suspect it, it is a psychological phenomenon which may well awaken doubt as to that mental soundness which is the special boast of his friends. Gen. Garfield and his champions are endeavoring to whiten his record by asserting that the money to pay for these street improvements did not come from the national treasury, but from the resources of the District, and had already been provided by the District Government, so that the only question involved was the kind of pavement which should be used. If this were true, his official position would have been less influential in his employment, and he would be at least partially exonerated. But the truth is that behind the District Government and its revenues stood Congress, the ultimate responsible authority for appropriations, and that large appropriations for the De Golyer pavement were afterward reported by Gen. Garfield's committee and passed. That his official position and influence constituted the motive of his employment is shown by the fact that after he had been secured his employers made their boast that they had now the influence of the man who held "the purse-strings of the United States," and was "the strongest man in Congress;" and on this ground it has since been judicially determined that the contract procured by such methods was against public policy and void. I commend these pregnant considerations to Gen. Garfield's over-zealous friends, whose efforts in wrestling with unmanageable facts promise to become an interesting campaign study.

Respecting Gen. Garfield's transactions with Oakes Ames, his champions make the same extravagant claim of complete vindication as to the charges I have noticed. They decline to make any excuses on the score of weakness or ignorance, but attempt to defend him absolutely. Oakes Ames testified before the Poland committee that he agreed to take ten shares of the Credit Mobilier stock, and that he (Ames) paid him a dividend of $329. The committee, a majority of which was composed of Republicans, unanimously found these facts to be true. Undoubtedly they believed him; as the public did with scarcely a dissenting voice. But, although several excellent reputations were destroyed or badly damaged by the evidence of Ames before the committee, yet now, under the impelling pressure of a Presidential election, and when he has been seven years in his grave, it is insisted that his statements respecting Gen. Garfield are wholly untrustworthy. The report of this committee is assailed by leading newspapers which strongly condemned its culpable moderation at the time of its publication in not including sundry other members of Congress (Gen. Garfield among them) in the same condemnation it pronounced upon Ames and Brooks. Among these was Harper's Weekly. Indeed, it was then very generally regarded by the public as a whitewashing report, and this view had strong confirmation in the fact that the members of the committee were Gen. Garfield's daily associates, and a majority of them his personal and political friends, who would spare him as far as possible. And yet Harper's Weekly now says: "The authors of the report may have thought it necessary to show their impartiality by sacrificing some of their own party friends. This suggestion is as stupid as it is dishonorable to the members of that committee, and shows to what desperate straits an uncommonly decent newspaper may be driven by the exigencies of a political campaign. This journal also says: "The whole case, as far as Mr. Garfield is concerned, is a question of veracity between him and Oakes Ames," and it has no hesitation in completely discrediting the evidence of the latter, although the friendly tone of his statements respecting Mr. Garfield clearly indicates the disposition to spare him; and although this committee had unanimously reached an opposite conclusion, after hearing all the evidence, weighing the character of the witnesses who came before them, the manner in which they testified, and all the circumstances of the case. The Nation falls into the same vein, although at first it spoke of the conduct of Gen. Garfield in this affair as having "at the time, a very unfortunate appearance," and said: "He undoubtedly bore himself badly when the uproar began, and he discovered what a very serious view the public took of Ames' dealings with Congressmen." It now strongly accentuates the bad memory of Mr. Ames, indulges in several charitable suppositions as to the conduct and motives of Gen. Garfield, and tenderly weighs the charges against him in the light of his good character, about which it should remember that opinions are very greatly divided. These organs likewise overlook certain circumstantial statements made by Mr. Ames before the committee, on the 29th of January, which, in fairness, should have been noticed in their review of the transaction. He then testified to the effect that Gen. Garfield, in interviews after the investigation had begun, did not pretend that any money had been loaned him, that he admitted that $2,400 were due him in stock and bonds; that he said this affair would be very injurious to him, and was a cruel thing; that he was in very great distress, and hardly knew what he did say; and that he said he wanted to say as little about the affair as he could, and get off as easily as possible. These statements related to recent conversations, and cannot be got rid of on the plea of the bad memory of Mr. Ames. They wear the appearance of truth; and if they were false, they deserved a point-blank contradiction by Mr. Garfield on his oath before the committee. But he never made that contradiction. He failed to confront Mr. Ames as a witness respecting these statements, and subject himself to the wholesome test of truth afforded by a cross-examination, but contented himself with an ex-parte printed statement of his defense several months later, and after Ames had died. These facts do not favor the theory of his conscious innocence. I will not brand him as guilty, but the very utmost that can be claimed in his behalf is that his wrong-doing is "not proven." He is entitled to the benefit of all reasonable doubts, and to a fair and impartial hearing on the appeal now taken to the public from the finding of the Poland committee; but the public will remember that this appeal is asked seven years after his conviction, and in the midst of a national canvass in which the fate of his party is involved in his vindication, and it will not fail to weigh the evidence accordingly. I freely give him credit for his ingenious and elaborate defense of himself in response to the popular clamor in the spring of 1873, but the truth is, after all, that he stands before the nation under the shadow of suspicion. That shadow cannot be removed by calling Judge Poland, Gen. Banks and Judge McCrary as witnesses to impeach their own record. It cannot be removed by the opinion of Senator Thurman that his guilt is not demonstrated by the evidence. It cannot be removed by the friendly letter of Judge Black, expressing the strong assurance of Gen. Garfield's ignorance of the criminal purposes of Oakes Ames, but leaving unnoticed the conflict between his sworn statement and that of Gen. Garfield respecting his agreement to take ten shares of stock. Nor can it be removed by the alleged action of his immediate constituents in condoning his errors. They have not condoned them. In 1872 his Congressional majority was 10,944; but in 1874 it was reduced to 2,526, while in his last election, when the memory of this transaction had considerably faded out of the public mind, his majority was still 4,504 less than his full strength.

But I must pass now, in conclusion, to other and still graver charges. Gen. Garfield was one of the "visiting statesmen" who repaired to New Orleans soon after the last Presidential election, in response to the invitation of President Grant, for the ostensible purpose of securing "a fair count" of the vote of Louisiana. The President ordered to that State an imposing military force to preserve the peace and see that the Returning Board of the State was unmolested in the performance of its duty; but, as he had already destroyed civil government there by the bayonet, the necessity for this military order was not apparent, unless some new outrage was contemplated. The situation was critical, and a feeling of uncertainty and alarm prevailed throughout the country. The Chairman of the Democratic National Committee invited several representative public men, of both political parties, to visit New Orleans in the interest of peace and the furtherance of the faithful performance of its duty by the Returning Board. Soon after their arrival in the city, they proposed to Senator Sherman, Gen. Garfield and their Republican associates, a joint conference and friendly co-operation with a view to a just and satisfactory settlement of the threatening controversy. But this proposition was summarily rejected, on the pretext that these representative Republicans had no legal authority to interfere with the vote of the State, or the action of the officers in canvassing it. To this it was replied that no such authority had been thought of, and that the proposed conference contemplated only such moral influence as it might be able to exert. In response to this, the Republicans disavowed any authority or wish to interfere with the Returning Board, even to that extent, and thereby left the public completely in the fog as to the meaning of their mission. There could, however, be but one explanation, since a single earnest word on their part in the interest of fair play would almost certainly have been heeded, while their personal presence and refusal to act showed that they sympathized with the determination of the board to count the State for the Republicans at all events, and were present for the purpose of abetting that object. The known character of the board confirms this view. It was the creature and instrument of a State Government founded in flagrant usurpation and fraud. Although the law creating it required that its members should belong to different parties, they were all Republicans, and two of them officers in the Custom House at New Orleans. The law also required the board to be composed of five members, but there were only four, and they utterly refused to fill the vacancy. The entire clerical force of the board was also composed of Republicans, who would, of course, be the ready instruments of their employers. Its members were the same men who sat upon it in 1874, and after the election of that year took the majority of votes from one side and gave it to the other, by "unjust, arbitrary and illegal acts," as reported by a Republican Congressional committee. The President of the board had branded himself as a perjurer in the testimony he had given respecting the State election of that year and had disgraced himself by his political rascality and disregard of law while holding his gubernatorial office in 1867. The other members of the board were his fit associates, and it had been characterized by Hon. Wm. A. Wheeler as "a disgrace to civilization," and was covered with universal suspicion. And yet Gen. Garfield and his Republican confederates, in rejecting the proposition for a joint conference, declared that they had no reason to doubt that a perfectly honest and just declaration of the results of the election in Louisiana would be made by this tribunal! That this declaration was a deliberate and conscious falsehood must be accepted as certain, unless we can defend these distinguished statesmen by attributing to them a density of ignorance respecting well-known events as disgraceful to them as lying. That Gen. Garfield had lent himself to the Returning Board in its conspiracy to cheat the people of the United States is still more fully confirmed by its action while canvassing the votes. It refused to fill the vacancy in its body and supply the wanting political element. It wrapped itself in the mantle of darkness by excluding from its sessions the public, the general press reporters, the Supervisors and Registrars of elections, and the candidates for office and their attorneys. In a number of instances the sealed returns from distant parishes were clandestinely opened, and the papers tampered with after they had been received by the board. All these facts were known to Gen. Garfield. It was simply impossible to attend its daily sessions and scrutinize its action without realizing that forgery, perjury and fraud were liberally woven into its work. On the alleged ground of intimidation it flagrantly violated the law from which it derived its authority, by throwing out the ballots of 7,000 to 9,000 legally qualified voters, in order to secure a Republican victory. This action was founded solely on this ground, there being no charge of repeating, ballot-stuffing, or fraudulent returns; and inasmuch as the board could take no action in any way on the subject of intimidation, without a strict compliance with the detailed and circumstantial provisions of the State election law, and as the fact is undenied and undeniable that no such compliance was made, the board had no jurisdiction whatever except to count the votes returned. Its action in counting them for Hayes and Wheeler was therefore an utter defiance of the laws of the State, a flagrant outrage upon justice and decency, and a hideous mockery of representative Government. This, gentlemen, is my indictment against Gen. Garfield. He was an accomplice in the crime of cheating the people of the United States by placing in the Presidential chair a man who was never elected, and by this act of treason against free institutions has forfeited his right to the suffrages of the American people.

But this is not all. After the Louisiana fraud had been consummated, and the apprehension of civil war led to the proposal of an Electoral Commission to settle the disputed question, Gen. Garfield opposed the measure for two remarkable reasons. He denied the necessity for any such tribunal, on the ground that the Vice President had the right to count the vote and declare the result. It is true that this right had been denied by nearly all the leading men of the country, of whatever party, and that, according to an unbroken line of precedents, beginning with the election of Washington, and reaching down to the year 1876, the counting of the electoral vote is rightfully done by Congress, or under its authority and direction. But Gen. Garfield knew that the Vice President was ready to assume the disputed authority, and that the President, with the army and navy, was ready to back him; while he saw that the plan of an Electoral Commission might, possibly, give the Presidency to Gov. Tilden. His party had the military behind it, and he knew how that power would be employed. But he also strenuously opposed the particular features of the electoral plan. His principal ground of opposition was that it would enable the commission to go behind the returns and sift the real facts in dispute. This was altogether natural, for it is now known through official documents that, as a "visiting statesman," he had taken a leading part in manipulating the returns in Louisiana, and smoothing the way for a favorable decision by its Returning Board. In a speech in the House of Representatives of the 25th of January, 1877, he declared that the Electoral bill "grasps all the power and holds States and electors as toys in its right hand. It assumes the right of Congress to go down into the colleges and inquire into all the acts and facts connected with their work. It assumes the right of Congress to go down into the States, to review the act of every officer, to open every ballot-box, and to pass judgment upon every ballot cast by 7,000,000 Americans." This was Gen. Garfield's opinion as a member of Congress as to the powers conferred upon the commission; but after the passage of the bill he became a member of this tribunal. He had assisted in doctoring the returns and preparing the case which was to settle the rights of "7,000,000 of Americans;" but he saw no impropriety in becoming himself a member of this great national Returning Board, and as such he took the following oath: "I, James A. Garfield, do solemnly swear that I will impartially examine and consider all questions submitted to the commission of which I am a member, and a true judgment give thereon, agreeable to the constitution and the laws, so help me God." But how did he discharge his duty under this oath? In every instance he voted to conceal and suppress the very facts which, on his own showing, he was solemnly bound to aid in uncovering. He knew all the facts to which I have referred relative to the frauds and violations of law in Louisiana. He knew that its Returning Board had openly and defiantly trampled under foot the law creating it, and from which it derived its authority to count the vote of the State; and that its action in counting it for Hayes and Wheeler was therefore utterly null and void. He knew that the commission, without violating the rights of the State, without going "down into the colleges" and inquiring "into all of the acts and facts connected with their work," but simply by ascertaining whether the election laws of Louisiana had been complied with, would be warranted in rejecting the action of the board and awarding the State to Tilden and Hendricks. But he had joined his party associates in the foregone conclusion that the Democratic party must be defeated at all hazards, and it was too late to call a halt in the devilish march of events through which 45,000,000 of people were to be deprived of the right to choose their chief functionaries. The stupendous national juggle must be performed, and he was ready to act his part. The voice of the republic had to be strangled, and he nerved himself for the work, and it can not be denied that in accomplishing it he achieved a perfect triumph over his conscience and his country. He was, however, only the faithful servant of his master. He was a part of the long-used machinery which had allowed nothing to stand in its way. The theft of the Presidency was simply the leaf and flower of that party idolatry which has been pronounced a more soul-destroying evil in our republic than the worship of idols in a heathen land. It was the inevitable fruitage of long years of organized political corruption and prosperous maladministration; and nothing could be more perfectly natural than the effort of his party to crown Gen. Garfield with the great office which he aided in snatching from its rightful claimant four years ago, while nothing could more absolutely demonstrate its unfitness to govern the country and the duty of the people to sentence it to death.

The Truth Precisely.

Garfield's nomination means the indorsement and approval in the most positive and offensive manner possible of the Presidential fraud of 1876-7. He had more to do with it than any other man, and was the only man who occupied toward it a double relation. After the election Garfield went to New Orleans by request of Gen. Grant, without authority of law, as a partisan. He went there to assist his party in making up a case, and after his return to Washington, of all his associates he was the only man who took his seat upon the Electoral Commission. By every sentiment of fair play he should have been excluded from the jury box. By his own sworn statement of what he did in New Orleans, Garfield had charge of the returns from West Feliciana parish. In one of the inner rooms of Packard's Custom House he did his work, examined the affidavits, and, when they were not sufficiently full, he prepared or had prepared additional interrogatories to bring them within the rules adopted by the Returning Board. The testimony, so received by Garfield, went back to the Returning Board, and the result was that West Feliciana with its Democratic majority was thrown out. In Washington, Garfield's vote was that Congress could not go behind the returns thus made. As agent for his party he helped to make returns by manipulating the evidence; and as juryman for the nation he held such evidence as conclusive and binding.—From a Speech by Thomas A. Hendricks, at Marion, Ind.

Mr. Tennyson once found himself surrounded by a throng of ladies who were more than usually gushing. He availed himself of an opportune pause to remark that he looked upon women as the flowers of the human race. "What a sweetly pretty idea! How poetical!" exclaimed a chorus of silvery voices. "Yes, ladies," continued the laureate, "and the reason I think so is because they never shut up except when they sleep." Poets are now at a discount in that circle of culture.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., SEPTEMB'R 16, 1880.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District—JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Joint Senator—DeKalb and Steuben counties,
JESSE H. C. CARPENTER.

Joint Representative—DeKalb, Noble and Elkhart counties,
SAMUEL S. SHUTT.

For Prosecutor—35th Judicial Circuit,
GEO. B. ADAMS.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM. F. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

DEMOCRATIC RALLIES.

Auburn, Satuday, October 2,
Afternoon and evening.

Garrett, Saturday, October 9,
In the evening.

Butler, Monday, October 11,
Afternoon and evening.

Speakers of national reputation will be present at each of these meetings.

'RAH for Maine.

"HOW'S MAINE?" is the popular salutation.

IF you want to get a republican mad, ask him about Maine.

IT begins to look like there is a solid north as well as a solid south.

OUR republican friends are mad about the treachery of Maine. Console yourselves, gentlemen, with the reflection that your loss is your country's gain.

THE Chicago Times' correspondent at Indianapolis, writes: "The democrats have caught their second wind, and are coming down the back stretch at a rattling pace."

GOV. HENDRICKS abundantly sustained his charges against Garfield, and gave the Indianapolis Journal a most thorough excoriation. It is Garfield, and not Hendricks, who is disgraced. The Journal has weakened, and Ben. Harrison was called out to rescue Garfield, but his answer did not answer, and Garfield is still disgraced.

THE Indiana state fair will commence September 27. The ceremonials will be imposing. The governors and other state officers of adjoining states will be invited to be present. The unusual success last season, and the extraordinary increase of business connected with the office, is a guarantee that it will be a grand success this year.

DO THE working people of our county know that republican office-holders and office seekers in this county have been assessed, and voluntarily have paid money to bring into the state pauper negroes to vote the republican ticket, and then become subjects of charity or criminals, and to get the work the laboring white people depend upon, whereby to support themselves and families?

THE state-house commissioners announce that the corner-stone of the new capitol will be laid at Indianapolis on the 28th. Commissioner Thomas A. Morris will deliver the introductory address; Rev. T. H. Lynch will make the opening prayer; Ex-Governor T. A. Hendricks will deliver the oration; Mrs. L. T. Bolton will read an original and appropriate poem; Governor J. D. Williams will officially lay the corner-stone; and Bishop J. C. Talbot will pronounce the benediction.

VICTORY!

THE OLD PINE TREE STATE IS AGAINST THE REPUBLICANS!

DEMOCRATS ARE WILD WITH ENTHUSIASM AND REPUBLICANS ARE SICK!

Great Rejoicing all Over the Union.

Last Tuesday the glad tidings were flashed over the wires that the state of Maine had gone democratic, and the subsequent reports have verified it. This victory is all the more glorious from the fact that it was not looked for by the democrats. The latest information gives Plaisted's majority for governor and the state ticket by about 2000. We have also undoubtedly elected three congressmen. Latest reports from counties show that the legislature stands as follows: Senate—republican, 18; fusion, 13. House—republican, 89; fusion, 62.

The democrats are on the road to victory. The light is dawning, and the republicans are weakening. The following from Blaine, concedes the election:

AUGUSTA, ME., Sept. 14. 1880.
Gen. J. A. Garfield, Mentor, O.:

"The net result of yesterday's election, as nearly as can be stated at this hour (3 p. m. Tuesday), is about as follows: The republicans have carried the first, second and third congressional districts, while the fusionists have carried the fourth and fifth. The republicans have carried both branches of the legislature by a strong majority, reaching perhaps two-thirds of each house. On the popular vote for governor, Davis and Plaisted have each over 72,000 votes, with the probabilities in favor of Plaisted coming out a few hundred, perhaps 1,000, ahead. The result is undoubtedly a surprise to us, and generally to the mass of the democratic party in Maine. Our canvass was never more accurately taken, and it showed on Wednesday last a total vote for Davis of a trifle over 76,000, with a probable majority of 6,000 at the minimum. The four days preceding the election, we lost over 3,000 votes, by means well known to the managers of the national democratic campaign, and which do not call for further specification from me. The total cost is variously estimated at from $70,000 to $100,000, and the money all came from beyond the state. Such scenes were never before witnessed in Maine." J. G. BLAINE.

The Indianapolis Sentinel, in speaking of the victory in Maine, says, "Republicanism is virtually dead in Maine. The country has cause for rejoicing. Democrats are enthused while republicans are everywhere despondent and demoralized. Never did the lightning flash more acceptable tidings from Maine. We can imagine that pine trees toss aloft their feathery branches in token of victory, and that the winds, as they touch leaf and spray of the mighty forests of Maine, play in charming tune and time Hancock and English melodies. Main is redeemed. It has heard of Garfield and Arthur, and has pronounced its verdict at the ballot-box. Maine has heard of Hancock and English, and sends greeting to all the sisterhood of states, proclaiming her preference for the democratic nominees. And now the indications are that Ohio will go democratic.

COL. FORNEY hits the nail squarely on the head in this brief paragraph: "The confidence of the democrats that Hancock will be elected president in November, prompts them to spontaneous action and organization, and largely takes the management out of the hands of the leaders and places it in the hands of the people. On the other hand, the dread of Garfield's defeat makes the republican ring-leaders angry and desperate, and daily oppresses them with the belief that this overthrow is the loss of the great power that has enriched and intoxicated them. In a word, the democrats are fired with enthusiasm and the republicans paralyzed with fear."

THE Boston Post says: "John Sherman is probably the most monumental and unblushing egotist of the present generation in this country. He so thoroughly fills the measure of his own vision that he does not recognize duty when he sees it, is not on speaking terms with consistency, and frequently, in his preoccupation and self-contemplation, mistakes truth for something very different. A partisan braggart is bad enough; a personal one is insufferable."

THE woe-begone, sick and sad republicans might have been seen on the street corners Monday evening discussing in sepulchral tones their plentiful lack of votes in Maine.

Enthusiasm in Pennsylvania.

The great enthusiasm that is prevailing, and the effective work that is being done throughout the entire state of Pennsylvania, is such as may well cause the republicans serious alarm. Speaker Randall was questioned in New York the other day, in relation to the progress of the canvass in Pennsylvania. Here is what he said: "I dislike to repeat what so many others have said that it has become almost trite, but it is nevertheless a fact that in Pennsylvania the campaign is emphatically the people's canvass, and the peopl are so far ahead of the political leaders that we find it almost impossible to supply the demands for speakers and documents. When Hancock was nominated I expected that the action of the convention would arouse great enthusiasm in our state, but I did not expect that it would continue so intense as it has, nor that the people would go to work so energetically as they have done. They have taken the business into their own hands and are doing the work of organization in spontaneously formed civilian and veteran clubs as efficiently as if each local organization was organized as part of a preconceived general plan with the guidance and support of central headquarters. In the city of Philadelphia all dissensions have absolutely ceased. The committee, ably presided over by Mr. Cassidy, has the unqualified support, respect and allegiance of the whole party in Philadelphia, and the preliminary work of the canvass has been performed with surprising thoroughness. As has already been explained in the New York papers, Pennsylvania's laws require all voters to be assessed for poll-tax before September 1. The assessment of this year in Philadelphia includes many thousands more of democratic voters than have ever before appeared upon any previous list, and the great preponderance of increase in the total number assessed is with us. The republicans will no longer be able to disfranchise democratic voters or poll their repeaters under names of the dead. I have great confidence that Hancock will carry the state, especially if the democrats win in Indiana in October."

Solid for Democracy.

EDITOR COURIER:—Having business in the direction of the state line on the new Butler & Detroit railroad, now being graded, on Monday last we sped off in that direction. Having a fine opportunity, we interviewed some of the foremen in regard to the choice of candidates at the next presidential election. We found, as is generally the case on other new roads, very nearly all of the hands were loud in their praise for Hancock and reform; one gang in particular, known as the famous Smith gang, working at Bear Creek, 75 in number, are every one of them for Hancock, the soldiers' friend. In passing over the country thereabouts, we learned that a great change will occur with the farmers, or at least the most intelligent ones; in fact, the better class of producers have awakened to their senses, and the time has come when they cannot well afford to raise wheat and other grains at prices which existed before the war, and pay an exorbitant price for labor and store goods. These facts, staring the producer and mechanic in the face, are an evidence of a change in the administration of the coming election. We visited the Lockwood levy, a county job contracted by a Garfield man and engineered by republican officers, but thank God nine out of eleven of the workmen who are employed there, will bleed and die for Hancock. Now if any of our friends choose to, they can put these facts in their pipes and smoke 'em.

PATSY.

THE Corunna Headlight, of Sept. 15, speaking of our worthy candidate for representative, pays him the following compliment: "D. D. Moody's speech last Monday evening at Corunna was a ten striker. Owing to the appointment of Col. Gray at Auburn on the same evening that Mr. Moody was advertised to be here, (Saturday,) the notice of postponement did not get very extensively circulated and consequently the attendance was not so large as it would have been had the original arrangements been carried out. It was the first time that we had ever heard him before a political audience, and we must confess, that upon this occasion, he did great credit to himself and left a favorable impression upon his audience. Mr. Moody is making a gallant fight, and taking his Corunna speech as an example, he no doubt will take honorable rank with any one who has visited this part of the state since the campaign opened; and he will render a good account of himself as a member of the next legislature. Hon. S. S. Shutt, candidate for joint-representative, was present, and at the conclusion of a few introductory remarks, hoped to meet his friends here before the election."

THE Fort Wayne Sentinel, of last Monday, contained an editorial on the Maine election, suggestive of the fox and the grapes, which does violence to its reputation as a prophet. It said that Maine was too far out in the suburbs to amount to much, and nobody cared a straw how it went. What the Sentinel wants to do now, is to take that all back and hurrah for Maine.

"The Smoky City."

PITTSBURGH, PA., Sept. 19, 1880.

DEAR COURIER:—A September Sabbath, unusually clear and mild, is being enjoyed by the pent-up population of this overgrown village. The great iron industries are taking a rest for a few hours, still sullenly smoking in their dingy atmosphere, but the city at large has the benefit. Yesterday the sun did not show himself until noon, the wind finally shifting the great bank of smoke that hung like a pall over the place all morning. In order to get a good view of the surroundings, I went to Duquesene Hights, (pronounced Dukane) on the south bank of the Monongahela this morning, and found the walk across the iron bridge, and the ride up the Inclined plane a grateful change. The Ohio, as she flows down her sinuous course, looks like a silver ribbon stretched through the valley for miles below, while the Allegheny, coming out from the mountains above, so smooth and gentle, gives forth no evidence of the terrific freshets she indulges in in rainy seasons.

Pittsburgh proper is circumscribed to very small compass, a triangular-shaped point, hemmed in by the two rivers and the bluffs in the rear. Allegheny city is much larger in territory, while the less broken country beyond is utilized for residences far out from the city. One would hardly think there were nearly three hundred thousand people in this region, Pittsburgh claiming more than half for herself. Birmingham, with her mass of foundries, is no inconsiderable city, though it is not often you can get a view of it through the impenetrable smoke that constantly envelopes her. The iron bridge at this place is a marvel of wonder. It is eight hundred feet from pier to pier, and not a single wire cable is used. Two great iron links reach out to the center and clasp each other, all made out of pieces of iron, none of them more than 20 feet long. There is a double road-way and a path for pedestrians on both sides. When they tested it, about four years ago, great truck wagons were used loaded with iron, and sent across both ways in a close line, and the swag at the center was only ½ of an inch! It is a handsome structure and is paying well, two cents being charged to cross it. Near it is where all the steam boats land, as they pass under it easily.

It is sad to perceive the decay that has come upon the shipping and traffic of this grand old river. A few dingy-looking steamers, all stern-wheelers, are tied up at the wharf, and that is all. Nothing like her palmy days, when a score of steamers, beautifully grand and handsomely furnished, could be seen stemming her stiffest current in the distance below the city. One boat now fills the place of a dozen.

POLITICS.

As you are aware this county gives a republican majority of from 12,000 to 15,000. It is cemented to the party of rings and jobs, because they have rings and jobs here. It is a badly governed city, and vice and crime are rampant. The central police office is surrounded by dens of iniquity and debauchery. Diamond alley is lined on both sides with concert saloons, low doggeries, and dens of prostitution, swarming with the scum of humanity, and in the center is the police headquarters. Last night the city swarmed with thousands upon her streets. Political clubs paraded, bands played, banners waived, and tramp, tramp went the stream of humanity. But there is an element of good here. Away up the street comes a torch-light procession. On they come, twenty abreast, covering the street; platoon after platoon, with their torches attached to battle axe handles, great white oil-cloth capes and leggins. It was a beautiful display, and as they filed past, their banner proclaimed the Hancock and English club of the 7th ward. It was the finest display I ever saw, though the republicans here may be similarly arrayed. Several other clubs of both parties marched by, and finally came the colored Hancock club, which was a great surprise to me. There were nearly two hundred of them, and which they said stood by Sumner, Chase, Greeley, Seward and Trumbull, the founders of the republican party; they repudiated Logan, Belknap, Colfax, Garfield and Arthur. That's what their banner said. Gen. Pearson spoke here last night to an immense crowd. It is claimed he will carry a large number of votes with him. If democrats in a locality so overwhelmingly republican can show such enthusiasm, what ought they do where they are in the ascendency? Every eye is turned to Indiana. Republicans even admit that if Indiana goes democratic, there is no chance for Garfield. Settle the thing at once by electing Landers.

TOM.

COSPER ALTENBURG, formely of Auburn, but now a member of the Little Rock, Arkansas bar, was elected at the state election a few days ago a member of the Arkansas state legislature. Mr. Altenburg is a republican, and it will doubtless puzzle some of our friends of that party who have received their instruction from such puppets as Baldwin, to understand how a republican in that section could come out of a heated campaign alive, much less with an office saddled on him.

—CHILDREN'S BEST FRIEND.—Rinehart's Worm Lozenges. Because they destroy and expel the Worm, nest as well as the worms. Ask your druggist for them.

Colerick vs. Taylor.

The result of the joint discussion held in Auburn yesterday by the gentlemen whose names head this item is very gratifying to the democrats, as we knew it would be. The republicans were very anxious to have their party friends present at the meeting, and democrats were equally anxious that fair-minded republicans should hear what Mr. Colerick had to say in support of democratic principles. Usually joint discussions are of no particular benefit to any party, but that of yesterday has undoubtedly added strength to the democratic party in this county. Mr. Taylor was mistaken in his man when he undertook to defend the corrupt republican party against the charges made and substantiated by Mr. Colerick. DeKalb county will give Colerick 400 majority at least.

Their Desperate Straits.

A few local scribblers, being driven to desperation for a defence of the record of their candidates for office, are resorting to the shallow trick of trying to divert attention from their shortcomings and the misdeeds of the republican party, as represented by its leaders, by raising discussions about collateral local affairs. None of those whose action is sought to be thus called in question are candidates for office at this time. Nevertheless we give space this week to another article from our correspondent "Justice" upon this subject in which he completely turns the tables upon these gentlemen. He might have exposed their unfairness and falsity of statement in other respects. We hope hereafter to devote our space to matters directly involved in the pending canvass. How much of the court expenses, by the way, are owing to the prosecution of the Garfield gang?

At Cost.

As I shall soon commence to manufacture work for next year, I desire before doing so, to close out my present stock, and will sell at cost for the next 30 days. I will have a large stock from which to select, and it will be money in your pocket to call on me. I mean business, and "don't you forget it."

ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS,
Auburn, Ind.

—The whooping-cough scare turns out to be nothing but bad colds, and the babies' mammas are happy.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing a sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short, the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial Affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external or internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny. 34 eow-1y.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Ross Smith, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

37-3t. PETER MOODY, Administrator.
September 8th, 1880.

J. A. BAXTER, ATT'Y. FOR ESTATE.

Final Settlement.

Notice is hereby given that John McCurdy, late guardian but now administrator, of the estate of David Swihart, deceased, has filed his final settlement report in my office, and the same will be heard at the next term of the DeKalb circuit court. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county—In the DeKalb circuit court, No. 781.

Gutlip Bickley, is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce, by Esther S. Bickley, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 2d juridical day of the next term of said court.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 14th day of September, 1880. JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
38-3w. W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Petition to Sell Real Estate.

STATE OF INDIANA, DeKalb county, ss:
[In the DeKalb circuit court]

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Oberlin, administrator of the estate of Cyrus Koontz, deceased, has filed a petition to sell the real estate of the decedent, the personal being insufficient to pay his debts; and that said petition will be heard at the next term of said court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested, that the county surveyor or his deputy will, at my request, proceed to re-locate the corner at the north end of Marian street, as shown in the original plat and survey of Auburn.

The surveyor will meet said interested persons at the house of Isaac Cool, on Saturday, at 10 o'clock a. m., October 2, 1880.

ISAAC COOL, Applicant.
J. J. VanAuken, Surveyor.
Per O. K. VanAuken, Deputy.
Auburn, Sept. 8, 1880. 37-3w.

CLEARING OUT SALE FOR AUGUST

The Stock must be largely reduced this month. Low prices will do it. Take advantage of this great sale and secure some bargains. Rich Silk Parasols will be closed out regardless of cost. SUN UMBRELLAS marked down to clear them out.

LAP ROBES.

Handsome Linen Lap Robes at $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2 each. Patent Mosquito Bed Canopies, Gauze Wire Screens for Windows, all sizes, at low prices. White, blue, green, buff and pin Mosquito Bar by the piece. Just what is wanted this hot weather.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LAWN SUITS.

Handsome styles, made up of printed Lawns and Organdies, with and without borders, closing out at greatly reduced prices; also a handsome line of CHILDREN'S DRESSES, made up of Ginghams, Lawns and Cambrics, marked down.

AT 10 CENTS.

We are closing out a large lot of fine yard-wide Printed Percales and Cambrics; former price 15 cents. At 8 cents we are closing out a lot of fine Printed Percales; former price 10 and 12½ cents. Japanese Parasols clearing out at a great sacrifice.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BUNTING SUITS,

Handsomely made and trimmed, marked down to close them out. Silks and stuff Suits, choice and elegant styles, will be sold regardless of original cost. Bargains can be secured the next few days in our suit department.

ROOT & COMPANY.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stock alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows.
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

The B. & O. Accident Last Week.

From Mr. L. J. Gengler, of Garrett, we learn of some inaccuracies in our notice last week of the accident on the B. & O. road. Mr. T. Swihart, the fireman, was not hurt, except a sprain of the ankle, and Mr. Fred Loos, the brakeman, did not have a leg broken, but sustained an injury about the head in jumping from the train. Andy Sanderson, the engineer, had been running on the road for six years and had never met with an accident save this, which terminated his life. The engine was ditched by striking a cow; the throttle-lever was run through Mr. Sanderson's left arm, the reverse-lever run through the left leg above the knee, and both legs were broken, and one was mashed to a jelly. In this terrible condition he lay in the engine for nine hours, and was extricated by digging a ditch. The intensity of this man's sufferings during those nine long hours, no one can even faintly realize, and the fortitude with which he bore the pain, and the resignation with which he accepted such a cruel and unforewarned fate, almost transcendent anything human, and marked him as a man of most uncommon courage. But all who knew him say that this big, stout man was as gentle as a child, and kind hearted as he was brave, and that no one ever called on him for aid to public enterprises or for charitable purposes, but what he gave, and always liberally. His death is lamented by all. He was a Canadian, and his wife had his remains taken to Toronto, Canada, for interment. He was about thirty-five years of age and had no children.

That Torch-light Procession.

Our republican brethren were considerably stirred up over the enthusiasm created by the speech of Leutenant-Governor I. P. Gray, on last Saturday night a week ago. The damaging effects of the speech were too apparent, and they set about to counteract it. Accordingly they announced, by flaming posters that the Hon. Charles Case, a former distinguished citizen of this section, and ex-member of congress, would address the people at Auburn, in the interest of republicanism, on last Thursday evening, and that there would be a tremendous torch-light procession composed of citizens from Garrett, Butler, Waterloo and other surrounding towns. About supper time might have been seen here and there a stray republican with his lamp coming down in town to participate in the festivities. Night came; came also the distinguished orator, but came not the republican lightning-bugs. To be brief, the torch-light procession was immense in diminutiveness. The foolish virgins could have beaten this torch-light procession. After waiting until time for the speaking to commence, some of the zealous ones lit ten lamps, by the aid of which they went in search for the torch-light procession, and found it in front of Swineford's hotel. It consisted of twenty-five men from Garrett, and that is all. In disgust they blew out their lights and retired to Ensley's hall where the speaker waved, to a crowd somewhat larger than the average prayer-meeting attendance, that much-treasured old red shirt.

Still Itching to be Kicked.

In view of the base uses to which it had become prostituted, and of the falsehoods and blackguardism of the disreputable sheet published in this place as the organ of the less respectable portion of the republican party, we two weeks ago assigned it its proper place as being outside the pale of respectable journalism. This was accompained with the parting salute of Uncle Toby to the fly—"Go, poor devil, there is room enough in the world for thee and me too," thereby indicating our purpose to give the contemptible puppies a wide berth. Notwithstanding this they now falsely claim that one of them has a personal grievance to complain of, at our hands, by reason of being personally abused in the columns of the Courier, and still continue not only barking at our heels themselves but "seeking on" their kindred curs, evidently expecting that the Courier will yet turn around and favor them with a kicking. No use, however. Their drivel is impotent; their fles harmless. Have no inclination, from the seclusion of our sick-room, even to spit on them.

A Voice from a Commissioner.

Editor Courier:—As one of the county commissioners, in answer to the articles in the Republican charging the board with hiring livery teams, and "running about the county ostensibly on county affairs, but really for political purposes," please let me give one sample, and a fair one it is, of the trip. Last week, when the board was in session, in one afternoon we took a team and went west of Auburn and inspected three jobs, then went and accepted a bridge on the Morning Star road, and sold out 290 feet of grade, went to Wash Frank's and refused to accept as done his job of grading, then went to Crooks' and laid out the driving of 33 piles and let the contract, and from there to the Jerry Plum bridge, accepted it, and laid out and let the work of about 300 feet of grading. We got back to Auburn by six o'clock and wrote up the contracts with the bonds of the workmen.

E. Kelham.

—First frost Tuesday morning.

—Geo. Stahl has roofed his residence.

—Frank Copper is having a tussle with the ague this week.

—Dr. Ford, L. Bowers and J. Abright took a sporting tour yesterday.

—The M. E. floral fair will be held in Kiblinger's hall to-day and to-morrow.

—Lute Wright and Leb. Anderson will send their trotters to Peru this week.

—Remember the M. E. church floral fair to be held in Kiblinger's hall Sept. 16 and 17.

—"Infallible" is the verdict of the afflicted when referring to the merits of "Sellers' Liver Pills."

—$200 worth of choice trimming, fringes for cloaks, dolmans and dresses, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—W. J. Austin went to Wabash last Saturday and returned Monday, accompanied by his mother.

—Mace Long is getting out a book on the social evil. Mighty big subject to be encompassed in one book.

A new line of velvets of all styles, trimming silks in all colors, laces and lace ties, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—D. D. Moody will speak at Sedan, the 18th inst. Give him a good crowd—he's a rattling good talker.

—A large and new line of millinery goods, including the latest styles in ladies' hats, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Superintendent McIntosh will hold a special examination of teachers at the high-school building in Auburn, next Saturday, Sept. 18.

—Wanted.—To give some good man the use of part of my spacious tin-shop for a grocery store free of rent. For particulars call on B. Goodman.

—Thomas Mason and Miss Diana A. Hathaway, both of Keyser township, were married last Thursday by the Rev. W. L. Meese at his residence, in Auburn.

—Married, on Sunday last, by the Rev. W. L. Meese, at the residence of Benj. Moffett, Samuel Watson, of Jackson township, and Miss Clara Slusser, of Huntington county.

—The floral fair, to be held in Kiblingers' hall, under the management of the ladies of the M. E. church will be held Thursday and Friday, Sept. 16 and 17. Admission 10 cents.

—Parties who have torches belonging to the Auburn Hancock and English club will please return them to Mr. Albert Umber at once, so that they may be ready for use at any time.

—Walter Baker, son of O. Baker, at Auburn Junction, accidentially fell into Mr. Francis Pickers' cistern last Monday, and but for the timely aid of Miss Hattie Tryon would have drowned.

—Picker & Bumpus, brick contractors, of this place, have abandoned their job at Garrett, owing to a misunderstanding between them and the B. & O. contractors.

—The Congregational brethren will have a meeting at Carmer's school-house, one and a half miles east of Auburn, commencing Saturday, September 18.

—The newspaper correspondents and reporters throughout the county will meet at Garrett one week from next Saturday, at 1 o'clock. Object: to cultivate acquaintances and advance their interests generally.

—List of unclaimed letters in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., September 13:

David Boughma,	Mrs. Geo. Reitzel,
C. Hootman,	Mrs. Mattie Wilson,
J. L. Leivis.	Rufus Woodridge.

Jos. Rainier, Postmaster.

—The Red-Ribbon club of Sedan will hold their third anniversary on Saturday, Sept. 25, in the grove near that place. Good speakers will be in attendance. All are are invited.

N. McIntyre, Pres.

—The editor of the Courier has been on the sick list this week, and consequently unable to give much personal attention to the paper. He has concluded to live, and will be on duty again soon.

—Don't forget the grand inter-state rally at Hicksville to-morrow. The announcement that Thomas A. Hendricks and Allen G. Thurman are to speak there, is a guarantee that this will be the great democratic love-feast of the campaign in this section. Special trains leave Auburn Junction at 11:15 a. m., and return at 10:45 p. m. Round-trip ticket only fifty cents.

—The ladies of the M. E. church will hold a floral fair and bird concert in Kiblinger's hall, commencing Sept. 16, and closing on the evening of the 17th. Flowers, plants, fountains, aquariums, etc., will be exhibited. A great variety of fancy articles will be sold cheap. Refreshments served each evening. A cordial invitation to everybody. Admission only ten cents.

By order of Committee.

—A meeting of representative Disciples of DeKalb county authorized Mr. O. Q. Oviatt to obtain, as far as possible, the address and number of Disciples in the county, preliminary to county work. He therefore requests all Disciples in the county, not connected with one of the five organizations in the county to send him on postal card their names and address at once. He desires the address of every one who is or has been a Disciple. Address O. Q. Oviatt, secretary, Newville, Ind.

Money to Loan.

In sums and on terms to suit all. Call on the undersigned, at the Swineford house on Wednesdays. Low rates of interest.

38-3m. C. N. HASKALL.

Cheap Excursion to Cincinnati, Sept. 28.

On Tuesday, Sept. 28th, the Fort Wayne and Jackson railroad will run a special excursion from Auburn to the Cincinnati exposition. This excursion is under the auspices of the Catholic church of Auburn. Round-trip tickets only $1.00, and good for seven days.

"The People Insulted."

Two weeks ago we charged the Republican with publishing in one issue at least fifteen lies, and demanded the dirty sheet to sustain its charges if it dare. In the reply last week, all the Republican had to say was that, "what it had said was true," and that, "the Courier may lie as much as it wants to." The Republican takes the lie, swallows it, and does not even try to sustain its lying charges against people better than its editors.

Too Good.

A few days ago a democrat was talking with a republican, a prominent dry-goods merchant of this place, on political affairs. The merchant claimed that should Hancock be elected, the southern brigadiers would get all or the most of the good offices. The democrat referred his friend to the offices now held by prominent confederates, under republican rule, stating that the ex-postmaster-general had been one, Guerilla Mosby, with a foreign appointment, one, Gen. J. E. Johnston, minister to Turkey, on a gold salary of $7,500—

"Hold," said the merchant, "I always told my folks the democrats were opposed to ministers and preaching, and you've acknowledged it."

Tableau 1.

The Why of it.

It will be quite apparent to the readers of the Courier, who are so familiar with its appearance, that it looks this week like a stranger, or perhaps only like some friend who has had his hair cut or his mustache shaved off, and you don't know just what cause to attribute the change to. No material change has taken place in the Courier, however, it being the same forty-eight column, eight-page newspaper, exactly the same size of form and the same in all respects; but for the sake of variety, which is the spice of life, and as a matter of taste, we have removed the border. Only this, and nothing more. The Courier will endeavor in the future, as it has in the past, to be the best paper published in DeKalb county, enjoying, as it does, a larger subscription list than all of its cotemporaries.

Married.

In Clinton, Ill., Tuesday, September 7, Mr. Joseph Rainier, of Auburn, to Miss Amanda Cundiff.

In Reading, Michigan, Friday, September 10, Mr. Tom Sprott and Miss Abbie Potter, both of Auburn.

In Auburn, Tuesday evening, September 14, by Rev. H. Johnson, at the residence of the bride's father, Dr. C. S. Sears and Miss Nettie Shaffer.

The ceremonies at the residence of Mr. Shaffer were witnessed by quite a number of friends of the contracting parties, and the evening was delightfully spent. The Courier acknowledges the receipt of a bountiful supply of elegant cake.

To these Auburnites who, with light hearts, have launched out on the uncertain sea of matrimony, the Courier, in common with a host of friends, sincerely hopes that they may find pleasant sailing and few squalls, and that in their union of hearts they may realize all the joys and love to which they have looked forwarded.

Hon. Andrew Ellison.

This venerable citizen of Lagrange, and distinguished defender of democratic principles, spoke in Auburn last Monday evening to a good crowd of our citizens. After being introduced by Major Sprott, the speaker arose and prefaced his remarks by saying that perhaps the citizens of Auburn had been addressed by speakers far abler than he, but one thing he was certain of, and that was they had not been, nor would they be, addressed during this campaign by any one who was more deeply in earnest than he was. When the speech was concluded there was not a man in the house who doubted the speaker's enthusiastic devotion to his party. After talking awhile to the young democrats especially, the speaker went back to the beginning of the party and reviewed its history in a plain, simple way, showing that, with some interruption the democratic party has had control of the destinies of this country for sixty years. His speech did not abound in an array of figures which make no impression upon the mind; it was a presentation of facts clothed in an every-day suit of words, so simple as to be adapted to the comprehension of every one. When the speaker made an assertion he proved it to the entire satisfaction of all, and we have seldom seen an audience more interested in an address than was this one. Indeed, so entirely absorbed were his auditors that at times a pin might have been heard to drop. The speaker took up some of the most prominent features of republican misrule, and so thoroughly ventilated them, that it could not have failed to rivet conviction on any one not unalterably wedded to party. To say that the speech was complete and exhaustive, and enthusiastically received, is but to state a simple truth in a faint and homely way. Give us more such speeches.

The County Government.

Editor Courier:—The Press and Republican of last week have substantially the same facts and figures in answer to my article in the Courier of the 26th of August, and your little bombshell about the county affairs of Steuben county. I will endeavor in as short a space as possible to meet their main points, which I find covering five or six columns in those papers. But before I do I want to show that the first statement upon this subject by the Press was false—"that the last board of republican commissioners left the county running on a levy of 35 cents on the $100;" that by its next issue it proved itself a falsifier, each time saying that it "spoke by the record." It has not acknowledged its falsehood, and when it does it may be entitled to a very little credit thereafter. If it falsifies in one thing, will it not in all things?

One sheet says that lightning struck Steuben county once while "demo-greenbackers" were in power, and that an "official failure" occurred then, under which its present debt was contracted. Now, why could it not have also stated that that "official failure" was not a democratic one, and never cost that county one cent, nor the loss of one cent. Why does it also state that "for fourteen years Steuben county has paid her orders on presentation." Why is it that it states that Steuben county had to borrow $15,000 with which to build her jail, and owes that $15,000 to-day? Why do they not state that the "disbursements" in Steuben county 1880 were $23,912 instead of $18,844, and then add to DeKalb the same year $1,000 more than it was? (See Waterloo Press for proof.) Why do you, Republican editors, state in one place the average disbursements in Steuben county to be $17,140 and in another $21,101, whereas, the correct average for the last eleven years is 21,561? Why do you not also state the votes of 1876 in the two counties; the per capita tax in Steuben county is yearly $6.04, and in DeKalb only $5.80. Take another statement, the figures of which are not disputed:

Assessables, in DeKalb, 1880,		6,700,000
"	Steuben, 1880,	3,700,000
Total		$10,400,000

DeKalb 64.5 per cent., Steuben 35.5 per cent. of the whole.

Disbursm'ts., DeKalb, 11 years		$19,600
"	Steuben, 11 years	325,800
Total		$545,400

DeKalb is less than 60 per cent. of these disbursements, when it should have been 64½, and Steuben used up over 40 per cent. of the whole, when she should have spent only 33½.

Now, who pays the greater tax per capita, as well as per assessment? And yet they want to swear by the economy of Steuben, when our county levy for county and jail bond purposes is 70 cents; the levy for county purposes alone in Steuben is 75, and as you state in the Republican "has made a levy with a view to pay her $15,000 bonds." And as they indirectly admit as to the one item of bridges, is not so expressive in Steuben as in DeKalb; and also, as they show in another place, which supports the statement made in the Courier in regard to bridges, etc. DeKalb paid last year for bridges and roads $16,100, and Steuben $2,374. Just about the actual difference in the counties as to their wants in such matters, wherein Steuben county has one truss bridge and DeKalb at least fifty.

Their record also shows a difference of almost seven to one in criminal expense, over two to one court expense, over which the board had no control. And further, their record of miscellaneous expense is against them, for by a computation you will find that Steuben has 41 per cent. on that item, when, according to the amount of taxables as shown above, it ought to be only 33½, and it is under that item where the nigger is secreted in the wood-pile, as to livery teams, etc., as they claim. Yet under that head, the Steuben economists steal over $200 a year more than our board, and that, too, over their rightful proportion, and if their ideas of economy are correct, at least a thousand more than they ought to. Then take their item of ditches, where we have spent nearly ten times as much as Steuben, in making our lands more valuable, thereby increasing our total assessables, and which every one knows who has been in each county, that our county requires more of that work than Steuben on account of soil and general features of the surface. This item of expense is prompted by enterprise, and in the interest of the poor man, yet those papers, the Press and Republican, parade this account as against our county board. They do not seem to know that in such matters the county board is no more to blame for this expense, than the judge of the court is to blame for the expense and cost of a suit in his court. The petition for a ditch is, when filed, a suit commenced in the court in which the board presides, and the board, by law, is compelled to proceed with it. Another thing those papers do not realize, or if they do they purposely ignore, that about nine-tenths of the amount drawn on account of ditches is only advanced by the county, and is subsequently covered back into the treasury by the owners of the lands effected by such ditches.

Another thing it may be asked by those papers to explain from the tables they publish: Add up their DeKalb column of "county revenue" from 1864 to 1880 inclusive, and you have a total of $504,200, then add up their disbursements for the same time and you get $519,100, being an excess of less than $15,000, which sum ought to show the exact indebtedness of the county, and yet they claim this indebtedness is $40,000 above that. Such statements are on a par with that which the Press said August 19: "The last republican board finished paying for the court-house, left the county practically out of debt, and running the county government upon a tax levy of 35 cents on the $100 valuation." * * "The facts are not doctored." * * "They are shown by the official records."

But after all those two papers misstatements and figures, the fact is still apparent, republican Steuben county's taxes are higher in every way it is viewed, than democratic DeKalb's. It is the "d—d spot that will not out." And of all the wood-piles that they have ransacked, they, with united labor and with great pain, have brought forth what they call "one little nigger" in the shape of allowances by the board to themselves.

One paper calls the items the "salary of the county board," the other calls them "allowances." Now, I want to ask them if they both mean the same thing, for there is a great difference between a salary allowance and simply an allowance. Will they also state whether they have examined the "records," and found there was no other items there for services in these allowances? Be careful now of another lie. They may find another little nigger not quite so black. I cannot trust either of these papers, for I have proven that one falsifies, and the other will not tell the truth.

By their figures imparted from that lovely cesspool of free-love and other freeisms republican Steuben comes in good play again. The figures are found in the Republican of last week. The items of expense for bridges, highways and ditches last year in Steuben footed up $2,851; the same items in DeKalb 21,582. Now, for seeing to this work, which occupies nine-tenths of the time of the commissioners, which board did it the cheapest? Take your own figures, make your own computation, and if your are honest, you will say that it costs less to do the same work in DeKalb than it does in Steuben. Now, bring out some more large sized figures. But even if it will not satisfy these papers to look upon their bantling Steuben, we might compare these charges of extravagance, etc., as they state, with some republican officers' fees for services nearer home, and see if these republicans do not out-skunk the board. One officer certified that one day last winter he traveled 208 miles, or eight times from Auburn to Butler and back, on another day he made 288 miles. Surely 288 miles in one day takes the rag. Another day he did not go 20 rods, yet he charges 6 miles; another he did not go out of the court-house, he charged for 6 miles; another officer could make more fees in a suit than any attorney in the same suit. Do you want some more?

It must be admitted that our board has done more than double the usual work, had it to do, and was compelled to do it. That it has had no law-suits except one, the celebrated Penick case, inherited from a previous board, the decision of which more than trebled the duties of the board. That decision was "that it was the duty of the board to know and use diligence to ascertain whether bridges were safe and sound. That the board is bound to know that timbers in bridges will rot, and that the board must examine the bridges and test the timbers by chopping or boring, and not wait until they fall with persons and property passing over them; and if the board do not use this diligence and tests, and injury happens, the county is liable for the injury. Here was a large addition to the labors of the board, and to save the people from loss and do their duty, the board have expended more time and labor on bridges than usual; and, as every one knows, they have built a better class of bridges, that will last longer and in the end be cheaper than the class heretofore built. But after all has been said and done, not a man has heretofore opened his mouth in objection to the action of the board as to bridges and ditches until recently, and that for partisan purposes.

When Benny Blair and Duncan were on the board together everyone conceded that the remark then made by Peterson, the present chairman of the republican county central committee, that "they were the best board he ever knew," and that "they knew more than all the rest of the boards he had known in the county," was true.

Justice.

St. Joe.

—Hancock stock is still above par, and selling mighty fast.

—Jacob Sechler is the proud father of a bright-eyed girl, six days old.

—John Holtswarth bought and sold the Reed property inside of three days.

—Mrs. Wm. Leighty has been sick for the past few days, but is now convalescent.

—Mrs. Bennet Leighty, who has been sick for some time, is slowly improving.

—J. A. Reed has purchased other lots and will build another residence immediately.

—The poll-raising Wednesday evening was a success, everything passing off quietly and peacefully. The banner of Hancock and English waves proudly over the heads of the St. Joe people.

—Dr. Chas. Goodale sold his residence to George Houk, of Monroeville, Ind., and the doctor will move to Metz in a few weeks.

—Ed. Tiffany has traded his one-third interest in the saw-mill to a Mr. Lounsberry. Ed. claims to have made a good summer's wages notwithstanding the fire in June, which destroyed their mill. The company have their mill in running order again.

—The speech of D. D. Moody, on the evening of the poll-raising, was listened to by a large number of democrats and republicans. Some of Mr. Moody's "shots" told on our republican friends, and we hope they will fall on good ground and bring forth fruit a hundred fold.

—We noticed Gus Leas in town Friday last, and was very much interested in one of our good old democratic friends. Mr. Leas, our old friend is too old to be caught with such chaff; better spend your time with some of your own brethren who are kicking over the traces. This ado about being such a great detective won't go down. We want some one for sheriff who is good on the catch, as well as detect, and in our Jay J. VanAuken we have a man who will make it red-hot for burglars by his own presence when it is needed.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an Internal Remedy Acting upon the Blood, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of Hall's Catarrh Cure is Not Cured or Benefited more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

Price 75 cents per bottle.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

School Suits

100 STYLES. ALL GRADES.

UNIFORM, LOW PRICES.

Largest Stock of Boys' and Children's Clothin in the City.

—FULL LINE OF—

Boys' Hats and Furnishing Goods

Now on Sale at the

C. O. D.

One-Price CLOTHING HOUSE of

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

9 East Main Street.

Look for the Big Flag.

OLD PRICES!

NEW GOODS!

AT

SAM, PETE & MAX,

The Star Clothing House,

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"MOTHER, MAY I GO AND PLAY?"

BY [illegible] W. HOLMES.

Mother, may I go and play?
Darling mother, say I may;
Get my hat with widest brim,
Tie my bib beneath my chin,
Bring my marbles, top and ball,
Let me have my playthings all;
Let me be a child to-day—
Mother, may I go and play?

Mother, may I go and play?
Tell me not I'm old to-day,
Speak not now of friends untrue,
Let me be a child to you.
I would throw each burden down,
All life's cares and sorrows drown
In that magic childhood lay—
Mother, may I go and play?

Mother, may I go and play?
I'm so weary grown to-day!
I have long life's burdens borne,
When of romance they were shorn;
Love proved false and hearts untrue,
Fortune failed and friends were few;
Now I cast them all away—
Mother, may I go and play?

Mother, may I go and play?
Fairer flowers will bloom to-day,
Brighter gleam the golden light,
Sweeter be my dreams to-night;
Childhood's faith will come again,
Simple trust shall ease all pain,
When to-night we kneel and pray—
Mother, may I go and play?

FARINA, Ill.

COURTSHIP BY PROXY.

"Indeed!" said the deacon's wife. I knew by that she hadn't heard a word we had been saying.

"Why, yes," I repeated, a good deal discouraged, for I saw I must begin again at the very beginning—"she is more than 100 years old, and entirely destitute. Yet she did not complain of anything but the cold. She was formerly a slave in Kentucky, but somehow strayed away up here, and now has outlived everybody that ever belonged to her. If I could manage to get her in the Colored Woman's Home for the rest of her life, I should be glad. But, as she isn't a resident of the city, it will be necessary to pay her board. A dollar a week, Mrs. Hoyt thinks it is."

"Certainly, that would be the best thing to be done," replied Mrs. Deacon, waking up a little. "Still, I don't know what we can do until we have called a meeting of the society."

That was much like her! If the vestry had been on fire, she would have stopped to call a meeting of the society before she would have ventured to throw on a dipper of water.

"But the poor creature is freezing and starving," said I, impatiently. "Can't you, as President of the society, empower me to give her at least one of those woolen sacks we have on hand?"

"I don't know but I might go as far as that, though I suppose it isn't exactly in order," returned the deacon's wife, leaning back in her chair, and smoothing the table-cover between her thumb and finger.

She seemed to be meditating, so I waited for a minute, and then she said, abruptly:

"What do you think of Mr. Brodhead, Bella?"

"There! I shouldn't wonder if he would give us something!" I exclaimed, going down on my knees in my heart to the deacon's wife for my injustice. "He is a man of means, and a generous man, I've always heard."

The deacon's wife looked puzzled.

"Oh, your old colored woman!" said she, directly. "I wasn't thinking about her; I was thinking of you. Mr. Brodhead has a very high opinion of you, Bella. Did you know it?"

"What do you mean, Mrs. Shackelford?" said I, as surprised as though the man in the moon had winked at me, for my friends all knew how I detested such talk. And, besides, I never considered Mrs. Shackelford that sort of a woman. Her attention was usually centered in the sewing society and her flower garden. But for once some other idea had taken possession of her mind, and, as her thoughts always ran in grooves, she never could harbor more than one at a time.

"Mr. Brodhead is a nice man, and a fine-looking man," she said, looking at me sharply. "A man of means, and a generous man, as you say."

"I suppose so," I replied, gathering my shawl about me.

"Oh, don't you go yet, Bella. I was wanting to see you, and I consider your dropping in quite providential. The deacon and I were talking of calling on you this very evening," said the deacon's wife, putting out her hand to keep me from rising: "and, when I saw your blue shawl turning in at the gate, I said to myself, 'That's as marked a token as Rebecca at the well, with the pitcher on her shoulder.' I haven't the gold ear-rings and bracelets to offer you, but I have all the rest," she added, laughing nervously.

Just now the deacon came in. Now there is, in the opinion of his wife, but one reason why Deacon Shackelford didn't make the world. He found it already made. And when he came in, she looked up to him as though Atlas had come, and she could safely drop the world on his shoulders and go off picking golden apples.

"I was just speaking a good word for Mr. Brodhead to Bella, deacon," said she.

"Ah! and what does Bella say?" returned the deacon, looking as though it were a question of investing in real estate, or the price of gold.

"Bella doesn't say anything," I replied. "Certainly not before she is asked."

"You need not wait long, if that is all," answered Deacon Shackelford. "I'll ask you now. Have you any objection to an offer of marriage from Mr. Brodhead? There!"

"He is a very bashful man, Mr. Brodhead is, Bella, and so he got us to help him a little. Why, he is in love with you," interposed Mrs. Deacon Shackelford—"he is in love with you down to his boots."

"Let it run out of his toes, then," said I, beginning to feel like new yeast.

"But you can't have anything against the man," persisted Mrs. Deacon, "And think! after a while you won't have your grandfather and your Aunt Susannah to talk to, and you will miss it if you don't have somebody in their place. It is best to think of these things. And you won't find a kinder man, if you search the world over with a wax candle, than Mr. Brodhead."

"Mr. Brodhead is well enough, Mrs. Shackelford. I don't deny that. But the idea of making a proposal of this sort through 'middle-men!' It is too absurd!" I said, laughing, and put on my hat.

So I went home to my classes in embroidery, and drawing, and wax-work—to making Aunt Susannah's caps and grandfather's coffee. My life was full of monotonous work in those days, and sometimes I had a strange, uncomfortable impression of a machine wound up and running without any act of its own.

One evening when I was putting the silver away after supper, and feeling the creak and crank of the wheels more than usual, as though the machine needed oiling, the front gate slammed, and steps came along up the walk.

"I knowed some one was coming. I've knowed all day some one was talking of coming," said Gitty Pullen, who, "to accommodate," as she often told us, had kindly consented to rule over our kitchen and us with a rod of pine in the form of a crutch).

As Gitty had no home, no money, and only one foot of her own, but as good as four ears and two tongues, it might seem sometimes that the accommodation was two-sided. However, things are not what they seem.

"I knowed it was Mr. Corliss!" pursued Gitty, triumphantly, as grandfather opened the door and disclosed the figures of our minister and his wife. "I can tell his step as far off as I can hear it. Did you ever notice his eyes?" she continued. "They look like two holes burned in a blanket. And he holds his head just like Deacon Shackelford's old white horse."

And then she disappeared in the kitchen with her crutch and the cat, while Aunt Susannah put in her teeth, put on her black silk apron, and went with her meeting step into the parlor. When I followed her, soon after, I found her talking in as steady a flow as the waters came down at Lodore to Mrs. Corliss, who sat by the woodbine window, with hands folded in her black netted mitts across her lap, and her tea-colored curls shaking their heads, as it were, at the world and its vanities; while grandfather, who had been senior deacon for fifty years, and who had no idea even the church edifice could stand without him, was already in deep discussion with Mr. Corliss upon the question then absorbing and disturbing us, as to whether our Sabbath-school should hereafter be called a Sunday-school.

"I can never consent to have a religious organization known by a heathen name," grandfather was saying, as I had heard him say half a hundred times before.

And Mr. Corliss, with his serene, white head bent toward him, was thinking how he could braid in one of the fossilized fathers and the versatile sons of the church.

So there was nothing for me to do but to sit and smile and listen; for grandfather and Aunt Susannah were not the persons to yield the floor when it was once theirs by priority.

"Mr. Corliss, is it not time for us to go?" said Mrs. Corliss, at early star-rising, with her measured dignity.

"Certainly, my dear," replied Mr. Corliss, rising at once, with his head still bent to catch grandfather's last sentence.

"Bella, put on your hat and walk out with us a little way. It is a charming evening," said Mrs. Corliss, turning to me after taking a ceremonious leave of Aunt Susannah.

Of course I went for my hat. I should as soon think of insisting on breathing in an exhausted receiver as of refusing to follow a suggestion of Mrs. Corliss'. Or so I supposed then. But I trembled in my heart, and began to run over in my mind all my little over-dones and under-dones. She had such a Lady Superior way that, though I really loved our minister's wife, I always felt a sense of guilt, and never at home with her.

But it seemed it was not that I had been late at church or absent from the sewing society this time. Neither had I a bow too many or a bow too few on my Sunday bonnet. Worse, though; Mr. Brodhead had been to her.

"My dear," she began, as sweet and as cold and as stiff as a dish of frozen custard, "I want to haev a serious talk with you on a serious subject, and perhaps I may as well say at once, Mr. Brodhead has solicited the good offices of Mr. Corliss and myself between you and himself. He seems to be a very earnest admirer, but a very diffident one. What should you say to the idea of entertaining a proposal of marriage from him?"

"I couldn't think of such a thing for a moment, Mrs. Corliss. I have no expectation or wish ever to marry anyone," said I, feeling very much annoyed.

Mrs. Corliss sighed severely. "Marriage is a divinely-appointed institution," said she, "and not to be lightly set aside without due consideration and prayer. You are not now prepared to give a final answer to so important a matter. It comes upon you suddenly. Take time, my dear friend, to think it over carefully, prayerfully, and with a view to what is your duty."

Mrs. Corliss shut her lips tight, as though to keep her teeth in, and then kissed me good-night—a soft, clammy kiss, which made me feel as though I wanted a lump of sugar. Accordingly, I went in the house and ate one, and thought no more about Mr. Brodhead for a month and a day.

At the end of that time Aunt Kent asked me to go down and do up her caps. Aunt Kent was a dear, good old lady, who lived in a little yellow and white cottage at the end of the graveyard, where her husband and seven children were lying in one pathetic row, under the beds of heart's-ease and forget-me-nots. But when they went she adopted all the world into her warm, motherly heart. So, though she lived alone, with a little cream-colored greyhound, she had a large family, and whoever was sick, or sorry, or needy, went to her, as well as whoever wished for sympathy in health and gladness.

Dear Aunt Kent! When I went in, there she was knitting a checked sock for young Mrs. Cable's first baby, with such a look of peaceful repose on her face that one would be willing to go over the same weary path of suffering, if it should lead at last into such a land of rest.

"I don't know when I felt sorrier," said she, when I was settled at my work by her side, "than I did for somebody who came to me last week in a love affair. He is a man of whose love any woman might be proud, but he is so full of humility and self-distrust that he doesn't even dare open the subject to the young woman herself. And I don't know but it will cost him his life. He says he is sure it would if she should refuse him, and I guess he is sure about it."

In an instant Mr. Brodhead flashed into my mind, and my heart grew harder than the meeting-house steps.

"Why, Aunt Kent," said I, "it is too absurd! He has already been to the minister and to the minister's wife, and then to the deacon and to the deacon's wife, to ask them to intercede for him. I wouldn't have a man anyhow after he had made such a goose of himself."

Aunt Kent opened her eyes in mild astonishment, and then I remembered she named somebody. Then I stopped suddenly and felt my cheeks begin to burn.

"Dear child," she said tenderly, "when you have seen a few more of the ups and downs of life, you will think more of a good man's love than you will of these outside manners. Mr. Brodhead told me he had been in this strait to some of our mutual friends, but he supposed they had not spoken with you. And we must not judge him by the standard we would apply to some people. He is shrinking to timorousness, especially with ladies. And he says he is conscious that he always appears his worst before you. Poor man! I've seen him sit at church with his eyes fixed on the ribbon of your hat, as it fluttered a little in the wind, and looked so hungry and so hopeless, my heart just ached for him."

This time my face flushed with anger as well as shame.

"I feel humiliated, Aunt Kent," said I. "I hope nobody else has seen him make such a silly spectacle of himself."

"Bella, my dear, you are wrong," interposed Aunt Kent, gently. "We must take people as they are, not as we would have made them. The man is cast in a delicate, sensitive mold, and this is nearly or quite a matter of life or death with him. I doubt if you are loved again by so worthy a man, and I am sure you will not be any more sincerely. I hope you will not be so misguided as to throw away such a treasure, only for a romantic notion."

I could not laugh at Aunt Kent's tender earnestness, but I shook my head and felt immovable from the bump of firmness down to my boot soles. And thus ended the third lesson.

Weeks after this, one day in the "dawning of the year," when the bees hummed and the lilacs bloomed, I went out to dig blood-root where the road ran through a bit of woodland, a little north of the village. Because if we didn't need it, somebody might, and Aunt Susannah considered a few roots and herbs "so handy to have in the house." Presently I felt an unconscious, magnetic drawing to look up, and there stood Mr. Brodhead. To this day I cannot tell how he came there. It was as though he had shot up like a field lily, right out of the ground, and he stood with his eyes dropped shyly as a girl's and his handsome lips trembling. I pitied him almost as much as Aunt Kent had done.

"It will kill me if I don't speak, and it will kill me if I do, and you don't listen," said he, throwing out his words in jerks, like water running from a straight-necked bottle, and looking suddenly at me with such pathetic feeling in his great brown eyes that I began to feel abashed. For what was I that he should be so stirred by me?

"You couldn't care any for me, I suppose?" said Mr. Brodhead, humbly.

"Perhaps I might, I don't know," I replied, almost involuntarily.

"Dear me!" But a love story sounds so different when a man tells it himself.

And so, presently, it was I who trembled and cast down my eyes and blushed; and it was Mr. Brodhead who looked as though he was master of the whole world and the stars besides.

Aunt Susannah, waiting behind the woodbine window, thought I was gathering herbs to stock a pharmacy, for the sun had dropped behind the cedars on the top of Mount Margaret when I went home with Mr. Brodhead by my side, my hands empty, but my heart full.

Yes, we are engaged, and are to be married two weeks from next Wednesday. And the moral of my story is this: "If you want your business done, go; if not, send."

Playing the Drummer.

Young Bummelhans has just been discharged by his employer, old Twopercent. The facts are as follows: Bummelhans had just returned from a trip over the State. His trip had been a very satisfactory one to himself, perhaps, but not so to his employer. He had spent a great deal of money in buggy rides and one thing and another, and had taken very few orders. When Bummelhans called in to see the old man the latter was mad. He said:

"I don't pelieve you makes any effort to sell goots. Ven I vash a drummer I alvays sold goots to de merchants, no matter ven dey don't vant any. I made de acquaintance von everybody."

"How did you use to manage to sell goods when you were a drummer?"

"I vill show you all abont dat. Schoost you sits down in chairs. You vas a country merchant; I plays now de drummer?"

"All right," said Bummelhans. "I'll be a country merchant, and I'll show you how they do."

Bummelhans pretended to be writing at his desk, and old Twopercent came up from one side, bowing and scraping.

"Goot morning. Can't I sell you some goots?"

"Who are you?" says Bummelhans, looking up.

"I travels for de Galveston firm of Twopercents"

"You do, do you? So you travel for that infernal old thief, do you? Take that!" and to impress upon his employer the difficulties of drumming up trade, Bummelhans kicked the old man four or five times, pushed him up in a corner and choked him for a while, and then told the old gentleman, who was speechless with bona-fide rage, "If you ever come in here again I'll not leave a whole bone in your carcass."—Galveston News.

CATS are not human, though they are endowed with certain human instincts, such as staying out nights, and following after other cats.—Peck's Sun.

YOUNG MEN.

The Kind of Chaps Who are Disappointed at Leadville.

[Leadville Chronicle.]

Almost daily there arrive by all the various roads which lead into Leadville young men who have left home and friends, and with no experience or money to back them, come here to "make a living," as they call it. Poor, vain, deluded youths! Not that there is ample work here for the willing, not that those who come here fail to obtain employment—but, alas! it is not always that which causes the young men who a week before came here with hopes brightly burning, to return home dejected and discouraged. It is a fact, which has been proven again and again, that the majority of the vast army of young men come to Leadville in the delusion that a lax state of society prevails here, which will enable them to live in a romantic sort of way without working.

Mining! What a sense of novelty the word conveys to an adventurous Easterner. To lead the free and easy life of a miner, to sleep in a log-cabin, to work with a revolver strapped around your waist, to spend a couple of hours each day hunting among the mountains for elk and bear and deer; perchance go through an Indian fight—and all that sort of thing which is supposed to make up the life of a miner; what joyous scenes of excitement the word miner calls up! Alas, when the stern reality presents itself to the deluded mortal, what tumbling down of air-castles is there, my countrymen, when the young man finds what in all the brief years of his existence he has never found out that it is work—and the hardest kind of work at that—which makes the money that makes the mare go.

The quick, active workers are those who make a success of it here. The first case of a failure by one of those so gifted yet remains to be recorded. Hunt these mountains high and low and you can't find a worker who has failed in Leadville.

This is the class of people who, though they may not have more than what they have earned by hard labor when the week is past, see millions within their grasp, and who give you their solemn pledge that they will strike it three weeks hence. They are never discouraged, and take things just as they come, whether ill or good.

Leadville is composed exclusively of a working class of people, in the practical sense of the word. These mines about us are filled with clerks, professors, lawyers and doctors. Don't for a moment imagine that they are there as ornaments, receiving large salaries and doing nothing. No, indeed. In their rough miner's garb you would take them never for what they are. They are workers, even though their early years were spent in colleges, banks and offices. They dig and delve side by side with your common laborer, who understands neither Latin nor French, and know only one thing, and that is that they must work just as hard as their illiterate companions "to the manor born" if they expect to make the same wages.

These are the men who compose the active element which has given Leadville its reputation for push and enterprise, and those who have not the means to build up a business here nor wish to do some hard work had better not come.

Stitching on a Button.

He had never tried it before, but he was naturally a self-reliant man, and felt confident of his ability to do it. Moreover, his wife had gone to the country. Therefore, carefully selecting from that lady's work-basket the thickest needle and stoutest thread, he resolutely set himself to the task. Spitting upon his fingers, he carefully rolled the end of the thread into a point, and then, closing one of his own optics, he attempted to fill up the needle's solitary eye; but the thread either passed by on one side or the other of the needle, or worked itself against the glittering steel and refused to be persuaded. However, the thread suddenly bolted through the eye to the extent of an inch, and, fearing to lose this advantage, he quickly drew the ends together and united them with a knot about the size of a buckshot. The button was a trouser one, but he liked the dimensions of its holes, and it was only going on the back of his shirt anyhow. As he passed the needle gently upward through the linen, he felt a mingled pity and disdain for men bungling over such easy jobs; and, as he let the button gracefully glide down the thread to its appointed place, he said to himself that if ever he married a second time it should be for some nobler reason than a dread of sewing on buttons. The first downward thrust had the same happy result, and, holding the button down firmly with his thumb, he came up again with all that confidence which uniform success inspires. Perhaps the point of the needle did not enter to the bone, but it seemed to him that it did, and his comment upon the circumstance was emphatic. But he was very ingenious, and next time would hold the button by one edge and come up through the hole nearest the other. Of course he would. But the needle had an independent way of suiting itself as to holes, and it chose the one where the thumb was. Then the needle got sulky. It didn't care about holes, anyhow, if it was going to be abused for them, and the button might have been an unperforated disk for all the apertures which that needle could thenceforward be made to discover, without infinite poking and prodding. It always came through when it was least expected, and never when it was wanted. Still he persevered, and it was not until he finally discovered that he had stitched over the edge of the button, and had sewn it on the wrong side of the shirt, that he utterly broke down.

Florence and Raymond.

At the reception of American actors by the Savage Club of London, Mr. Florence said that "times have improved of late, and that he could recollect when actors not only did not get breakfasts given to them, but found it a hard matter to get breakfast at all. But all this is changed, and if America sends bad actors to the old country she sends very few poor ones." Mr. Raymond, quoting Artemus Ward to the effect that "he felt he had the gift of oratory, but that he hadn't got it with him," explained that he had come to London at an awkward time of the year, against the advice of Mr. Hollingshead, but that he had thought it well to come. He thought that "London was a big town, that everybody would not be out of town, that some of the citizens would be here, and that the critics would be here. And," added Mr. Raymond, with an expression which provoked shouts of laughter, "they were here."

INDIANA NEWS.

SINCE last winter scarlet fever has prevailed at Rushville and vicinity to an alarming extent.

JAMES P. VOORHEES, son of Senator Voorhees, has been received into the Roman Catholic church at Terre Haute.

THE Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railroad Company are having their new cars lettered "Chicago and Louisville line."

SENATOR JONES, of Florida, who was on the stump in Indiana, has been suddenly called home by the alarming illness of his wife.

COL. THOMAS J. JACKSON, of New Albany, is in luck. He receives his pension and back pay, dating back to 1863, and aggregating $7,600.

TAYLOR CASE, while on a drunken spree, shot and killed his brother, Harrison Case, at Atwell, last week. There had been a long-standing feud between the young men.

THE annual reunion of the Boyd family was held at Cambridge City recently. Kinsfolk from the Boyds, Lewises, Martindales and Bradburys were present to the number of about 200.

THE State House Commissioners have notified Gov. Williams that he has been selected to lay the corner-stone of the new Capitol, and ex-Gov. Hendricks that he is to deliver the oration on that occasion.

TWO SHARPS who follow a circus fleeced an old farmer of Bartholomew county out of $10 by inducing him to buy a cake of soap which they represented to contain $20. It didn't contain it.

WHILE James McGraw was digging a well at Bloomfield it caved in on him. The citizens commenced to extricate him at once, but it was three hours before they reached him, and he was dead. There were no marks on him. The well was about twenty feet deep, and about twelve feet caved in on him.

THE new steamer John S. Brandford, having on board 1,750 bags of corn, struck a rock in the Wabash river, about three miles from its mouth, and sunk over her main deck aft. The vessel was a total loss. About half the cargo was saved. The vessel was owned by Nashville parties, and was not insured.

DR. A. G. RICHARDSON, a gallant youth of 75 summers, stepped into Mayor Hegler's office, recently, with Miss Jennie Clark, a blushing damsel of about 30, and the two were united in wedlock. The doctor escorted his bride down stairs and promenaded our thoroughfares with a step as elastic and spirits as buoyant as a youth of 16.—Attica Ledger.

MARSHAL THOMAS PIERCE arrested for disorderly conduct David Parmalee and James Pierce, and lodged them both in jail at Peru. Shortly afterward smoke could be seen escaping from the hallway and windows of the Court House. Deputy Sheriff Irwin soon came, and, in response to the yelling prisoners, unlocked their cell. There he found that Parmalee and Pierce had set fire to the bedding in the cell and were nearly suffocated. No further damage.

FOR a long time a bitter feud has existed between a German named John Myers and two hardened criminals named John and Perry Snurr. The three persons met at a brewery in Bloomingdale, a suburb of Fort Wayne, a few days ago. The Snurrs were drunk, and Perry Snurr immediately began an assault upon Myers. He was being worsted, when his brother John struck Myers upon the head with a club, crushing his skull. Myers was removed to his home, where he expired in about forty minutes. The Snurrs took to the woods, but were captured about two miles from town. Myers was a hard-working German. He leaves a wife and two children. The Snurrs are aged 15 and 22 respectively.

MARTIN TETERS and Robert Hall, two convicts in the foundry department of the Prison South, while filing in to their work, got into a quarrel. They had an old grudge against one another. It appears that Hall had procured an old shoe-knife with the blade worked to a point. With this weapon he stabbed Teters in the bowels, without a word of warning, severing some of the intestines. The guard could not prevent the fatal quarrel, as he has to stand at the door until all the convicts have filed in, and he knew nothing of it, consequently, until all was over.

The Census.

The official record by counties of the Third Supervisors' district of Indiana is as follows:

COUNTIES.	Population, 1880.	Population, 1870.	Increase.	Decrease in Towns	No. of Farms.
Delaware	22,982	19,030	3,902	...	3,398
Fayette	11,398	10,476	1,172	250	1,053
Hamilton	24,979	20,882	4,097	...	3,080
Hancock	17,172	15,123	2,061	11	2,059
Henry	24,056	22,986	1,343	273	2,472
Johnson	19,534	18,366	1,370	193	2,118
Madison	27,348	22,770	4,861	82	2,808
Marion	102 310	71,939	30,411	40	2,741
Randolph	26,642	22,862	3,680	...	3,011
Rush	19,253	17,626	1,304	277	2,173
Shelby	25,275	21,892	3,483	...	2,739
Tipton	14,418	11,953	2,465	...	1,728
Union	7,677	6,341	1,336	...	837
Wayne	38,974	34,048	4,972	201	2,576

RECAPITULATION.

Population—1880	382,178
Population—1870	316,294
Increase	67,047
Decrease	1,926
Number of farms June 1, 1880	31,806
Number of manufacturing establishments June 1, 1880	1,799
Number of deaths during census year	5,316
Number of dependent class	4,250

Indianapolis and Richmond statistics of industrial establishments are not included in the above.

TEXAS society is agitated over the question of whether or not the groom at a wedding should wear his revolver belt inside or outside his dress coat.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.

Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY

[illegible]

INDISCRETION—EXPOSURE

[illegible]

YOUNG MEN

[illegible]

PATIENTS TREATED

[illegible]

DR. BUTTS, [illegible]

THERMALINE

A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine

The only 25 cent

AGUE REMEDY

IN THE WORLD

CURES

CHILLS & FEVER

and all MALARIAL DISEASES.

Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.

An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box

Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.

Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.

Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers druggists, Auburn Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)

[illegible]

WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.

[illegible]

WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE

[illegible]

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS

[illegible]

H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

READ!

IN USE SINCE 1858

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS

A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.

[illegible]

NOT A BEVERAGE

[illegible]

THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH

[illegible]

THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO. Lancaster, Pa.

[illegible] Price, 25 cents.

DON'T RENT

BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.

$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!

Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.

HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.

[illegible] Descriptive pamphlet in English and German. Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

SABBATH READING.

Every Cloud Is Silvery Lined.

When my freed spirit hath risen to God,
And you lay me to rest beneath the cold sod,
Rejoice that for me life's trials are done,
My pilgrimage ended, the victory won.

Though rugged the pathway my feet have trod,
It leadeth to heaven, to home and God.
I know when the cross I lay down,
I shall take up the starry crown.

Though doubts loom up to darken my sky,
They will rift away as the sun shimmers by.
Then, O! my soul, be thou resigned,
For every cloud is silvery lined.

OTTAWA, Ill. WESTERN WILLOW.

The Christian.

Over the soul of the Christian a holy tranquillity sheds its luster here brighter than is seen elsewhere in the world. His soul is unruffled by the daily crosses of life. A spirit of peace prevails. He looks not upon the things present, but things to come. The soul of the earnest, sincere Christian man rejoices not in doing his fellow-men injury, but in doing them good. The backbiter is discarded for the peacemaker. The great Rowland Hill, who, when in a friend's house, heard a scandal freely passed about his neighbor, called for a dust-pan and brush and began to sweep the floor, saying: "My friends, a prodigious quantity of dust has been scattered this evening; I will try and sweep it away." They took the hint thus so perfectly given. The things of time deserve the attention of every man and woman, but the things of the great eternity deserve a greater portion. Life is but a fleeting vapor that appeareth for a little while, then vanisheth away forever. Was man endowed with all the high and noble faculties which he possesses just to remain a few uncertain years in this transitory world, and then pass away forever and be lost in oblivion? Ah! no; man was born for a high and nobler destiny. When the things of this world pass away we want some firm, everlasting rock whereon we can stand. Take the ungodly man—watch him in his daily life. You see a life of unhappiness, a life of misery, so to speak. While he indulges in unholy pleasures his heart pains him, and conscience, the secret monitor whose warnings are so often disregarded, speaks to him and whispers, be a Christian. Verily there is no peace to the wicked. The Christian man is a light unto the world; and others, seeing that light, will be prevailed on to love and serve the Christian's God. What would the world have been to any without the Christian religion? It would have been a world of darkness and heathenism. The number of people in our country who destroy their own lives is getting to be fearful—and why is this? Because the pure religion established nearly nineteen centuries ago by our blessed Savior is being supplanted by the doctrine of Paine and Voltaire—that of total annihilation—the death of life, both animal and spiritual. While the unbelieving and ungodly man suffers himself to be blown about with every wind of doctrine, the humble Christian meekly follows the light that is given him in God's word. Surely, then, there is a divine reality in religion that supports the Christian at death. He can look fearlessly across the dark valley, and, seeing the glory beyond, he plunges into the darkness with all the faith with which a child would throw itself from the window of a burning house into its father's arms, stretched out in the darkness below ready to receive it. While the Christian dies peacefully with hope of immortal glory, the ungodly departs with the awful feelings of damnation already upon his soul. Look at Voltaire! In his life he ridiculed religion and upon his death-bed he called upon the Christians' God for mercy in that dark hour, and finally died with awful imprecations and curses upon his lips, and was thus summoned into the presence of the Being he had defied. If you read the history of all good men, in all ages of the world, you will find they departed with joy and shouts of victory upon their tongues, as they were ushered into the upper and better world, where suffering and sorrow are unknown. May we all die the death of the righteous, and may our last end be like theirs. J. N. MARSHALL.

NORTH LAKE WEIR, Fla.

A Touching Incident.

An English actress, passing along a street one day, heard singing. She looked in at an open door upon a little prayer meeting, and caught the words,

Depth of mercy, can there be
Mercy still reserved for me?

She entered, listened awhile, and then went away; but the hymn went with her. She became a Christian, and determined to leave the stage; but the manager would not release her from fulfilling her engagement. The last night she played with unusual brilliancy, and at the close was called before the curtain. Her contract was discharged; she had no master now but Christ. Standing there with clasped hands and streaming eyes, she sang:

Depth of mercy! can there be
Mercy still reserved for me?
Can my God His wrath forbear—
Me, the chief of sinners, spare?

The audience was melted by the pathetic confession and plea, and many sought the same mercy.

Praying and Giving.

A rich youth in Rome had suffered from a dangerous illness. On recovering his health his heart was filled with gratitude, and he exclaimed, "O, thou all-sufficient Creator! could man recompense Thee how willingly would I give Thee all my possessions." Hermes, the herdman, heard this and said to the rich youth, "All good gifts come from above; thither thou canst send nothing. Come, follow me." He took him to a hut where was nothing but wretchedness and misery. The father lay on a bed of sickness, the mother wept, the children were destitute of clothing and crying for bread. Hermes said, "See here, an altar for the sacrifice; see here the Lord's representatives." The youth assisted them bountifully, and the poor people called him an angel of God. Hermes smiled and said, "Thus turn always thy grateful countenance first to heaven and then to earth."

German Longevity.

Some curious statements have been published by an Austrian official, on the data of longevity in Germany and othre European countries. It appears from this that there are some 12,800 persons over 90 years of age throughout the whole of Europe, of which number 6,200 are women. In Italy, again, female longevity is superior to male, there being in that country 241 women over 100 years of age, and only 160 male centenarians. Allowance being made for the preponderance of women in the population generally, even then, according to these statements, the female sex shows the best average of long life. In Hungary, on the contrary, there are more old men than women, notwithstanding the females outnumber the males. Austria, it seems, has 100 women who are over a century old, while only eighty-six men are as aged. The most interesting fact, however, in these data is the superior longevity of the Germans as compared with the Sclaves; thus, among the Germans of Upper Austria and Salzburg there are 11¼ per cent. of this population who come under the catalogue of old people, while among the Sclaves of Galicia the percentage is 4.

The Women of Lima.

Lima, says an exchange, is called the paradise of women. They are called beautiful; so they are, if you admire black eyes and ebony tresses—not the dreamy black eyes of the harems, nor the sparkling black eyes of the Syrians, nor the liquid black eyes of the Egyptians, but the black eyes that easily reveal the different types of character. Peruvian ladies have character and are not afraid to show it; yet we hear nothing of equal rights and privileges among them. For them to lay claim to a right is but to possess it, for they can easily win over the priesthood, and thus have the most powerful class of Peru on their side. They are generally occupied, but do not work; they look upon labor as degrading. They rise early, take a cup of tea and go to mass. Their toilet requires but a few moments. Their walking suits are neat and pretty; in this respect they surpass us. The dress is black and never touches the ground; there is no fussing or fumbling with trains. A white skirt is sometimes seen a little below the dress, with a deep hem and two tucks, and always white and clean. Prunella gaiters are generally worn, and hands are bare; the manta is thrown over the head, falling gracefully down almost to the bottom of the skirt.

The subject of dress claims most of their time and attention; their ball dresses and opera and soiree suits are magnificent. Their boots, especially, are beautiful. No people have naturally as small feet as the Peruvians. The Peruvian-made boots are too small for foreigners.

Peruvian ladies are not very intelligent; as soon as they pass beyond the school-girl period they care little for books or literature. Many learn to play the piano when young, but do not care to continue when married. They are excessively courteous in their manners, but we are not to be misled by appearances. Their mode of salutation is more of an embrace than anything else, and they always say: "My house and all that I have is entirely at your disposal, and we are to be as one family." They are always wealthy in imagination—at least they never speak of poverty. They love to smoke. Although handsome when young, they scarcely turn twenty when they begin to fade. One thing always lasts with them, and that is their gait. Their movements are gliding and graceful; the same is true of the men.

One of Tom Ochiltree's Jokes.

The vaulting ambition and unblushing assurance of some of these infant mining camps remind me of a good story which a gentleman from Galveston, now about to engage in mining here, told me the other evening about Maj. Tom Ochiltree, of Texas. I don't mean to apply it to Silver Cliff, though I have not failed to discover traces of the same spirit here. Everybody who has been in Washington often since the reconstruction of the South knows Tom Ochiltree, and he is not a stranger in New York. A good soldier, I believe, on the Confederate side, he became a Republican at the close of the war and a favorite of President Grant, who appointed him United States Marshal for Texas when that office was worth a good deal more money than it is now. The Major's father was one of the most eminent jurists in Texas, before the war, and had a good deal of trouble with his son, who, though not bad, was full of mischief.

At length, when Tom approached young manhood, the old Judge determined to sober him by study, and so took him into his own law office, where he kept him pretty closely at his books for about three years. Tom was a good scholar, made satisfactory progress, and was finally admitted to the bar and taken into partnership by his father. A few months after this, the Judge, as he was starting for Dallas one morning to attend a long session of the court, looked up at the old, weather-beaten sign, which had been above his office door for a quarter of a century, and told Tom he thought it was about time to have a new one, "and, Tom," he said, "suppose you attend to it, get a good sign, and have the name of the firm painted on it."

The old gentleman went to Dallas and was gone several days. Returning, when he came in sight of the little frame office, he thought it looked strange, and riding nearer he found stretching clear across the building, an immense sign-board, on which was painted in huge letters:

"T. P. OCHILTREE AND FATHER, Counsellors and Attorneys at Law."

Tom was at his desk deeply absorbed in working up a case, and never could understand why the old man should have caused that sign to be taken down. —Colorado Letter to Ney York Tribune.

SOMEBODY is attempting to poison all the dogs at Zanesville, Ohio. Among the number that got a dose was a fine bird-dog, belonging to Dr. Fred Halston. He is a very sensible and sagacious brute, and had once before been poisoned, and was successfully treated by the doctor. Upon the last occasion, as soon as he felt the effects of the poison, the dog trotted into the doctor's office, struck an attitude, stiffened up his legs and back, and by other signs gave the doctor to understand that he either wanted a prescription or a dose of antidote for poison. The doctor took in the situation at a glance, and treated the dog as he had before, and he again recovered.

THE oldest friends are to-day the staunchest friends of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. They have proven its great worth in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Tickling in the Throat, Irritation of the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs, etc.

What a Blind Man Did.

Prescott, the historian, and Prof. Fawcett, of England, illustrate the will-power of those who, stricken blind by a calamity, have yet achieved success in life. Instead of mourning over the precious treasure of eyesight lost, they have gone to work. Adapting themselves to their situation, they have shown what training and persistent effort could do. But James Goodsell, who died in Burlington, Vt., was blind from his birth to his death—a period of ninety years. Yet what he did shows that even this terrible misfortune is not an insuperable obstacle in the way of a man determined to make the most of himself.

In spite of his misfortune, he would swing an ax with dexterity, and felled trees; he was an accomplished grain thresher, and would frequently go alone a distance of two miles to thresh for the farmers, climbing the mows to throw down the grain; he could hoe corn or garden stuffs as well as anybody, having no trouble to distinguish the weeds; he would set a hundred bean poles with more accuracy than most people who can see, would load hay, and was so good a mechanic that he manufactured yokes and other farm articles with success.

He had an excellent memory, and was an authority on facts and dates. He could generally tell the time of day or night within a few minutes.

One instance is given when he slept over one day and awoke at evening, thinking it was morning. For once he ate supper for breakfast, but when informed of his mistake slept another twelve hours in order to get straight again.

He was familiar with forest trees and knew just where to go for any timber desired. He could direct men where to find a chestnut, a maple or an oak, and the children where to go for berries.

He was a good mathematician, and could compute accurately and rapidly. In olden days he was quite musically inclined, and, like most blind people, he had a genius in that direction.

He was at one time a leader of the Presbyterian choir. To crown all, he possessed one of the happiest of dispositions, and was ever genial and cheerful. To this end his generally excellent health largely contributed.

A Definition of Wit.

When Lord Chatham was Prime Minister, he once asked a literary gentleman a definition of wit. The gentleman had long been of the opinion that his talents should receive substantial recognition. His answer was so clever that it defined wit and suggested his wish.

"Wit, my Lord," he replied, "is what a pension would be if given by your Lordship to your humble servant—a good thing well applied."

An excellent illustration of this definition of wit is the happy turn given by Sydney Smith to the casual remark of a beautiful young lady. While walking with the clerical wit in her garden, she said:

"Mr. Smith, I fear I shall never bring this pea to perfection."

"Then permit me," said the gallant Sydney, taking her by the hand, "to lead perfection to the pea."

The sarcastic Douglas Jerrold was noted for uttering "a good thing well applied," albeit, the application suggested to the victim the burning of lunar caustic.

Walking in the country one day, with several literary gentlemen, the party stopped to observe the gambols of a little donkey. A poet, more noted for the sentimentalism of his verses than for their excellence, said he should like to send the little thing as a present to his mother.

"Do," replied the caustic wit, "and tie a piece of paper round its neck, with the motto: 'When this you see remember me.'"

Jerrold's idea of wit was a brutal one. He felt that, like the diamond, it had two powers which were—"to cut as well as shine." One of his sparkling and wounding witticisms is his well-known retort to a comic writer, who said to him, "We row in the same boat, you know."

"True, my good fellow," replied Jerrold, "but with very different skulls."

Hallucination of the Senses.

Professor Maudsley remarks, in a recent lecture, that one striking feature observed by medical men who have had cases of hallucination under their charge is that the patients cannot be convinced that the objects they see, the sounds they hear, and the smells they perceive, have no real existence, and that the sensations they receive are the result of their excited nerves. It frequently happens, too, that a person who suffers from hallucination in respect of one sense has the others unaffected, and is, on all other matters, perfectly normal. Hallucination may arise either from an idea on which the mind has dwelt, appearing as something exterior, or from excitement of the sensory ganglia. It is said that Newton, Hunter, and some others of equal professional eminence, could, at will, picture forms to themselves till they appeared to be realities.

[Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer.]

Capt. Henry M. Holzworth, Chief Detective Force, Cleveland, O., says: St. Jacobs Oil gives surprising relief, does a world of good and conquers pain. It completely cured me of Rheumatism.

IN London 58,460 women are employed as milliners and dressmakers, 26,375 as shirt-makers and seamstresses, 14,780 as tailoresses, 10,724 as machinists, 5,272 as book-binders, 4,699 as boot-makers, 4,360 as artificial florists, 3,718 as boxmakers, 2,852 as upholsteresses, not to mention a large number in various other industries.

Dr BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

[Pottsville (Pa.) Evening Chronicle.]

For sixteen years, writes Mr. Joseph Alber of this place, I had suffered with Dyspepsia, and spent many a dollar to find relief, but in vain. I was advised by Mr. E. Alstadt to take Hamburg Drops. I had taken scarcely one of the little bottles before I felt better, and soon got well altogether. I am now a warm advocate of Hamburg Drops.

A YOUNG man who was pleasantly engaged in dealing out taffy to his girl over the telephone wire, was much disgusted at hearing a voice from the central office remark: "Please hurry up if you have anything to say; there is a business man waiting for the wire."

Vegetine.

More to Me than Gold.

WALPOLE, Mass., March 7, 1880.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

I wish to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me. I have been troubled with Erysipelas Humor for more than thirty years, in my limbs and other parts of my body, and have been a great sufferer. I commenced taking VEGETINE one year ago last August, and can truly say it has done more for me than any other medicine. I seem to be perfectly free from this humor and can recommend it to every one. Would not be without this medicine—'tis more to me than gold—and I feel it will prove a blessing to others as it has to me.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. DAVID CLARK.

J. BENTLEY, M. D., says:

It has done more good than all Medical Treatment.

NEWMARKET, Ont., Feb. 9, 1880.

MR. H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.:

Sir—I have sold during the past year a considerable quantity of your VEGETINE, and I believe in all cases it has given satisfaction. In one case, a delicate young lady of about seventeen years was much benefited by its use. Her parents informed me that it had done her more good than all the medical treatment to which she had previously been subjected.

Yours respectfully,
J. BENTLEY, M. D.

Loudly in Its Praise.

TORONTO, Ont., March 3, 1880.

Dear Sir—Considering the short time that VEGETINE has been before the public here, it sells well as a blood purifier, and for troubles arising from a sluggish or torpid liver it is a first-class medicine. Our customers speak loudly in its praise.

J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Cor. Queen and Elizabeth Streets.

VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

MALT
Malt Bitters Company
BITTERS

A Marvelous Blood, Brain and Nerve Food.

There is no greater Blood Producer and Life-sustaining Principle in the world of foods or medicines than MALT BITTERS, prepared from Unfermented Malt, Hops, Calisaya, etc. They feed the body and the brain, enrich the blood, solidify the bones, harden the muscles, quiet the nerves, cheer the mind, induce sleep, perfect digestion, regulate the stomach and bowels, cleanse the liver and kidneys, and vitalize with NEW LIFE every fluid of the body. Beware of imitations similarly named. Look for the COMPANY'S SIGNATURE, which appears plainly on the label of every bottle. Sold everywhere. MALT BITTERS COMPANY, BOSTON.

FULL Sheet Portrait of Gov. Garfield, [illegible] Sample & price [illegible] Wm. H. Thompson, Detroit, Mich.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 Outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Me.

BIG WAGES, summer and winter. Samples free. National Copying Co., 300 West Madison st., Chicago.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Me.

FULL CONCAVE ENGLISH RAZORS, $1.50. E. Howcroft, 223 West 28th St., New York City.

AGENTS WANTED For a fast-selling, staple article: good profits; sample free. Address MARSHALL & CO., Fremont, Ohio.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

SOLDIERS Get the BEST ARTIFICIAL LIMBS on Gov't Order. Apply to Chas. R. Evans, Gov't Mfr, 153 W. 4th St. Cincinnati, O.

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

$350 A MONTH! Agents Wanted! 75 Best-Selling Articles in the world; a sample free. JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

YOUNG MEN Learn Telegraphy and earn $40 to $100 a month. Every graduate guaranteed a paying situation. Address R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

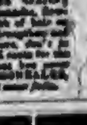
MUSTACHE & WHISKERS [illegible]

AGENTS wishing to canvass for the Lives of GARFIELD OR HANCOCK Should write at once for Circulars and terms of agency to FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, O.

SEND for our New Calendar of the New England Conservatory of Music. $15.00 to $20.00 for 20 lessons in classes. Students in the Conservatory Course can pursue ALL ENGLISH BRANCHES FREE. E. TOURJEE, Music Hall, Boston.

Agents Wanted to Sell BRISBIN'S Life of CARFIELD and FORNEY'S Life of HANCOCK. The only standard authoritative works. Indorsed by the candidates. Agents coining money. Best terms. Outfit free. Act at once. Address HUBBARD BROS., Chicago, Ill.

C. GILBERT'S STARCH



YOUNG MAN OR OLD, [illegible]

"BEATTY" Of Washington, New Jersey, sells 14-Stop ORGANS stool, book and music, boxed and shipped, only $85.00. New Pianos $195 to $1,600. Before you buy an instrument be sure to see his Midsummer offer illustrated free. Address DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, N. J.

Humor in the Family.

Good humor is rightly reckoned a most valuable aid to happy home life. An equally good and useful faculty is a sense of humor or the capacity to have a little fun along with the hum-drum of life. We all know how it brightens things up generally to have a lively, witty companion, who sees the ridiculous points of things, and who can turn any annoyance into an occasion for laughter. It does a great deal better to laugh over some domestic mishaps than to cry or scold over them. Many homes and lives are dull because they are allowed to become too deeply impressed with a sense of the cares and responsibilities of life to recognize its bright and especially its mirthful side. Into such a household, good, but dull, the advent of a witty, humorous friend is like sunshine to a cloudy day. While it is oppressive to hear people constantly striving to say funny things, it is comfortable, seeing what a brightener a little fun is to make, an effort to have some. It is well to turn off an impatient question sometimes and to regard it from a humorous point of view, instead of becoming irritated about it. "What is the reason I can never find a clean shirt?" exclaimed a good but rather impatient husband, after rummaging through the wrong drawer. His wife looked at him steadily for a moment, half inclined to be provoked, then with a comical look, replied: "I never could guess conundrums; I must give it up." Then he laughed, and they both laughed, and she went and got his shirt, and he felt ashamed of himself and he kissed her, and then she felt happy; and so what might have been an occasion for hard words and unkind feelings became just the contrary, all through the little vein of humor that cropped out to the surface. Some children have a peculiar faculty for giving a humorous turn to things when they are reproved. It does just as well oftentimes. Laughter is better than tears. Let us have a little more at home.

PUZZLE CARDS

Showing Portraits of the Candidates for President and Vice President. New and novel. A set of four sent by mail for three 3-cent stamps. Address CARD DEPOT, 170 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Perry Davis' Pain Killer IS RECOMMENDED By Physicians, by Missionaries, by Ministers, by Mechanics, by Nurses in Hospitals, BY EVERYBODY.

PAIN KILLER IS A SURE CURE for Sore Throat, Chills, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Cramps, Cholera, and all Bowel Complaints.

PAIN KILLER IS THE BEST REMEDY known to the World for Sick Headache, Pain in the Back, Pain in the Side, Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

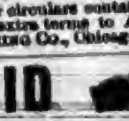
UNQUESTIONABLY THE Best Liniment Made! Its equal having never yet been found. For Sale by all Medicine Dealers.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL. We will send our Electro-Voltaic Belts and other Electric Appliances upon trial for 30 days to those afflicted with Nervous Debility and diseases of a personal nature. Also of the Liver, Kidneys, Rheumatism, Paralysis, &c. A sure cure guaranteed or no pay. Address Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich.

FROM THE FARM TO THE PRESIDENTIAL CHAIR

This is the cheapest and only complete and authentic Life of Gen. Garfield. It contains fine steel portraits of Garfield and Arthur, and is indorsed by their most intimate friends. Beware of "catchpenny" imitations. Agents Wanted.—Send for circulars containing a full description of the work and extra terms to Agents. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

CELLULOID EYE-GLASSES.



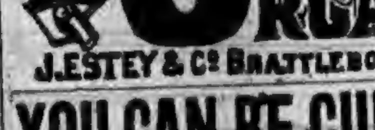
representing the choicest selected Tortoise-Shell and Amber. The lightest, handsomest and strongest known. Sold by Opticians and Jewelers. Made by SPENCER O. M. CO., 13 Maiden Lane, New York.

PENSIONS! New Law. Thousands of Soldiers and heirs entitled. Pensions date back to discharge or death. Time limited. Address, with stamp, GEORGE E. LEMON, P. O. Drawer 325. Washington, D. C.

PETROLEUM VASELINE JELLY. Grand Medal at Philadelphia Exposition. Silver Medal at Paris Exposition. This wonderful substance is acknowledged by physicians throughout the world to be the best remedy discovered for the cure of Wounds, Burns, Rheumatism, Skin Diseases, Piles, Catarrh, Chilblains, &c. In order that every one may try it, it is put up in 15 and 25 cent bottles for household use. Obtain it from your druggist, and you will find it superior to anything you have ever used.

DO Not Fail to send for our Price-List for 1880. FREE to any address upon application. Contains descriptions of everything required for personal or family use, with over 1,200 illustrations. We sell all goods at wholesale prices in quantities to suit the purchaser. The only institution in America who make this their special business. Address MONTGOMERY WARD & CO., 227 and 229 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

SAPONIFIER Is the "Original" Concentrated Lye and Reliable Family Soap Maker. Directions accompany each Can for making Hard, Soft and Toilet Soap quickly. It is full weight and strength. Ask your grocer for SAPONIFIER, and take no other. Penn'a Salt Manufact'ng Co., Phila.



ESTEY ORGAN THE HOME & CHAPEL J. ESTEY & Co. BRATTLEBORO VT.

YOU CAN BE CURED OF YOUR CATARRH! HOW? Send 10c to DR. C. R. SYKES, 169 E. Madison st., Chicago, Ill., and get by return mail "The True Theory of Catarrh" and full information of a Sure Cure. Name this paper, and write without delay.

SORE EARS, CATARRH. Many people are afflicted with these loathsome diseases, but very few ever get well from them; this is owing to improper treatment only, as they are easily cured if properly treated. This is no idle boast, but a fact I have proven over and over again by my treatment. Send for my little Book, free to all; it will tell you all about these matters and who I am. My large Book, 375 pages, octavo, price $2, by mail. Address DR. C. E. SHOEMAKER, Aural Surgeon, Reading, Pa.

St JACOBS OIL TRADE MARK

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings and Sprains, Burns and Scalds, General Bodily Pains, Tooth, Ear and Headache, Frosted Feet and Ears, and all other Pains and Aches.

No Preparation on earth equals ST. JACOBS OIL as a safe, sure, simple and cheap External Remedy. A trial entails but the comparatively trifling outlay of 50 Cents, and every one suffering with pain can have cheap and positive proof of its claims. Directions in Eleven Languages. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE. A. VOGELER & CO., Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE. Best in the World. Made only by the Frazer Lubricator Company at Chicago, New York, and St. Louis. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

KIDNEY-WORT The Great Remedy For THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS. These great organs are the Natural cleansers of the System. If they work well, health will be perfect; if they become clogged, dreadful diseases are developed because the blood is poisoned with the humors that should have been expelled naturally. KIDNEY-WORT will restore the natural action, and throw off the disease. Thousands have been cured, and all may be. For sale by all Druggists.

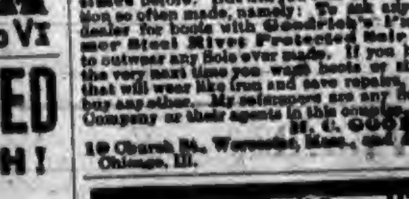
AGENTS WANTED To Make $5 Per Day SELLING OUR NEW Platform Family Scale. Weighs accurately up to 25 lbs. Its handsome appearance sells it at sight to housekeepers. Retail price $1.50. Other family scales weighing 25 lbs. can not be bought for less than $5. A regular BOOM for Agents. Exclusive Territory given. Terms and rapid sales surprise old Agents. Send for particulars. DOMESTIC SCALE CO., 183 W. 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

NATRONA BI-CARB. SODA Is the best in the World. It is absolutely pure. It is the best for Medicinal Purposes. It is the best for Baking and all Family Uses. Sold by all Druggists and Grocers. Penn'a Salt Manufact'ng Co., Phila.

WILHOFT'S FEVER AND AGUE TONIC FOR CHILLS AND FEVER AND ALL DISEASES CAUSED BY Malarial Poisoning OF THE BLOOD. A Warranted Cure. Price, $1.00. FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

RED RIVER VALLEY 2,000,000 Acres Wheat Lands best in the World, for sale by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba R. R. Co. Three dollars per acre allowed the settler for breaking and cultivation. For particulars apply to D. A. McKINLAY, Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.

LIQUID Cottage Colors. 30 SHADES READY FOR USE. The Best Mixed Paint in the Market. Be sure and buy them. Send for circulars to Chicago White Lead and Oil Co., COR. GREEN AND FULTON STS. Manufacturers of White Lead, Zinc, Linseed Oil, Putty, etc. All Goods Guaranteed.



You have read this notice about twenty times before. But did you ever act upon the suggestion so often made, [illegible] H. C. GOODRICH, 10 Church St., Worcester, Mass., and [illegible] Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DR. MARCHISI'S UTERINE CATHOLICON will positively cure Female Weakness, such as Falling of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, Chronic Inflammation or Ulceration of the Uterus, Incidental Hemorrhage or Flooding, Painful, Suppressed and Irregular Menstruation, &c. An old and reliable remedy. Send postal card for a pamphlet, with treatment, cures and certificates from physicians and patients, to HOWARTH & BALLARD, Utica, N. Y. Sold by all Druggists—$1.50 per bottle.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains.

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind

OLD MEN IN POLITICS.

They Deprecate the Bitterness Indulged in by Young Men.

[Petroleum World.]

Grandfather Lickshingle and Deacon Radspinner, two patriarchs in this community, were walking down street yesterday. It was remarked that two such venerable men were not often seen together, and people raised their hats to them as they passed along and spoke to them reverently.

"There's entirely too much bitterness in this campaign, deacon," said Mr. Lickshingle, "and I regret it exceedingly. Now, when we wuz young men, and took an interest in politics, we had none of this 'ere everlastin' cat haulin'."

"Indeed we hadn't," acquiesced Deacon Radspinner. "Take Jackson's campaign, for instance. There wuz a lively interest taken by both parties, but there wuz none of of yer bully-raggin' like we see nowadays."

"That's a fact, deacon," said old Lickshingle, "but between you and me, I never thought much of Jackson."

"He was a mighty good man, Lickshingle."

"He was small potatoes compared to some men we have now, deacon."

"Who'd you mean?" demanded the deacon.

"Well, there's Garfield," said Lickshingle.

"Garfield be danged. You know mighty well, Lickshingle, he couldn't have been elected hog-rive in a bill town, in Jackson's day."

"He's a darn sight better man than Hancock."

"Go slow, Lickshingle, go slow!" said the deacon, somewhat agitated.

"Oh, I know what I'm talkin' about," retorted Lickshingle, as he stabbed the pavement spitefully with his hickory cane. "Hancock's a stoughton-bottle, that's what he is."

"And what's Garfield? Great guns, what's Garfield? Didn't he lay a Cheap-John sort of a pavement around the capitol and charge the government a million dollars for it?" and the deacon's eyes blazed with indignation.

"See here, deacon, look at your man Hancock's letter to Sherman. Didn't he try to blow up Washington with glycerine? Say, didn't he? Oh, I read the papers, old man, an' know what's goin' on."

"Hancock's a good an' pure man. Didn't he fight like a bull-dog in the war of the rebellion? Where was Garfield skulkin' in the time of disaster? In Canada, by thunder, in Canada."

"What wuz Hancock doin' with a stiletto in his boot the night Lincoln was murdered? Answer me that? If Wilkes Booth had failed, this Hancock was ready to finish the job. Don't talk to me! Don't talk to me!"

"It's a lie," howled the deacon, as he whirled around and faced Lickshingle on the street.

"It's as true as holy writ, an' any man's a liar that says so," retorted Lickshingle, too much wrought up to be particular as to his phraseology.

"You're a bald-headed old scoundrel," yelled the deacon.

"You're an old leper, an' I can wipe the ground with you," howled Lickshingle, gripping his cane and advancing.

Friends jumped in, and the two furious old men were dragged away in opposite directions. The deacon squirmed around in the arms of his captors, shook his cane at Lickshingle, and hissed:

"Your man Garfield would never have gone into the army if he hadn't been drafted, and he wouldn't went then, only he thought he would be able to desert—the onery sun-of-a-gun!"

A SILENT PARTNER.

The Man Who Suffered from a Legislative Enactment.

[Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.]

Old Dabbs and Jim Carter, two colored men, having grown tired of farming, came to this city and opened a kind of a grocery store. Dabbs was a shrewd, bow-legged man, with broad feet, and with a nose shaped like the half of a pear. Carter was young and inexperienced. After the stock had been purchased, Dabbs remarked:

"Carter, I'se de olest. In dis case hit's naisessary fur yer to be de jungier podner."

"All right," said Carter, "I don't keer what my name is, but I want half de money wnut comes in ober de counter."

"Dat's a fack, Carter; you'll make a sharp business man. Dar's a lot ob niggers got dar eyes on dis sto,' but we'll fool 'em. Carter, does yer owe any debts in dis wurl'?"

"Lemme see; yes, I owes a man fur a saddle blanket."

"How long hab you owed him?"

"'Bout five years."

"How much wuz hit wourf?"

"'Bout two dollars."

"Lemme count the intrust. Two is two, added unto de five, duplex fractions comin' in twixt de two an' de five; compoun' cathartic fractions comin' twixt de duplex fractions. Nine's a nine, wid ten as a podner. Ten goes away an' 'leben stands up. Mr. Carter, yer owes dat man 'leben hundred dollars an' a quarter."

"How's dat?"

"Why cordin' to der intrust. De intrust is awful heaby. Hit farly makes a man sweat. Hit breaks up de white man and robs de niggah of his labor. Dat man could come an' break up our sto.' He could sell us out. I heard a plantation nigger talkin' 'bout us yesterday. Now, ef yer wuz de signer podner, which means de olest, de man couldn't do nothin'. Dis is a fault ob de law. De laigeslature is a awful rascal lot ob fellers. Well, now, yer must be my silent podner. Does ye heah?"

"I'se lisenin'."

"Den de man can't tech yer. I'se got a head as long as a watermillion. Well, now, lemme read yer dis paper."

Then Dabbs read the following: "Dis heah is ter certify dat Dabbs an' Carter is podners. Dabbs is de action podner an' Carter is de silen' podner. Dis is also ter certify dat so soon as Dabbs quits bein' de action podner de whole sto' 'longs ter Carter, an' when Carter quits bein' de silen' podner, widout anuder 'greement, de sto' all 'longs ter Dabbs."

"Dis were wrot up by a cullud lawyer," said Dabbs. "Sign de paper." The two men signed the instrument and called in witnesses. Next morning Dabbs came down to the store early, and when Carter arrived all the witnesses were standing in the store-room.

"Good mornin', Dabbs," said Carter. Dabbs didn't say anything, and when Carter continued: "Why de duce doesn't yer speak ter me?"

"De sto's all mine," said Dabbs, arising and turning to the witnesses.

"How's dat?" asked Carter.

"Case yer's no longer a silent podner. Yer's talkin'. When a man talks he's not silent. Yer'll please leab my sto', Carter, an' go off down in de country. Ef yer'd stuck ter de 'greement eberything would been all right. Hit's plain ter be seed dat yer won't."

Carter appealed to the witnesses, but was informed that he had broken silence, and of course was no longer a part owner of the store. The disconsolate man left. He is now a candidate for the legislature, and swears that if he is elected, he will work for the repeal of the odious law.

A PROMISING ENTERPRISE.

Copy of a Letter Intercepted on Its Way to the Republican Headquarters.

HICKORYVILLE, S. C., Aug. 20, 1880

Hon Marshall Fewell, Chairman Campaign Committee.

DEAR SIR: I am a gentleman of color, aged 40, healthy, active, sober, and well acquainted with this part of the country.

I wish employment of a steady sort during the remainder of this campaign, and beg leave herewith to lay before you a brief sketch of myself and of my qualifications.

Ever since the war, I have been perambulative—peripatetic in my habits of life. I may say I have peripatetfuked for a living.

Not to conceal too closely my real occupation beneath the blushes of ingenous shame, I will frankly confess to you that I am a tramp.

But there are higher potentialities in me. I can be made an instrument of political wrath. I am a big thing in the line I have taken up, and I only want first-class backing to make me a great national success.

I feel that the hand of Fate has specially selected me to perform your work in this section. I think you will take the same view of the matter when you hear my little casualty record.

In 1868 I was telescoped in a railroad collision; being at the time concealed in a truck-frame of a baggage car. In '69 I was castigated by a local vigilance committee for indiscretions in the hen-roost line. '70 was an off year for me; but in '71 I was caught in a landslide up in the Blue Ridge; and in '72 I was masticated freely by a bull-dog.

Then another season, of calm set in; but '74 and ,5 were a lively brace of twelve months for me. I had the small-pox, six free fights, took part in a gunpowder explosion, fell down a shaft, and rolled into a bonfire while under the influence of the cup which cheers and inebriates all the same.

Since then, my years have been principally devoted in trying to heal up, but with a very mild quality of success.

To put it clearly before the eye of the discerning imagination, I am the worst cut up man in the United States. I have all my four limbs, but I have none of my original beauty. I am cut and scarred criss-cross over every inch of my epidermis.

From this statement you will readily see that I am a Walking Outrage, and I propose to ultilize my affliction in behalf of the party with the largest appropriation.

I notice that the democrats are doing a little in the retaliatory outrage line; so I must ask you to decide at once upon my offer.

For posing as a plain, untrimmed outrage, I shall want $100 a pop. For tearing open my wounds and oozing fresh, 25 per cent. additional.

I engage to give local color to any outrage, in any part of the state, on one day's notice.

An early answer will oblige.

Yours truly,

ANANIAS CUFF.

They are Rallying.

[New York Star.]

General Hancock's old army comrades are rallying to his support in thousands. In Philadelphia alone there are no less than twenty Hancock clubs, numbering in the aggregate 5,000 men, all of whom have heretofore been active members of the republican party. Pennsylvania will, in all probability, give her electoral vote to Hancock.

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Sheppard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O.21-tf

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880.

(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:20 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:20; Angola, 5:30; Fremont, 5:48; Reading, 6:45; Bankers, 7:10; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 7:35, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p. m;

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:40; Huntertown, 11:50; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:28; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, mak close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:35, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detriot, Lansing, Iona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:50 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:10; Summit, 6:21; Pleasant Lake, 6.30; Angola, 6:55; Fremont, 7:13; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:50 p. m.; Buffalo, 8:00 a. m.; and New York, 10:00 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 6:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:40; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 22 P. M.—From Jackson 12:20 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:15, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:33; Reading, 1:45; Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:00; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:36; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:05 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p. m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p. m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 50; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3 50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	2 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 42 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 39 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 58 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	4 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 08 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

WABASH ST. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.	WEST.
Mail.........12:34 p. m.	Mail......3:20 p. m.
Accom'n....12:37 a. m.	Accom'n....6:37 a. m.
Local F't....4:45 p. m.	Local F't....6:35 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler....1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport. 6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To | Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest. North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, St. Louis or
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880,

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 7, Pacific Ex.	No. 3, Night Ex.	No. 5, limited ex
Pittsburgh lv.	m	9 15am	1 50pm	7 30pm
Rochester	1 m	10 00	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 45pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	3 05	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 5 am	6 25pm	9 55pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	2 46
Lima	10 40	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	6 25
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, At. Ex.	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 10am	5 30pm	5 15pm	9 40pm
Plymouth	11 48		8 45	2 50am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 00am	6 55
Lima	4 20	9 40	3 35	8 55
Forest	5 23		5 12	10 08
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	7 15pm	5 pm	7 25am	12 05pm
Mansfield	7 45	12 25am	7 55	12 35
Orrville	9 38	2 30	9 56	2 26
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 12
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	2 25pm	7 30

Nos 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

—o—

CHICAGO DIVISION.

—o—

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv	8 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 08		10 54
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 03	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 35	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 26am	6 23	4 06
Fostoria	1 08	7 25	4 58
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 18	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 10 Mail.	No 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 20am
Tiffin	10 00	7 55	12 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 25	11 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 22	1 06
Defiance	12 58pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 32	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 25
Avilla		12 20	3 30
Albion		12 45	3 56
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 20	4 30
Milford Junction		1 40	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar		6 10	8 20

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J MARTIN, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

Notice to Ditchers.

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4., 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest responsible bidder, the construction of the county alotment on the Balliatt ditch, in Keyser township, in said county. Specifications of said ditch can be seen on the ground at the time of letting. Bidders will be required to execute a bond according to law.

By order of the Board,
Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.
August 24, 1880. 35-3w.

SUPPLEMENT.

TEXTS FROM HANCOCK'S LETTERS.

When fraud, violence or incompetence controls, the noblest Constitutions and wisest laws are useless.

The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen.

It is only by a full vote, free ballot and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our Government. Take this function away and the whole structure falls.

The great principles of American liberty are still the rightful inheritance of this people, and ever should be.

The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons, and the rights of property, must be preserved.

The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war for the Union, are inviolable.

If called to the Presidency, I should deem it my duty to resist, with all my power, any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the Constitution, which, in every article, section and amendment, is the supreme law of the land.

This Union, comprising a general Government with general powers, and State Governments with State powers for purposes local to the States, is a polity the foundations of which were laid in the profoundest wisdom.

This is the Union which our fathers made, and which has been so respected abroad and so benificent at home.

The war for the Union was successfully closed more than fifteen years ago.

All classes of our people must share alike the blessings of the Union, and are equally concerned in its perpetuity, and in the proper administration of public affairs.

We are in a state of profound peace. Henceforth let it be our purpose to cultivate sentiments of friendship, and not of animosity, among our fellow-citizens.

As one people, we have common interests.

A sedulous and scrupulous care of the Public Credit, together with a wise and economical management of our Governmental expenditures, should be maintained, in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their rights to the fruits of their industry.

Let us encourage the harmony and generous rivalry among our own industries which will revive our languishing merchant marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, assist our merchants, manufacturers and producers to develop our vast natural resources, and increase the prosperity and happiness of our people.

Public office is a trust, not a bounty bestowed upon the holder.

The basis of a substantial, practical Civil Service Reform must first be established by the people in filling the elective offices; if they fix a high standard of qualifications for office, and sternly reject the corrupt and incompetent, the result will be decisive in governing the action of the servants whom they intrust with appointing power.

No form of Government, no matter how carefully devised, no principles, however sound, will protect the rights of the people unless administration is faithful and efficient.

Power may destroy the forms, but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword.

The true and proper use of the military power, besides defending the national honor against foreign nations, is to uphold the laws and Civil Government, and to secure to every person residing among us the enjoyment of life, liberty and property.

The Regular Army should be so directed by its superior officers as to be recognized as a bulwark in support of the rights of the people and of the law.

I would, under no circumstances, allow myself or my troops to determine who were the lawful members of a State Legislature.

Our system does not provide that one President should inaugurate another. There might be danger in that, and it was studiously left out of the charter.

The Army should have nothing to do with the election or inauguration of Presidents. The people elect the President. The Congress declares in joint session who he is.

I like Jefferson's way of inauguration; it suits our system. He rode alone on horseback to the Capitol, tied his horse to a rail fence, entered, and was duly sworn; then rode to the Executive Mansion and took possession.

WHERE HE WAS.

In Mexico—Breveted for Gallantry at Contreras and Cherubusco.

At Williamsburg—McClellan telegraphed to Lincoln: "Hancock was superb to-day."

At Antietam—He was in the thickest of the fight.

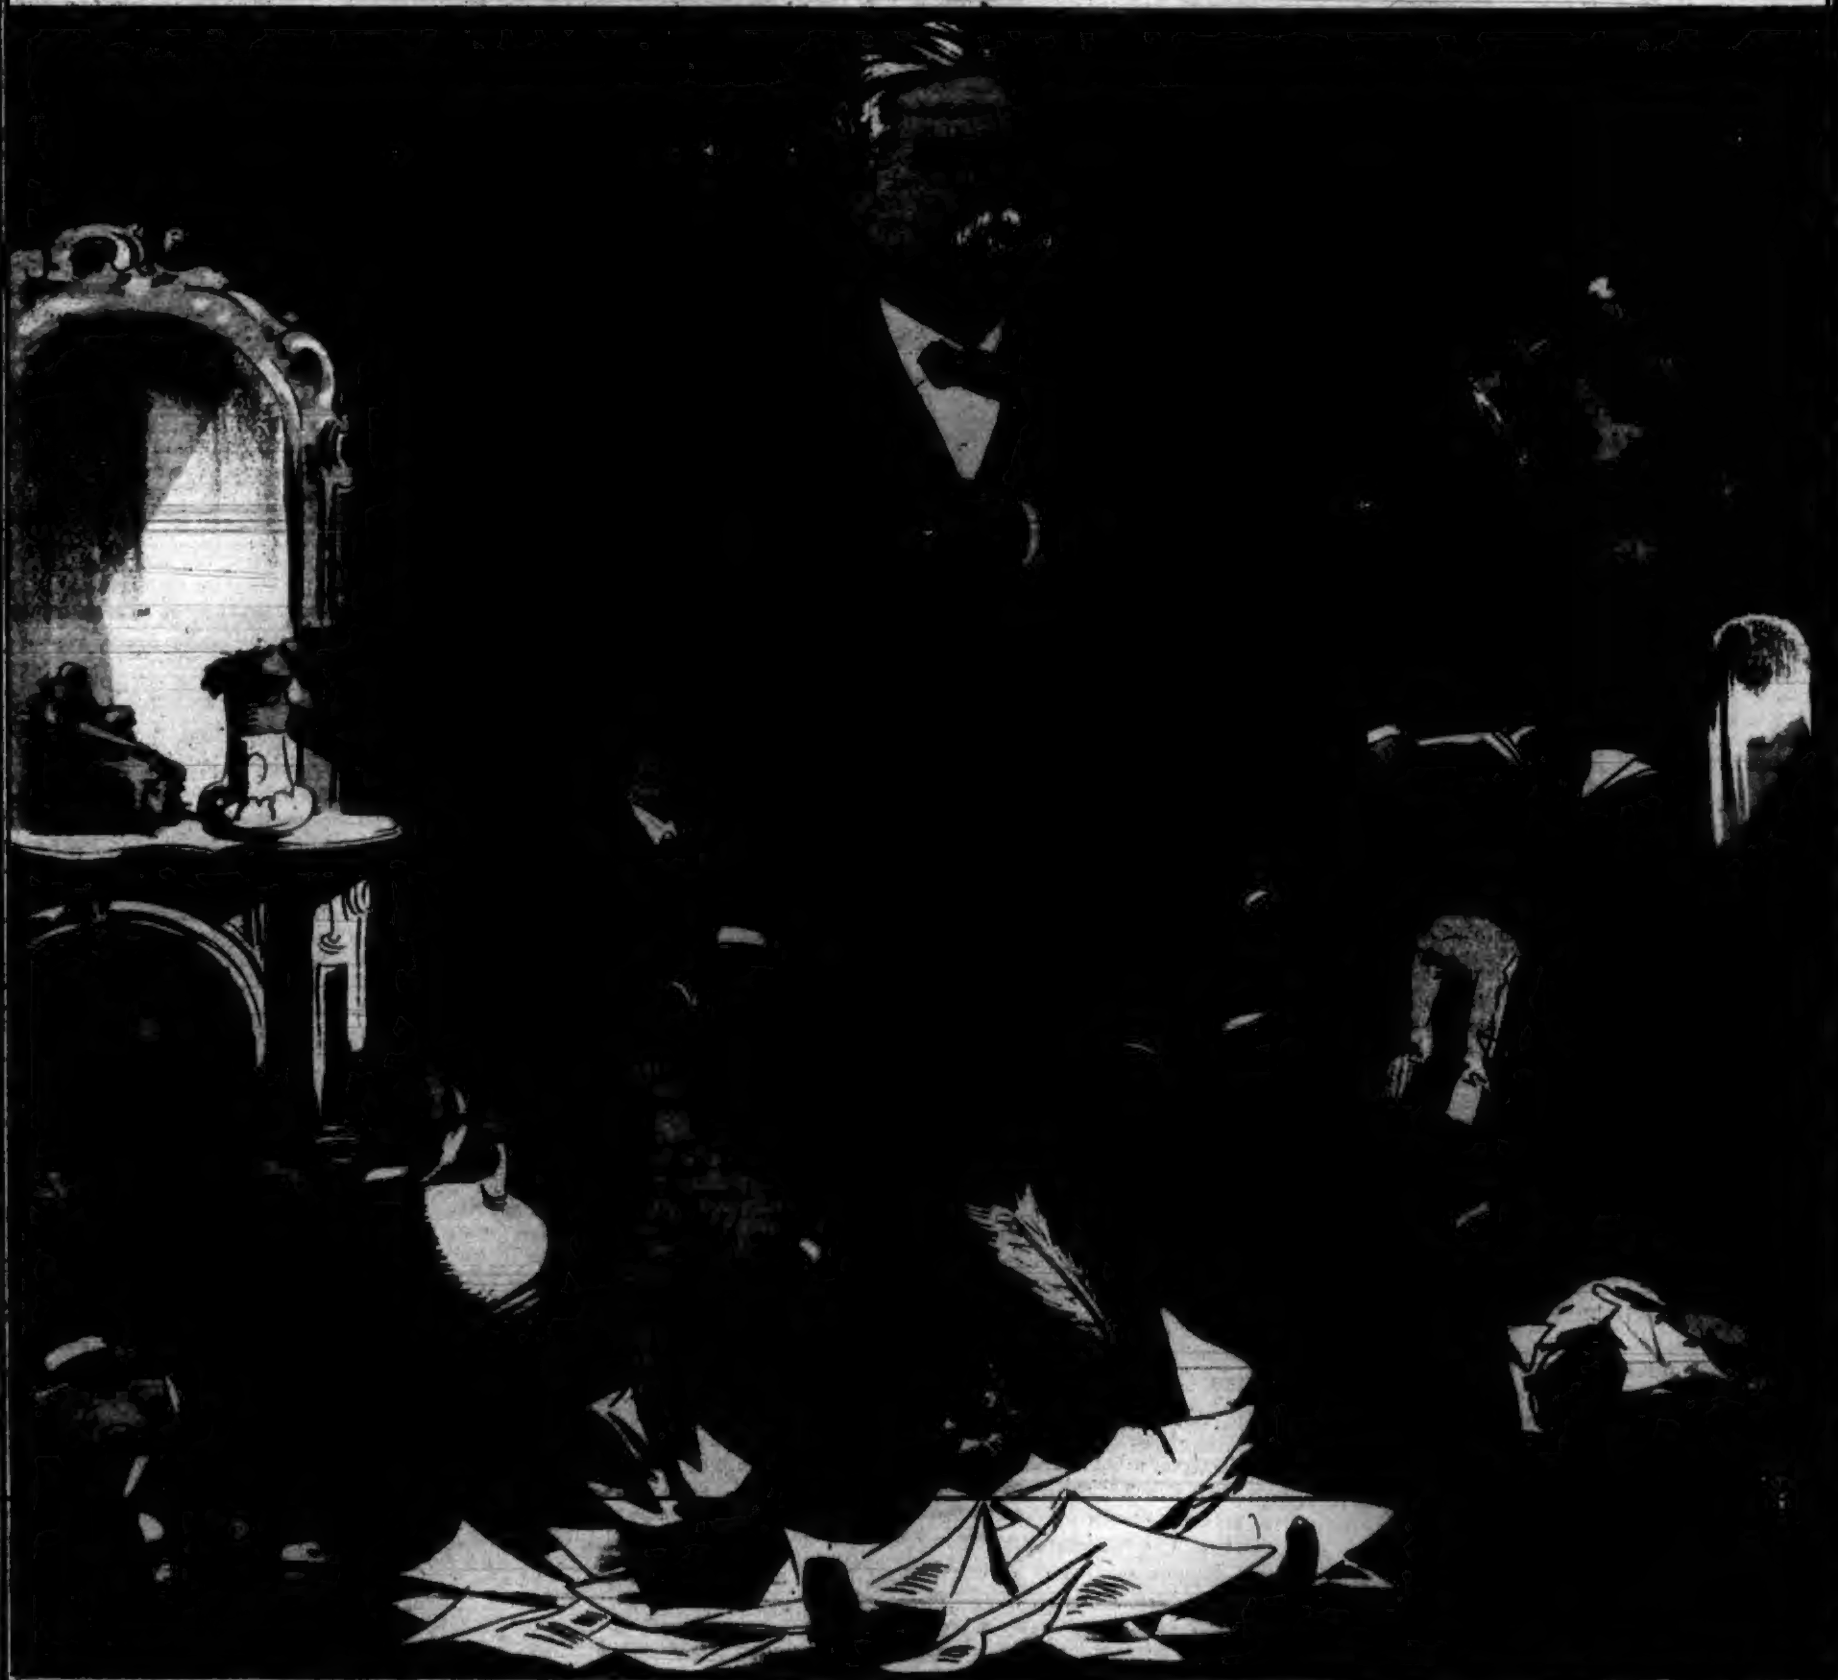
At Chancellorsville—His horse was shot under him.

At Gettysburg—He seemed there the very incarnation of war. On the second day he was at Cemetery Heights during the frightful cannonade, when the rebels concentrated the fire of one hundred and fifty guns on our lines. The air was full of missiles; streams of shot and shell screamed and hissed everywhere; it seemed as though nothing could live under that terrible fire—men and horses were torn limb from limb; caissons were exploded one after another in rapid succession, blowing the gunners to pieces. The infantry hugged the ground closely, and sought every slight shelter that the light earthworks afforded. It was literally a storm of shot and shell, like the fall of raindrops or the beat of hailstones. Those who had taken part in every battle of the war never had seen anything like that cannonade, and the oldest soldiers began to be uneasy for the result. Hundreds and thousands were stricken down; the shrieks of animals and screams of wounded men were appalling; still the awful rushing sound of flying missiles went on, and apparently never would cease. It was then, when the firmest hearts had begun to quail, the army witnessed one of the grandest sights ever beheld by any army on earth. Suddenly a band began to play "The Star Spangled Banner," and General Hancock, with his staff, with corps flag flying, appeared on the right of his line, uncovered, and rode down the front of his men to the left. The soldiers held their breath, expecting to see him fall from his horse, pierced by a dozen bullets; but still he rode on, while the shot roared and crashed around him, every moment tearing great gaps in the ranks by his side.

Every soldier felt his heart thrill as he witnessed the magnificent courage of his general, and he resolved to do something that day which would equal it in daring. Just as Hancock reached the left of his line, the rebel batteries ceased to play, and their infantry, 18,000 strong, were seen emerging from the woods and advancing up the hill. Hancock knew the artillery fire had been intended to demoralize his men and cover the advance of their infantry, which was to make the real attack. Turning his horse, he rode slowly up his line from left to right, holding his hat in his hand, bowing and smiling to his troops as they lay flat on the ground. Hardly had he reached the right of the line when the men, who, inspired by the courage of their General, could now hardly restrain themselves, received orders to attack the advancing rebels. Eighty guns which Hancock had concentrated opened their brazen mouths, and streams of bullets flew from the muzzles of our rifles to the breasts of the Confederates.

It was an awful day, and Longstreet's "Old Guard of the South" melted away like wax under that terrible fire. Of the 18,000 who came to the attack, 5,000 fell or were captured on the hill side. Thirty stands of colors and an immense number of small arms were taken. Hancock was everywhere, riding the storm of battle as if he bore a charmed life. At last, just in the moment of victory, he was seen to reel in his saddle and would have fallen to the ground had he not been helped from his horse. A ball had pierced his thigh, and for a time it was thought the wound was mortal.

REPUBLICAN EDITORS IN DESPAIR.----HUNTING A BAD RECORD FOR HANCOCK.



OFFICE OF "PUCK" 23 WARREN ST. NEW YORK.

MAYER, MERKEL & OTTMANN, LITHOG. 23-25 WARREN ST. N.Y.

EASILY FOUND.

RECORD
OF
JAMES A. GARFIELD.

CREDIT MOBILIER

was the corporation that built the Union Pacific Railroad. Oakes Ames handled its stock, and bribed members of Congress to pass the bill by giving them stock. The whole of the facts came out in the Forty-second Congress, before the Poland Republican Congressional Investigating Committee. They are as follows:

Oakes Ames swore that in January, 1868, he got for Garfield ten shares of the Credit Mobilier stock; Ames paid for the stock; Garfield did not pay him any money; Ames sold the bonds for $776, and received a cash dividend on the stock of $600, leaving due to Garfield $329, after paying for the stock, which amount he swore he paid him in cash, and he submitted the account as follows:

GARFIELD IN ACCOUNT WITH OAKES AMES.

The following memorandum referred to by witness as a statement of his account with Mr. Garfield was placed in evidence:

	J. A. G.	Dr.
1868.	To 10 shares stock Credit Mobilier,
	A…………	$1,000 00
	Interest…………	47 00
	June 19, To Cash…………	329 00
		$1,376 00
		Cr.
1868.	By dividend bonds Union Pacific Railroad A. $1,000 at 80 per cent. less 3 per cent…………	$776 00
	June 17. By dividend collected for you…………	600 00
		$1,376 00

OAKES AMES' "LITTLE BOOK"

showed the following entries of Senators and members of Congress, and the amounts received by them:

H. L. Dawes…………	$ 600	Bingham…………	$1,200
Schofield…………	600	Allison…………	600
Patterson…………	1,800	Kelley…………	329
Painter…………	1,800	Wilson…………	329
Wilson…………	1,200	Garfield…………	329
Colfax…………	1,200

Ames swears that after the matter became public, Garfield wanted to treat it as a loan, and says:

I stated to him that he had never asked me to lend him any money; that I never knew he wanted to borrow any. I did not know he was short. I made a statement to him showing the transaction and what there was due on it; that deducting the bond dividend and the cash dividend, there was $329 due him, for which I had given him a check; that he had never asked me to lend him any money, and I never loaned him any.

I told him he knew very well that that was a dividend. I made out a statement and showed it to him at the time. In one conversation he admitted it, and said, as near as I can remember, that there was $2,400 due him in stocks and bonds. He made a little memorandum of $1,000 and $1,400, and, as I recollect, said there was $1,000 of Union Pacific Railroad stock, $1,000 of Credit Mobilier stock, and $400 of stocks or bonds, I do not recollect what. My impression is that he wanted to say as little about it as he could, and to get off as easily as he could. That was about the conversation I had with him—about the long and short of it.

Q. Have you the memorandum Mr. Garfield made? A. I have the figures that he made.

Paper shown to the Committee containing figures as follows:

$1,000
$1,400
$2,400

Q. You say the figures were made by Mr. Garfield? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do these sums represent? How did he put them down? A. $1,000 Union Pacific Railroad stock, $1,000 Credit Mobilier stock, and $400 which he could not remember whether it was to be in cash or stocks or bonds.

Garfield swore before the Committee that he simply borrowed $300 from Ames, and afterward repaid him the money.

The Committee did not believe him, and did believe Oakes Ames, and its report to the Forty-second Congress contains the following:

"The facts in regard to Mr. Garfield, as found by the Committee, are identical with the case of Mr. Kelley to the point of the reception of the check of $329. He agreed with Mr. Ames to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. Ames received the 80 per cent. dividend in bonds and sold them for [illegible] per cent., and also received the 60 per cent. cash dividend, which, together, paid the price of the stock and interest and left a balance of $329. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was the balance of dividends after paying for the stock. Mr. Ames received all the subsequent dividends; and the Committee do not find that, since the payment of the $329, there has been any communication between Mr. Ames and Mr. Garfield on the subject until the investigation began."

He voted for the railroad charter, received the proceeds of the stock, tried to treat the transaction as a loan, swore that he received no dividend, and his judges, the Committee, disbelieved him.

(New York Times, February [illegible].)

Messrs. Kelley and Garfield present a most distressing figure. Their participation in the Credit Mobilier affair is complicated by the most unfortunate contradictions of testimony.

(New York Tribune, February [illegible].)

James A. Garfield, of Ohio, had ten shares; never paid a dollar; received $329, which, after the investigation began, he was anxious to have considered as a loan from Mr. Oakes Ames to himself.

Well, the wickedness of all of it is that these men betrayed the trust of the people, deceived their constituents, and, by evasions and falsehoods, confessed the transactions to be disgraceful.

DE GOLYER.

De Golyer & Company were parties who had a patent pavement which they wanted the Board of Public Works of Washington and Congress to buy and lay down. Sheppard was then in control of city affairs, and Garfield was the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives. In order to obtain the contract they had to pass through both these bodies. The subject was investigated before a Committee of Congress, and it fully appeared, by the testimony of Garfield and others, that the agent of De Golyer & Co. paid Garfield a fee of $5000 for his agency in procuring the contract for them; that he never filed with the Board of Public Works or elsewhere a brief or opinion on the subject of the patent pavement, but that he did speak to Gov. Sheppard once on the subject. The contract was given to De Golyer & Company. It cost the Government about $1,200,000. The profits to the contractors were about $400,000. It could not have gotten through the Committee on Appropriations without the influence of the Chairman. Garfield was the man to reach. His influence was secured by the $5000 fee, for which he gave no opinion, except to speak to Sheppard. The pavement was a cheat and a swindle.

The question came up in court in Chicago as Chittenden, the man who secured Garfield through Parsons, brought suit against De Golyer and M'Clelland for this service after they had secured their money on the paving contracts. His claim was that he had secured Garfield, not as a lawyer, but on the distinct ground that he was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. The plea of the defendants was that this was a claim for lobby services that the court could not recognize, because to do so would be against public policy, and their counsel quoted the opinion of Justice Swayne in a much weaker case than this of Garfield. The plea was sustained by Judge Farwell, of the Circuit Court of the United States in Chicago, and the case there ended with the defeat of the plaintiff.

The evidence was overwhelming, not only that the pavement was worthless and over-charged, but that the contract had been obtained through the influence of J. A. Garfield, member of Congress, and Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, through which committee the bill for that and all other District expenses would have to pass, and Richard C. Parsons, Garfield's friend and United States Marshal for the District. The pernicious effects of these official influences were so apparent, and presented a case so analogous to that of Trist vs. Child, passed on by Justice Swayne in the United States Supreme Court, that Judge Farwell took the identical ground, and even employed the same language which had been so happily employed by Judge Swayne:

"The agreement with General Garfield, a member of Congress, to pay him $5000 as a contingent fee for procuring a contract which was itself made to depend upon a future appropriation by Congress, which appropriation could only come from a committee of which he was chairman—was a sale of official influence which no veil can cover, as against the plainest principles of public policy."

The report of the committee and the testimony annexed are conclusive proofs of the facts here stated.

HIS OPPOSITION TO FOREIGNERS.

On the [illegible] of March, 1867, at the first session of the Fortieth Congress, Mr. Fernando Wood asked unanimous consent to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That this House extends its sympathy to the people of Ireland in their pending struggle for constitutional liberty. If the despotic governments of Europe shall be allowed to establish monarchical institutions in America, so should the United States foster and promote the extension of republican institutions in Europe.

Mr. [illegible] (Rep.) objected. The motion was then to suspend the rules to enable the resolution to pass. The question was taken, and there were 104 yeas and 14 nays. Thirteen of those who voted nay were Republicans, and James A. Garfield was one. Perhaps this affords a reason why Irishmen should rally to the support of Garfield.

In the Congressional Globe, April 17, 1871, First Session, part 2, page 735, will be found the following:

Mr. Kinsella. I move a suspension of the rules and the adoption of the following resolution, which I send to the desk:

Whereas, The prolonged incarceration by the government of the Dominion of Canada of persons accused of violating the neutrality laws is a source of irritation to a large number of American citizens; therefore,

Resolved, That the President of the United States is respectfully requested to [illegible] presented before such Joint High Commission [illegible] that their release may be effected.

James A. Garfield objected, and voted against the passage of the [illegible] resolution, [illegible] his hatred not alone of the unfortunate Fenian [illegible] in the resolution, who were then confined [illegible] more than five years, but of the whole [illegible].

VOTES TO TAX TEA, COFFEE, SALT, AND PRINTING PAPER.

As early as February 12, 1872, Mr. [illegible], of Pennsylvania, moved a resolution directing the Committee of Ways and Means to report a bill repealing the import duties on tea and coffee. The motion was agreed to without debate, for it was made under a suspension of the rules. Mr. Garfield is recorded in the negative. [Globe, part 2, Second Session Forty-second Congress, page [illegible].]

On the following Monday, February 19, Mr. Mercur made another motion of like import by moving to discharge the Committee of the Whole from the further consideration of a bill to repeal existing duties on tea and coffee. This was adopted also under a suspension of the rules. Mr. Garfield is again recorded [illegible]]

On the same day a resolution was offered directing the Ways and Means Committee, whenever it shall report a bill touching any import duties, to place salt and coal upon the free list. Mr. Garfield seems to have dodged this vote, for just before the vote was taken he is recorded on a civil rights bill, and just after it on the tea and coffee bill. [Ibid.]

The following is from the Congressional Record of April 6, '80:

Mr. Townshend, of Illinois. I move to suspend the rules so that the Committee on Ways and Means be discharged from the further consideration of House bill No. 5265, and that the same be now passed: The bill was read as follows:

"That sections 2503, 2504, and 2505 of Title 33 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be revised and amended so that the duty on salt, printing type, printing paper, and the chemicals and materials used in the manufacture of printing paper, be repealed, and that said articles be placed on the free list."

Mr. Townshend, of Illinois. I call for the yeas and nays on agreeing to the motion to suspend the rules.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken, and there were—yeas 112, nays 80, not voting 100. So (two-thirds not voting in favor thereof) the motion to suspend the rules was not agreed to.

Mr. Garfield voted against the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill to relieve printing paper, and type, and salt from tax.

SALARY GRAB.

He voted for the salary grab and took the money.

RAILROAD SUBSIDIES.

He voted to grant millions of acres of public lands to R. R. corporations, and against securing the rights of actual settlers on the same. May, 1870.

SWINDLES OF THE NEGRO.

He voted against instructing to investigate and try those concerned in the defalcations of the Freedman's Bureau.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

He voted against the bill to restrict it.

DENOUNCED BY HIS REPUBLICAN CONSTITUENTS.

September 7, 1876, Republicans of his Congressional District adopted the following:

Resolved, That we further arraign and denounce him for his corrupt connection with the Credit Mobilier, for his false denials thereof before his constituents, for his perjured denial thereof before a committee of his peers in Congress, for fraud upon his constituents in circulating among them a pamphlet purporting to set forth the finding of said committee and the evidence against him, when in fact material portions thereof were omitted and garbled.

Resolved, That we further arraign and charge him with corrupt bribery in selling his official influence as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for $5,000 to the DeGolyer pavement ring to aid them in securing a contract from the Board of Public Works of the District of Columbia; selling his influence to aid said ring in imposing upon the people of said District a pavement which is almost worthless at a price three times its cost, as sworn to by one of the contractors; selling his influence to aid said ring in procuring a contract, to procure which it corruptly paid $97,000 "for influence;" selling his influence in a matter that involved no question of law, upon the shallow pretext that he was acting as a lawyer; selling his influence in a manner so palpable and clear as to be so found and declared by an impartial and competent court upon an issue solemnly tried.

In their address Sept. 10, 1876, they say:

The Republican party has done much to purify itself within itself. Its Whiskey Ring Revenue officers are convicted and imprisoned, Belknap is deposed and impeached and only escaped conviction by a technicality. Its Salary Stealing, Credit Mobilier, Pavement Jobbing Congressmen are mostly retired. James A. Garfield remains. Richard C. Parsons, his compeer as a great patent pavement lawyer, nominated without opposition in a district Republican last year by 6,500 majority, was buried at the polls by Henry B. Payne, a Democrat, by 2,500 majority. The office-holders nominated him, but the brave, honest people rebuked him.

James A. Garfield fell from 10,935 majority in 1872 to 2,526 majority in 1874. "Oh, what a fall there was, my countrymen." Rebuked, shorn of character for truth and integrity, all that is noble in manhood, almost defeated, he stands a sad and blackened monument of avarice and greed.

OFFICIAL RECORD
OF
CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

Republican Candidate for Vice-President. He was Collector of Customs for the port of New York.

He was removed by President Hayes in 1879, and the following reasons for the removal were given by the President and Secretary of the Treasury to the United States Senate, in official letters.

Upon the strength of these charges of corruption and dishonesty in his administration of the office, the Senate assented to his removal.

"With a deep sense of my obligations under the Constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you, in order that the office may be honestly administered."—R. B. Hayes to Collector Arthur, January [illegible], 1879.

"You have made the Custom House a centre of partisan political management."—R. B. Hayes to Collector Arthur, Jan. 31, 1879.

"Gross abuses of administration have continued and increased during your incumbency."—John Sherman to Collector Arthur, January 31, 1879.

"Persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no service; the expenses of your office have increased while the receipts have diminished. Bribes, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in several branches of the Custom House, and you have in no case supported the effort to correct these abuses.—John Sherman to Collector Arthur.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 23, 1880. Number 39.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Ralston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 2-1y

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates. T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

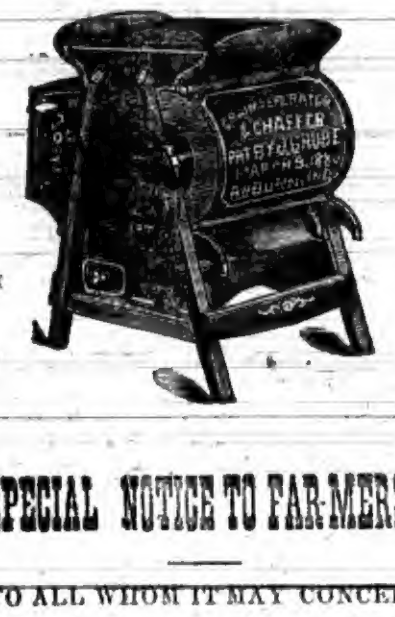
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn Indiana. 32-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn Ind.



GRAIN SEPARATOR & CHAFFER PAT'D J. GRUBE MARCH 9, 1880 AUBURN, IND.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it knows that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

The Remarks of A Greenbacker upon Judge Taylor's Recent Speech at Waterloo, in Relation to State Rights.

EDITOR COURIER: I recently attended a political speech delivered at Waterloo, by Judge Taylor, the republican candidate for congress. I have no personal acquaintance with Judge Taylor, but believe him a gentleman of candor, and one who would disdain to advocate what he did not believe. Having this opinion of the judge, there are some things I desire to say in relation to his speech. He spent a portion of his time in giving Hon. T. A. Hendricks a severe castigation for referring to the political record of James A. Garfield, in his (Hendricks') Indianapolis speech, and said for his part, life was too short for him to search out and decide every man's character, therefore he was willing to learn and believe what others knew, take their experience in the matter. Garfield was nominated by the republican party, and that was a sufficient guarantee to him that he was and is an honest and good man. But the judge has probably forgotten that the Chicago convention was not an investigating committee; its duty was to nominate a candidate for president; its members were not sworn, neither had they any sworn witnesses before them. Again, the members of that convention had been engaged in a long and heated partisan contest, the political caldron had been boiling, seething and blubbering for eight days, and when Garfield was picked up and thrown into that caldron it was not done so much with reference to his character as to the probability of beating Grant. This being true, I am at a loss to know why the judge should be willing to rely upon such evidence, rather than the sworn testimony of disinterested parties, men who were friends to Mr. Garfield, both politically and personally; men who had but one duty to perform; one great object to obtain; men who were chosen for the express purpose of investigating Mr. Garfield's political record, and the men who at the time were free from all partisan zeal or strife, under oath say he is guilty of corruption in office and perjury in denying the offence. But the judge dwelt on another subject at great length which interested me, as it should every other American citizen. A subject which involves a principle that will exist so long as a man loves freedom and hates tyranny; a principle which, when agitated by the judge, kindled anew the democratic fire in my breast. It was no less than the subject of state rights. In discussing the subject, the judged assumed the position that the national government was made by the people in the capacity of state citizens. In support of his theory he quoted the preamble of the constitution which says: "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, * * * do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America," and reasoning from these premises, concluded that all power was concentrated in the general government; that the Kentucky resolutions passed in 1798 were a political heresy, and the direct cause of the late rebellion. In doing this, he called the attention of the young men in the audience to the fact that this government, being made by the people, had the inherent right to legislate laws governing and controlling the elections in the states, and to send United States marshals into the different states to execute these laws. In fact, the judge in his speech claimed the same rights for the general government to legislate for the states as was claimed by Great Britain to legislate for the colonies; no less a right than the power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. He said that, for the purpose of instructing the young men who were about to deposit their ballot for the first time, he would read a portion of the Kentucky resolutions, and after having done so, proceeded to comment upon them at some length, but in doing so the judge forgot to give those young men a full history of those resolutions, or even to give that portion of their history which would be likely to interest and instruct them with reference to their impending political duties. Now, if those young men will take the time and pains—and all young men ought—to open the pages of American history, they will not be long in discovering the fact that away back in the midst of that war that gained our liberties there were many noble soldiers and generals who fought on our side who found no fault with the government of Great Britain, but were fighting to secure English rights under the English government, and when peace was finally declared, and those thirteen colonies became free and independent states and the delegates of the several states met at Philadelphia for the purpose of forming a government for the protection of the state governments, it was then and there discovered that many of our best soldiers and statesmen during all those years of privation and hardships had been dreaming of a new form of government, and having once tasted of that freedom secured by their states, and their sandals being damp with the dew-drops which had already fallen from the far-spreading boughs of that tree which had been planted upon our shores by the goddess of liberty, they were jealous of their rights. And when the judge put the question to his audience, whether they ever knew a government that was too strong, could those gray-haired sages have risen from their graves, their garments all covered with the rusts of antiquity, with one voice would they have answered him in the affirmative.

There were two parties in that convention, and however much they may have wrangled and disputed about everything else, there was at least one point upon which they all agreed, and that was that, in order to maintain their state governments and prevent being swallowed up by some of the surrounding nations, they must form some kind of a general government, and the question arose what kind of a government shall it be? Shall it be a government which absorbs the states and obliterates their geographical lines? Shall we apply the torch to our beautiful temple, and upon its ashes found a consolidated government? Shall we pull down this temple whose pillars are thirteen free and independent states, and beneath whose portals the oppressed of every land are now fleeing for protection from the strong hand of tyranny for the purpose of establishing a government more terrible in all its aspects than the land from whence they fled?

For three days that convention labored and toiled without adding one line to the constitution, until good and wise men began to despair of accomplishing anything. Washington said the people were jealous of their rights and were afraid to moved, and well they might be. They knew, as a matter of history, that it was a tendency of all governments to reach out after power. They had experienced this tendency as colonies of Great Britain, and their fathers had but a few years before realized all its baneful influences in the mother country. There are but few at the present who pause for a moment in their political career to inquire what the question of state rights costs those patriots, statesmen and sages who were assembled in that convention. They had but recently sacrificed their sons, brothers and fathers upon the altar of freedom; they had themselves just passed through a seven years' struggle with a strong and powerful nation; had torn themselves away from their homes, leaving behind them all those tender scenes around which memory loves to linger; had exposed their persons to the warring element of nature and bared their breasts to the deadly missiles of the enemy. All this and more had they suffered that the states which they represented might be free and independent. And as their feet pressed the floor of that old hall they, like a band of sailors whose bark had just outriden a fearful storm, and whose sails were tattered and torn, and whose masts were splintered, yet as they pace the deck of that noble old ship, behold, the storm-clouds have passed away, and the sun has pierced the mists and gloom that enshrouded them, and they feel that all they now have to do is to repair the ship for the future storms of political life. They framed the constitution and then said "the ratification of the conventions of nine states shall be sufficent for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same," thus adopting the constitution by states, and not pretending to bind those states which should not adopt it. Again, "the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people." Only about twelve years had elapsed after the constitution was adopted when the party claiming strong and extraordinary powers for the general government were in the ascendancy and attempted to run it upon their theory, but the people soon became uneasy and began to chafe under too much restraint, and those in power found it necessary in order, as they at the time claimed, to hold the people in restraint, to pass the alien and sedition laws, a system of legislation which ignored the right of the states to control and manage their internal and domestic affairs; and it was upon this occasion that the Kentucky resolutions of 1798, referred to by the judge, were passed. But there was another set of resolutions presented by James Madison, and adopted by the Virginia legislature a month later, and these were the resolutions that afterwards became the sheet anchor of democratic policy in relation to state rights. These resolutions provided and declared that,

"The constitution of the United States was a compact to which the states were a party, granting limited powers of government."

"That in case of a deliberate, palpable and dangerous exercise of other powers not granted by the states, the states had the right, and were in duty bound to interpose for arresting the progress of the evils, and for maintaining within their respective limits the authorities, rights and liberties pertaining to them."

"That the alien and sedition laws were palpable and alarming infractions of the constitution."

"That the state of Virginia, by its convention, which ratified the federal constitution, expressly declared that, among other essential rights, the liberty of conscience and the press could not be conceded, abridged, restrained or modified by any authority of the United States, and from its extreme anxiety to guard these rights from every possible attack of sophistry and ambition, having with the other states recommended an amendment for that purpose, which amendment was in due time annexed to the constitution, it would mark a reproachful inconsistency and criminal degeneracy if an indifference were now shown, to the most palpable violation of one of the rights thus declared and secured, and to the establishment of a precedent which might be fatal to others."

"That the state of Virginia declared the alien and sedition laws unconstitutional, solemnly appealed to the like dispositions in the other states in confidence that they would concur with her in maintaining unimpaired the authorities, rights and liberties reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

These resolutions formed one issue between the friends of a consolidated government and those who contended for state rights; they went before the people, and the principles embodied in state rights triumphed. And now let us in the light of history examine the result, for these political sentiments were the guiding star of democracy, who controlled the government for sixty years, and it is only by the application of principles that we are fully prepared to judge of the soundness of these doctrines which are based upon them. The democratic party stooped down and received the government in those early days from the cradle of its infancy, and fostered, nourished, cherished and cared for it until it became a giant among the nations of the earth, and during all these years we were a free, prosperous and happy people, the general government resting so lightly upon us that we scarcely realized that we were governed at all, and yet the farmer at his plow, the merchant at his counter, the professional man at his desk, the mechanic in his shop, the rich man in his palace and the poor man in his home were all equally protected, and like the peasantry of England, who are always looking back and mourning for the good old days of Queen Bess, so are we to-day mourning and languishing for the good old days of democratic rule.

My greenback friends, men with whom I have labored since the greenback party had an existence, how do you like the picture? Our time has been taken up with the question of finance, disputing about what kind of money we shall have in our government, but is it not of much more importance that we first decide what kind of a government we are to have? Shall it be a government whose powers are concentrated in the hands of a few who reside at Washington, and who claim the right to send their minions of power among us to trample upon our free elections, to abridge the right of free speech, and bind up the liberties of the press? Judge Taylor informed us in his speech that the question of state rights had been settled by the sword, and was no longer debatable, but I beg leave to remind the honorable gentleman that the principles upon which the democratic party was founded were not put in issue by the sword. It is true many of them were ignored and lost sight of by the party in power, but like all other great and shining truths, will rise in all their ancient glory so soon as oppression is removed. There were certain rights reserved to the states when the general government was formed; they were never delegated to the general government, and not denied to the states by the constitution. Will the judge inform us when, how and where we lost them? Among these rights are those enumerated in the Madison resolutions, yet the judge says that these were settled by the sword. He does more than one million stalwart democrats a great injustice when he asserts this. These men never exchanged the garb of the citizen for that of a soldier, for the purpose of tearing away the very corner-stones of the most beautiful temple of liberty ever raised by human love. The gospel of the new dispensation does not more truly rest upon Christ and his twelve apostles than do our lives and liberties, as a nation, rest upon the political principles embodied in those resolutions, and, thank God, that old democratic sun which has been obscured for so many years by dark, gloomy and portentous clouds is now sending his rays, which warmed and nurtured the strongest and most happy nation on earth into life, to drive away and disperse those clouds which have hung like a pall of death over a once free and happy people. When Ezra read the law from the walls of the city of the great kings, after the return from their long bondage, there was great rejoicing among the Jews, but oh! what a refreshing time there will be, what glad shouts of joy shall rend the air, what a frantic beating of patriotic hearts, all beating in unison of love and freedom, when General Hancock, standing upon the portico of the capitol, at Washington, shall take down the constitution of our nation from its dusty shelf and announce, in tones that will vibrate and revibrate to the remotest corners of our nation that this damnable republican rule has forever ceased. There is but one more point in the judge's speech and I am done—the attempt to claim all the honor of bringing about good times for himself and the republican party. The people would no doubt have been pleased to have the judge inform them what particular acts or legislation of the republican party brought about the good times of which he spoke. Was it the stupendous and gigantic robberies of Williams, the republican attorney-general; Belknap, the republican secretary of war; Babcock, the private secretary and confidential friend of the president; Robeson, the republican secretary of the navy? Was it by the shameful and disgraceful speculation in the credit-mobelier affair, the nefarious whisky frauds, and the Venezuela claims, by which untold millions were taken from the people? Was it the burning up of the millions of greenbacks—the people's money—and substituting interest-bearing bonds in their place, thus adding millions to the burden of an outraged and over-taxed people? Or, was it the repudiation of the people's contract with the bondholders, thereby depriving them of the opportunity of paying an enormous debt, the interest of which was eating like a cancer into the nation's life, thus, not only binding a greivous burden upon the backs of the present generation, but also upon the backs of untold millions of their posterity. What a strange proposition for any sane man to advocate before an intelligent audience—that a political party, upon the very face of whose history can be found more corruption than could be found in the cesspools of hell,—brought about good times for the people. It is an emphatic contradiction of the universal experience of man. If the judge's proposition be true, then let's throw wide open the prison doors and let the inmates go free, for the man who can do the best job of stealing is the best member of society.

In conclusion I ask, can any greenbackers, in view of the history of the republican and democratic parties, say there is no difference between the broad glare of noon-day and the thick, murky darkness of midnight, or that there is no difference between the purity of the white-robed angels and those who are doomed to an existence in the infernal regions below? The angel of this campaign is between two parties, the one contending for the right of free speech, untrammeled elections, liberty of the press, the right of the states to manage and control their domestic affairs, a system of rigid economy and honesty, and a strict adherence and obedience to the constitution, that great palladium of American liberty, and the other grasping for more power, thirsting for the blood of the nation, standing upon a pyramid of its own political crimes and reaching out its long, bony fingers to grasp the nation by the throat, that it may strangle the last vestige of freedom from our borders. Shall we stand idly by and witness this fearful struggle, more terrible than the warring elements, the rending of rocks or the upheaval of a continent, and in the result of which not only we, but those who shall come after us, are more interested than in all things else? If not, which side are we to espouse? Shall we remain content to eat the crumbs which fall from our lordlings' table? bare our backs to the masters' lash, and, like whipped curs, turn and lick the hands that inflicted the punishment? Or shall we help to swell the ranks of freemen who are battling for our liberties, and, like the youthful Hannibal, swear eternal vengeance on our country's foes?

AN ARDENT GREENBACKER.

A Promising Skirmish at Last.

[New York Herald.]

Mr. Hendricks, the Herald dispatches from Indianapolis report, charged Gen. Garfield with having helped to doctor returns and affidavits at New Orleans in 1876, as a "visiting statesman." Thereupon the Indianapolis Journal (republican organ) retorted that Mr. Hendricks had made statements which were without foundation in fact, and which ought not to be made by him, because, if true, they would disgrace General Garfield. On this Mr. Hendricks, in a public speech at Indianapolis, reiterated the accusation and offered such proof as he possessed, and this drew out Secretary Sherman, who not only exculpates Mr. Garfield, but whitewashes the returning-board and all its proceedings.

The Shermans were always an impulsive race; we suspect the secretary will see presently that he has gone too far. The less the republicans say in praise or justification of the Louisiana returning board the better for them. Mr. Sherman has persistently stood by those shameless swindlers, by no means to his own credit, and it is amusing to see how easily Mr. Hendricks has now drawn him into a controversy which is pretty sure, if it is continued, to damage the republicans. It is not prudent for them to help review the famous story of the Louisiana returning board.

Which is the Statesman?

[From the Evening Herald, Erie, Pa.]

In New Orleans, on the 29th of November, 1867, General Hancock issued his famous order in which he said:

"The great principles of American liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people and ever should be.

"The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved.

"Free institutions, while they are essential to the prosperity and happiness of the people, always furnish the strongest inducements to peace and order."

These are words of wisdom and true statemanship. They mean volumes. Compare them to Garfield's expression during the electoral count of 1876. He said:

"We have the army; we have the navy; we have the treasury, and we have the executive. If you had such cards wouldn't you play them?"

Could such language emanate from a true and patriotic statesman?

Hancock's Manly Characteristics.

[Gladigg's "Heroes of Three Wars."]

Hancock always displayed the characteristics of a true and chivalrous manhood. Gracious to a conquered enemy, generous in all his instincts, incapable of pettiness, never revengeful, splendid in military qualities, he was such a general as would fitly adorn the annals of any age, however glorious.

The student of human nature takes courage in contemplating such a character, and believes afresh in the possibility of the loftiest types of manhood.

Protect the Flag.

[From the Newark Morning Register.]

Every patriotic citizen of the land will share the hope which Major Alexander, a Mexican veteran, expressed to General Hancock on the occasion of the veteran's visit to him last week: "General," said Major Alexander, "there is one thing your old comrades look to have you do when you are elected president; they want to see you restore respect for the United States among foreign powers by protecting the mercantile marine sailing under our flag on the high seas."

At Cost.

As I shall soon commence to manufacture work for next year, I desire before doing so, to close out my present stock, and will sell at cost for the next 30 days. I will have a large stock from which to select, and it will be money in your pocket to call on me. I mean business, and "don't you forget it."

ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS,
Auburn, Ind.

How He Will Swear.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

It is possible that General Hancock may have used some emphatic language upon certain occasions. He is an emphatic man. General Garfield will do his swearing after the returns begin to come in on the night after the election. Out of consideration to other republican statesmen who object to swearing, he will retire to an unfrequented spot.

Now Is The Time.

(Kansas City Times.)

Mosby says he will vote as he shot, and there is no doubt that DeGolyer will vote as he bribed. As the Kentucky defendant remarked to the jury. "Now, is the time for all us men to stand together.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

Marshall O. Roberts, the well-known New York merchant, capitalist and steamship owner, is dead.

The late Marshall O. Roberts, of New York, leaves a fortune estimated at about $15,000,000....The summer residence of Prof. Alexander Agassiz, at Newport, built about five years ago, and never occupied, has been destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Rebecca Lyon, the bearded woman, for many years traveling with Barnum's, Forepaugh's, and other shows, has just died at Syracuse, N. Y.

THE WEST.

An express train on the Indianapolis and St. Louis railway was thrown from the track on a bridge thirty feet high, at St. Mary's Station, Ind., a few nights ago. The conductor was killed, and several passengers were injured. It is thought the disaster was caused by train-wreckers bent on robbery.....Two citizens of Hannibal, Mo., named Daniel Canery and Samuel Shields, descended a mine shaft near that city too soon after the explosion of a blast, and were suffocated....The Presidential party arrived at San Francisco on the 9th of September, and were given an enthusiastic greeting, nearly the entire population turning out.

Several of the Northwestern States are now holding their annual agricultural fairs, and the display of products is perfectly prodigious. Never has earth given such blessings upon man as this year....A half-breed Indian named Dixon, convicted of the murder of a woman, was executed at Ataka, Indian Territory, on the 10th inst. Being given his choice as to the instrument of death, he selected a Winchester rifle. His own cousin, also at his request, fired the fatal ball....The Secretary of the Illinois State Board of Agriculture furnishes the following figures in regard to the wheat crop of the State for 1880: The total number of bushels raised was 56,508,209, of which 53,865,505 were winter and 2,642,808 spring wheat. The number of acres in winter wheat was 2,970,086, and 266,264 in spring wheat....Ed. J. Murdock, a promising youth of Cincinnati, has robbed his widowed mother of $7,000, the extent of her fortune, and disappeared.

A 156-hour race between men and horses was brought to a conclusion at Chicago last week. The first prize was taken by a young man named Byrnes, the score at the finish standing as follows: Men—Byrnes, 578 miles; Krohne, 535; Colston, 529; Schoch, 420; Jackson, 203. Horses—Betsy Baker, 568 miles; Rose of Texas, 545; Bathman's entry, 527; Crockett, 525.

The last of a very successful engagement in an artistic way is announced for this week, Palmer's Union Square Theater Company concluding their engagement at Haverly' Chicago house, with the "Banker's Daughter" as the play for the last week. Mr. Thorne and all the other favorites of this strong and well-balanced company are in the cast.

C. W. West, of Cincinnati, has given $150,000 for the erection of an art museum in that city, upon condition that the citizens will raise an equal amount.

The number of hogs slaughtered and salted by Chicago packers from March 1 to Sept. 14 was 2,350,000, against 1,481,000 for the corresponding period last year....Hall, the defaulting treasurer of Lucas county, Ohio, has returned to Toledo to settle up his business affairs. It is said that his assets are more than sufficient to cover the deficit....A block of buildings on Fourth street, St. Louis, has been burned. Loss estimated at $200,000....The people of St. Louis are clamoring loudly for a new enumeration of the census of the city, claiming that the first count was a false one.

The village of Waitesburg, Wash. Ter., has been almost completely destroyed by fire....May Clarke, 18 years of age, has been held to bail at Lancaster, Ohio, for arson. Two of her playmates allege that she set a barn on fire....Gen. Bushrod Johnson, a well-known Confederate General, died recently at his farm in Macoupin county, Ill.

A duel between a Ute and a Navajo occurred recently near Santa Fe. Their quarrel was about a squaw, and they fought with knives. The Ute was killed.

In a trot against time, at Chicago, Maud S. covered a mile in 2:11¼....Two large cranberry warehouses, well stocked with the fruit, owned by Carey Brothers, at Berlin, Wis., have been destroyed by fire.

THE SOUTH.

Young De Jarnette, who, some time last July, killed his sister Mollie, an inmate of a house of ill fame at Danville, Va., in order to wipe out the stain on his family escutcheon, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Finzer Brothers' tobacco warehouse at Louisville, Ky., has been destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at $150,000.

Southern papers chronicle the death, at his home in Clarksville, Tenn., of Hon. Gustavus A. Henry, an old-time Whig leader in that State. He was a member of the Baltimore Convention which nominated Bell and Everett; he ran for the Governorship of Tennessee in 1853 against Andrew Johnson, but was defeated; was a member of the Confederate Senate, and one of the confidential advisers of Jefferson Davis. His eloquence and clear, ringing voice won for him the title of the "Eagle Orator of Tennessee."....The 150th anniversary of the founding of Baltimore will be celebrated in grand style by the people of that city on the 11th of October.

The young man, De Jarnette, who killed his sister at Danville, Va., has been sentenced to death.

Two convicts belonging to a gang working on the railroad near Mount Sterling, Ky., went into the woods, in charge of a keeper, to cut poles. When well in the thicket the prisoners turned their attention to their guard, chopped him to death, and escaped....In a shooting affair at Buffalo Springs, Tex., J. T. Lamb received twelve buckshot in his person, George Edwards five, Col. Young four, and Press Chandler was shot in the head. All the wounded are in a critical condition. Maltreatment of a hog was the origin of the difficulty.

A railroad company, known as the Chicago, Texas and Mexican Central has been chartered at Dallas, Texas, with a capital of $7,000,000, to construct a road from the Rio Grande northward to some point where connections can be made for Chicago....The town of Columbia, Brazoria county, Texas, has been almost destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at $150,000.

GENERAL.

The total receipts of forty railroads in America during the month of August were $16,310,450, against $12,572,660 in August, 1879. There has been an increase in mileage of 17 per cent....The Anchor line steamship Anglia, bound from Boston to Liverpool, was run into and sunk by the bark Tragate. The crew were saved, but the vessel and cargo, valued at $1,000,000, were a total loss....."Dr." Buchanan, the bogus diploma peddler who skipped from Philadelphia, and afterward went on a lecturing tour in Canada with a fellow quack, was decoyed over from Courtright, Ont., to St. Clair, Mich., and taken back to Philadelphia.

The island of Dominica, in the West Indies, was rained upon in torrents for four days and nights, while high winds swept the sea upon it, with the result of almost total submersion, and the destruction of crops. No loss of life is reported....Nothing so dangerous, and so difficult of detection, as the current $100 counterfeit note has ever been known in America. The plate is so arranged that it can be adjusted to suit the issue of any national bank. This makes discovery of the fraud almost impossible, except at the treasury, and there, strange to say, the cheat can only be proven by the superiority of the workmanship expended upon it.

The Catholic Archbishop of Quebec has issued a pastoral letter, deploring the emigration which is now going on from that province to the United States.

Mrs. Oliver Joly and her three children were drowned by the upsetting of a boat on the St. Lawrence river, at Berthier, Quebec. Two men and women were saved by clinging to the boat.

A vessel from Port de Paix, Hayti, has been towed into New York harbor, the whole crew being sick with yellow fever....Two vessel Captains, just returned to Gloucester, Mass., from the coast of New Foundland, report that their boats were boarded by a large number of natives, who used violence to prevent their fishing....The shipment of live stock from the United States to Europe, which was begun a few years ago as an experiment, has been so successful that it now exceeds the shipments of dressed meats. Last year 105,324 head of cattle were sent over, and so far this year 118,000 head have been sent, amounting in value to nearly $35,000,000.

WASHINGTON.

An aged colored man has appealed to Treasurer Gilfillan in a matter in which he is at a loss to know how he can render any assistance. The negro bases his claim upon the fact that he has shaved in his time no less than seven Presidents. The trouble is that some sharper in Delaware, where he lives, paid him a debt of about $300 in Confederate money, which, in his ignorance, he accepted and receipted for, supposing it was genuine legal tender.

POLITICAL.

The Missouri Greenback State Central Committee met at St. Louis last week, and under authority given them by the State Convention held some time ago, elected a full electoral ticket for the State, with Andrew Royal and O. H. Barker as electors-at-large, and adopted plans to push the Greenback campaign in the State....Chairman Barnum has declined the nomination to Congress from the Fourth district of Connecticut, because of his duties on the Democratic National Committee.

Dispatches of the 16th inst. from Portland, Me., say the vote on Governor is so close that the official returns will be required to decide who is elected. The Congressional delegation stands as follows: Reed, Republican, re-elected in the First district by 109 plurality; Frye, Republican, re-elected in the Second district by 1,800 majority; Lindsay, Republican elected in the Third district by 451 majority; Ladd, Fusionist, re-elected in the Fourth district by a reduced majority; Murch, Fusionist, re-elected in the Fifth district by from 1,000 to 1,500 majority. The Republicans have a good working majority in the Legislature....The Missouri Republican Convention, in session at St. Louis, nominated the following candidates for State offices: For Governor, Col. D. P. Dyer; Lieutenant Governor, Milo Blair; Secretary of State, J. C. Broadwell; Auditor, L. A. Thomas; Treasurer, W. Q. Dallmeyer; Attorney General, H. H. Harding; Railroad Commissioner, Howard Barnes (colored); Supreme Judge, J. E. C. Carnes; Register of Lands, Adam Theis....The Democrats of New Hampshire met in convention at Concord last week. Hon. Frank Jones was unanimously nominated for Governor. Col. W. H. D. Cochrane, Joseph Goodwin and John W. Dodge were nominated for Railroad Commissioners, and G. B. Chandler and John C. Maulton were chosen Electors....The Massachusetts Republican Convention renominated Gov. Long and all the other State officers, with the exception of Treasurer, whom the State constitution prohibits from holding a second term....The Democrats of Dakota have nominated M. S. McCormick for Delegate to Congress.

The Prohibitionists of New Hampshire have placed a full State ticket in the field, headed by George D. Hodge, of Hampton Falls, for Governor....The Greenback-Labor party of Maryland, in convention at Baltimore, nominated Milford Shindell and the Rev. Uriel Graves Electors-at-large. They also made the following Congressional nominations: Second district, E. A. Treadway; Third district, J. H. W. Onion; Fourth district, Samuel W. Pierce; Fifth district, Oliver Bryan; Sixth district, Nathaniel Sener.

FOREIGN.

The combined fleets of Europe having assembled in Turkish waters to compel the cession of Dulcigno to Montenegro, as provided by the treaty of Berlin, the Porte has concluded that it is time to act. Riza Pasha has dispatched troops to effect the cession before the men-of-war shall interfere, and bribery is being tried successfully on some of the more turbulent chiefs.

The Queen of Spain has been safely delivered of a daughter. Both are doing well. ....The French expedition up the Niger river, in Africa, met with a repulse in Barbary. Capt. Gallieni's force was attacked by 1,000 fierce natives, and after several hours' hard fighting the French retreated with a loss of fourteen killed, eleven wounded, and all their baggage captured. They returned to the coast, refitted, and have started by another route to try their luck once more....A serious insurrection has broken out at Herat, in Afghanistan, and the Governor of the city was murdered....Four persons were killed and thirty wounded by a railway collision near London.

An unsuccessful attempt was recently made to blow up a railway train near London with dynamite....Prince Bismarck has abandoned the project of a bi-metallic system....Politics in France are in a chronic state of uncertainty. De Freycinet, the Premier, and Gambetta are far from friendly, and changes in the Ministry are considered probable....The Mark Lane Express, in its last review of the foreign grain trade, reports the wheat harvest nearly completed in most English counties. The crop has proved generally disappointing, a considerable portion of the grain being blighted and the yield having been overestimated.

The new Finance Minister of Russia, M. Bunge, is said to have found the finances so disorganized and incrusted with defalcations that Gen. Melikoff has advised the Czar to appoint a commission to investigate the department....A St. Petersburg dispatch states that a political prisoner, confined five months, recently hanged himself. Before he died he disclosed the names of the Nihilist leaders, and that of the author of the Winter Palace explosion....It is announced that Dean Stanley will pay a final visit to the United States in 1881 in company with Thomas Hughes. The visit will be of a special character, for the purpose of investigating the church question in the United States.

A cable dispatch of the 16th inst. says: "Telegrams from Ragusa say the Albanians continue resolutely to oppose the cession of Dulcigno, and are hastening thither en masse. It is asserted that they have resolved to kill Riza Pasha, who is at Katerkol with only 1,500 men. The Albanians have forwarded a fresh threatening address to the Porte."

Dispatches from South America state that there is a prospect of peace between Chili and Peru. England, France and Italy are said to have convinced the first-named nation that its conquests have gone far enough, and United States Minister Christiancy is now at Arica, where he will meet certain high Chilian officials to discuss proposals for peace.

ALL ON THE LAST ROUND.

How an Arkansas Lover Won His Bride.

[Little Rock Gazette.]

The peculiar conditions upon which a matrimonial affair was based in South Arkansas have just come to light. Dick Anderson had just graduated between the plow-handles. It was said that he could run a furrow so straight that it would break a knock-kneed man's leg to walk in it. This accomplishment was a kind of frontispiece to a future volume of agricultural success, and more than one young lady in the neighborhood had her eye on the young catch. Dick wasn't bashful, but he didn't seem to be particularly impressed with the charms scattered around him like falling drops of water that linger on leafy trees after a rain. But he soon met his fate, a young lady, Winnie Hogrow. Winnie was a beautiful girl and could cover as much corn with a hoe, and scrape as much cotton as any man in the neighborhood. The couple loved—devotedly, agriculturally. Hogrow had raised his daughter with great care, and now that she had attained her zenith of usefulness, it grieved him to think of losing her. On Sunday Dick went over, and, going out where the old man was shelling corn to the pigs, said:

"Mr. Hogrow, I suppose—"

"I don't suppose anything, sir."

"Well, then, you doubtless know—"

"I don't know anything."

"That's all right, then. I am going to marry your daughter, and by next corn-planting you will know something. Do you weaken, Mr. Hogrow?"

"See here, young feller, I can't afford to lose my gal. I have had powerful bad luck this season. The cut-worms began on the corn by the time it came up, and the bugs pitched into the cotton; and, to make things worse, my best mule and one of my cows got into a fight the other day. The cow hooked the mule and the mule kicked the cow, until both of them died. So, under the circumstances, I'd rather you'd marry somebody else."

"I don't accept your misfortunes as excuses. I'm going to marry the girl."

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Dick. I'll make this arrangement: We'll wrestle, and if you throw me the girl's your'n; if I throw you she's mine. If you marry her against my will, I shall pleasantly exterminate you. If you throw me and marry her, this farm, together with the gal, is your'n. I'll give three trials—one to-day, one three weeks from now, and the other six weeks."

Dick was compelled to agree, although the old man was recognized as the best wrestler in the country. He had challenged everybody, and had thrown everyone who had accepted. After eating dinner the old man announced his willingness to take the first ballot. Dick was willing. The contestants, including the girl, went into the yard, the girl took the hats and the men grappled each other. The signal was given and Dick went over the old man's head and plowed a short furrow in the ground.

"Give me my hat," he said to the girl.

"Don't give it up," she remarked, handing over his tile. "Go away and practice." Dick left discouraged, but, taking the girl's advice, wrestled with steamboat men and farriers until the time for the next train came. At the appointed time, Dick appeared at Hogrow's residence.

"Feel like you can cut your capers putty well?" asked the old man.

"I think so. I feel that my cause is just, and, with the aid of kind Providence, I hope to pile you."

"Providence comes in putty handy at times," said the old man, pulling off his coat, "but it's a harder matter to buck agin an old staker. Get outen yer jacket. If I fall, the gal and the farm is your'n. Four hundred acres, and all under fence. Gal weighs one hundred and fifty pounds. Big inducements." The two men grappled, and again Dick plowed up the earth.

"Don't give up," said the girl.

"No," said the old man, "for the land is under fence, and the gal weighs one hundred and fifty—can handle a hoe wonderful!"

"Dick went away and pondered. It was evident that the old man could throw him every time. To lose the girl was to wreck his life. An idea struck him. He smiled. He left the neighborhood and remained until the time for the third fall was nearly up. On the appointed day he visited the old man.

"I have agreed to everything," said Dick, "and now I ask a favor. Hitherto I have been embarrassed. Let the final trial take place to-night in the dark. I will meet you here at 10 o'clock."

"Any way suits me," replied the old man; "I'll meet you anywhere."

At 10 o'clock the old man stood in the yard chuckling. His combatant climbed the fence and approached. Without exchanging a word the two men grappled. The struggle was short. The old man went up into the air, came down and struck the ground with a force that almost took his life. He lay for a moment almost unconscious. Dick raised him up and assisted him into the house.

"The gal and the farm is your'n," said the old man, and the young couple embraced each other. The next day they were married. Shortly after the ceremony was over, a large negro man appeared at the door, and, attracting Dick's attention, said: "I wants my $10. I flung the ole man hard 'nough to kill him. Where's my money?" Dick gave him $10, and, turning around, received a searching look from the old man. "I'll explain," said the bridegroom. "Realizing that I couldn't throw you, and at the same time realizing that my happiness depended upon this marriage, I resorted to a bit of treachery." Here he stopped to buckle his arms around his wife. "I found a big negro that I knew could throw you, and offered him $10. That's why I wanted the wrestling to take place in the dark. After he had thrown you, I rushed forward and raised you up."

When Dick had finished, the old man looked at him for full five minutes, and remarked: "It was a mighty mean trick, but the farm and gal are your'n. Four hundred acres under fence, and the gal weighs one hundred and fifty."

The Priest's Wit.

Curran once said to Father Leary: "I wish, Reverend Father, that you were St. Peter and had the keys of heaven, because then you could let me in." The shrewd and witty priest saw the sarcasm, and turned its sharp edge on the skeptic by replying: "By my honor and conscience, sir, it would be better for you that I had the keys of the other place, for then I could let you out."

"Buck" Grant as a Financier.

Gen. Grant's election to the Presidency of a mining company is the outcome of a long-planned scheme upon the part of Ulysses Grant, jr., or "Buck" Grant, as he is generally called. Buck Grant is now twenty-eight years old, and one of the most successful financiers of his age in this country. His talent in that direction has been fully brought out during the last two years. During the closing days of his father's Presidency he acted as Private Secretary. Grant doubted every one about him when Babcock fell, and would not allow any one but Buck to have access to to his private papers. Buck was at this time modest, smooth-faced, medium-sized, slim in figure and very boyish looking. His modesty and ability, however, made him many friends. Some powerful men in New York took up Buck when his father set out for Europe. Young Ulysses, who is a graduate of Harvard, thought his future was to be developed in the legal profession. He was, after admission to the bar, assigned to do duty in the United States District Attorney's office in New York. There Secretary John Sherman has thrown special business in his way. Buck Grant, after accumulating a small capital under influential and powerful auspices, began making ventures in Wall street. He succeeded so well that he abandoned the law for more profitable fields of speculation. Becoming interested, finally, in mining stocks, he paid a visit to the Pacific coast, where the great bonanza firm of Flood & O'Brien took him under its wing. Mr. Flood tossed young Buck a few points, and he made such a good use of them that the great speculators backed young Ulysses in his cruise around the world of speculation, acting as his mentor at every point. The docile pupil so made use of his skillful training that at the end of two years he had $300,000 placed to his credit. It was only when this sum was reached that the young man proposed a matrimonial alliance with the great firm. Buck has now associated with him as partner his brother Jesse D. Grant. Buck himself promises to become one of the most brilliant operators in the country. Besides the fortune that he has made for himself he has made several special speculations for his father. Just before Gen. Grant went to Mexico he intrusted to Buck Grant $25,000 for the purpose of seeing what could be done with it. Buck Grant, during the absence of his father, cleared for him from the capital some $40,000; so Gen. Grant, upon his return, found a dispatch placing $65,000 at his disposal by his thrifty son. With this profitable speculation added to his credit, Gen. Grant is worth to-day in the neighborhood of $180,000. This latest mining scheme of Buck Grant's in placing his father at the head of the San Pedro Company, is based upon a plan of the youthful Ulysses to realize the wildest dreams of Monte Christo. The union of the Grant and Flood families is to be followed by an aggregation of wealth that will make the families among the most formidable in point of influence in this country.

A 'Gaitor Story.

A month later I visited Lake Jessup with Judge Emmons, of Jacksonville. The judge was a wonderful marksman, as full of fun as a magpie; but he was getting old, and his eyesight was failing. One day we killed a monster on the edge of a marshy canebrake. He had splendid teeth, and the judge wanted to secure them as mementoes. The painter of the boat was tied to the reptile's leg, and we towed him across an arm of the lake to solid ground. A small ax was borrowed from the house of a "cracker" near by, and we concluded to decapitate the prize, boil the head and remove the teeth. The body was so large that we could not draw it upon the shore. A stake was cut and pointed and driven through the jaws of the reptile, pinning him into the mud. The water was probably two feet deep. The judge drew out a sheath knife, and was about to make an incision when he was cautioned by a barefooted negro who stood on the bank watching the operation with curious eyes. "Better git shut o' dat ah gatah, shuah," said he; "'twell he be done gone dead." "Oh, good Lord," exclaimed the judge, "he's been dead an hour. If he was alive do you reckon he'd allow us to drive a stake through him." "No gatah am dead till de sun am gone down," the darkey observed. The judge laughed and passed me the knife. I inserted the blade in a bullet hole near the shoulder, and cut a gash in the flesh, following the trend in the diamond-shaped scales beneath the skin. Judge Emmons stood near the monster's tail. The knife penetrated the quivering flesh, and was stained with blood. As quick as a flash the tail shot from the water and the judge was knocked fully ten feet. The reptile raised his head, stake and all, and sailed out into the lake like a submarine battery. Judge Emmons lost his glasses, but was fortunately unhurt. The incident, however, convinced him that it was dangerous to fool with a dead alligator until after sundown.—Florida Correspondent of the N. Y. Sun.

Killing Fourteen Rattlesnakes.

Isaac Baker, a veteran snake fighter, of Scranton, Pa., exhibited the skins and rattles of fourteen rattlesnakes, which he had just killed on the mountains west of Scranton. Baker went to the mountains with his father-in-law. He was startled to find two monster rattlesnakes lying at his feet. Each of the men carried a heavy stick, and Baker pinned one of the reptiles to the ground, and, after a short season of squirming and rattling, cut off its head with a jack-knife. Wheeler, who engaged the other monster, had more trouble, as he had never encountered such a foe before. It sprung at him several times, but, by a dexterous use of his legs he kept out of the way, while he dealt the snake several effective blows with his club, and finally killed it. One of the snakes measured four feet six inches in length, and had sixteen rattles, and the other measured four feet two inches. Having disposed of the monsters and secured their skins and rattles, Baker and Wheeler advanced to a clump of rocks for the purpose of making a close examination of the stones. Their progress was impeded, however, by the presence of a fierce rattlesnake of monstrous size, that stood hissing and shaking its rattles in the path. It was surrounded by eleven small ones. They were wonderfully agile, and their color exceedingly beautiful. The attitude of the old one set their rattles in motion, and incited them to join in the attack. For a time Baker and his companion had a lively fight. The large snake, which was evidently the mother of the others, fought with great desperation, but they killed her and then the others.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Cure of Drunkenness.

The Churchman, discussing the results of the treatment of inebriety at the Kings county (N. Y.) and other asylums, says: Whether drunkenness be considered a disease or a vice—and it is undoubtedly both—it does not appear on the face of it why it may not be treated with as successful results as insanity, for instance. It is not pretended that all cases of insanity can be cured, being sometimes hereditary, and in other instances superinduced by causes, and come to a degree to which no skill of man is equal. It is enough that the number of permanent cures ranges from 50 to 80 per cent., while others are largely benefited. This seems to be about the state of the case in the treatment of drunkenness. There may be cases enough in which the vice or disease has been inherited from the second or third generation, or in which the nervous system has become so utterly shattered that nothing can restore it. This stands to reason. But in other, and, it will be seen, the majority of cases, either there is no especial appetite for strong drink, or, even if this appetite amounts to a passionate craving for it, there is still such a basis of physical and moral power to build upon that by a few months' treatment a man may again become his own master.

The Sad Passenger.

"Once, over these boundless prairies," the sad passenger said, "over these prairies—" "They call them 'prurries' over in Indiana," the fat passenger said. "And down in Illinois," said the cross passenger, "they call them 'perarries.'" "And up in Michigan," the brakeman said, "they call them 'pairs.'" "And down in Kentucky," the man on the wood-box remarked, "they call them 'perars.'" "Well, anyhow," the sad passenger resumed, "once over these plains—" "You said 'prairies' before," said the passenger with the sandy goatee. "Yes, and started a very profound philological discussion by it. Well, once over these verdant prairies—" "The first time," said the cross passenger, "you said 'boundless prairies.'" "Well, then, over these boundless prairies once—" "Only once?" asked the fat passenger. The sad passenger sighed, but went on: "Once the painted Indian roamed—" "What for?" croaked the woman who talks bass. And the sad passenger went into his shell, and said he would tell that story yet if he had to hire a hall to tell it in.

Novel Use of Wood Shavings.

From wood shavings and paper Herr Heilemann makes plates, dishes, etc., as follows: Selected plane shavings are bound into bundles and steeped in a bath of weak gelatine solution about twenty-four hours, then dried and cut into suitable lengths. Plates are cut of strong paper or thin pasteboard of the size of the objects to be produced. These are moistened with a liquid consisting of weak gelatine solution with sodium waterglass, and pressed in heated metallic molds. After drying, the pressed paper objects are coated on both sides with an adhesive material made of five parts Russian gelatine and one part thick turpentine, the shavings are applied to them, and the whole is subject to pressure. Wood shavings alone would, because of their unequal thickness, present uneven surfaces. The objects are now cut, if necessary, dried and varnished.

The Rev. J. W. Grubbs officiated at what was intended to be a mock marriage, at Springfield, Mo., but afterward declared that the knot was legal, and made a formal record of the certificate. The couple were indignant at this action, and had the clergyman prosecuted. He was fined $25 for making a false return; but he has appealed, and for months the pair will not know whether or not they are husband and wife.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$8 25	@10	50
Hogs	4 50	@ 7	15
Cotton	11½	@	12
Flour—Superfine	3 40	@ 4	00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 02	@ 1	05
Corn—Ungraded	50	@	52
Oats—Mixed Western	40	@	43
Rye—Western	90	@	95
Pork—Mess	15 90	@16	00
Lard	8¾	@	8⅞
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 95	@ 5	35
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3	50
Medium to Fair	4 60	@ 4	75
Hogs	4 50	@ 5	75
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50	@ 5	75
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 25	@ 5	00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	93	@	94
No. 3 Spring	85	@	87
Corn—No. 2	39	@	40
Oats—No. 2	28	@	29
Rye—No. 2	83	@	84
Barley—No. 2	75	@	76
Butter—Choice Creamery	25	@	27
Eggs—Fresh	13	@	15
Pork—Mess	17 50	@17	75
Lard	7⅞	@	8
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 05	@ 1	07
No. 2	91	@	92
Corn—No. 2	40	@	41
Oats—No. 2	29	@	30
Rye—No. 1	84	@	85
Barley—No. 2	72	@	73
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	90	@	91
Corn—Mixed	38	@	39
Oats—No. 2	29	@	30
Rye	82	@	83
Pork—Mess	15 50	@16	00
Lard	7⅞	@	8
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	90	@	93
Corn	45	@	46
Oats	33	@	34
Rye	89	@	90
Pork—Mess	16 00	@16	50
Lard	7⅞	@	8
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	95	@	96
No. 2 Red	96	@	97
Corn—No. 2	43	@	44
Oats—No. 2	32	@	33
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	4 75	@ 5	00
Wheat—No. 1 White	95	@	96
Corn—No. 1	45	@	46
Oats—Mixed	34	@	35
Barley (per cental)	1 25	@ 1	75
Pork—Mess	16 50	@16	75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	91	@	92
Corn	40	@	41
Oats	31	@	33
Pork—Clear	15 75	@16	00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 75	@ 5	00
Fair	4 25	@ 4	50
Common	3 50	@ 4	00
Hogs	4 90	@ 5	45
Sheep	3 25	@ 4	00

CENTAUR LINIMENT

always Cures and never Disappoints. The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.
Manufacturers. Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Mfg Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

THE Book for the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, Conjugal Duties, Conception, Love and Courtship, Impediments to Marriage, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, [illegible] DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MFG CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons:

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip-top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 19, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

Mich., Jan. 25, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. [illegible]

Iowa, Oct. 10th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. [illegible]

West Virginia, Aug. 23, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. [illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 28th, 1879.—Please forward me at once another box of the Pastilles. [illegible]

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 8, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, and it has made a perfect cure of him. We have another customer now suffering in the same way, and wish by return mail one No. 2 box.

A TELLING SPEECH.

Delivered by the Hon. C. S. May, of Michigan, at Michigan City, Ind.—The Issues of the Campaign Discussed in a Masterly Manner.

Mr. May first spoke of the great importance of the impending campaign, and then passed to a brief consideration of the claims on the country put forth by the Republican party. The day had passed, he thought, when the record of the Republican party during the war could be urged as the only necessary support of these claims. The party had changed. It was no longer the party of Lincoln, Chase and Seward, and the issues on which it had successfully fought had died with those leaders. The only real issue between the parties, he continued, is one of administration, as to which one will best administer the Government; and the great question is, what now is best?—not what was best fifteen or twenty years ago. It is high time that this most pernicious and absurd idea, that parties can escape the consequences of present iniquity by past good conduct, or forfeit, when right to-day, the public confidence for the wrong their predecessors did in another generation, should be scouted and banished from our politics. This voting parties up or down on their "records" is a vast piece of public nonsense. The questions of statesmanship, of government, are intensely practical things, and not matters of mere sentiment. I am not here to defend the Democratic party in the days of Jackson or Buchanan, nor to assail the Republican party in the days of Lincoln and Sumner. But I am here to show that the hero of Gettysburg is a good and safe man to be elected this year to the Presidency, and that the Republican party and their nominee, in this year of grace, are unworthy of the confidence of the American people. They are to-day on trial for high crimes and misdemeanors, and I do not propose to allow them to escape conviction on a plea of previous good character. Good character is only allowed to be shown in the courts in doubtful cases. It goes for nothing where the facts are clear. The facts are clear in this case—they are notoriously clear. It is not a case of circumstantial evidence at all. The Republican party of to-day is guilty, thrice guilty, of great and manifold public corruptions—corruptions proved, corruptions confessed, and it must not be attempted to sneak out of court by showing what it did in the war. It is what it has done since the war that now concerns the American people.

What now is best? Let me answer that question by saying that the great and pressing political need of this country to-day is a complete and radical change of administration—a change which shall clear out every department of this Government, from high to low, and give us a great national purification.

The real mission of the Republican party was accomplished ten years ago, and since that time it has simply been holding on to the offices by good luck and successful fraud. I ask is it not best that there should be another change, that incompetent and dishonest officials should be got rid of, that the books should be examined, and the corrupt rings broken up? The corruptions of the Republican party in these recent years are not a matter of deduction or inference, but of appalling fact and world-wide notoriety. They have been proved over and over again before Congressional investigating committees; they have been confessed by some of the chiefest perpetrators and culprits; they have been acknowledged by all candid and fair-minded men in the organization. And these frauds and corruptions have not been small and petty ones, mere peccadilloes of some obscure official here and there, but startling and gigantic ones, and in the highest places—perjurers and bribe-takers in Congress, thieves and robbers in the Cabinet. Our country has been scandalized and disgraced by some of these corruptions in the eyes of the whole civilized world, and republican institutions themselves made the jeer and scoff of mocking aristocrats and disbelievers in our form of Government across the water.

Now, fellow-citizens, why should we not have a change of administration? It is a time of peace; there are no great material interests to suffer; the Democratic party have a confessedly good candidate—why is this not a good time to change?

Masses of fair-minded men in the Republican party, who recognize the force of all this, who realize that their party has grown corrupt and dishonest, would be inclined to agree that the time has come to make a change, if they were not deceived and deluded by the idea that this cannot safely be done on account of past transactions and party "records"—an idea vigorously propagated and wholly relied upon by the leaders and organs in this canvass, because they well know that if the issue is made to turn upon the vital questions of to-day, their party, burdened down to the water's edge with its frauds and corruptions, must go under. So they raise the "record" cry, and the war-cry again, and talk long and loud about what happened fifteen or twenty years ago.

Fellow-citizens, I want this Republican party to come out into the open field of to-day and fight the battle, like men of sense and courage, on their own merits, if they have any, and not on the virtues of their fathers and grandfathers—virtues which they have strangely, if not impiously, neglected to imitate. Come out and show, if you can, that your party is clean and pure; that Garfield is a better man than Hancock, and that we do not need any change.

No, fellow-citizens, they do not propose to fight the battle in this way, but instead they begin just twenty years back, and say that the Democratic party is responsible for the rebellion, and that they put the rebellion down. This assertion is the very beginning of their argument this year, the broad proposition upon which their argument rests. When we ask for a change in the Government we are met on the threshold by this assertion, which is everywhere thrust in our faces as a reason why we should not have one.

Now, I have two conclusive answers to this Republican stock argument of the campaign: First, it is not germane to the question, in parliamentary phrase; it is not relative and material to the issue, in legal phrase. For, even if true, it does not prove that it would not be better for the country to elect Gen. Hancock and make a change in the offices this year. But in the second place, it is not true in fact. The Democratic party, as a party, did not rebel against the Government, and the Republican party did not put down the rebellion.

Let me show you that I am correct in this. The secessionists of the South rebelled against the Democratic party and put up a candidate in opposition to it in 1860, a year before they went into open rebellion against the Government.

They refused to support Douglas at Charleston, broke up the convention, and withdrew, and afterward nominated and voted for Breckinridge. After they had gone, the National Democratic Convention reassembled at Baltimore and nominated Stephen A. Douglas, a loyal man and a patriot, and supported him, as a party, for President that year. When Mr. Lincoln was elected, it was the men who had left the Democratic party and voted for Breckinridge that went into rebellion, and Mr. Lincoln and the new Republican administration had in their first fearful trial no more welcome and powerful support than that rendered by Stephen A. Douglas, the defeated candidate of the National Democratic party. Now tell me, by what mean, partisan logic can it be made out that the Democratic party should be held responsible for men who had left it and fought it to the death, and how did it bring on a rebellion by voting for a great Northern statesman and patriot, who stood like a brother by Mr. Lincoln's side in the supreme crisis of the Government? No, this reckless and wholesale charge against the Democratic party will not stand. It is a false charge, and respectable Republicans should be ashamed to make use of it.

There is one view in which Democrats possibly contributed to bring on the war, which by comparison is not altogether complimentary to the Republican party. At Charleston, as we have seen, they resisted and refused to compromise with the slave power, and went bravely to certain defeat under Douglas rather than submit to Southern dictation. After Mr. Lincoln's election, the Republican party in Congress voted to abandon their non-slavery extension principle, the vital plank in their platform, and compromise with the South if thereby the war could be averted. They were the ones, in this instance, that knuckled to the South.

And equally false and even more mendacious is it to assert that the Republican party put down the rebellion. No party put down the Rebellion. The people put it down, the loyal people of the whole country. Why, fellow-citizens, look how the figures brand this falsehood. In that same election of 1860, which preceded the war, Mr. Lincoln (the Republican candidate) had, in round numbers, 1,800,000 votes, while Mr. Douglas (the candidate of the Democratic party) had 1,300,000 votes. Now, I take it that Mr. Lincoln received all the Republican votes, as there was no other Republican candidate, and I suppose it will not be contended that every Republican voter went to the war, and yet the figures show that there were over 2,800,000 Union soldiers enlisted in the war—1,000,000 more than the whole Republican vote of the country! Now, my Republican friends, will you tell me where this extra 1,000,000 of Union soldiers came from? It is mathematically demonstrated that they could not have come from the Republican party, and yet evidently they had something to do with putting down the rebellion.

You know, fellow-citizens, where this extra 1,000,000 of soldiers came from. They came from the Democratic party.

Mr. Lincoln was elected by a minority vote—he lacked more than 930,000 votes of a majority. Had the 1,300,000 men who supported Douglas at the North refused to sustain Mr. Lincoln in putting down the rebellion, where should we have been? This was nearly half the loyal vote of the country, and the South was united against us. No, I say, let us be fair and just. As one who differed from the Democratic party in those days, it is only the simple truth to say that without their help this Union would have been lost.

Again, fellow-citizens, when we demand a change in the Government, we are met by the cry that the South is "solid" for the Democratic party. By this is meant, I suppose, that the Southern States are likely to cast their electoral votes for Gen. Hancock. This, I presume, is quite probable to be the case, as the Republican leaders have declined to contest that section of the country, and practically withdraw all opposition to the Democratic party there. But suppose, under these circumstances, the South should be "solid" for the Democracy. What is there unnatural or unlawful about that? Nobody, not even the most stalwart Republican, I take it, will dispute their legal right to vote the Democratic ticket if they prefer that to the Republican. Is it not natural that they should prefer that to the Republican? Why, what monstrous folly is all this talk of the Republicans about the "solid South!" First, they abandon that whole section, take care that the South shall be "solid," and then fly in our faces with the pretense that this will be the success of the rebellion which was suppressed fifteen years ago, and the restoration of the slave power in the Government fifteen years after slavery itself has ceased to exist.

Now, there is no question that the eleven Southern States went into the rebellion, the States that supported Breckenridge in 1860; but they were reconstructed under Republican rule after the war, and since 1868 have been equal members in the Union the same as before. Republicans cannot find fault with this, for it was their party that restored them to their rights in the Government after freeing their slaves and giving them the ballot. It is complained now that these States do not support the Republican party and give majorities for the Republican ticket. What are the facts? In 1869, the first Presidential election after reconstruction, these States were nearly all carried for Gen. Grant, the Republican candidate, and this was the case also at Grant's second election in 1872. Even in 1876, the last Presidential election, the Republicans claimed to have carried three of these States; they took them whether they carried them or not. At that election there were, in round numbers, 1,200,000 Republican votes in the South. But since then Hayes, their own President, has removed the bayonet, the negroes are leaving them, the South is recovering from the war and the carpet-bag devastation and growing prosperous, and these States are all passing out of their hands and giving majorities against them.

Kindred to this talk about a "solid South," and exceeding it in effrontery, is the outcry about "delivering the country over into the hands of the men who tried to destroy it." I said this exceeded the other in effrontery, because, however senseless and baseless, that is urged as a simple argument or proposition from plain facts and figures, but this, coming from Republican organs and speakers, is stamped with such utter inconsistency and such damnable stultification as ought almost to blister the tongue that utters it. I have no patience to argue with such a pretense as this. I can only denounce it. When we come this year and present a great Union soldier for President, a man who has risked his life a hundred times, and shed his blood to save this Union, and a loyal Northern man for Vice President, we are met by such a cry as this from a party which for twelve years has honored conspicuous and blood-stained rebels with some of the highest offices in the Government. It is rebels, is it, that you mean by the "men who tried to destroy this Government?" Let me tell you there hasn't been a day for twelve years that you have not rewarded rebels with office. Grant took an obscure rebel Colonel, who tried in his small, mean way to "destroy this Government," fourth-rate lawyer though he was, and made him Attorney General, the law officer of the Government which he "tried to destroy." Have you forgotten that? A rebel Judge presided over your convention that nominated Grant the second time, a convention that cheered to the echo James L. Orr, of South Carolina, an original fire-eater and secessionist whom your administration afterward, sent as Ambassador to Russia. Longstreet, next to Lee, the leading rebel General, was early rewarded by your administration with a fat Federal office, and has only lately been sent as Minister to Turkey to represent the Government which he came so near "destroying." And do you remember Mosby, the rebel bushfighter and guerrilla, who shot our brave boys down from the fence corners and the thicket—a name which we used to pronounce in the war times with objurgation and horror? Well, he, too, under a Republican administration represents abroad the country which he "tried to destroy." Don't you feel proud of him? And there is the late Postmaster General under Hayes, the rebel Col. Key, who "tried to destroy" the Government, for superintending whose mail-bags he was afterward paid $8,000 a year by the Republican administration! How does that look to you? But you tell me these men have joined the Republican party. Does that, then, atone for their treason to their country and its flag? Do you wish to be understood to say that a United States army officer, who, at the beginning of the Rebellion, deserted his command and his colors and went into the rebel army and fought us for four years unto the bloody death, can square his account with the Government by joining the Republican party and taking a lucrative office under it? And is he any better for his double desertion than the rebel officer who lay down his sword and returned to his allegiance at the close of the war, but concluded to vote the Democratic ticket?

But you say: "Oh! yes, Hancock is a good man. We don't find any fault with him, but we don't like his company." You complain first that you can't trust the Democratic party which is behind him. You charge that this party was disloyal in the war and will be entirely controlled by the rebel influence. I have already shown you the great changes that have occurred in the party, the new and different issues, and have just called your attention to the fact that what you call the rebel element in that party is a minority section in the country. Now, let me tell you another thing that may surprise you. Not only is the rebel element in a minority in the Government, but it is in a very decided minority in the Democratic party also. Look again at the figures. Four years ago, at the last Presidential election, the Democratic vote was, in round numbers, 1,600,000 in the whole South, and only 1,038,000 in the rebel States, while it was 2,600,000 at the North—a vast preponderance of 1,000,000 votes, as you see, in the North. To hear Republicans talk in this campaign you would think that the whole Democratic strength was at the South. But you say the Democrats expect to carry the South. So they do; and they expect, also, to carry a good part of the North. Do you know that their prospect is most excellent for carrying a majority of the electoral votes of the North? All we should need, to do that, would be the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, now trembling in a close balance between the parties. Should you wake up on the morning of Nov. 3 and find that Hancock had carried the North, as well as the South, what then would you say?

But, fellow-citizens, what is there to this most-bigoted assumption of the Republicans that all manner of evils and of ills will come upon the country if the Democratic party succeed this year? Has anybody beside Republicans any rights in this country? Are all men outside of that organization public enemies? It is well to understand some of these things. The whole argument on the other side proceeds upon the idea that the Democratic party is a vast organized conspiracy to overthrow the Government and destroy the country—that if they succeed the rebels will come into power and immediately proceed to do what they failed to accomplish in the war—that the rebel debt will be paid, the treasury bankrupted by rebel claims, the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments repealed, and the negro disfranchised and practically reduced again to slavery.

Fellow-citizens, it is amazing that we should have to meet such stuff as this in every campaign; but we shall as long as the Republican party is in existence. It would be a charity to believe that they do not know any better; but their leaders who say these things do know better. They know that there is not a single word of truth in them. They know that the Democratic party in Congress refused to pay rebel claims, while their party has paid millions of them; that no Democrat anywhere proposes the payment of the rebel debt, or to disturb the amendments of the constitution as to the negro, and that the party in all its conventions, National and State, has so resolved every year since the war, and that Gen. Hancock, in his letter of acceptance, took especial pains to say that he would, if President, exert all his power to maintain these results of the war inviolate and inviolable. And so said Mr. English, also.

My Republican friends, give me your attention a moment, while I show you by a most conclusive and overwhelming test that you have grossly slandered the Democratic Congress, and that the fears you would inculcate for party purposes are utterly groundless. One of the leading arguments you use this very year to combat our demand for a change is the fact which you claim that everything is going right now, and that we do not need any change; that our debt is being paid, our finances well guarded, and our people prosperous in their business. This was the argument of Mr. Schurz, speaking for you at Indianapolis. You claim that the Government is being well enough managed now, and that any change is unnecessary. "Now I have thee, Jew." The Congress of the United States, in both branches, is Democratic, and has been, the House for six years, the Senate for two years. These bodies constitute the legislative department of the Government, and not a dollar can be appropriated to carry on this Government without the vote of the House of Representatives; not an appointed public officer without the confirmation of the Senate. In other words, if the House should refuse to vote the money, the wheels of the Government would stop; if the Senate should refuse to confirm, its executive offices would become vacant, and we should have revolution and chaos. And yet, mark, with this tremendous power in the hands of a Democratic Congress, you confess that it has been so well and carefully used that there is not a jar in the Government, and that the machinery does not even need oiling! Now another thing. You do not like Hayes, and you confess that Hancock is a good man, and yet all we propose is to put Hancock in Hayes' place and keep right on with this rebel Democratic Congress!

But, fellow-citizens, I must dismiss all these things, and come to another Republican pretense which is urged against our demand for a change in the Government. It is claimed that we need a "statesman" for President, and that we ought not to elect a "mere soldier" to that high office. This is an argument which is somewhat new to Republicans, but they seem to take it kindly since the Chicago Convention, and especially since they found out that their candidate was not "soldier" enough to hurt him.

Now why do we necessarily need a statesman instead of a soldier for President? I deny that we do. Look at the reason and common sense of the matter. There are three great departments to this Government. And this is the way they work. The two houses of Congress, which make the Legislative department, originate and enact the laws; the Supreme Court, which is the Judicial department, passes upon their constitutionality and validity when any question is raised, and the President, who is the Executive department, sees that they are executed. So his is an executive office, as its very name implies. Now what qualities do we demand in such an officer? Manifestly executive qualities—qualities of will-power, of decision and energy.

Gen. Hancock is no rough, unlettered man. Besides having all the executive ability and qualities of the great soldier, he is a man of penetration and judgment, a man of most remarkable common sense and sagacity in civil affairs. Take his orders at the South, take his letters to Sherman, and tell me where is the "statesman" or lawyer of our times who has exceeded his understanding of our Government and its workings? These papers of his are indeed most remarkable, and stamp him as no mere fighting soldier, like Sheridan, but as belonging in intellect to that class of great statesmen-soldiers, so to speak, of which the great Frederick and Napoleon are illustrious examples.

But, fellow-citizens, if we must have a statesman for President, I insist that he should be a clean statesman; one who has a fair and honest public record. The man who is elected by 50,000,000 of people to fill Washington's seat should have a character above suspicion, at least above proof of dishonesty. I approach now a painful feature of this discussion. For the honor of my country, for the cause of public morality and decency, I could wish that there was no necessity for any animadversion upon the personal character of a candidate for such an exalted office. And I shall say but a few words on a subject so unwelcome and so unpleasant. It was a great misfortune to the Republican party and the whole country that the Chicago Convention, in a moment of great excitement and enthusiasm, and without knowing what it did, passing over Washburne and Edmunds, and other honest men, made the fatal and supreme mistake of taking its Presidential candidate from that group of a dozen unsavory and damaged politicians who, in the most corrupt and venal period of our history, were exposed and disgraced by a Congressional committee of their own party. But the party which has made this great and unfortunate blunder, and which, by making it, has compelled me to discuss the record of its candidate, now lifts up its hands in holy horror at what it calls personal slander and "mud-throwing." The Republican party, whose slanders broke the great, good heart of Horace Greeley, which has followed Samuel J. Tilden four years with its lying pens, dipped in the malice of hell, and which has never yet failed to assail and blacken the character of every public man who opposes it, now cries out against "mud-throwing!" Gods, what a protest from such a quarter!

Now, I repeat that nothing is being said about Mr. Garfield except what is suggested by the record of his public sayings and acts. Every candidate for President must necessarily put these in issue, and when the people shall be gagged and prevented by any means of discussing them, this country is on the high road to despotism and destruction.

But if I must argue a proposition so plain, suppose we turn this matter round and take an illustration. Suppose now that the day after Gen. Hancock was nominated at Cincinnati it had been discovered that during the war he had been court-martialed, by a commission, say, of five officers, three of them his own immediate friends, for dishonestly conniving with some sutler to cheat the soldiers, or the Government. Suppose he had denied the charge, and had appeared before the commission and sworn that he had had no relations with the sutler, and had never received any money from him, but the commission found that he had, on their oaths, his friends with the rest. Now, what do you suppose the Republican party would have done about this? Do you think they would have been so meek and modest that they would have kept still about it? What ought they to do in such a case? Why, who would not concede that, under such circumstances, they would be justified in spreading before the people the sworn record which proved that Gen. Hancock was a bribe-taker and a perjurer, and unfit to be President?

Now, this is all the Democrats are doing with Gen. Garfield. He has been court-martialed by his own party in Congress; found guilty of conniving with an old political "sutler" by the name of Oakes Ames, notwithstanding he swore that he had had no such dealings with the said Ames. Do I overstate this matter? This is only one charge where there are a good many, but is it not a fair subject for comment? I could read to you for an hour what the leading Republican papers of the country said about this transaction, and how they denounced Mr. Garfield, some of them demanding his expulsion. These papers are now supporting him for President, eating their own words, and are joining in the new position which the party is fast taking, that, after all, there was nothing very bad in the Credit Mobilier, and that Oakes Ames is a deeply-wronged and persecuted man! If this line can only be established, it will carry relief and joy to Colfax and Patterson and all the other "Christian statesmen."

I said there are other serious charges against Mr. Garfield—one of them, at least, as damaging as this one—his relation to the dishonest District paving ring, where it is confessed that he received $5,000, under the guise of legal services, for which he made no argument and prepared no brief, but did secure, as the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, an appropriation of millions of the people's money to put into the pockets of a ring of swindlers for a rotten and worthless pavement. This is a most serious charge, and it is a part of the public record of this candidate. There are still other charges, but these are enough. The unquestioned facts, without straining, show that this man is destitute of high public integrity, and that should be enough. Whatever his talents, he belongs to that odious class of our modern public men who make unlawful gains and merchandise out of public office, and seek to cover up and expiate their iniquity by loud canting and snivel about "freedom and religion." In the light of the facts as to their candidate, I submit it will not do for the Republican leaders and organs to talk about slanders and "mud-throwing" and "Giddings' old district;" nor will it answer for them to come to us with the magnanimous proposition to call it quits between their candidate and ours. The Democratic party this time has nominated a candidate who is pure and clean, a candidate who is "capable and honest" up to the Jeffersonian standard—a grand man and hero, whose shining armor of truth breaks and turns even the missile of their political malice, and it has no bargains to make, no offsets to allow. It is the misfortune of the Republican party if they have a candidate whose public record can be successfully assailed, and for whom no sufficient defense can be made. So I say to them: If we must have a "statesman" for President, give us a clean statesman and an honest one.

And, finally, fellow-citizens, there is one further great reason why the Republican party ought to die and be swept from the earth. And that reason is because it has become the great disturber of national peace, and the great obstacle to national pacification. We must have an end to sectional feeling and bitterness; and now is the time to have it. There was a reason why these Southern delegates at Cincinnati called for the nomination of Gen. Hancock. It was to put an end to this eternal cry of the Republican party against the South. It was to show the people of the North that they meant to be loyal, and that they were willing to vote for a man for President who marshaled the forces of the Union against them on the field of battle. "Give us Hancock," they said, "the man who fought us bravely in the field—true to his Government and his duty. Surely he was 'loyal,' and no 'bloody shirt' can be waved against him." This is what they said, and this is why the South will be "solid" for Hancock at this election. If the people of the North are thoughtful and wise they will accept this proffered token of loyalty and good will, and make the hero, who was a lion on the heights of Gettysburg, the President whose mild and just rule shall usher in a lasting era of peace and fraternity between the once-contending sections.

The South wants peace and good-will. She is building up the waste places of war; she is just starting upon a new career of enterprise and business prosperity. The North wants Southern trade and Southern money. The whole country wants rest and repose, and unity and brotherhood. Down with these war cries; down with these slanders and this sectional hate; down with the party which engenders these things, which can only live and thrive on the memories of fraternal bloodshed, and which would poison a new generation with the hatreds and animosities of their fathers. There is danger in all this to the future peace of the country. The men of the South, who fought in the war, will never again take the sword, no matter how much they may be goaded or taunted. But who shall answer for their children if the Republican party continues to bear rule, and the successors of the Blaines and the Chandlers, the Fryes and the Hales continue this ceaseless aggravation? Can the American people afford to keep a party in power which thus threatens the Union with future convulsions?

Democrats of Indiana, in this great battle for national purity and national peace, you hold the center of the line. I pray you to stand firm for the right—firm as did our glorious leader at Gettysburg. Here will be the thickest of the fight—here you will receive the mighty shock of the enemy's grandest assault. All around you his forces are now massing for the charge. Close up the ranks, stand to your guns, do your duty like men and patriots, and you shall send the broken legions of the foe flying in wreck and despair from this great central battle-field of the campaign. God grant that when the sun shall go down on that coming October day you may have won here a victory which shall thrill the land from end to end, and cause the anxious hearts of patriotic men everywhere to leap for joy that the power of the oppressor is broken and the republic may live and be immortal.

GEN. BEN F. BUTLER.

His Great Speech at Faneuil Hall, Boston—An Effective Arraignment of the Republican Party—Scathing References to Garfield.

Benjamin F. Butler recently made a speech at Faneuil Hall, Boston. The hall was packed. The meeting was presided over by Hon. Albert Palmer, of Boston, the Chairman of the Massachusetts Republican Independents of last year, who, in the opening speech, announced that he had decided to support Hancock. The following is the substance of Gen. Butler's speech:

Gen. Butler was enthusiastically received. When the cheering had subsided, he began to tell why he had decided to support Hancock for the Presidency. In so doing he promised at the outset neither to detract from or add one jot or tittle to that declaration of principles which had been his guide in political life—equal rights, equal powers, equal burdens, equal privileges and equal protection to all men by law under the Government. He said that he had examined with care the platform of principles enunciated by the Democratic party at Cincinnati, and found nothing therein to contravene them. Indeed, they were more distinctly set forth therein, than in the platform of the Chicago Convention. Neither of them went so far as he could desire in specific declaration of the right of every man to vote in the election of his rulers, and to be represented in his Government simply because he is a man; but in this regard even the platform of the Cincinnati Convention was the more specific. Gen. Butler continued:

I unhesitatingly declare that, at the close of the war and during the period of reconstruction, I was one of those who believed stringent measures necessary for the protection of the newly-enfranchised colored citizens of the South. I was of this opinion in 1876, four years ago, and fought the Presidential campaign of that year upon that issue only. I was in earnest. I desired laws to be passed that should protect every man everywhere in his rights as a voter and citizen. But the first act, as we have seen, of Mr. Hayes, acquiesced in by his party, was to abandon all possible claim of right of interference in the South in behalf of the negro—to remove the few troops that were there, if any were necessary, and to take pains to turn over the Governments of Louisiana and South Carolina to the Democratic party, destroying the Governments elected by Republican votes there, which, if they were not duly and legally elected, then Mr. Hayes himself was not duly and legally elected. The assertion of the one fact must be the assertion of the other. The assertion of title to his office must be the assertion of title to the Republican State Government of Louisiana. The denial of the election of Gov. Packard to office was the denial of the election to office of Gov. Hayes. Indeed, Packard had some half a score thousand more of a majority than Hayes had.

Nothing has been done, nay, nothing has been attempted to be done, to afford protection to the negro in the South, or, indeed, anybody else there. Indeed, these States in the South were put in condition so that nothing could be done by the Federal Government. Nay, all, both white and black Republicans, have had no recognition at the hands of the administration, except the few men who were engaged in the false and fraudulent counting of electoral votes in the several States. In fact, Mr. Hayes, after his experience with them, would not admit there were enough Republicans honest enough to take the census, and his party now are finding fault with the enumeration made by his appointees. These facts are too notorious for comment even, much less denial. Am I, a friend of the negro, bound to fight another campaign in his behalf as a Republican, simply to see him abandoned and myself cheated once more? What guarantee have I that Gen. Garfield will take a different view of this question from Gov. Hayes? They are both from Ohio, and each has been and is a supporter of the other. Why are Republicans to be deemed to have abandoned their political principles and gone over to the enemies of the country because we propose to vote for a Union General for President, while Mr. Hayes, who has been the moral and official head of the Republican party, second only to President Woolsey, of Yale, can with applause appoint a Confederate General to a Cabinet office? I fail to see any distinction between the two acts in any aspect, save that we are going to vote for a great General, and Hayes appointed a little one. Now, then, it is because I am a friend of the negro; it is because I desire to stand for him; it is because I desire to do all that in me lies to aid him in the difficult position in which he is placed by the attainment, so unprepared, of the citizenship, that I now propose to act with the Democratic party. They can at least protect him, and, I believe, will do it.

We have not heard of any oppression of the negro, or interference with his rights by any organized body of men, except at times of election. Why? Because we were asking him to then vote and sustain the Republican party. But while we are asking him to do that, we are not defending him in so doing. That raised antagonism between him and the white people of the South, and that antagonism was accompanied with all the bad results that arise from such antagonisms between ignorant men who are unrestrained by law. But now, in my judgment, the condition of things has changed. Late political events in Virginia show that when the power departed from the Republican party there the two parties in the State divided upon other questions, and the negro enjoys there to-day as much freedom in voting and as much freedom in all other respects as any white man enjoys—far more, I am sorry to be obliged to allow, than does the laboring man of Massachusetts under some of the mill-owners of Worcester county, which is the home of the junior member of the United States Senate, who met him in conclave for that purpose. The industrial condition of the South shows that the negro, necessary as a laborer, must be protected, and will be as soon as political antagonism dies out. The negro has since his freedom disappointed both friend and foe in two regards. First, it was believed that he would not labor as a free man, yet the South has never raised by hundreds of thousands so many bales of cotton as the present year. Again it was believed that he would not multiply without a master to preserve and protect his offspring. But if the returns of Republican-appointed census officers are to be taken, he has shown such increase in population as has always been deemed by the statisticians the highest evidence of happy homes and a prosperous people.

Believing, as I do, with the election of Gen. Hancock race collisions will be at an end; knowing, as I do, that he has the executive power, determination and steadfastness in right that has never faltered, I think I can trust him to see that the promise of his letter of acceptance that the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments shall be carried out in their letter and spirit. I freely confess to you that I desire to be in such relations of political kindness and courtesy with the Democratic party that I may be permitted to point out in behalf of the colored men what I deem would be for the best interest of all, and what I doubt not will be their wish to do in his behalf. But of one thing I am certain, that I cannot be more powerless for good to the colored race under Gen. Hancock, the Democratic party holding the Government, than I have been, and every other friend of the colored man has been, under the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes. The only reason given why the Republican party should be continued in power is the present prosperity of the country, which, they do not explain how, is due to the legislation or administration of the Republican party. Is this claim a just and tenable one? But, citizens of Massachusetts, let us consider affairs a little nearer home, with which we are better acquainted. Before the advent of the Republican party into power every river and harbor on our coast was engaged in ship-building. It was a vast and successful industry. Now there is not a single ship being built in Massachusetts and hardly a half score of smaller crafts.

Under Republican rule our commerce has been swept from the sea. We have but a single line of steamships bearing our flag on the Atlantic, and another on the Pacific ocean, to do all our freighting by steam. Republican administration has given up our trade with South America. The American flag is hardly seen on the ocean. The port of Boston has not sufficient foreign commerce to give decent support to its small pilot force. Boston is losing its importance as a commercial city because of Republican legislation and administration. Its standard insurance company can find scarcely more marine risks than enough to pay its office rent. All the facts the merchants of Boston who sit around me know. And yet it is proposed that they shall permit Republican administration to go on under which the destruction of its interests is being accomplished. When the war closed nearly every one of our seaport towns had fleets of fishermen. All those have passed away, save in one. And why? Under Republican administration we have been negotiated out of the rights of all our fisheries in the Northern seas. Claiming to be the party of protection, the Republican party have allowed the fish of the Canadian provinces to come in free of duty, the duties on which would have been more than the value of the entire catch of our fishermen in Canadian waters, even after the fish were caught and prepared for market, to say nothing about their value when swimming in the sea. And at the same time a Republican administration has taxed the country more than $5,500,000 in gold that the Canadian fishermen might have the privilege of free market against our fishermen for twelve years.

The Republican party claim that they desire a tariff for protection. The Democratic party insists, as it always has, upon a tariff for revenue. I see no difference between these two claims. A tariff for revenue must always work incidental protection. No tariff will ever be devised in this country hereafter for any other purpose than raising a revenue. There can be no fear of a diminution of the revenue raised by tariff. Incidental protection of our products will be a necessity if the Democratic party have the power. The interest on the public debt, and the expenses of the Government, must be paid from revenue, either internal or tariff, and if the Democratic party should cut down the revenue from tariff, it would require more revenue from internal sources, to-wit, whisky and tobacco, to which their several States would never assent.

Gen. Butler next touched upon the abuses which have crept into the Republican party through a long series of years in power. Has the Republican Convention, he asked, given us for its candidate one who can correct those abuses? He reviewed the Credit Mobilier business and the investigation of the committee, and said:

I believe most of the gentlemen of that committee now say that there was nothing to impeach the integrity of the nominee of the Republican party in receiving that stock. I agree with them. I do not think there was any harm, and never did think there was any harm, in anybody's receiving the stock from Mr. Ames under the circumstances. I took that ground before the House in 1873. I have seen no occasion to alter my opinion. All the members who frankly testified before the committee that they had received the stock received no censure from the committee or from the country. But that is not the point of my objection, which I am trying to make plain. Having taken the money as a dividend—for, says the proverb: "It is no worse to eat the devil than to drink his broth"—my ideal of a President would not have denied it. The case is not without parallel in history of man not able to withstand the pressure of public opinion. Peter, when he got among the servants and retainers of the High Priests, denied his Master three times over, and cursed and swore to it until the cock crowed shame on him, and then he went out and wept bitterly. But then, I should not have voted for Peter as a President to stand up in a crisis. Should have preferred one of the other disciples—even the doubting Thomas, who stood by his Master after he was convinced.

What surety have I if I support Garfield when this cry of the stalwart wing of his party, that the negro must be protected, now so loud raised, is hushed after the election and the over-righteous newspapers of the party insist, as they before have insisted, that nothing shall be done by his administration for the protection of the negro, that their President will have courage to stand up against that clamor and do what is now claimed to be right, and so protect the negro? Indeed, I much fear that he will not stand up to this issue of the campaign upon which he is to be elected, if elected at all, in any event, for I find that in the House of Representatives he made a declaration upon this question, taking precisely the same position that I take to-day. These are his words: "The man who attempts to get up a sectional issue will find himself without a party and without support." But the advance leaders of his party, seeing the necessity of a war cry, have made the sectional issue that of the campaign, directly in contravention of their candidate's words. If their nominee was convinced in his own mind; if he uttered this declaration as the result of his deliberate judgment; if he will give up that judgment now for the sake of an election, what surety have I that he won't return to it again after the pressure is relieved from him and he is elected. He, as well as Hayes, may change on this question. I cannot do it so readily. Is this man a leader for a great party?

Turn your contemplation for a moment toward the gallant General nominated at Cincinnati, who, in a long public life, has held many positions of the highest responsibility, where his course of action must be decided by his own unaided judgment and sense of right, and show me an instance where he has ever shrunk from any duty, however painful, when it was his duty? If any one desires to read his mind, let him search out the springs of his action, let him read that most admirable letter to Gen. Sherman upon the unhappy condition of affairs arising out of the Presidential election of 1876. Written in the confidence and under the seal of private correspondence, it exhibits Gen. Hancock's innermost thoughts as the obedient soldier within the line where obedience was duty, the analytical statesman who guided himself by research into the language and principles of the constitution, taking that for his guide and evincing a determination not to recede one hair from its mandate, or step one inch beyond its provisions under whatever stress or pressure. Such is our leader, men of Massachusetts! You have now the golden opportunity to put the destinies of the country under the guidance of his firm hand, strong will, mature judgment, loyalty to the Union for which he battled and fidelity to its constitution, which he has ever made the guide of his action.

INDIANA NEWS.

Horse-thieves are playing their game to an alarming extent in Kosciusko county.

A salt spring has been discovered west of South Bend, and Saginaw is notified that a dangerous rival is in the field.

Col. John A. Bridgeland, Consul at Havre, France, has returned to his home in Richmond, on vacation, to take part in the canvass and vote.

Lynn Brooks, aged 21, living near Muncie, jilted by his affianced because he took another girl out riding, blew out his brains with a revolver.

The Excelsior factory and flour and saw-mill of G. W. Bishop, at Walton, was destroyed by fire recently. Loss, $10,000; insurance, small.

Two surgeons are exploring the nose of a small child of William Stoops, of Connersville, in search of a carpet-tack secreted there by the infant, but so far without success.

While a little daughter of James Brown, of Nashville, was playing on the floor, a cupboard fell over upon her and crushed her so badly that she died in a few minutes afterward.

Allen Nichols, a resident of Lawrence county, ran into his house near Fayetteville, speechless, and remained so till next morning, when he died. It is supposed that he had been bitten by a snake.

An old goose at New Albany, with one leg and one wing broken, and that had been deserted by the balance of the flock, deliberately threw its neck under the wheels of a wagon and allowed itself to be run over and killed.

Carl Johnson, a Swede, was killed at the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, at South Bend, by the bursting of an emery wheel. He was standing in front of the wheel, when one of the pieces struck him and crushed his face in.

While a lady was carrying her 6-months-old babe on one of the streets of New Albany, a few evenings since, a boy exploded a roman candle, which struck the child on the head cutting a bad gash and burning the head severely.

Cyrus Thomas and Ed Kidd, both colored, got into an altercation at Connersville, when Kidd drew a revolver and shot Thomas in the breast. Thomas walked a few steps, fell, and expired in fifteen minutes, while Kidd made his escape during the excitement.

While John H. Eck, of St. Paul, Shelby county, owner of the Adams stone-quarries, was engaged in helping the workmen raise a large rock, the derrick suddenly gave way, one of the ropes striking him on the head, causing instant death. He leaves a wife and two children.

The boundary line between Adams and Wells counties has been infested for some time past with a gang of tramps of the most disreputable character. They await every opportunity to pillage and plunder residences, and a few days ago one of the gang struck a girl working in a corn field with a stone and fatally injured her.

Charles Eggleston, of Rockport, Spencer county, a young married man, who has been considered insane at times for a year past, killed his infant daughter the other night, by striking its head against the smoke-house. He has been tried by a lunacy commission, and ordered to the Insane Asylum. He said, "The Lord told me to kill the baby, and I had to do so."

At Browning's, three miles from Brownstown, Lafe Morgan was knocked down with a club, and then unmercifully pounded, by Dick Barr, a young stripling not yet 21. Morgan died from the effects of the beating. Barr was immediately arrested, and, having waived an examination, was committed to jail. The assault was brutal in the extreme, and entirely unprovoked.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., SEPTEMB'R 23, 1880.

ROB. J. LOWRY,
EDITOR.

Democratic National Ticket.

For President,
GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
of Pennsylvania.
For Vice-President,
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,
of Indiana.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
FRANKLIN LANDERS,
Marion county.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
ISAAC P. GRAY,
Randolph county.
For Secretary of State,
JOHN G. SHANKLIN,
Vanderburg county.
For Auditor of State,
MAHLON D. MANSON,
Montgomery county.
For Treasurer of State,
WILLIAM FLEMING,
Allen county.
For Attorney-General,
THOMAS W. WOOLEN,
Johnson county.
For Clerk of the Supreme Court,
GABRIEL SCHMUCK,
Perry county.
For Reporter of the Supreme Court,
AUGUSTUS N. MARTIN,
Wells county.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
ALEXANDER C. GOODWIN,
Clark county.
For Judges of the Supreme Court,
Third District - JOHN T. SCOTT,
Vigo county.
Fifth District—JAMES A. S. MITCHELL,
Elkhart county.

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Joint Senator—DeKalb and Steuben counties,
JESSE H. C CARPENTER.

Joint Representative—DeKalb, Noble and Elkart counties,
SAMUEL S. SHUTT.

For Prosecutor—35th Judicial Circuit,
GEO. B. ADAMS.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAN'L D. MOODY.
For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.
For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.
For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.
For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.
For Surveyor,
AZAM. P. FOLTZ.
For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.
For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

DEMOCRATIC RALLIES.

Auburn, Satuday, October 2,
Afternoon and evening.
HON. J. R. DOOLITTLE
AND
HON. CHAS. J. ROGERS,
Of Iowa.

Garrett, Saturday, October 9,
In the evening.
HON. A. P. EDGERTON
AND
HON. ROBERT LOWRY.

Butler, Monday, October 11,
Afternoon and evening.
COL. J. P. IRISH, of Iowa.

Speakers of national reputation will be present at each of these meetings.

BEN BUTLER speaks for Hancock in Fort Wayne this evening.

THE Maine election is a powerful rebuke to republicans, and they feel it.

WILLIAMS' majority over Harrison in 1876, was 5,184. It is estimated that, despite the importation of negroes, a majority of 7,000 will be rolled up for Landers in October.

THE republicans of Ashtabula county, Ohio, imitating those of Trumbull county, have met in convention and passed a resolution censuring General Garfield for his vote on the salary bill. —Waterloo Press, April 10, 1873.

SOME of the members of congress who pocketed the $5,000 back-pay bonus are going to the Vienna exposition, with their families, being too conscientious to spend the money at home. —Waterloo Press, April 23, 1873.

THE democrats in Illinois are working very zealously, the greatest of enthusiasm prevails, and a democratic victory there in November is not among the impossible things. Hayes was nearly beaten there in 1876, and there is not much republican enthusiasm there this year.

THE Garrett Herald contained a ten-line article of the funny kind, with a hyphen after each letter, on Mr. Colerick's speech in Auburn, Wednesday of last week. In all of his arduous editorial labors of the past, this editor has kept within the bounds of two lines, and this editorial feat referred to, shows a clear republican gain of eight lines.

BOB INGERSOLL promises to give $2,000 toward forming a purse of $2,000,000, to defeat Hancock and English. Bob has also been trying to destroy the christian religion, but it is quite probable that both the christian religion and democracy will flourish long after Bob shall have gone where he will have to take his mint julep boiling hot.

ELI PERKINS, the so-called humorist, whose lectures consist of lies and stupidity, and who is chiefly noted for never having said a witty thing in his life, is making speeches in the interest of Garfield. Perkins is a notorious liar, in fact, the biggest one in America, and doubtless in this quality is due his selection as a suitable person to help bolster up the cause of Garfield.

The Greenbackers in Maine Consolidate With the Democrats on the Electoral Ticket.

The greenback convention in Maine met last Tuesday to nominate electors. The meeting was presided over by C. A. White, and there were 463 delegates present. S. D. Hobson presented a resolution indorsing the action of the state committee recommending a fusion with the democrats.

J. B. Chase, amid great excitement, protested.

Elliot King moved to accept the report and resolutions, and to name a joint electoral ticket.

Mr. Chase made a motion to amend by nominating seven straight greenbackers. This was received with applause and hisses.

The speaker made an appeal for a fair hearing and argued against a fusion, where thousands of greenbackers in the state who voted for the rest of the ticket with Plaisted who will not vote for fusion electors. He protested giving away in the future the greenback party for four Weaver electors. It was a greenback candidate and platform that carried the state.

Rev. Alvah Strout, F. M. Plaisted and others, advocated a fusion, after which the previous question was carried, and the resolution to "fuse" was adopted, though there was considerable opposition.

The following is the resolution in full:

The election of Harris M. Plaisted to the office of governor by a vote unprecedented in the history of the state, and the re-election of our representatives in congress, is unquestionably the indorsement of our principles by the state of Maine. We feel assured that when party prejudice shall not longer control our republican brethren, that we shall show an overwhelming majority in favor of national principles, which will be responded to by every state in the union; that the action of the state committee, recommending an arrangement with the democratic party for state and presidential elections, was expedient, and that the national greenback party of the state of Maine in convention assembled, hereby indorses that action, and agree to support at the presidential election Solon Chase and Samuel Watts for candidates for electors-at-large, and John J. Turner, Benjamin Bunker, Charles R. Whidden, Wm. A. Cromwell and John P. Donworth as candidates for district electors, as recommended by the committee.

Congressman Murch made a brief speech. He believed that every greenbacker knew his opposition to a fusion in the past, and believed the democratic party, governed by high patriotic motives, returned thanks to the democrats for supporting him. The question is, shall seven Garfield or three Hancock and four Weaver electors be chosen. Free to say he preferred the latter. Speeches were also made by Solon Chase, Congressman Ladd and others, after which the convention adjourned.

The Whisky-Ring to be Heard From.

General John McDonald, a member of the notorious whisky-ring of St. Louis, by which the people were robbed of over $7,000,000, will speak in Ft. Wayne next Monday, Sept. 27. He will shortly issue a book completely ventilating this gigantic steal. Gen. McDonald served seventeen months in prison in order to shield Grant and Babcock, and was only released by threatening exposure. His lecture will embrace the organization, operation and final collapse of the whisky-ring, and will doubtless be the most thorough exposition of republican rascality the people have ever listened to. The Sentinel says of him: "He has a powerful magic lantern by which he throws upon a screen twenty feet square exact copies of photographs from the original letters which passed between the conspirators. He has also a transparency colored in oil of the famous sylph, a very beautiful blonde with heavenly blue eyes, who figured conspicuously in the Babcock trial, and a dozen others, all painted in oil. Each one of these, when thrown on the screen, will look like an immense oil painting, sixteen by twenty feet. One is especially fine. It is Grant throttling Justice, and is by Matt Morgan, of Frank Leslie, and is probably his masterpiece. It is said that General McDonald's lecture will astonish every man who hears it. It will recite one of the most systematic organizations for corrupt purposes ever known to history, and the corrupt practices of Marius, of Rome, and Walpole, of England, sink into utter insignificance when comparison is made."

Senator Roscoe Conkling has spoken and his position in the presidential campaign has been defined.—[Steuben Republican.

Yes, it has been defined, and it very clearly shows that Mr. Conkling gives a reluctant and cold support to the republican ticket. Indeed, so indifferent is the senator that some of the republican papers are already censuring him. He said in his New York speech the other day, that Mr. Garfield was able to fill the presidency. This was all he had to say of him, but eulogized Mr. Arthur very highly, in the estimate of whom he differs from Sherman and Hayes, who say he was too dishonest to hold office under the present administration.

THE varying reports that have from time to time been received from Maine, have caused republicans to claim the governorship of that state, and to laugh at the democrats' claims of victory. Notwithstanding the republicans have been playing the same tricks in Maine that they played in Louisiana in 1876, it is now definitely settled that Plaisted has been elected by 174 majority, and he who laughs last, laughs best, you know.

ATTEND THE GRAND RALLY!

—AT—

AUBURN,

Saturday, Oct. 2,

AND HEAR

HON. J. R. DOOLITTLE,

The great statesman of the northwest, and

HON. C. R. ROGERS,

The eloquent orator of Iowa, and other prominent speakers. Prepare for a grand demonstration.

In 1873.

In 1873 James A Garfield was denounced by all the republican papers from Maine to California as a dishonest man and a perjurer; as a man who had betrayed every trust of his people, and as a man who was no longer worthy of the support and confidence of the honest republicans. No man was more vehemently denounced than was Garfield by these republican papers. Among these was the Waterloo Press, published then, as now, by C. K. Baxter. In its issue of April 10, 1873, is this article:

"The Cleveland Herald has been trying to explain Gen. Garfield's vote on the salary-grab, in the hope of lightening his fall, and told the old Henry Clay gun story about flashing in the pan, whereupon a Trumbull county farmer writes to it thus: 'I read your sayings and story under the above heading in your issue of the 27th instant, and wish to say that the people of Trumbull county have examined their 'gun' in congress, and find that what you call a flash in the pan, has blown the stock all to pieces, and even kicked the lock off the United States treasury; and upon investigating the remains of that 'gun' we find it breech burned with credit-mobilier, and crooked. Perhaps it may do for Cleveland politics, but it don't suit the people of our county. It has thrown itself away, and we can neither repair it or carry it.'"

If the Press is right now, it lied then, and if right then, it is living a lie now. Will the Press please inform its readers on which occasion it lied?

A Letter from General Hancock.

At the great democratic meeting of the citizens of Indiana and Ohio, at Hicksville last Friday, addressed by Governor Hendricks and Senator Thurman, at which, many of the citizens of our county were present, the following letter was read:

Governor's Island, New York Harbor, Sept. 12, 1880.

Messrs. A. P. Edgerton, Ben. J. Patton, and others, Hicksville, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—Accept my thanks for your invitation to Hicksville, Defiance county, Ohio, on the 17th instant. The meeting will be of unusual interest, honored, as it will be, by the presence of those two prominent leaders, Senator Thurman and Governor Hendricks. The cause must be one of no ordinary kind that brings together these eminent men on the borders of the two great states of which they have long been distinguished representatives. I have reason to feel proud of being prominently identified with a cause that is upheld by the patriotism and ability of such advocates. I regret that I cannot be present on this occasion to share with my fellow-citizens the lessons of wisdom and patriotism that cannot fail to emanate from such sources.

I feel assured that the proceedings of the meeting will enforce the people's demand for honesty, economy and efficiency in the public service, for the peace, welfare and security of free institutions, and for all the rights and liberties of the citizen as guaranteed by the constitution and the laws. Let us hope that the masses of the people, whose interests stretch away beyond the schemes and temporary triumphs of mere partisan welfare, will take affairs into their own hands, and properly settle the question as to whether we shall have a new era of peace, reconciliation, economy and prosperity.

I am very truly yours,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

"The Soldiers Insulted."

EDITOR COURIER:—The last issue of the Republican, speaking of the recent elections, says:

"When the news from Vermont came, showing 27,000 majority, the LOYAL people of the north rejoiced with exceeding gladness, but when the smoke had partially cleared from the battle-fields of Maine, and the news came that the republicans had suffered a defeat, there was sorrowing among the patriots."

The significance of the above is, that all who rejoiced were loyal, and those who did not rejoice were not loyal. The republicans did all of the rejoicing, therefore, the republicans alone are the only loyal people in this country. The above dirty insult to hundreds of soldiers in our county, faithfully portrays the pusillanimity of the editor of that concern. And yet it is he who is eternally howling about "the soldiers insulted," "the brave soldiers insulted!" It is pretty safe to assert that these pigmies who, fifteen years after the war, make so much ado about "the brave soldier," were not very brave when there was any fighting to do. Brave men are not so rampant in time of peace, and a brave man is incapable of such littleness as refusing to share the glory with the faithful soldier who fought by his side, as does this dirty little sheet.

A DEMOCRATIC SOLDIER.

Did you ever hear of one before?

LAST year's cotton crop in the United States was 5,757,397 bales, and this year's crop is believed to be larger. The largest crop before the war was 4,821,770 bales.

INFORMATION WANTED.

A Few Mild Interrogatories Propounded to the Present Sheriff.

AUBURN, IND., Sept. 20, 1880.

EDITOR COURIER:—Please allow me space in your paper to propound the following inquiries to the present incumbent of the sheriff's office of DeKalb county, Mr. A. S. Leas:

Did you, while acting as detective at Waterloo, cause the arrest of a man in Stafford township, at the request of a party in Jackson county, Mich., for the crime of grand larceny?

Did you procure the assistance of a person in Butler to make the arrest in order to shield yourself from any personal danger, as is said to be your usual custom?

Did you not, by your assistant, make said arrest and recover the property stolen?

Did you not take the thief to Waterloo and keep him all night in your livery-stable?

Did you not then and there agree with said thief that you would allow him to escape provided he would deliver to you a horse and harness, which he claimed belonged to him?

Did not two of his friends, who had followed you to Waterloo, go back to Stafford township and get the horse and harness, and bring them to Waterloo the next morning before daylight?

Did they deliver the horse and harness to you?

Did you allow the thief to escape?

Will you please state what legal authority you had to make the arrest?

Will you please state what legal authority you had to permit the escape?

If he was guilty, what right had you to accept a bribe from him?

If he was innocent, what right had you to take his property from him?

Since you have been sheriff of DeKalb county, did you not agree with the notorious George Hazzard that you would not arrest him without first notifying his bondsman, Henderson?

Did you not allow two persons at Garrett to escape from you, for reasons only known to yourself, when the proof that they were dealing in counterfeit money was beyond doubt?

Did you not allow Garfield, Butler and the negro boy, three county prisoners, to cut and mutilate the county jail for several days after you had been apprised of the fact?

Will you please state why you did not capture the thieves who stole Sprott's team in Williams county, Ohio, and who passed through this county, going westward, with said team, a lumber wagon partly loaded with grain, and a third horse hitched behind the wagon, and you less than an hour behind at Auburn with a fresh team, and another fresh team at Kendallville?

Did not a certain corn-sheller agent, whose name I think is Carver, come to Auburn and claim that he had been assaulted and robbed of about $600 belonging to the company?

Did you not, after an examination, conclude that said Carver was an impostor?

Did you not meet said Carver in Springfield township, Allen county, at the house of his friend?

Did he not then and there confess that he had secreted the money, and planned this scheme to defraud the company?

Did you not then and there enter into an agreement with said Carver, that you would not arrest him for said offense provided he and his friend, whose name is Hettinger, would execute to you a promissory note of $100?

Did they not execute to you a note for said amount, and did you not send a man the next day and trade said note to J. R. Shilling, of Concord township, for a horse?

Will you please answer these questions in the columns of the county papers next week, and oblige

A VOTER?

Explanation from the Commissioners.

EDITOR COURIER.—In last weeks issue of the Republican is a statement that at our last September session, 1880, we allowed Geo. H. Duncan $82.50 "for use of buggy in looking after bridges and ditches in 1876." This is a lie out of whole cloth, or the record is made to speak a lie, either by mistake or purposely. We would further say that for the last two years we have had a great deal of trouble with certain items of accounts for oils, lamps and lamp chimneys, said to have been furnished the several county offices, and when investigated in case the officers refused to certify that they had received the items, it was then ascertained, that R. Dexter Tefft, a secretary or deputy of the sheriff had got the items, had them charged to the county, and when caught, to get out of it he would say he had done so "just for a joke." This is the man whom the commissioners have tried for over a year to get out of the court-house, but he has simply stuck there, against our known wishes, and for two years has officed, had stationery, wood and light at public expense, and whom we have not been able to choke off.

GEO. H. DUNCAN,
E. KELHAM,
JOHN SHAUB, } Commissioners.

Money to Loan.

In sums and on terms to suit all. Apply at Guy Plumb's law office. Low rates of interest.

38-3m. C. N. HASKALL.

Stoves and Ranges!

The grandest display of Stoves in DeKalb county at the

NEW BRICK BLOCK, COR. MAIN & SEVENTH STS.

Cook Stoves, Square Stoves, Round Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Heating Stoves, Coal Stoves,
Base Heating Stoves, Rangers, and all kinds

SOLD CHEAP!

Our stoves are made from LAKE SUPERIOR IRON, which render them superior in quality to many other makes. Every stove

☞ FULLY WARRANTED!

And prices guaranteed lower than the lowest. Call at

W. H. Kiblinger's Hardware Store

For your Stoves, and save from 15 to 25 per cent. Our line of

Stove Hollow-Ware, Tinware, General Hardware,
Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints, Oils, Wagon and
Carriage Hardware, Bent Rims, Shafts, Poles.

And ten thousand articles comprising our mammoth stock. Call and buy your

HARDWARE CHEAP!

No trouble to show goods and give prices. Remember the place, NEW BRICK ROOM, Cor. Main and Seventh Streets, Auburn Ind.

W. H. KIBLINGER.

J. KAHN & CO.,

OF WATERLOO,

STILL AHEAD!

Largest Stock!

Best Assortment!

Lowest Prices!

Our reputation of being the leading merchants in this county we are bound to maintain, and we only ask an examination of our stock and prices, being sure that we can convince the people of DeKalb county that they can buy any goods in our line to better advantage of us than anywhere in Northern Indiana.

OUR STOCK OF

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

Is more complete than ever before, and our prices defy competition. We are offering a golden opportunity for the people to purchase their Fall and Winter Goods at the very

LOWEST PRICES

The following are some of the bargains we are offering in

DRY GOODS:

Good dark Prints, dress style, 5c., sold everywhere at 7c and 8c.; yard wide heavy Sheeting, 6½c., sells everywhere else for 8c.; good bleached Muslin, 5c.; heavy unbleached Canton Flannel, 7c., former prince 10c.; good heavy shirting Flannel, 25c.; good heavy Kentucky Jeans, 25c.; good white wool Blankets, $2.00 per pair, worth $3.00; nice dress Ginghams, 9c., sold at other places for 12½c.; heavy fancy Dress Goods, 8c. per yard.

BOOTS AND SHOES

Lower than anywhere else; good stoga Boots for $2.00, worth $3.00

CLOTHING!

Our stock is larger and prices lower than ever before. Good heavy suits for $5.00; heavy Cassimere suits, $7.00, sold last year for $10.00; allwool suits, $10.00, sold last year for $14.00. We sell good overcoats for $4.00, $6.00 and $8.00. Large line of Children's and Boys' Clothing from $2.00 upward.

A Good White Dress Shirt for 60 Cents.

And many other as good bargains. Now, don't pay those "fancy" prices, but call and see our goods before purchasing elsewhere. Respectfully,

J. KAHN & COMPANY.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Ague is on the increase.

—Billy Groscop is numbered among the sick this week.

—Hank Little has been laid up with the ague this week.

—Born, to Mrs. H. E. Little, last Monday evening, a boy.

—Mrs. A. J. Little receives new goods each week.

—The Victor clover-huller for sale by J. N. Myers & Co.

—More new goods at Mrs. Little's; call and see them.

—Go to the Eckhart Carriage Works and buy a buggy at cost.

—Nickle-plated bird cages at D. D. Snyder's hardware store.

—It is currently rumored that Garfield has declared for Hancock.

—Mark Barney and Doc. McClaren, of St. Joe, Sundayed over in Auburn.

—Mr. Theodore Reed went to Indianapolis Monday, returning Wednesday.

—Canton flannels from eight cents per yard up, at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—Albert Case left Monday to resume his duties at Ann Arbor, Michigan.

—Fred. Clark and Dave Hampton drove down to Fort Wayne last Sunday.

—Charlie Pommert is lathering the attendants at the Hicksville fair this week.

—Mr. J. E. Beugnot has sold his saloon on Eighth street to a Ft. Wayne man.

—See Kiblinger's new advertisement of fall hardware—fallen in prices, we mean.

—Communion services will be held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

—Call on Mrs. A. J. Little for your millinery goods, where the latest styles can always be seen.

—The nobbiest hats in town can be found at the mammoth double store of Schaab, Beugnot & Co.

—Mrs. Dr. Tritch returned Tuesday from Bryan, Ohio, where she was called by the sickness of her mother.

—A small party of friends were pleasantly entertained at the residence of Fred. Clark last evening.

—Mr. Frank Hoff and wife have both been quite sick this week with bilious fever, but will soon be up again.

—Mr. Ochs, of Butler, will shortly open up a stock of clothing in the Ford building, opposite the postoffice.

—J. N. Myers & Co. have for sale the justly celebrated Victor clover-huller, which is equalled by none.

—Dan. Littlefield and sister, Miss Carrie, of Jackson, Michigan, are visiting their parents in Auburn this week.

—Smoke the "Lady Washington" cigar, the best five-cent cigar ever sold in Auburn, for sale by Schaab, Beugnot & Co.

—The yellow leaf, which sadly typifies the fate of all material things, especially the republican party, has come.

—Remember that Schaab, Beugnot & Co. deliver goods to all parts of town free of charge.

—Mr. Hardesty, a pleasant young attorney of Fort Clinton, Ohio, is spending a few days in Auburn. He will probably locate here.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. can and will sell you dry-goods, clothing and notions cheaper than any other house in northern Indiana.

—Buy your dry-goods of Schaab, Beugnot & Co., for they have all the latest styles, and an endless variety of them at bottom prices.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co., always have on hand a large assortment of choice family groceries which are being sold at rock-bottom prices.

—Our democratic candidate for representative, Mr. D. D. Moody, will address the citizens of Troy township, Monday evening, Sept. 27.

—Dr. Sears and wife, Elza Shaffer and Miss Nellie Sears made a visit to Quincy and Coldwater, Michigan, last week, returning Saturday.

—Johnny Schaab, of the firm of Schaab, Beugnot & Co., has become a father. It's a son, and made its advent in this world last Sunday night.

—The Victor clover-huller, in a contest with the Ashland 'clover-huller on the 21, was decided to be the superior machine. For sale by J. N. Myers & Co.

—General L. J. Blair, of Waterloo, and Captain E. H. Fisher, of Rome City, will address the citizens of DeKalb and Steuben counties at Hudson, next Saturday evening, Sept. 25.

—Mr. W. F. McNagny, an interesting public speaker, will address the Hancock and English club, and the citizens of this vicinity, at Easley hall, to-morrow, (Friday) evening, September 24.

—The excursion to Cincinnati over the Jackson road, under the auspices of the Catholic church of Auburn, will be on next Tuesday, September 28. Round-trip ticket, only four dollars, and good for seven days.

—Married:—At the residence of the bride's father, Wednesday evening, by Rev. H. Johnson, Amous M. A. Miller and Mary A. Kline.

—Go and see Schaab, Beugnot & Co's. clothing before buying, it will pay you, as they can sell you goods cheaper than you can buy the same anywhere else.

—Mr. C. E. VanAuken, who for some time past has been assisting J. J. VanAuken in surveying in this county, has been appointed surveyor of Steuben county.

—Owing to protracted illness Mr. Lowry has been unable to resume his duties as editor of the COURIER this week, but will probably be at his post by the latter part of the week.

—Buy your clothing and overcoats of Schaab, Beugnot & Co., as they have the largest stock of clothing ever brought to DeKalb county, and at prices cheaper than the cheapest.

—Go and see Schaab, Beugnot & Co's. immense stock of new fall and winter dry-goods, clothing and hats, the largest and best selected stock ever brought to DeKalb county, at prices fully 15 per cent below all competition.

—Mitch. Houston has bought from Mr. Philip Fluke, twenty-five feet front on the corner of Main and Seventh streets, for $1,100. We understand that Mr. Houston will commence at once to put up a brick building on this property.

—In another column will be found the new advertisement of Root & Co., of Fort Wayne, telling the readers of the COURIER about the immense stock of cheap dry goods they have on hand. Read it, and when you go to Ft. Wayne call on Root & Company.

—The floral fair, given under the auspices of the M. E. society, last week, was a success in every particular, and drew to its coffers a sum far beyond expectation. To the citizens of Auburn and vicinity who kindly gave their assistance and patronage, the managers of the fair return their thanks.

—J. Kahn & Co., of Waterloo, speak to the readers of the COURIER this week on the subject of warm and cheap clothing. They are enterprising citizens, and have a reputation for honorable dealing. Read their advertisement and see how cheap they sell clothing.

—The social of the ladies' Presbyterian society will be entertained by Mrs. Dr. Allen, Mrs. Hare, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Abright, in the basement rooms of the church, on next Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at the usual hour.

MRS. J. E. ROSS, Sec'y.

—Last Friday evening the burglars again made their appearance at the residence of Mr. McIntyre. Mr. McIntyre was absent from town, and the family had left the house for a short time, and the burglars, seeing a favorable opportunity, broke into the cellar and helped themselves to the bread and butter, preserves and canned fruit. They did not get into the house.

—The democratic meeting last Saturday evening at Sedan was largely attended. The martial band of this place was in attendance, which, by the way, was dumped out on the side of the road on its way over, by the unskilled driver, Conger Little, though no damage was done except a slight bruise to the driver. There were two hundred and fifty torches out, and at the meeting, which was addressed by Mr. D. D. Moody, the greatest of enthusiasm prevailed. The large crowds that greet Mr. Moody at all of his appointments, very strongly indicate that he will be DeKalb county's next representative.

Come to the Grand Rally.

Let every democrat in DeKalb county be on hand at the grand rally in Auburn, Saturday, October 2. Hons. J. R. Doolittle and C. R. Rogers, two of our most distinguished statesmen and eloquent orators, will speak in the afternoon and evening, and there will be a tremendous torch-light procession.

The Contrast.

As shown by communications published in this paper, the taxes are lower in democratic DeKalb than in republican Steuben—Steuben's miscellaneous expenses are greater in proportion to valuation than DeKalb's—and it costs less on the dollar to attend to our bridges, highways and ditches, than in Steuben. This is the statement of a fact which it will be well to bear in mind.

How is This?

A very serious charge is made in another column as to the rates charged by the republican papers of this county for legal advertising. It is to the effect that one-fourth more than is allowed by the plain letter of the law is charged and taken for each publication of notices of sheriff sales. How much may these chaps, therefore, be called upon to disgorge in case of the success of the democracy?

Come to the Scratch, De Golyerites,

The proposition is plumply made by Mr. Dills in a communication in another column, that for every dollar allowed the members of the board of commissioners irregularly, he will find five dollars illegal fees charged by republican officers in this county. Who amongst the credit-mobilierites, now running for office, wants to accept this offer? All such are respectfully referred to W. H. Dills, Esq.

THE COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

Overcharges by Republican Publishers —Contrast Between DeKalb and Steuben Counties.

EDITOR COURIER:—In last week's issue of the Press and Republican it is directly and otherwise charged that I am the author of the articles recently published in your paper, over the signature of "Justice" and "Anti-Grumbler." I have read those articles, as well as those in both of those papers upon the subject of our county government. I care not whether they give me the credit or the curse for what "Anti-Grumbler" and "Justice" have written. There is nothing in those articles to be ashamed of, nor in fact to be very proud of. But, Mr. Editor, what is this controversy about? Why has there been so much said? Let us look over the files of the papers and see the starting point, and let us see if there has not been "a terrible cry but not much wool."

One paper asserts that the last republican board of commissioners left the county about out of debt, and running on a levy of 35 cents on the $100 valuation. By the record, that has been proven a false statement.

Both, then, set up a howl that our county was gone to the very demnition; that extravagance and corruption, malfeasance and misfeasance, combination and rings were holding high carnival in the commissioners court, and nothing but a change in the political complexion of the board would give the people relief and save us from utter ruin and bankruptcy. "Justice" and "Anti-Grumbler" demanded items, proofs and specifications. What were they? The mountains labored and brought forth a mouse; out of the whole mass of brains and other work they do really charge that our board of commissioners have violated their oaths, perjured their souls, formed a ring, a wicked infernal ring with old Uncle Jimmy Latson, and allowed him four dollars more than they ought to. They have also allowed one of their members some eight dollars for the use of his team, and thereby they violate their oaths, and will certainly meet the doom of the perjurers in the hot world hereafter; and not only that, but they have allowed a faithful servant of six years labor, elected with the assistance of hundreds of republican votes, $25.00 for stationery, a sum equal to eight cents a week. Now, all of this makes something over $100.00, according to their story, and is all they can find, and this is why these commissioners ought to be branded as infamous perjurers.

Let me digress just a moment, and show that every year, for the last two years at least, these papers have each illegally taken from the poor and oppressed more than this sum. I suppose each publish about one hundred notices of sheriff's sales, their average charge is ten dollars a sale. The law says these notices shall be published "for three weeks successively," but they publish them for four weeks every time, and they charge just exactly one-fourth more than they ought to. They ought to charge eight dollars when they charge ten, and when they thus charge one thousand dollars in one year for one hundred such notices, they unlawfully take from the unfortunate and oppressed in our midst, two hundred dollars apiece. No lawyer will say but what I state is the law in Indiana, laid down in 7th Blackford's Reports, followed down to and reaffirmed in the 50th Ind. Rep.

B. F. Blair and Jas. J. Latson tell me the story of the ring they formed, slightly different from the manner stated in the Republican. They say Latson applied for something to do, that he was out of means and did not want to be humiliated by being compelled to call for public charity. The board told him to do some work, but he, on account of his health and age, could not do it. They then told him to put in a culvert in the district in which he was supervisor. He got a team and hauled the tiles from waterloo, and then spent three days in the labor. He brought in his bill for $3, thinking at the time that the board would only allow per day what the trustee had allowed him for other services. They told him they knew the work to have been worth $5, just what they were paying others, and when they found that he had got a team and brought the tiles from Waterloo, they added the other two dollars, and so they perjured their souls and swindled the people of this county by paying this poor man just what they paid others, and he getting less than two dollars per day for his work. Mr. Editor, I would rather be that board in doing that act, and err on the side of the poor and in favor of charity, than illegally take from the poor, unfortunate and oppressed, two hundred dollars a year in publishing notices of the sheriff's sales of their property.

I find I am making this communication too long. I must be brief. Mr. Blair says every county that he knows of, and he wrote to a great many, pays livery hire and expenses; that if it did not these expenses would exceed the per diem the commissioners would get; that he used his team two years, and that Mr. Duncan used his about the same length of time, but before, and used up his buggy; that in the sums allowed him as published, are mules paid for by him for the poor farm, $250; itemized cash expenses, other than board, about $300, freight paid, $32; paid builders of bridge at Newville, $87; went to Fort Wayne three times, South Bend and Toledo, and that after all was said and done, he did not realize over $1.50 over expenses for the time he spent for the people.

In last week's Republican a point was endeavored to be made by demanding a board of experts to examine the records, etc. In order to save the county that expense, I will make this proposition: "That for every dollar that has been illegally allowed by the members of the board of commissioners in the last four years, for services, I will find five dollars illegal fees charged by republican officers in this county."

And still the facts appear as stated in some of the articles spoken of that the taxes are lower in democratic DeKalb than they are in republican Steuben; also that Steuben's miscellaneous expense account is greater, in proportion to the valuation, than in our county; also that it costs less on the dollar to attend our bridges, highways and ditches than in Steuben.

And republicans buy our county orders, and pay 100 cents on the dollar for them. I am, etc,

W. H. DILLS.

Report of Auburn Public Schools for First Month of School Year Commencing Aug. 23, 1880.

FIRST PRIMARY.

No. of pupils enrolled	90
No. of pupils belonging	90
Average daily attendance	76
Per cent. of attendance	84
No. of pupils absent unexcused	3
No. of half days absent unexcused	8
No. of cases of corporal punishm'nt.	1
No. neither absent nor tardy	40

MISS P. CODER, Teacher.

SECOND PRIMARY.

No. of pupils enrolled	76
No. of pupils belonging	76
Average daily attendance	65
Per cent. of attendance	85
No. of pupils absent unexcused	00
No. of half days absent unexcused	00
No. of cases of corporal punishment	00
No. neither absent nor tardy	25

MISS L. STONER, Teacher.

THIRD PRIMARY.

No. of pupils enrolled	63
No. of pupils belonging	62
Average daily attendance	62
Per cent. of attendance	97
No. of pupils absent unexcused	00
No. half days absent unexcused	00
No. of cases of corporal punishment	2
No. neither absent nor tardy	38

MISS L. A. GOATES, Teacher.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT.

No. of pupils enrolled	45
No. of pupils belonging	42
Average daily attendance	40
Per cent. of attendance	95
No. of pupils absent unexcused	1
No. of half days absent unexcused.	11
No. of cases of corporal punishment	00
No. neither absent nor tardy	10

MISS L. E. CLARK, Teacher.

GRAMMAR DEPARTMENT.

No. of pupils enrolled	72
No. of pupils belonging	70
Average daily attendance	67
Per cent. of attendance	96
No. of cases of corporal punishment	1
No. of pupils absent unexcused	8
No. of half days absent unexcused	15
No. neither absent nor tardy	23

T. J. SAXTON, Teacher.

HIGH SCHOOL.

No. of pupils enrolled	64
No. of pupils belonging	61
Average daily attendance	55
Per cent. of attendance	91
No. of pupils absent unexcused	00
No. of half days absent unexcused	00
No. of cases of corporal punishment	00
No. neither absent nor tardy	6

W. P. MYERS, Teacher.
M. W. HARRISON, Ass't.

CONSOLIDATED REPORT.

Whole number of pupils enrolled	411
Whole number of pupils belonging	404
No. withdrawn	7
Average daily attendance	365
Average per cent. of attendance	90
No. of cases of corporal punishment	4
No. of pupils absent unexcused	12
No. of half days absent unexcused	34
No. neither absent nor tardy	138

W. P. MYERS, Principal.

Courts.

For the information of interested parties, we are permitted to publish the following letter from Judge Tousley:

DEAR SIR: "I do not see how I can legally hold a circuit court in DeKalb county in September. My functions as judge are suspended by the act creating the 40th judicial circuit court until the first day of October, 1880, and the law fixing the time of holding courts in DeKalb county, under the law upon which I must act, requires the courts to be held this year to commence on Monday, September 17. At that time I am not judge of the DeKalb circuit court, and courts must commence and be held at the time fixed by law, or their acts are void. Judge McClellan cannot open the term on that day, for he is to hold court at that time in Steuben county, and the law under which he is acting fixes another term for him to hold the DeKalb circuit court."

H. S. TOUSLEY.

Isaac Ochs.

We announce with regret the departure from our midst, of Mr. Isaac Ochs, he having concluded to remove his place of business to Auburn. Mr. Ochs has been a resident here for the last twenty years and during that time has enjoyed the confidence of the entire community, having filled many offices of public and private trust which have been discharged satisfactorily to all. He has been with us a liberal man, and one of the foremost in promoting the interests of the town. His reputation as a business man is first-class, and he will be missed by his many customers. What is our loss, is Auburn's gain. Success go with him. —[Butler Record.

Many of our citizens, who know Mr. Ochs as an honorable gentleman and an enterprising business man, will join with the COURIER in welcoming him as a citizen of our town. He is having the store-room in the Ford building, opposite the postoffice, fitted up, and next week will open up a mammoth stock of goods, of which he will tell our readers in next week's COURIER.

FALL SEASON

Has now fairly commenced, and our stock of all kinds of Seasonable Goods!

Will be found unusually

LARGE AND ATTRACTIVE,

Consisting in part as follows:
The most elegant line of Plain, Gros Grain and Brocade Black

SILKS,

Ever before offered by us.
A complete assortment of Black and Colored.

SATINS!

An unequalled line of plain, fancy and embossed

VELVETS.

Full line of Satin DeLyon, ranging in price from $1.25 to $3.65.
New colorings in Cashmeres!

Shooda Cloths, Momie Cloths and Satteens.

We wish to call special attention to the new and stylish.

HANDKERCHIEF PLAIDS

For suits. They make the most fashionable walking suits now in use.

Besides a great many novelties and specialties not to be found elsewhere, we have a complete line of low and medium priced

Dress Goods,

In all the most desirable styles and colorings. We have marked our usual low and popular prices upon all goods offered by us, and invite comparison.

Our Cloak, Shawl and Suit Department is now filled with the most desirable goods under that head. This department will be found unusually interesting at this time.

In our Carpet and Upholstery Department we have just received many new things in the way of Furniture Coverings, Curtain Cretonnes, English and French Serges, Raw Silk Tapestries, Terries, etc. New CARPETS daily received.

ROOT & COMPANY,
FORT WAYNE, IND.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Enos Smith, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

PETER MOODY, Administrator.
37-3t.
September 8th, 1880.

J. A. BAXTER, ATT'Y. FOR ESTATE.

Final Settlemetn.

Notice is hereby given that John McCurdy, late guardian but now administrator of the estate of David Swihart, deceased, has filed his final settlement report in my office, and the same will be heard at the next term of the DeKalb circuit court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county—In the DeKalb circuit court, No. 781.

Gutlip Rickley, is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce, by Esther E. Rickley, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 2d juridical day of the next term of said court.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 14th day of September, 1880.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
38-3w. W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Petition to Sell Real Estate.

STATE OF INDIANA, DeKalb county, ss:
[In the DeKalb circuit court.]

Notice is hereby given that Joseph Oberlin, administrator of the estate of Cyrus Koontz, deceased, has filed a petition to sell the real estate of the decedent, the personal being insufficient to pay his debts; and that said petition will be heard at the next term of said court.

JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.
Sept. 7, 1880. By W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested, that the county surveyor or his deputy will, at my request, proceed to re-locate the corner at the north end of Marian street, as shown in the original plat and survey of Auburn.

The surveyor will meet said interested persons at the house of Isaac Cool, on Saturday, at 10 o'clock a. m., October 2, 1880.

ISAAC COOL, Applicant.
J. J. VanAuken, Surveyor.
Per C. E. VanAuken, Deputy.
Auburn, Sept. 6, 1880. 37-3w.

School Suits

100 STYLES. ALL GRADES.

UNIFORM. LOW PRICES.

Largest Stock of Boys' d Ciahnldren's Clothin in the City.

—FULL LINE OF—

Boys' Hats and Furnishing Goods

Now on Sale at the C. O. D.

One-Price CLOTHING HOUSE of A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

9 East Main Street.

Look for the Big Flag.

OLD PRICES!

NEW GOODS!

AT

SAM, PETE & MAX,

The Star Clothing House,

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

1850. PIONEER 1880.

Hardware Store.

Headquarters for Stoves.

The Celebrated Buffalo N. Y. Stoves have been sold in this house for 25 years. A full stoch alway on hand.

—A full line of—

BUILDING HARDWARE and SHELF GOODS,
Wagon and Buggy Material,
White Lead, Paints, Oils and Varnishes,
Table and Pocket Cutlery,
Silver-Plated Knives and Forks and Spoons,
Granite Iron-Ware,
Oliver Chilled and Bryan Plows.
FARMING IMPLEMENTS,
BLACKSMITHS' MATERIALS,
Buffalo Scales, Sash & Doors,
WOOD AND IRON PUMPS, & DRIVE-WELL FIXTURES,
All at prices to suit the times.
Call at the old stand when you want bargains.
JOHN L. DAVIS, Proprietor.

LUKE XVII. 21.

BY HALLIE CLARK.

A sudden tempest thunder rent
The very heavens, whose wrath was spent
In one spontaneous burst of power.
Then stillness all, and leaf, and flower,
With deluged face 'neath rainbow skies,
Smiled out its thanks in glad surprise.

The heavy thunders rumbled far
Till distance stilled the noisy war,
And sleep, sweet soother of our woes,
Soon wrapped the earth in soft repose.
And then I dreamed—though not a dream,
So real did the vision seem,
So perfect and so finely planned,
That, were the language at command,
I still should want an artist's pen
To paint the beauty of the scene.

'Twas not a flash, though instant willed,
From [illegible] had seemed distilled,
That all the noxious things of earth
Had disappeared, as if their birth
Had never been. Earth, air and seas
Held naught but luxury and ease,
But man, sole monarch of a will,
Alone had power for good and ill.

In mute thanksgiving I surveyed
A world so grand and perfect made,
Reflecting, as I'm wont to do,
That 'twould be natural to pursue
The course of right, and upward tend
To where true pleasures never end.

But ah! my transport hour was brief;
Full soon I found a source for grief,
Though with a fair and faultless realm,
Frail man still guided at the helm,
And still his bark would wayward prove,
Though sailed o'er rippling seas of love.

Prone still to wander from the right,
He seeks to grope in error's night,
And nurture all the hosts of sin
His time-taught nature holds within.

The morbid thirst for draughts of fire,
With all the curse did not expire;
And foul delirium burns the brain
That seeks an antidote in vain.

The miser with his golden store
Counts all his treasures o'er and o'er,
Yet finds no increase; may not lend
Where fate conspires to be the friend
To rich and poor, and none may feel
A sense of want, save those who will.

But some there are who ever crave
A nameless happiness. The slave
To voidless longings knows no rest,
Though formed by nature to be blest.

And thus, amid this boundless space,
With naught to vex, annoy, no trace
Of taint or crime, of sin or stain
Man's bosom still the curse retain,
And proves beyond a doubt, a shade
His weal or woe himself has made.

Anita, Iowa.

STRAY LEAVES FROM A LIFE.

BY MAUDE POWELL.

"You surely are not in earnest, Marjorie?"

"Why not?" asked that young lady, standing on tip-toe to reach a bunch of apple-blossoms just above her head; "is it anything unreasonable in me to prefer being Miss Melrose, the talented young authoress of New York, instead of a country minister's wife and helpmate?"

"But, Marjorie, do you think I expect or desire you to bury your heaven-born talent? God forbid! Come to me, and, surrounded by the friends who have known and loved you from childhood, and, under the shadow of your favorite apple-blossoms that you said were your first inspiration, write as much as you please."

"No, Willard; what you ask is impossible, for I am not the least bit in love with you. Besides," she continued hurriedly, and not seeming to see the look of pain in her companion's eyes, "I could never be happy in the life you describe. I would be miserable in chains, even though they were the flowery chains of love that bound me to my jailer, and my repinings and rebellion would soon make us both unhappy. I must have excitement and active work. I must be in the thickest of the battle of life. I long for power, influence and fame; but, even if I cannot "Be a hero in the strife," I must be on the scene of battle, and do all I can. I shall write no more poetry, though the eulogiums of the public on my little book were more than I ever dared hope for. Henceforth I intend to live upon my reason, and not even waste sentiment on verse. But with politics, philosophy, or some other literary weapon, I will conquer the fickle goddess fame, steal a few laurel leaves for my brow and a key to her temple."

"And do you expect to be happy? Ah! Marjorie, there is a mighty factor you have omitted in your calculations. Your brain will be busy, your intellect expanding; but, even if fame should shake the choicest bonbons from her store at your feet, your heart will be starving, and you will be miserable."

"Pshaw!" said Marjorie, recklessly; "let but the gods endow me with the gifts I crave, and Cupid may keep his paltry arrows in peace. My heart has been too highly educated to sigh for so childish an article. For this much-talked-of love is merely a diseased imagination, common to youth, like measles and whooping-cough, which we get over in time, just as we do our fancy for dolls and tops, and our belief in ghosts and fairies."

"You are doubtless sincere in your belief now, Marjorie," said her companion, a little impatiently, "but the time will come when, even in the zenith of your success, you will be willing to barter it all for a heart that is tender and true."

"Your prophecies are certainly like Cassandra's in one respect, Will, at least, for I don't believe a word of them; but if I am erring, and they ever come true, why, I'll come back to D. with the aforesaid wreath and key, and you shall teach me to love. Is it a bargain?"

"I will wait for you always, my darling!" said Willard, solemnly.

"It is unkind in you to say all this," said the girl, with sudden resentment, "just when I had boasted in my diary that we were a living illustration of dear old Plato's theory; but you always were thoughtless."

"You are coming to see grandma?" she added, presently, as the supper-bell sent a cheery invitation through the orchard; "she will never forgive you if you slight her," and, seeing that her companion hesitated, "if you do not come, I shall think you are offended, and angry with me."

"Would you care, Marjorie, dear?" Willard asked, eagerly.

"Of course it would make me very unhappy to think that we, who have been friends from our cradles, should, on the eve of my departure, be estranged about such a trifle as love; something that you will forget before this fruit blushes 'neath August's kisses; and, before apple-blossoms come again, there will be a pretty, blue-eyed wife at the parsonage—Annie Leigh, perhaps—who will fill the position so much more worthily and gracefully than I."

"Stop, Marjorie," interrupted Willard almost sternly. "Heaven knows I have borne a great deal from you, but I cannot endure this unkind jesting when you well know that 'as long as life hath shadows, as long as the heart hath woes, I shall love you, only you.'"

"Of course, that is the proper speech to make just now, Will dear, but I predict you will console yourself very soon with Annie Leigh. As old Mrs. Andrews would say, I feel it in my bones."

Marjorie gained her wish. A few months after her arrival at her uncle's Fifth avenue home, she had, like Byron, waked to find herself famous on the publication of her first prose work. Two others followed in quick succession. But just when my heroine felt she had almost climbed the height of literary renown, when the praises of an admiring public were wafted to her like incense, with only now and then a criticism, which she insisted only spiced the otherwise insipid ovation, that eccentric young lady suddenly declared her intention of devoting her time to American politics. So thorough was her study of the subject that she now (six years after you first met her) virtually stood at the head of her uncle's widely-circulated and influential daily. She had indeed climbed to a dizzy height where few women ever ventured. Her editorials were copied everywhere, her opinions quoted from "Dan to Beersheba," but was she happy? some one asks. Was the mountain as purple and beautiful as when she gazed longingly at it from the sweet valley of youth? or did she find it but common earth after all, and the mysterious beauty lay in the misty valley of girlhood she had left behind?

Marjorie dropped her pen with a short, impatient sigh. "It is strange that little Nell's words should haunt me so tonight, ringing in my ears, and waking echoes of that still, small voice I had hoped was forever stilled. What does that child of 18 know of the heart, that she should assert so confidently, 'Ambition, even gratified ambition can never satisfy the inner sanctuary of your soul; you will never be happy till you love.' Are the words of a child to undermine the foundations of my theories of life, love and happiness that six years ago I boasted were built on the solid rock of reason instead of on the shifting sands of human affection? And yet—have they brought peace to me after all? I would freely give power, fame and ambition for the look in Nell's blue eyes as she talked of her husband. Ah! child, with only your trusting heart to guide you, you have found and gathered the little wayside flower, happiness, which in my selfishness and pride I have missed. Across the chasm of years, comes a faint yet never-dying echo of the same words.

"Willard, you at least truly loved me, and would have saved me from myself, and I would not, and now it is forever too late, for the fire in my heart has burned so low that there is now left only a faint, tender strain of regret, and the white ashes of memory. I have indeed passed the Rubicon of youth and hope, and for me there is no redemption."

Little Joe Harris, Marjorie's special errand boy and devoted slave, after arranging to his satisfaction the furniture and papers in her private sanctum in her uncle's large establishment, had placed a tiny bunch of apple-blossoms on his idol's desk, and now stood half bashfully watching Marjorie, as she came in, pale and weary looking from last night's vigil, and sat down to write. Seeing the flowers, she drew them toward her with a look of pleased surprise, but, as she inhaled their fragrance, gradually there stole over her face a shadow, marring its brightness, as a cloud crosses the face of the sun. The breath of the flowers was laden with old associations and memories of her happy home at Appledale farm, of her grandmother, who had long since crossed that mystic river whose tide never ebbs toward the shores of time, and wafted on their sweet breath came her talk with Willard Lester in the sun-lit orchard on that afternoon so long ago. Then a full knowledge of her mistake swept over her, and, laying her cheek against the pink petals, she burst into a passion of tears. Poor Joe, utterly amazed at such a reception of so paltry a gift, started to her, then stole softly from the room, and stood guard outside to prevent intruders. Like the smitten rock at Horeb, the tears burst through the icy wall that was gradually forming round her heart, and, when the flowers whispered to her of Willard's solemn "I will wait for you always," the white blossoms of hope sprung into bloom.

"It was all wrong," she whispered, in return; "I wandered into the wrong pathway, and my palace car of ambition has only brought me to the gates of discontent, but I will go home and begin over again, trusting to Heaven and my awakened heart this time."

It was hard to tear herself away from her business engagements and duties, harder still to persuade her uncle that he could certainly spare her a while, and that she really needed a rest; but her indomitable energy enabled her to accomplish them all, and one week later found her sitting on the old, familiar porch gazing at the lovely scene before her and listening to a perfect tirade of gossip from her mother's only sister, who now lived at the farm. Marjorie was longing to ask for one old friend in particular, yet something in her heart choked back his name, and she sat wondering at her own reticence, and why Aunt Lizzie did not speak of the minister, when, two figures came through the little wicket gate and up to the porch, where she now rose to welcome her guests.

"Miss Melrose," said Willard Lester—for one of them was, indeed, he—"I am most happy to welcome you once more to D., where, I assure you, you have always been missed;" then, turning to his companion, he continued; "I hope you will need no introduction to my wife, whom you once knew as Annie Leigh."

For one moment the earth seemed slipping from under Marjorie's feet, and the fair landscape looked black before her startled eyes; but, before Mr. Lester's voice died away, the woman of the world greeted his wife in her calm, clear voice and most winning smile.

Marjorie stayed two weeks at Appledale farm, and then, in spite of their remonstrances, went back to her old life and work. To her aunt's pleadings and Willard's arguments, who pointed out to her the good she could accomplish in the village with her wealth, energy and culture, she made only one reply.

"Busy myself as I will, the range of action seems monotonous and confined. I began too soon to draw around me the large circle of literature and action, and the small sphere open to me in D. seems a sad going back in life. No, the wanderer's ban is again upon me, and I must turn again to the land of excitement."

Her city friends saw no change in their queen, when she was again among them, except, perhaps, the lines about her mouth were a trifle deeper and the shadow in her wonderful eyes a shade denser and more impenetrable than before. "But," they argued, "of course Marjorie had been inexpressibly bored by that duty visit to her aunt; she would be her old self after the anticipated trip to Europe during the summer."

As for her, burying the dead blossoms of hope from her sight and heart, she turned resolutely to her work again.

Was her fate an exceptionally hard one, after all?—

"Ah, well! for us all, some sweet hope lies deeply buried from human eyes."

Champagne.

Champagne is a modern wine. The sparkling beverage now so extensively known is a comparatively recent discovery. Its origin hardly dates beyond the eighteenth century; and even in 1780 Moet and Chandon, the chief manufacturers, whose present annual sale amounts to over 150,000 dozen, thought it a bold venture to have made 6,000 bottles in the year. The royal monastery of St. Peter, in Hautvilliers, gave to the world a monk named Perignon, who was the original discoverer. His chief duty was to take charge of the extensive vineyards of the monastery, to receive the eleventh barrel of all the wine made in the district, and to make the wine of the establishment. "Dom Perignon, born a taster, and strengthened by constant practice, became so expert that, when in the decline of life he was blind, no one of his holy brethren, even with the aid of his eyes, could compete with him as a judge of wine." Dom Perignon, says an old chronicler, being blind toward the end of his life, ordered the grapes of different vineyards to be brought to him, recognized each kind by the taste, and said, "You must marry (mix) the wine of this grape with the other." In the course of his wine-mixings and experiments, the worthy Dom discovered the effervescing wine, now known as champagne. The secret was, however, kept to himself, and the wine for the brotherhood, sending, however, an occasional bottle to the King. Dom Perignon is said to have died in the full odor of sanctity, gratefuly remembered by his convivial and holy brethren, and his name should be embalmed in the memory of everyone within the sound of a pop of the champagne bottle. Among his other virtues, heavenly and terrestrial, there is not only the discovery of champagne, but that of the cork, which he was the first to put into a bottle, for, before his time, the only stopper used was a bunch of flax soaked in oil.

A Defense of Cleopatra.

Allow me to inquire here, parenthetically, how it happens that the queen of Egypt has come to be regarded as an example of extreme inconstancy. She has been grossly misrepresented. History tells us that she was married to her brother, Ptolemy XII, by the will of her father after his death. The union was merely an arrangement of state; had no binding force, and was not probably, ever consummated, as the couple were minors. Pompey was appointed their guardian, and it has been intimated that he was her lover. There was no authority whatever for this, indeed everything points to the contrary. He was not merely chaste, he was almost passionless, as Cicero has testified. When Cæsar had invaded the country, and Pompey had been murdered, he was fascinated by her, and she became his mistress, more from love than interest. Then, in order to give weight to her sovereignty, she was given in marriage to her second brother, a child of seven years—her other brother, Ptolemy XII, having been drowned—and the foremost man of all the world lived with her until he returned to Rome, carrying with him the woman who was the most splendid part of his splendid conquest. When he went to his last campaign in Hispania, she saw him for the last time.

At Antony's meeting with her, Cæsar had been dead nine years; so that her relation to him was no disloyalty to her former protector. They were the only men of whom she ever pretended to be fond, and she was devoted to them in mind, heart and soul. The opinion that she accepted Augustus (Octavius) Cæsar has no basis. Shakspeare gives this impression, but merely as a poetic license. Cleopatra, therefore, instead of being an incarnation of disloyalty, was a model of loyalty, especially for that time.—Chicago Times' Long Branch Letter.

Boston Street-Cleaning.

Boston, the best-kept city on the continent, probably, has no trouble with the disposal of offal or cleaning the streets, while New York is always in scandal over these comparatively-simple municipal problems, and even smaller cities are sometimes embarrassed. The Boston swill-system is a very pretty thing. The city has three offal-yards, into which all the offal is gathered, houses being visited twice in week a winter, three times in summer, and hotels daily. The driver of each cart drives upon a platform scale at the yard and receives a ticket for the amount of his load; he is paid at the end of the week according to the tickets he surrenders, which show the work he has done. But the most interesting point for Springfield is that from these depots the offal is sold to farmers for pigs and for fertilizer for from $3.60 to $6 a cord, according to the distance they have to cart it. At the Charlestown yard $6 a cord is paid, although even from that point the farmers must cart it from three miles upward. The farmers come for it in close wagons, and pay cash at the office in each yard. The removal of ashes employs 121 men and fifty-nine carts upon a similar system, and the ashes are sold for filling at from 5 to 25 cents a load.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

THE dancing master is always taking steps to improve his business.

The Village Hotel Veranda.

After supper we march into the office in Indian file, arm ourselves with poplar toothpicks, and then all march out and take seats on the hotel veranda and hold a convention. If you have never taken part in one of these gatherings on the veranda of a village hotel you have missed a good thing. The audience includes every phase of human nature.

The discussion usually opens between the village blacksmith and a farmer, and it starts on the weather.

The blacksmith asserts that we have had too much rain. The farmer can't agree. The undertaker, who used to farm it, then joins in with the remark that he has seen seasons when we had more rain, and seasons when we didn't have as much. This calls out the shoemaker, who can remember one year when it didn't rain from the 20th of March to the 1st of October. While he is trying to remember what year it was, the cooper tilts back his chair and asserts that he can distinctly recall a year in which it rained every day from the 1st of May to the middle of November. He can remember it all the more distinctly because his father believed that a second deluge was coming, and spent two months trying to make a watertight Noah's ark of the horse barn. He can't tell the exact year without footing it a distance of six miles to examine some old documents but rather than have his word disputed he would willingly go to that trouble. No one doubts him, however, and he sits down to give room to the man whose three-year-old colt has been impaled on a fence-stake, and who wants a cure for the wound. He follows a discussion on horses, lasting fifteen minutes, and it is about to cross the line and take up mules when an old man spits over the heads of three boys in line and says:

"I don't know much about hosses, but if I had one, and he should drive a fence-stake clear through him, I believe I should grease the stake and pick off the slivers before I pulled it out! I tell ye, horses can't stand everything, no more'n a man can."

Whatever new discussion might be created by this bold assertion is barred by the appearance of a villager who made the trip to California in overland days. No one knows just how much money he brought back. The estimate runs all the way from two shillings to $20,000, but he is discreetly silent as to the exact amount. There is one thing certain, however. He killed upward of fifty Indians, a dozen grizzly bears, and over a hundred buffalos while he was gone, and that settles the question of his being entitled to command the parade on the Fourth of July. A move is about to be made to draw him out on wild Western scenes, when somebody suddenly recollects that old Uncle Jerry is lying at the point of death. Everybody seems to feel bad for a moment, and then it is remembered how he made his wife go barefooted in winter, lent money at fourteen per cent., and whipped a yoke of steers to death, and the tide slowly turns. There is one question, however, on which all are agreed. Uncle Jerry, during his palmy days, once shouldered a barrel of cider and carried it forty rods.

"Yes, and I seed him do it," sighs the old man behind me. "Fact of it was, it was all on my account, and I beat him pretty bad. I was up to Fuller's cider-mill arter a barrel of the sweet, when Uncle Jerry came along with a bouncing three-year-old steer. We got to bantering, and we finally agreed that if I could lift his steer I was to have him, and he was to have the cider if he could shoulder it. I don't keer to brag around now in my old age, but I think I lifted that steer without even growin' red in the face. Uncle Jerry turned as white as a sheet, and I thought he'd faint away, but he stuck to his word and I took the steer hum. He got a heap o' credit all over the county for liftin' that cider, and never let on that I lifted the steer, and that's one thing I've kinder laid up agin the old man."

Then the next man lies about the number of crows he saw in Kansas, and so we go until it is sharp 10 o'clock and the mosquitoes begin to hunger for evening lunch. Then they bid each other good-night and separate to meet and lie again.—M. Quad.

A Luckless Tramp.

Some time ago a tramp got into the fire box of a stationary engine that was being shipped on a flat car to the Pacific coast. By some freak of misfortune to him a careful brakeman closed the furnace-door on him, and the solitary picnicker was alone with his conscience and a few friends that had come along with him to represent the National Bug Bureau.

At first he thought it was a joke, and he laughed a smothered, hysterical laugh, but as the hours dragged on and he didn't know whether it was day or night or whether it was the Fourth of July or eternity, he concluded to attract the attention of the outside world, so he pounded on the inside of his cage till his arms ached. He might as well have tried to get out of a fire and burglar proof safe with a corkscrew.

One day, through curiosity, a railroad boy opened the door of the engine furnace and looked in. The broad sole of an old boot was turned up at the door, and the brakeman took hold of it and snatched it out. It was followed by an attenuated piece of humanity, that rattled around on the car like an old umbrella.

The bystanders reviewed him and asked him if he didn't feel hungry. He said he did feel a kind of goneness in the gastric regions.

An old man, who was then acting treasurer of the Irish Relief Fund, took the job of filling him up. That is the reason why Ireland missed the beneficial effects of the relief fund for several months, at a time when she needed it worst.—Denver Tribune.

Those Golden Tresses.

He said he once fell desperately in love with a pretty blonde, who had the most bewitching ringlets that ever ensnared the heart of a man in their meshes. That he raved like a lunatic over these golden tresses. That he wrote sonnets to their beauty and luxuriance, and even wore a tiny love-lock, which he stole from them one starry night, upon his head for six long months. And that, in fact, he was so much entranced by the ringlets that he resolved to marry their fair owner. And so, one evening, when he had fully made up his mind to propose, he set off to visit his inamorata, quoting poetry as he went along, and wondering how a fellow set about, anyway, when he really wanted to marry a pretty girl. Unluckily, the fair one with the golden locks was not at home when he called that night, and her younger sister came waltzing into the parlor to meet him. And, Oh horror of horrors! she had pinned on her little head a mass of golden curls, which the poor fellow recognized at once. "Sister Belle's gone out," said the little minx, "and I thought I'd put on her curls and come down to see her beau!" This broke up the intended match, put an end to sonnet-writing and other vague, lover-like rhapsodies, and added one more to the fearfully long list of Saratoga old bachelors.—Sophie Sparkle, in New York Mail.

In Iceland.

The main difficulty in Icelandic traveling is to find ground firm enough to bear a horse and his rider, and the safest track is often along the sea-beach, where that is available, or even in the bed of a stream. Water is everywhere, and the traveler constantly crosses fords, either in the river whose course he is following, or through torrents rushing down from the field on either side. The pass over which we had to ride is about 1,500 feet high, and in the month of June the "divide" was still blocked with snow. This snow was hard enough to bear a man or a pony, but in many places it would give way beneath them, when both on the same set of feet, and in consequence the Captain and I did a good deal of walking. The old guide, however, stuck to his steed, except when obliged to cross a torrent on a precarious bridge of snow, and they managed to flounder triumphantly through all difficulties. An Icelander in riding uses neither whip nor spur, but works his arms and legs perpetually like the sails of a windmill, and can thus keep his pony moving at a pace which leaves the foreigner far in the rear. On the quiet waters of the fjord the eider ducks were taking their newly hatched broods for a first swim, and as we scrambled up the fjeld, the cock ptarmigan fluttered and croaked over our heads, according to his habit when the hen is sitting upon eggs. The region of forests, represented by dwarf birches and whortleberries, is soon left behind, and near the summit of the pass there is hardly any vegetation of a higher order than Icelandic moss, while the bare rocks are profusely marked with striations from glaciers that have long since disappeared.—The Nineteenth Century.

Origin of the Horseshoe Superstition.

In the very early times, says a writer in Baldwin's Monthly, among the Celtic race an effigy of the patron saint, so common in churches and temples, was much used in the dwellings and shops of the people, as a so-called "protection" against ill-fortune. The "glory" above the head of these figures—which later was often rudely carved in wood and painted—was represented by a circular piece of polished metal, to convey the effect of the shining halo or nimbus frequently seen in illustrations of the Virgin and other scripture subjects. Often this metal nimbus was of semi-circular form; and, after the figure itself had disappeared, by reason of decay, the nimbus remained and was suspended in some prominent place at the entrance door or other point commanding view. The effigies in question were not uncommingly seen by the side of the doorway. In course of time the nimbus was much used as a substitute for the latter, and was sold in shops for this purpose.

The tradition of good luck, as embodied in the horseshoe theory, may thus be easily traced, since it became a common occurrence, in the due course of time, for the faithful adherent in the belief in charms and symbols to adopt the horseshoe worn to brightness, in the absence of any other, which he nailed over his cottage-door. Hence a piece of metal of this shape became associated in the common mind with supernatural presence and care, in keeping with the belief attaching to the original figure of the patron saint.

Throwing the Hatchet.

In the fourteenth century, the situation of public executioner to the city of Florence became vacant, and, as it was a place of considerable emolument, there were three candidates. A day was appointed for public display of their several abilities. The first candidate, with a knife, cleverly separated the head of the victim from his shoulders. He was outdone by the rapid stroke of the second, whose glittering broadsword struck terror into the hearts of the surrounding multitude. The third, and least promising, held in his hand a short hatchet, and, when the victim was extended with his head on the fatal block, approached him, and in a low whisper inquired if he was a swift runner, and if he could swim well. On being answered in the affirmative, he desired him to spring on his feet and cross the river. The executioner then put on a fierce look, swung his weapon round his head, but, instead of making it descend on the devoted creature's neck, struck it with great force into the block! Shouts of execration rose from the crowd, and the trembling wretch, astonished at his wonderful escape, had nearly gained the opposite bank of the river before any steps were taken to pursue him. He had scarcely, however, gone ten yards on dry land, when the executioner, taking steady aim, threw his hatchet with such effect that the body continued running some time after the head was off! From this rather improbable incident the common phrase of throwing the hatchet is said to be derived.

"Are you an Odd Fellow?" "No, sir; I have been married more than a week." "I mean do you belong to the order of Odd Fellows?" "No; I belong to the order of married men." "Mercy, how dull! Are you a Mason?" "No; I am a carpenter." "Worse and worse! Are you a Son of Temperance?" "No; I am the son of Mr. John Gosling."

DOCUTA CAPSULETS. Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions. Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
[illegible]
INDIGESTION—EXPOSURE [illegible]
YOUNG MEN [illegible]
PATIENTS TREATED [illegible]
Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their [illegible] book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

The above five preparations for sale by F. L. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhœa, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. [illegible]
H. H. Warner & Co.
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE · SAFE DIABETES CURE · SAFE BITTERS · SAFE NERVINE · SAFE PILLS · READ! · SAVE THYSELF

IN USE SINCE 1855
MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS
A Compound Tincture of the most valuable remedies known to the medical profession, prepared upon strictly pharmaceutical principles.
An experience of twenty-five years proves it to be the greatest Antidote to Malaria and all other Ague influences known to the world.
The only absolute cure for all Affections of the Kidneys, [illegible] and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs, [illegible] to the female sex it has no equal.
NOT A BEVERAGE
But an old reliable Household Remedy, thoroughly adapted to assist nature.
It supplies tone to the stomach, reinvigorates the digestive organs, stimulates the secretions, and promoting a regular action of the bowels, enables every organ of the body to perform its allotted work regularly and without interruption.
Its highest commendations come from those who have used it longest and known it best.
Nowhere so popular as in Lancaster, Pa., where it has been in use for more than a quarter of a century.
Highly commended as a General Tonic and Appetizer. Sold by Druggists everywhere.
THE MESSENGER OF HEALTH
A large sized paper descriptive of disease, its origin and cure, will be mailed free to any address on application to
THE MISHLER HERB BITTERS CO.
Lancaster, Pa.
We strongly recommend to mothers Prof. Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup. It never fails, is easy to take, and no after-physic is required. Price, 25 cents.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroads through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.
Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

THE INVENTORS,

And Some of the Queer Things They Are Getting Up.

The latest wrinkle in gas-meters is the patent of a Norfolk man, a price-indicator showing in dollars and cents the amount due for gas.

An automatic railroad switch signal has been patented by a Hartford hotel clerk. It shows danger when a switch is displaced, and will not right itself until the last of the indefinite number of switches to which it may be attached has been properly placed.

Clocks can now be made self-winding—that is, electric clock of the Copenhagen variety. Louis Sonderberg, the Dane, in charge of them, applies to them a mechanical contrivance which periodically cuts off the stream of electric fluid from the battery, and brings an electro-magnet to bear upon the relaxing main-spring in such a way as to renew its tension instantaneously.

A young New Yorker has patented what he calls water-skates. The skate is an air vessel made of zinc and hermetically sealed; is about five feet in length, ten inches broad and five inches deep, with vertical sides, and tapers off fore and aft, or at the toe and heel, like a steamboat. On the deck or upper surface there is a socket into which the foot is set, the opening being guarded by a rim of metal to keep the water from washing into the socket. The bottom is fitted with a double gang of automatic paddles, one gang forward and the other aft, with five blades in each gang. The blades are set on swivels in a frame ten inches square, that hangs vertically with the bottom of the skate. As the skate is pushed forward through the water the blades are opened and offer no resistance, but when the foot rests so as to begin a forward movement with the other foot, the pressure backward closes the blades and gives a purchase on the water that materially aids in propulsion. Each skate weighs about eight pounds, but in the water, owing to its buoyancy, it has no perceptible weight on the foot. One day the inventor walked across the surface of the Harlem river on them, the movement being a sort of gliding step, in which the skate is not lifted out of the water.

In Defense of Nero.

Nero's cruelty has become a by-word. But to the cruelty that enjoys the pain of others, the cruelty of voluptuaries and hysterical women whose nerves are tickled at the sight of torture and blood, Nero was a stranger; he died too young, and with health too unbroken to fall into that. Nor can he be charged with the villainous nature of a Caligula, who killed because he had the power to do so. Just as little can the kind of cruelty most usual be attributed to him, which has its rise in the impulse of retaliation of the feeling of revenge. He was, on the contrary, whenever he could without danger or sacrifice be so, inclined to overlook and forgive. But an amiable nature, without the support of moral principles, is altogether untrustworthy in the trials of life. One sees it best in the so-called natural people, in whom cruelty can of a sudden break out in the very midst of simple expressions of beautiful qualities of the human soul. And with all his surfeiting on the forms of an over-refined culture. Nero was, and remained, a "private man." When the instinct of self-preservation was aroused, when he saw his life menaced, or that he was threatened in the conditions of enjoying life, he lost the power of reason. Imagination, which can make ills in prospect worse than those that have happened, overpowered him; and if those who surrounded him were such as urged him on, instead of restraining him, he struck, and spared not. The watchword of the time, besides, was by every means to seek enjoyment and avoid pain. To an epicurean savage, in whose hands had been placed the destiny of the world, the desire to remove causes of suffering lay in very close proximity to that of avoiding them. If he hesitated to take the step from one to the other, there were frightening, encouraging and flattering voices that conjured him to do so, and seemed to be right, too, for when he had crossed the Rubicon of crime, everything came on rejoicing to meet him. And the dignified repose with which the stoic went forth to die, the defiant frivolity with which the epicurean left the feast of life, were equally apt to persuade the tyrant that everything—life and death, and the judgment of life and death—is play.—Rydbery's Roman Days.

Prof. Bell's Luck.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell has received the Volta prize of the French Academy of $10,000 for the telephone, as "the best application of electricity." He values the prize chiefly, as he says, as settling the question of the real inventor. He will cross the water to accept it in person, and soon return to lecture in the Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore. The photophone he regards as at present only a scientific toy, but so was the telephone at first. He thinks its future use will be between ships at sea, wrecks and the shore, and for military communication. He announced the possibility of producing sound by interrupting the action of light on selenium to the Royal Institute of Great Britain, in May, 1878, and heard just after an announcement by Willoughby Smith to the Society of Telegraphic Engineers that he had heard the action of a ray of light on a crystal of selenium by a telephone in connection with it. He had been experimenting that day with the photophone, and its action was satisfactory to the scientific men present. Any one familiar with the articulation of the telephone could understand it. Prof. Bell was born in Scotland, educated at the University of Edinburgh, and came to Canada in 1870, and to a chair in Boston University in 1872.—Springfield Republican.

A Voracious Eater.

A remarkable feature of eating and drinking against time is reported by the Hungarian press, and said to have been performed by a youthful Magyar residing in Grosswardien. This surpassing trencherman laid a wager, and is declared to have won it with several minutes and an omelette to spare, that he would, between the hours of 9:30 p. m. and midnight, devour the following comestibles, it being clearly understood that there would be a full portion of each dish in succession, any two of which portions may be estimated as constituting a hearty meal for a full-grown adult blessed by nature with a lively appetite: Roast beef with paprica sauce and potatoes; a Vienna veal cutlet with pears; a fillet of beef with dumplings; grilled pork with pumpkins; half a fowl fried in batter; bubble and squeak; a beefsteak with poached eggs; fried calves' liver; calves' brains and kidneys; pickled veal; stewed beef; a broiled goose liver and a fricasseed fowl with carrots. He not only contrived to stow away all the articles enumerated in this comprehensive menu, washing them down with two quarts of beer, four bottles of old wine, and three of aerated water, but when he had cleared the last of his appointed dishes—the clock dial then marking 10 minutes to 12—he asked for a three-egg omelette, which vanished down his throat before the hour struck.

Buoyancy of Water.

Another terrible steamboat slaughter! Presence of mind and a slight knowledge of the specific gravity of the human body would have saved much of this frightful loss of life. There was loose wood enough about the boat to have floated ten times the number of passengers on the ill-fated vessel, if it had been used with judgment. The human body weighs about a pound in the water, and a single chair will carry two grown persons. That is, it will keep their heads above water, which is all that is necessary when it is a question of life or death. The burning vessel was close to shore, the water was calm and warm, and all these passengers might easily have jumped overboard and paddled laughing ashore, if they had only possessed and used the simple knowledge that one finger placed upon a stool, or a chair, or a small box, or a piece of board, would easily keep the head above water, while the two feet and the other hand might be used as paddles to propel toward the shore. It is not at all necessary to know how to swim to be able to keep from drowning in this way. A little experience of the buoyant power of matter, and faith in it, is all that is required. We have seen a small boy who could not swim a stroke propel himself back and forth across a deep, wide pond by means of a board that would not sustain five pounds. In fact, that sometime small boy is now writing this. Children and all others should have practice in the sustaining power of water. In nine cases out of ten the knowledge that what will sustain a pound weight is all that is necessary to keep one's head above water will serve better in emergencies than the greatest expertness as a swimmer. A person unfamiliar with the buoyant power of water will naturally try to climb on top of the floating object on which he tries to save himself. If it is large enough that is all right. But it is generally not large enough, and half of a struggling group are often drowned in the desperate scramble of a life-and-death struggle to climb on top of a piece of wreck or other floating object, not large enough to keep them all entirely above the water. This often happens when pleasure boats capsize. All immediately want to get out of the water on top of the overturned or half-filled boat, and all are drowned except those whom the wrecked craft will wholly bear up. If they would simply trust the water to sustain ninety-nine hundredths of the weight of their bodies, and the disabled boat the other hundredth, they might all be saved under most circumstances. An overturned or water-filled wooden boat will sustain more people than it will carry. It would keep the heads above water of as many people as could get their hands on the gunwale. These are simple facts, easily learned, and may some day save your life.—Trenton (N. J.) Gazette.

About Leeches.

They live from fifty to 100 years, and are sometimes even older than that. Most of the leeches used by medical men of this country are brought from Northern and Northwestern Europe, where they abound in the swamp lands in great numbers. They are imported to this country by Dr. White, who lives in Rhode Island, and who has great purging ponds, where he prepares the disgusting little creatures for the market. Cleveland dealers get their supplies from him and from wholesale houses in New York city. There are two or three firms in this city who wholesale them. They sell during a single year to the small drug stores and the physicians throughout the city not less than 2,000 leeches. They bring a price of about $1 per dozen, and are easily and cheaply kept in supply. The American leech is found in parts of Mississippi and Pennsylvania, but for bleeding purposes are considered worthless, the foreign, or rather the Swedish leech being the best and consequently the highest priced. At Bordeaux, France, is an immense piece of swamp land, where the leeches are captured by the million. Here there are large numbers of aged and infirm horses and cattle, brought thither from the surrounding cities. These animals are driven into the swamps, the leeches fasten themselves on the beasts in great numbers, the animals again reach dry land, and the leeches are gathered from their bodies, packed in rich, black earth, and shipped to this country. Not less than 20,000 horses were engaged in this wonderful business during last year alone. The leech itself is a queer creature. It takes an entire year for it to digest a meal, and if properly taken care of it will live wonderfully long with nothing to eat. But they are very delicate, nevertheless, and are often afflicted with diseases peculiar to the leech. Among these afflictions is a fatal skin disease, which often carries off large numbers before its ravages can be stopped.—Cleveland Press.

He Wanted Something New.

A cigarette-smoking scion of one of the first families on the West Side came into this office to request that a notice of his coming nuptials might be inserted in the paper.

"Don't say, however," said the young man earnestly, "that I am about to lead to the hymeneal altar the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mr. So-and-So, because that kind of slush is too old; and, besides, no one can lead a woman, and then again, it's leap year. Better make it read that I have consented to be her'n." He was assured that it would be done, and left.—Chicago Tribune.

THEATER-GOERS, club-visitors, late supper-takers, and patrons of the horse-railroad owl-trains, should all certainly have a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup convenient. Gentlemen, you will need it.

Pleasant Life in Bengal.

The daily life of the family is a series of pictures of Arcadian simplicity. At daybreak, when the crows begin to caw, the whole household is astir. The two elder brothers are off to the fields, while Gayaram is seeing after the cows. The women are busy in the huts and court-yard. Sometimes the men come home to their mid-day meal, and sometimes it is carried to them in the fields. At sunset the labors of the day are brought to a close. A mat is spread in the court-yard and the men sit down cross-legged and smoke their hubble-bubbles; and at such times it is the joy of Badan's life to listen to the childish prattle of his little daughter Malati. Occasionally the brothers pay visits to their neighbors, or neighbors drop in and join in the smoking. The conversation is nearly always the same—the weather, the bullocks, the crops, and the cows; the plowing, harvesting, sowing or irrigating. But money is ever the burden of the talk; rupees, annas, and pice; the zemindar's rent; the interest paid to the money lender; the cost, profit or loss of every transaction connected with the farm or household. The whole family is religious; indeed all Hindus is religious. They may be everything that is good or bad, but they are never wanting in fear of the gods. They are constantly uttering the sacred names, and they offer a portion of every meal to the gods of the earth, water, and sky. They see deity in everything that exists, and omens of good or evil in everything that moves. If they meets a cow or a wedding they rejoice over their good fortune; if they see a widow or a funeral they are downhearted at their ill luck. They engage in no business, or journey, or transaction of any sort or kind, without a prayer to the goddess Lakshimi or an invocation to the elephant-headed Ganesha. Every family or group of families has its own Purohita, or domestic Brahman, who performs endless ceremonies of propitiation, consecration or purification at births, deaths, marriages, feasts, festivals, religious celebrations, and family incidents of every kind. In return, the Purohita receives all the offerings of rice, fruits, and vegetables that are made to the gods, with occasional presents of a like character. Every year the Guru, or religious teacher of the sect or district, makes his appearance to receive his shilling fee from every household, and to confirm younger neophytes by whispering into their respective ears the name of the god that each one is to worship as his own individual deity. This name is known as the "seed prayer," and is to be uttered by the worshiper one hundred and eight times every day until the end of his earthly career.—Macmillan's Magazine.

PLENTY OF MONEY.

[From the Columbus Evening Dispatch.]

Plenty of money secures leisure and buys pleasure; but will not always restore health when lost. Mr. H. Lulay, Suffield, O., writes: My wife was affected with Liver Complaint for fifteen years, and could not find any relief, with the aid of all the physicians we consulted. I concluded to try the Hamburg Drops. My wife was cured, and since that day we have not seen a physician in our house.

THERE is at Brussels a curious case of chronic drowsiness. A man about forty-five years of age, apparently in perfect health, has lately been attacked by an irresistible tendency to sleep. As soon as he stops walking or seats himself even to eat he falls into a deep slumber. All the remedies prescribed by the leading Belgian physicians have failed to produce any effect upon him. This is said to be the first case of the kind in Europe, although such cases are by no means rare among the negroes of Guinea, who call them Nelavan.

[From the Holly (Mich.) Register.]

THE wife of Rev. A. A. Allen, had been afflicted with Rheumatism for the past six years; she tried St. Jacobs Oil one evening, which relieved her of all pain, and she rested in peace for the night. One bottle cured her.

DURING the past fifteen months about 10,000,000 acres of Government land were sold under the homestead laws—a more than usual heavy amount.

"MORE food and less medicine, more of nourishment and strength, less of the debilitating influence of drugs, is what our exhausted constitutions require," said Baron Liebig, when he perfected the composition of the "Malt Bitters," prepared by Malt Bitters Co.

D. L. MOODY has written to Gen. J. S. Berry, of Baltimore, that, contrary to expectation, he will not be in Baltimore the coming winter, as he goes to San Francisco in October, and will remain there for an indefinite period.

Are You Not in Good Health?

If the Liver is the source of your trouble, you can find an absolute remedy in DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR, the only vegetable cathartic which acts directly on the Liver. Cures all Bilious diseases. For Book address DR. SANFORD, 162 Broadway, New York.

The Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich.,

Will send their Electro-Voltaic Belts to the afflicted upon thirty days' trial. See their advertisement in this paper, headed, "On Thirty Days' Trial."

DR. C. E. SHOEMAKER, the well-known aural surgeon of Reading, Pa., offers to send by mail, free of charge, a valuable little book on deafness and diseases of the ear—especially on running ear and catarrh, and their proper treatment—giving references and testimonials that will satisfy the most skeptical. Address as above.

VEGETINE will regulate the bowels to healthy action, by stimulating the secretions, cleansing and purifying the blood of poisonous humors, and, in a healthful and natural manner, expels all impurities without weakening the body.

VEGETINE.—The great success of the VEGETINE as a cleanser and purifier of the blood is shown beyond a doubt by the great numbers who have taken it, and received immediate relief, with such remarkable cures.

25c. buys a pair of Lyon's Heel Stiffeners and make a boot or shoe last twice as long.

DR BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

AMUSE the children with the Puzzle Cards. See advertisement in another column of this paper.

YOUNG men from all parts of the United States go to H. B. Bryant's Chicago Business College. Its classes are always large and full of interest.

EVERY farmer and teamster should know that Frazer's axle grease cures sore necks and scratches on horses.

READ the Puzzle Card advertisement in another column of this paper.

WILHOFT'S Fever and Ague Tonic. This old reliable remedy now sells at one dollar.

PUZZLE CARDS, new and novel. See advertisement in another column.

Daughters, Wives and Mothers.
DR. MARCHISI'S UTERINE CATHOLICON will positively cure Female Weakness, such as Falling of the Womb, Whites, Chronic Inflammation or Ulceration of the Womb, Incidental Hemorrhage or Flooding, Painful, Suppressed and Irregular Menstruation, &c. An old and reliable remedy. Send postal card for a pamphlet, with treatment, cures and certificates from physicians and patients, to HOWARTH & BALLARD, Utica, N. Y. Sold by all Druggists—$1.50 per bottle.

Vegetine.

More to Me than Gold.

WALPOLE, Mass., March 7, 1880.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:
I wish to inform you what VEGETINE has done for me. I have been troubled with Erysipelas Humor for more than thirty years, in my limbs and other parts of my body, and have been a great sufferer. I commenced taking VEGETINE one year ago last August, and can truly say it has done more for me than any other medicine. I seem to be perfectly free from this humor and can recommend it to every one. Would not be without this medicine—'tis more to me than gold—and I feel it will prove a blessing to others as it has to me.
Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. DAVID CLARK.

J. BENTLEY, M. D., says:

It has done more good than all Medical Treatment.

NEWMARKET, Ont., Feb. 9, 1880.

MR. H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.:
Sir—I have sold during the last year a considerable quantity of your VEGETINE, and I believe in all cases it has given satisfaction. In one case, a delicate young lady of about seventeen years was much benefited by its use. Her parents informed me that it had done her more good than all the medical treatment to which she had previously been subjected.
Yours respectfully,
J. BENTLEY, M. D.

Loudly in Its Praise.

TORONTO, Ont., March 3, 1880.
Dear Sir—Considering the short time that VEGETINE has been before the public here, it sells well as a blood purifier, and for troubles arising from a sluggish or torpid liver it is a first-class medicine. Our customers speak loudly in its praise.
J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Cor. Queen and Elizabeth Streets.

VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

$72 a week. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Me.

FULL CONCAVE ENGLISH RAZORS. $1.50. E. Howcroft, 235 West 28th St., New York City.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 Outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Me.

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit Free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

BUGGIES for the TRADE. Territory given. ENTERPRISE CARRIAGE CO., Cincinnati, O. Catalogue FREE.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

74 GOOD FARMS, near Lemars, Iowa, with new Dwellings, to let on easy terms. Apply to CLOSE BROS. & CO., Lemars, Iowa.

$350 A MONTH! Agents Wanted! 75 Best-Selling Articles in the world; a sample free. JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

TRUTH IS MIGHTY! [illegible]

FOR SALE—The Best Literary Weekly Paper in the West. Large circulation and good advertising patronage. Proprietor desires to sell in order to engage in other business. Address STEELE, care Newspaper Union, Chicago, Ill.

Card Writers Send for our Price List of fine Visiting Cards and card stock. We have the largest variety in the West at the lowest prices. Address CARD DEPOT, 179 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Read THE Chicago Ledger,
The GREAT STORY PAPER OF THE WEST.

WANTED—Agents everywhere to sell our goods by sample, to families. We give attractive presents and first-class goods to your customers; we give you good profits; we prepay all express charges; we furnish outfit free. Write for particulars.
PEOPLE'S TEA CO., Box 5025, St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS wishing to canvass for the Lives of GARFIELD OR HANCOCK
Should write at once for Circulars and terms of agency to FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, O.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.
We will send our Electro-Voltaic Belts and other Electric Appliances upon trial for 30 days to those afflicted with Nervous Debility and diseases of a personal nature. Also of the Liver, Kidneys, Rheumatism, Paralysis, &c. A sure cure guaranteed or no pay.
Address Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich.

SAPONIFIER
Is the "Original" Concentrated Lye and Reliable Family Soap Maker. Directions accompany each Can for making Hard, Soft and Toilet Soap quickly. It is full weight and strength. Ask your grocer for SAPONIFIER, and take no other.
Penn'a Salt Manufact'ng Co., Phila.

DO Not Fail to send for our Price-List for 1880. FREE to any address upon application. Contains descriptions of everything required for personal or family use, with over 1,200 illustrations. We sell all goods at wholesale prices in quantities to suit the purchaser. The only institution in America who make this their special business. Address
MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.,
227 and 229 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

The Koran.
A curiosity to every one, and a necessity to all students of History or Religion: THE KORAN OF MOHAMMED; translated from the Arabic by George Sale. Formerly published at $2.75; a new, beautiful type, neat, cloth-bound edition; price, 35 cents, and 6 cents for postage. Catalogue of many standard works, remarkably low in price, with extra terms to clubs, free. Say where you saw this advertisement. AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE, Tribune Building, N. Y.

PENSIONS!
New Law. Thousands of Soldiers and heirs entitled. Pensions date back to discharge or death. Time limited. Address, with stamp,
GEORGE E. LEMON,
P. O. Drawer 325. Washington, D. C.

The Tragedian's Daughter.

On Howard street, the other day. "Where are you going, my pretty maid?" asked a benevolent old gentleman, as he chucked under the chin a little tot of a six-year-old, who was walking gravely along with a basket on her arm.

"Give thee good-day, graybeard," replied the midget, simply. "My father bade me to the shambles hie for a fat haunch."

"W-w-what?" ejaculated the old party.

"Haply thou knowest him, the good man Skidmore?" inquired the tiny dame.

"N-o-o," said the gentleman, much puzzled at the evident earnestness of the child. "You're a quaint little thing. Come with me and I will buy you some candy."

"Alack! I am forbid to tarry, gentle sir. I need be blithe. Their patience stays upon my coming."

"Good-bye," said the old gentleman.

"Rest you, merry master," and dipping a chubby little courtesy, the mite trotted off.

"Bless my soul! what an extraordinary child!" said the gentleman to a neighbor, who had been looking on.

"Oh! that's nothing," replied the other. "You see she's the daughter of Bilson, the heavy man at the theater, and I suppose they talk so much of that kind of lingo in the family that it comes natural to her. Doesn't hear anything else, you see."—San Francisco Post.

Graveyard Literature.

Sacred to the memory of Lady Elizabeth O'Looney, first cousin to Burke, commonly called the Sublime. She was bland, passionate, and deeply religious. Also she painted in water-colors, and sent many pictures to the Great Exhibition, and of such is the kingdom of heaven. She lived the life of the virtuous, and died of cholera morbus, caused by eating green fruit in the full hope of a blessed immortality at the early age of twenty years, three months and sixteen days! Reader, go thou and do likewise!—From a Headstone in Ireland.

PUZZLE CARDS
Showing Portraits of the Candidates for President and Vice President. New and novel. A set of four sent by mail for three 3-cent stamps. Address CARD DEPOT, 179 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Perry Davis' Pain Killer
IS RECOMMENDED
By Physicians, by Missionaries, by Ministers, by Mechanics, by Nurses in Hospitals,
BY EVERYBODY.

PAIN KILLER IS A SURE CURE for Sore Throat, Chills, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Cramps, Cholera, and all Bowel Complaints.

PAIN KILLER IS THE BEST REMEDY known to the World for Sick Headache, Pain in the Back, Pain in the Side, Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

UNQUESTIONABLY THE Best Liniment Made!
Its equal having never yet been found.
☞ For Sale by all Medicine Dealers.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

YOUNG MEN Learn Telegraphy and earn $40 to $100 a month. Every graduate guaranteed a paying situation. Address R. VALENTINE, Manager, Janesville, Wis.

AGENTS WANTED.
To Make $5 Per Day
SELLING OUR NEW Platform Family Scale.
Weighs accurately up to 25 lbs. Its handsome appearance sells it at sight to housekeepers. Retail price $1.50. Other family scales weighing 25 lbs. can not be bought for less than $5. A regular BOOM for Agents. Exclusive Territory given. Terms and rapid sales surprise old Agents. Send for particulars. DOMESTIC SCALE CO., 188 W. 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF ETIQUETTE AND BUSINESS
This is the cheapest and only complete and reliable work on Etiquette and Business and Social Forms. It tells how to perform all the various duties of life, and how to appear to the best advantage on all occasions. Agents Wanted.—Send for circulars containing a full description of the work and extra terms to Agents. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

PETROLEUM VASELINE JELLY.
Grand Medal at Philadelphia Exposition. Silver Medal at Paris Exposition.
This wonderful substance is acknowledged by physicians throughout the world to be the best remedy discovered for the cure of Wounds, Burns, Rheumatism, Skin Diseases, Piles, Catarrh, Chilblains, &c. In order that every one may try it, it is put up in 15 and 25 cent bottles for household use. Obtain it from your druggist, and you will find it superior to anything you have ever used.

YOU CAN BE CURED OF YOUR CATARRH!
HOW?
Send 10c to DR. C. R. SYKES, 169 E. Madison st., Chicago, Ill., and he will send by return mail "The True Theory of Catarrh and full information of a Sure Cure." Name this paper, and write without delay.

Agents Wanted to Sell
BRISBIN'S Life of GARFIELD and FORNEY'S Life of HANCOCK.
The only standard authoritative works. Indorsed by the candidates. Agents coining money. Best terms. Outfit free. Act at once. Address HUBBARD BROS., Chicago, Ill.

CELLULOID EYE-GLASSES.
representing the choicest-selected Tortoise-Shell and Amber. The lightest, handsomest and strongest known. Sold by Opticians and Jewelers. Made by SPENCER O. M. CO., 13 Maiden Lane, New York.

PRINTING MATERIAL.
Printers desiring to purchase supplies for their offices should send for our Price List, which is revised and corrected monthly. Our Line of Paper, Cards, Card Board, Envelopes, Wedding Stationery, Ball Programmes, etc., is full and complete and prices as low as the lowest.
We manufacture Leads, Slugs, Metal Furniture and many other useful articles required in a Printing Office, and are agents for one of the largest Type Foundries and Press Manufactories in the United States.
Estimates for complete or partial outfits will be promptly furnished, and we can assure purchasers that we are prepared to offer as Liberal Terms as any Manufactory or Agency in the United States.
Printers in need of anything in our line should not fail to correspond with us.
CHICAGO NEWSPAPER UNION,
177, 179 & 181 Fifth Ave., Chicago.

RED RIVER VALLEY
2,000,000 Acres
Wheat Lands
best in the World; for sale by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba R.R. Co.
Three dollars per acre allowed the settler for breaking and cultivation. For particulars apply to
D. A. McKINLAY,
Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.

HAMBURG

DROPS
THE GREAT GERMAN
BLOOD PURIFIER,
CURES DYSPEPSIA,
Liver Complaint, Costiveness, Bilious Attacks, Indigestion, Jaundice, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Dizziness, Nausea, Heartburn, Depression of Spirits, Sores, Boils, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Foul Breath, and all Diseases arising from Impure Blood.
The Hamburg Drops are recommended as being the best and cheapest Family Medicine ever offered, and are sold by Druggists and Dealers at 50 Cents a Bottle. Directions in Eleven Languages. Genuine bears the fac-simile signature, and private proprietary stamp of A. VOGELER & CO., Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

THE HERSHEY SCHOOL OF MUSICAL ART,
Hershey Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.,
Educates pupils for any position in the musical profession. Endorsed by the Press of New York, Boston and London. ☞ Send for new circular.
H. CLARENCE EDDY, General Director.

C. GILBERT'S STARCH

DANIEL F. BEATTY'S ORGANS
17-Stop Organs,
Sub-bass & Oct. Coupler, boxed & shipped, only $97.75. New Pianos $195 to $1,600. Before you buy an instrument be sure to see my Midsummer offer illustrated, free. Address DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, N. J.

NATRONA BI-CARB. SODA
Is the best in the World. It is absolutely pure. It is the best for Medicinal Purposes. It is the best for Baking and all Family Uses. Sold by all Druggists and Grocers.
Penn'a Salt Manufact'ng Co., Phila.

LIQUID
Cottage Colors.
30 SHADES READY FOR USE.
The Best Mixed Paint in the Market.
Be sure and buy them. Send for circulars to Chicago White Lead and Oil Co.,
COR. GREEN AND FULTON STS.,
Manufacturers of White Lead, Zinc, Linseed Oil, Putty, etc. All Goods Guaranteed.

WILHOFT'S FEVER AND AGUE TONIC
FOR CHILLS AND FEVER AND ALL DISEASES CAUSED BY Malarial Poisoning
OF THE BLOOD.
A Warranted Cure.
Price, $1.00.
☞ FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS. ☜

KIDNEY-WORT
The Only Remedy
THAT ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON THE LIVER,
THE BOWELS,
and the KIDNEYS.
This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.
Why Are We Sick?
Because we allow these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.
KIDNEY-WORT WILL CURE
BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESSES, AND NERVOUS DISORDERS, by causing free action of these organs and restoring their power to throw off disease.
Why suffer Bilious pains and aches? Why tormented with Piles, Constipation? Why frightened over disordered Kidneys? Why endure nervous or sick headaches? Why have sleepless nights?
Use KIDNEY-WORT and rejoice in health. It is a dry, vegetable compound and [illegible]
Get it of your Druggist, he will order it for you. Price, $1.00.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors,
(Will send post paid.) Burlington, Vt.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—IN—

Coffee, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18c now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound . We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains.

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind.

Sincerity.

Among the many instances of the corruption and degeneracy of this age, the great and general want of sincerity in conversation is not the least. The world is so full of dissimulation and compliment that mens' words are hardly any signification of their thoughts. The old plainness and sincerity; that generous integrity of nature and honesty of disposition which argues true greatness of mind, and is usually accompanied with undaunted courage and resolution, is in a great measure lost. The dialect of conversation is nowadays so swelled with vanity and compliment, and so surfeited (if you will allow the expression) with kindness, that if a man who lived a century or two ago should return to the world, he would need a dictionary to help him to understand his own language and to know the true intrinsic value of the phrases in fashion. It should provoke our contempt to hear the solemn expressions of respect and kindness which pass between men for which there is no occasion. How great honor and esteem they decline for one whom they never saw before, and how entirely they are devoted to his service, for no reason, and how extremely they are concerned for him—yes, and afflicted, too—for no cause.

I know it is said, in justification of this hollow kind of conversation, that there is no harm done—no real deciet in compliment. The matter is well enough so long as we understand one another; words are like money, and when the current value of them is generally understood, no man is cheated. However this may be, it is certain that sincerity and plainness are out of fashion, and that our language is running into a lie. Men have perverted the use of speech and made it to signify nothing. The greater part of the conversation of mankind is little else but driving a trade of dissimulation, insomuch that it makes a man sick of the word to see the little sincerity that is practiced among men.

If the show of anything be good for naught, I am sure sincerity is better. Why does a man seem to be what he is not, but because he thinks it good to have such qualities as he pretends to? To conterfeit, is to put on the appearance of some real excellency. Now the best way to seem to be anything is to really be what you desire to appear. Besides, it is as much work many times to make pretense of a good quality as to have it; and, if a man has it not, some one will know it, then all his trouble to seem to have it is lost. Whatever convenience you may think to be in falsehood is soon over; but the inconvenience of it is perpetual, because it brings a man under an everlasting jealousy and suspicion, so that he is not believed when he speaks the truth, nor trusted when he means to speak honestly. When a man has once forfeited the reputation of integrity, he is set fast; nothing will serve his turn, neither truth nor falsehood. Be honest in your conversation.

Edgar A. Poe.

Poe would have been remarked upon the street. He was of a slighter form than Willis, less mindful of his dress, pale, and with a singularly dark and commanding eye. In a room, without his hat, his high white forehead and intellectual aspect at once distinguished him. His domestic life was believed to be very unhappy. It was known that he was poor and lived by his pen, and it was understood that he was the victim of strong drink. He died sadly at Baltimore, and "Dr." Griswold published a memoir of him which his friends and admirers believed to be the source of the false impression of the man, so that he is described as "a dissolute fantastic writer, who died at Baltimore in consequence of fits of intoxication."

Poe was as bitter in commenting upon his contemporaries as Willis was friendly. He defied censure, and expressed a scorn of the public, to which, with the instinct of genius, he yet appealed. He went to Boston to read a poem; there was a large audience and great expectation. Poe read some verses written when he was a boy. Boston said that he was drunk. Poe retorted that the poem was good enough for Frogpondians. The fact, apparently, was that he intended to write a poem for the occasion, but was prevented by stress of occupation. In the brief preface to the slight volume of his verse, The Raven, and Other Poems, published in Wiley and Putnam's "Library of Choice Reading" in 1845, Poe says disdainfully: "With me poetry has been, not a purpose, but a passion; and the passions should be held in reverence; they must not—they can not—at will be excited with an eye to the paltry compensations or the more paltry commendations of mankind." This seems to be merely the usual Byronic strain. But it is childish to write for those at whose judgment you sneer. If a man writes for the love of writing, he prints because he wishes other people to read what he writes. A man who withdraws as a hermit to the Central Park may scoff at mankind, but he is plainly not enamored of solitude. Yet this sneer of Poe's, in the light of the truth now told of his life, was not disdain, but unhappiness.

The memoir of Griswold really seems to be what Mr. Minto calls it, "a malignant myth," and Mr. Ingram, who had already edited an English edition of Poe's works, has patiently and conclusively disposed of many of the slanders which have pursued the name of the poet. Of many facts in his life the true explanation is very different from the usual version. But it is the greatest service to Poe's memory to show that his dissipation was not the cause of his misfortunes, but that peculiarly trying misfortunes produced his dissipation. This is what Mr. Ingram has done for an American poet whose verse is more justly weighed now than when he was living, and which is not found wanting.—EDITOR'S EASY CHAIR, in Harper's Magazine for October.

A Dog Digging Into His Masters' Grave.

Thomas and Frank Bienvills were killed by a railroad accident near Moberly, Mo. Before their death the two brothers owned a large Newfoundland dog, to which they were greatly attached. After the bodies of the dead men had been buried, the dog gave evidence of the profoundest grief by whining and howling in the most distressing manner. The occasional absence of the dog from the house where he had been left, and the evidence of digging left on his feet by clay adhering to them, caused some remark in the family, and it was concluded that it would be well to watch the dog. Accordingly, as the dog started off to exhume the dead, he was followed to the graveyard. When the dog reached the cemetery he howled in the most distressing manner, and began to search into the double grave containing both the dead bodies. He had reached the coffin, but had done no violence to it. The grave was refilled, and the dog will be confined until the first wild grief for his dead masters is over.

"As One Who Loves His Fellow Man."

[Modern Argo.]

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" was asked of a colored prisoner. "Well, boss," he replied, "I was in de na'bo'hood when dem hams was taken, but it dosent look jis right to beat dis respectant crowd outen de pleasurableness ob seeing a trial, do it? Da'fo' I pleads n. g.

Senator Conkling's Opinion.

[From the Boston Post.]

It was Roscoe Conkling who declared that no republican could be elected and inaugurated but Gen. Grant.

Allowances Made by the Board of Commissioners at Their September Term, 1880.

Expense of poor.

Shearer & Wilson	7[illegible]	J. H. Ehlers	11 [illegible]
C Lindoffer	41 79	Schaab & Bangnot	23 [illegible]
D. Tomlinson	4 70	W. Ketcham	20 00
A. B. Mathews	37 00	W. J. Austin & Co	17 00
A. B. Duncan	56 75	S. Olmstead	31 85
T. F. Jordan	[illegible]	Barney Bros.	3 38
J. N. Chamberlin	33 50	J. Rammel	11 41
Jarvis Porter	15 00	Chaney Bros	4 37
S. H. Bartlett	14 00	Isaac Newton	17 18
Brand & Duncan	13 91	McQuiston & Co	66 39
D. D. Snyder	4 20	F. H. Davenport	40 20
Jacob Mitchell	14 25	Joseph Jetmore	49 98
C. U. Shaffer	26 00	C. W. Goodale	20 00
F. N. Wright & Co	131 37	J. N. Myers & Co	143 [illegible]
Askew & Clark	22 58	A. Shaffer	12 00
F. Jones	102 63	W. Hallaway	5 10
A. B. Haynes	[illegible]	F. P. Miller	60 00
F. Thayer	47 50	T. D. Gross	6 75
W. Murphy	41 12	Sarah Vogtman	11 00
Kiblinger & Co	13 91	E. Kelham	9 00
J. Kahn & Co	74 20	D. J. Swartz	166 00
P. N. Calkin	41 33	J. B. Bennet	20 75
Susan Autrop	[illegible]	Isaac Ochs	13 14
Hague & Raut	20 25	Crane & Duncan	105 62
Ellie Hogue	65 25	Dr. Lawrence	250 00
Leighty & Bishop	24 74

Expenses of Ditches.

A. Robbins	41 35	J. Plum	7 30
G. W. Werntz	20 00	J. C. St. Clair	6 00
E. Kelham	27 00	C. E. VanAuken	15 00
J. J. VanAuken	82 50	L. Lockwood	2 25
[illegible]	[illegible]	W. J. Frederick	[illegible]
R. N. Crooks	5 50	A. W. Allen	33 75

Expenses of Roads.

H. Rogers	1 50	J. P. McCague	260 00
F. Imler	2 00	Crane & Duncan	21 72
C. Sheets	2 00	Wheelock & Co	341 64
Wm. Whetsel	1 50	D. Culver	42 20
W. Teeters	1 50	E. Kelham	112 00
T. C. Elson	1 50	Brand & Trout	16 50
James Ross	177 64	H. Tielman	6 00
Haskins & Son	10 00	H. Hood	8 00
R. W. Shull	55 50	J. L. Haines	3 50
Stone Pipe man'f	[illegible]	Thos. Hammon	2 00
I. N. Cool	42 50	J. D. Kelly	3 50
G. W. Werntz	35 00	C. Bowman	3 25
L. Houdlemier	81 20	R. N. Crooks	1 50
H. Griswold	16 12	J. McClellan	3 00
W. H. Casey	100 00	Geo. Ensley	3 00
J. J. VanAuken	50 70	F. Baird	1 50
W. Teeters	1 50

Miscellaneous Expenses.

Myers & Co	12 59	M. L. Duck	17 50
A. Robbins	4 1	E. Berry	3 54
D. Gonser	2 60	J. W. Baxter	3 95
F. N. Wright & Co	5 82	F. H. Davenport	11 55
John L. Davis	20 30

Expense of Printing.

G. W. Weamer	7 52	W. M. Kist	4 75
C. K. Baxter	17 50	Ind Pub. Co.	3 25
W. B. Burford	126 35	R. J. Lowry	72 80

Reformatory Institutions.

A. S. Leas	48 90

Expenses of salary.

W. H. McIntosh	50 00	G. H. Duncan	21 00
A. Robbins	481 25	E. Kelham	21 00
D. Gonser	200 00	J. Shoub	27 00
A. S. Leas	12 00

Public Buildings.

C. Clor	12 00	T. P. Scott	8 25
Stone Pipe Co	430 13	J. Anderson	8 00

Expence of Criminals.

A. S. Leas	67 90	J. C. Somers	38 40

ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.

GARLAND STOVES & RANGES

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS!

Largest and Most Complete Line Manufactured.

ADAPTED FOR BURNING ALL KINDS OF FUEL.

EVERY STOVE WARRANTED A SUCCESS.

None their Equal—Acknowledged Favorites.

ALWAYS AWARDED FIRST PREMIUM.

☞ Buy the Best. ☜

Sold by W. H. KIBLINGER & CO.

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O. 21-tf

RAILROADS

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect June 28, 1880.

(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

3:50 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 1:50 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:10; Pleasant Lake, 5:20; Angola, 5:20; Fremont, 5:18; Reading, 6:45; Bankers, 7:10; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 7:45, connecting with the Lake Shore & South railroad for points west Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p m;

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:45, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:00; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:38; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:18, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:36, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:45; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:35, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek etc.

5:30 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:10; Summit, 6:21; Pleasant Lake, 6:3[illegible]; Angola, 6:53; Fremont, 7:1[illegible]; Reading, 7:47; Jonesville, 8:12; Jackson, 9:20 p. m.; connecting closely with Michigan Central railroad; fast train arriving at Detroit at 11:30 p. m.; Buffalo, 8:30 a. m.; and New York, 10:30 p. m.; also Chicago, Grand Rapids, etc.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, Sturgis, Colwater, etc.; Reading, 7:40; Montgomery, 7:54; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:32; Pleasant Lake, 8:43; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:06; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 22 P. M.—From Jackson 12:20 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:25 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:18, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:33; Reading, 1:45; Montgomery, 1:57; Fremont, 2:16; Angola, 2:42; Pleasant Lake, 2:52; Summit, 3:00; Waterloo, 3:12; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:25; St. Johns, 3:36; New Era, 3:41; Stoner's, 3:51; Huntertown, 3:56; Academie, 4:06 Fort Wayne, 4:20 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and all points east via P. F. W. and C. railroad fast express.

11:26 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 40 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 12; Reading, 8 50; Fremont, 9 42; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 30; Waterloo, 11 07; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

3:50 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH.
	1. Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 42 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 30 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS.	GOING NORTH
	2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	9 40 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	[illegible]
Connersville	[illegible]
Cambridge City	[illegible]
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	[illegible]	[illegible]	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 15 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fort Wayne	[illegible]	12 15 am	[illegible]

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change. Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and [illegible] and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.	WEST.
Mail.........12:34 p. m.	Mail.........2:20 p. m.
Accom'n.....12:37 a. m.	Accom'n.....6:57 a. m.
Local F't.....4:45 p. m.	Local F't.....6:38 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler.....1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr at Logansport. 6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St. Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To | Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager,
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
St. Louis or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

ON AND AFTER JUNE 27, 1880.

Condensed time card.

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1, Fast Ex.	No. 3, Pacific Ex.	No. 7, Night Ex.	No. 5, limit'd ex
Pittsburgh lv.	[illegible]	9 00am	1 50pm	7 30pm
Rochester	[illegible]	10 0[illegible]	2 55
Alliance	3 05	12 45pm	5 35	10 15
Orrville	4 50	3 05	7 13
Mansfield	6 55	5 25	9 20
Crestline ar.	7 25	6 00	9 45	1 20am
Crestline lv.	7 55am	6 25pm	9 55pm	1 30am
Forest	9 25	8 10	11 44	2 44
Lima	10 40	9 40	12 40am	3 27
Ft. Wayne	1 20pm	12 20am	2 40	5 00
Plymouth	3 50	2 50	4 55	6 55
Chicago ar.	7 00	6 00	8 00	8 40

GOING EAST

Stations.	No. 2, Morn'g Ex	No. 6, N. Y. Ex.	No. 4, At. Ex.	No. 8, Fast Line
Chicago lv.	8 20am	3 30pm	5 15pm	9 40pm
Plymouth	11 48		9 45	2 50am
Ft. Wayne	2 25pm	8 10	1 00am	6 55
Lima	4 30	9 40	3 38	8 53
Forest	5 28		5 12	10 00
Crestline ar.	6 55	11 50	7 00	11 45
Crestline lv.	7 15pm	5 pm	7 25am	12 05pm
Mansfield	7 45	12 25am	7 55	12 35
Orrville	9 36	2 30	9 36	2 34
Alliance	11 15	4 10	11 55	4 00
Rochester	1 20am			6 22
Pittsburgh ar.	2 30	7 30	3 25pm	7 30

Nos 3 and 6, and 5 and 8 run daily; No. 1 leaves Pittsburgh daily, except Saturday. No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

—o—

CHICAGO DIVISION.

—o—

IN EFFECT FROM JUNE 20, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	No. 1 Fast.	No. 3 Ex.	No. 5 Mail
CHICAGO lv.	5 15pm		8 10am
Walkerton Junction	8 03		10 55
Milford Junction	9 00		12 05pm
Syracuse	*		12 14
Cromwell	*		12 30
Albion	*		12 50
Avilla	9 50		1 10
Garrett	10 20	3 55am	1 40
Auburn Junction	10 27	4 03	1 48
St. Joe	*	4 25	2 10
Hicksville	*	4 42	2 28
Defiance	11 35	5 27	3 10
Deshler	12 25am	6 23	4 05
Fostoria	1 08	7 25	4 55
Tiffin	1 30	7 54	5 25
CHICAGO JUNCTION ar.	2 15	9 00	6 15

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	No. 10 Mail.	No 2 Ex.	No. 8 Fast.
CHICAGO JUNCTION lv	9 00am	6 40pm	11 20am
Tiffin	10 03	7 55	12 00 m
Fostoria	10 33	8 35	12 22pm
Deshler	11 44	9 32	1 18
Defiance	12 58pm	10 32	1 54
Hicksville	1 52	11 20	*
St. Joe	2 10	11 32	*
Auburn Junction	2 32	11 52	3 00
Garrett	2 40	12 05am	3 23
Avilla		12 20	3 33
Albion		12 45	3 55
Cromwell		1 10	4 15
Syracuse		1 30	4 30
Milford Junction		1 40	4 38
Walkerton Junction		3 04	5 40
CHICAGO ar.		6 10	8 20

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans., Ohio Division, Chicago, Ill.
J. J. MARTIN, Agent, Auburn Junction.
* Trains do not stop.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Notice to Ditchers.

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., let to the lowest responsible bidder, the construction of the county [illegible] on the [illegible] ditch, in Keyser township, in said county. Specifications of said ditch can be seen on the ground at the time of letting. Bidders will be required to execute a bond according to law.

By order of the Board.

Attest: ALBERT ROBBINS, Auditor.
August 24, 1880. 35-3w.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 30, 1880. Number 40.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

Rob. J. Lowry, Editor.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

PHYSICIANS.

J. J. Littlefield,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. OFFICE AND residence on 10th St., opposite S. W. Ralston's. All calls promptly attended to, day or night. Auburn, Indiana. 28 ly

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co. Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug-store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates. T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

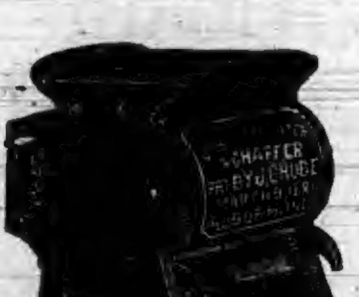
Thomas Baldock,

PROPRIETOR of Stuart's patent compound Asphalt roofing, for DeKalb county, Ind., manufactured at Charlotte, Michigan. Consult or address at Auburn, Indiana. 22-tf.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1 the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

The Union Army—Where The Soldiers Came From.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

The republican managers, conspirators, organs and orators are eternally declaring that the republican party crushed the rebellion and saved the Union. These white and black-and-tan falsifiers of history, these yelping partisan curs, these ballot-box stuffers and fraud-makers, unscrupulous and pusillanimous knaves ceaselessly claim the credit of saving the Union. The St. Louis Republican, in a recent issue tabulates some facts relating to the war record of democratic and republican districts in Illinois. It says:

The fourth and fifth congressional districts of Illinois were regarded as "blue-ribbon" republican districts in 1860, while the eighteenth and nineteenth were as strongly democratic. Now examine this table, made from official sources:

REPUBLICAN.	Vote for Douglass	Vote for Lincoln.	Men Enlisted.
Fourth District	5 187	10 032	13 321
Fifth District	6 514	12 979	12 607
Total	11 701	29 011	25 928
DEMOCRATIC.
Eighteenth District	12 185	3 290	13 970
Nineteenth District	12 914	4 547	13 514
Total	25 129	7 837	27 484

Here we find that the two republican districts sent only 63 4-5 per cent of their voting population to the war, while the two democratic districts sent 83 1-3. Another table of the same sort will make the point still clearer—and sharper:

TWELVE DEMOCRATIC COUNTIES.

	Vote for Douglass.	Vote for Lincoln.	Men Enlisted.
Alexander	631	106	1 258
Gallatin	1 020	211	1 284
Hamilton	1 553	102	1 256
Hardin	469	107	569
Jackson	1 556	315	1 422
Johnson	1 561	40	1 436
Massac	273	121	680
Pope	1 202	127	1 253
Pulaski	560	229	643
Saline	1 308	100	1 280
Union	990	157	1 846
Williamson	[illegible]	173	[illegible]
Total	13 679	1 759	14 848

TWELVE REPUBLICAN COUNTIES.

Boone	810	1 559	1 387
Carroll	461	1 630	1 408
DeKalb	905	3 049	2 391
DuPage	803	1 700	1 524
Grundy	710	1 412	1 345
Kendall	531	1 811	1 561
Kankakee	860	1 977	1 764
Kane	1 651	4 907	3 872
Lake	968	2 404	1 890
McHenry	1 444	3 033	2 531
Ogle	1 318	3 184	2 853
Winnebago	817	3 984	3 187
Total	10 815	30 250	25 849

Thus we see that the twelve democratic counties sent 95 9-10 per cent of their voting population to the war, while the twelve republican counties sent only 62 9-10 per cent. And descending to particular counties, we find the case still stronger for democracy. Gallatin gave Lincoln, in 1860, 221 votes. She sent to the war 772 soldiers. Hamilton gave Lincoln 102 votes. She sent to the war 917 soldiers. Pope gave Lincoln 127 votes. She sent to the war 651 soldiers. Williamson—where John Logan tried to raise a rebel regiment—gave Lincoln 173 votes. She sent to the war 1,013 soldiers. On the other hand, Cook county gave Lincoln 14,589 votes, and sent to the war only 3,677 soldiers. Carroll gave Lincoln 1,630 votes, and she sent to the war only 645 soldiers. LaSalle gave Lincoln 5,342 votes, and sent to the war only 220 soldiers. Winnebago gave Lincoln 3,984 votes, and sent only 1,630 soldiers. "Loyal" republican LaSalle furnished ONE soldier to every 24 1-4 votes given to Lincoln, while "rebel" democratic Williamson furnished more than six soldiers for every vote given to Lincoln.

Such figures forever settle the question, and if similar data could be obtained from other states the same knock-down facts would appear. The number of troops furnished by all the states and territories for the Union army, as shown by the war records of the war department, amounted to 2,678,967, as follows:

Maine	72,114	Kentucky	79,025
New Hampshire	36,629	Kansas	20,151
Vermont	35,262	Tennessee	31,092
Massachusetts	152,048	Arkansas	8,289
Rhode Island	23,699	North Carolina	3,156
Connecticut	57,379	California	15,725
New York	467,047	Nevada	1,080
New Jersey	81,010	Oregon	1,810
Pennsylvania	366,107	Washington ter	964
Deleware	13,670	Nebraska ter	3,157
Maryland	50,316	Colorado ter	3,903
West Virginia	32,068	Dakota ter	205
Dist Columbia	16,872	New Mexico ter	6561
Ohio	319,659	Alabama	2,576
Indiana	197,147	Florida	1,290
Illinois	259,147	Louisiana	5,224
Michigan	89,372	Mississippi	543
Wisconsin	96,424	Texas	1,965
Minnesota	25,052	Indian Nation	35,030
Iowa	76,309
Missouri	109,011	Total	2,675,967

The troops supplied by the southern states were, with the exception of those of Louisiana, nearly all white. Florida supplied two regiments of cavalry; Alabama, one white regiment; Mississippi, one battalion; and North Carolina, two regiments of cavalry.

In analysing the foregoing official statements, some singular facts are disclosed. For instance, take thirteen free states and thirteen slave states, and the figures are as follows, showing soldiers sent to the war in the union army:

THIRTEEN FREE STATES.

Maine	72,114
New Hampshire	36,629
Vermont	35,262
Rhode Island	23,580
Connecticut	57,379
Minnesota	25,052
Kansas	20,151
California	15,725
Colorado	4,903
Nebraska	3,159
Oregon	1,810
Nevada	1,080
Iowa	76,309
Furnished	373,272

troops furnished for the Union army.

THIRTEEN SLAVE STATES.

Missouri	109,111
Kentucky	79,025
West Virginia	32,068
Tennessee	32,092
Maryland	50,316
Deleware	13,670
Arkansas	8,289
Louisiana	8,224
North Carolina	6,156
Alabama	2,565
Florida	2,090
Texas	1,905
Mississippi	545
Furnished	432,227

troops for the Union army.

Missouri was held to be, by republicans, in 1860, a rebel state, and the slangwhanging liars of the republican party have not abated their hostility to Missouri until this day. Look at the facts. They crush republican lies by the thousand at a time.

Troops furnished the Union army by eight free states and one slave state from April 15, 1861, to the close of the war:

Subtracting 373,272, the number furnished by the free states, from 432,227, the number furnished by the slave states, and the difference is 58,955.

Missouri	199,111
Vermont	35,262
New Hampshire	36,629
Rhode Island	23,699
Minnesota	25,052
Connecticut	57,578
Carolinia	15,725
Nevada	1,080
Oreron	1,810
Total	196,636

Rebel Missouri furnished 2,475 more union troops than did the eight states of Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Connecticut, California, Nevada and Oregon combined. Again:

Missouri	199,111
Michigan	89,372
Minnesota	25,053
Iowa	76,308
Nebraska	3,159
Oregon	1,810
Nevada	1,080
Total	196,782

Missouri furnished 2,329 more union troops than did the six states of Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Nevada and Oregon. Again:

Missouri	199,111
Wisconsin	96,424
Minnesota	25,052
Iowa	76,309
Nevada	1,080
Total	198,685

Missouri furnished 256 more union troops than did the four states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nevada.

Let such facts be shot into the mouths of republicans as often as they are opened to repeat the vile falsehood that republicans saved the Union and crushed the rebellion. General Butler, in his Pittsburgh speech, Saturday night, declared rightfully that "democrats, and not republicans, fought the war."

GENERAL HANCOCK.

Exchanging Congratulations Upon the Great Victory.

General Hancock, on receipt of the first Maine news, telegraphed his congratulations to Mr Plaisted, at Bangor. Mr Plaisted replied:

"Thanks for your congratulations on the glorious victory of our plain people in opposition to class legislation and to a sixth term. We fused and won a Union victory."

Mr. Eugene Casserly, of San Francisco, telegraphed: "Maine redeemed, and a new star in the east shines brightly. It's name is Hancock. 'Bayonets are not fit instruments for collecting freemen's votes.' Well spoken, high chief."

General Hancock in return said: "The result on the Atlantic front is very encouraging. May it be equaled, at least, on the Pacfic coast, to which I am warmly attacked, with which I am identified by early associations, whose interests I understand, and in any sphere of life would always endeavor to promote."

An Ingenious Process.

[New York World.]

The republican recipe for distinguishing popular policies from unpopular ones, resembles the familiar method of telling mushrooms from toadstools. They swallow the policy, and if it kills the party they conclude it was a bad one.

The "Racket" Dance.

Concerning the popular new dance at Atlantic City, a correspondent writes: "It is not a waltz, nor a galop, nor a polka, it is the 'racket.' From the slow, slipping glide waltz of a few years back, when it was flagrant to lift your feet from the floor, we have gone by stages to Boston, the old polka, the slide, the heel-and-toe polka, until the last stage had been reached, when the thing is not to keep the feet on the floor. The racket stands its votaries wildly pitching to right and left up and down with kicks and leaps that approach the can-can and it is as well suited to polite society as a Sioux war dance, or the Carmagnole of the French Revolution. The racket can be danced to anything that is loud and in fast time, whether waltz, polka or galop; best with the latter."

Technically it consists of three sliding steps to the right, one slide to the left, to the right, to the left, to the right, then three to the left, and continue. The body is swayed more than in skating, and the vigor and energy with which it is always danced renders it as violent an exercise as jumping a rope, and not quite as graceful. Sometimes the partners are not held as in other round dances. They simply take hold of the hands and racket around in that way, reproducing the scenes in surf of moorings. Hair-dressing needs to be firmly done, and dresses to be of stout material and strong sewing to stand it. In this day of short dress s and full-gauged skirts, the racket makes a fine display of dainty slippers and silken hose. Philadelphia claims to have invented the dance, such as it is, and the sons and daughters of the best families kick around on social occasions in a way that Lotta and Alice Oates were supposed to have the monopoly of.

AN AUDIENCE OF FIVE.

Invited by Artemus Ward to Adjourn to a Restaurant.

[New York Tribune.]

There are yet living in Pottsville, Pa., several gentlemen who never hear the name of Artemus Ward without a smiling recollection of a pleasant night spent with that droll genius. In the winter of one of the earlier years of the war, Artemus Ward was advertised to deliver his famous lecture on the "Mormons" in the town hall at Pottsville. Much curiosity was excited by the announcement of his coming, and there was every reason to expect that the hall would be crowded on the evening of his lecture. But one of the fiercest snow-storms that ever visited the town raged without intermission all day, and the night was wildly stormy when the lecturer was driven to the hall. He found awaiting him there only five men, who had defied the storm. Advancing to the front of the stage, and beckoning with his finger as if to a single individual, Artemus said, in the ordinary conversational tone: "Come up closer." Not knowing precisely what to do, the audience of five compromised with their embarrassment by doing nothing. Artemus changed his tone to that used by one who wishes to coax, and said, "Please come up closer and be sociable; I want to speak to you about a little matter I have thought of." Having succeeded in getting his audience to move up near the stage, the humorist said: "I move that we do not have any lecture here this evening, and I propose instead that we adjourn to the restaurant beneath and have a good time." He then put the motion, voted on it himself, declared it carried, and to give no opportunity for an appeal from the chair, at once led the way to the restaurant. There he introduced himself to his intended auditors, and spent several hours in their company, richly compensating them for their disappointment in the matter of the lecture by the wit and humor of the stories and anecdotes, without number, that he told. And that is how Artemus Ward lectured in Pottsville.

Chicago Times: "It seems that one of Gen. Garfield's cousins in Indiana is in the state prison, and that another stands an excellent chance of going to the same place. At Auburn last year, Lewis Garfield was convicted of assault and robbery, and sent to the penitentiary for ten years. His father, Charles Garfield, and one cousin of James, residing at Bryan, O., is under indictment as an accessory in the same crime, and will soon be brought to trial. Charles was one of the numerous relatives of the general who met him at the Bryan depot as the train passed through after the Chicago convention, and wept over his good fortune. Lewis was not there, but he would have been if he could.

Stoves and Ranges!

The grandest display of Stoves in DeKalb county at the

NEW BRICK BLOCK, COR. MAIN & SEVENTH STS.

Cook Stoves, Square Stoves, Round Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Heating Stoves, Coal Stoves,
Base Heating Stoves, Rangers, and all kinds

SOLD CHEAP!

Our stoves are made from LAKE SUPERIOR IRON, which render them superior in quality to many other makes. Every stove

☞ FULLY WARRANTED!

And prices guaranteed lower than the lowest. Call at

W. H. Kiblinger's Hardware Store

For your Stoves, and save from 15 to 25 per cent. Our line of

Stove Hollow-Ware, Tinware, General Hardware,
Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints, Oils, Wagon and
Carriage Hardware, Bent Rims, Shafts, Poles

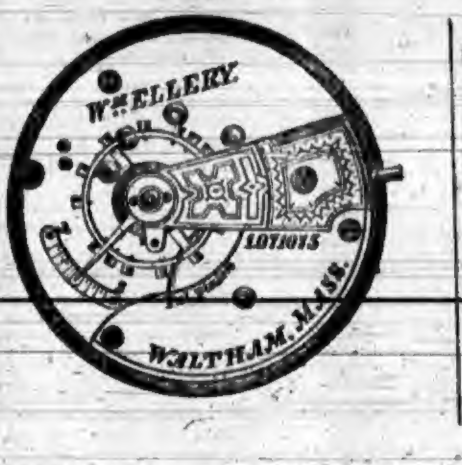
And ten thousand articles comprising our mammoth stock. Call and buy your

HARDWARE CHEAP!

No trouble to show goods and give prices. Remember the place, NEW BRICK ROOM, Cor. Main and Seventh Streets, Auburn Ind.

W. H. KIBLINGER.

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,



WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains Ladies Gold Chains,

Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE ABRICHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Ind

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

Boston's celebration of its 250th anniversary, which occurred Sept. 17, was creditable in every respect. The city was full of sightseers, and the programme was carried out to the satisfaction of all.

A dispatch from Bridgeport, Ct., says that a terrible explosion occurred in a small wooden building occupied by the Union Metallic Cartridge Company as a fulminating building, situated some distance west of their main factory. At the time of the explosion five persons were at work in the building, all of whom were killed. The building was completely blown to atoms, and the debris blown a great distance. A small lake, some distance away, was literally strewn with fragments of the building. Two of the bodies were found in the lake, one with the head and arms gone.

The Board of Steamboat Inspectors of New London, Ct., have revoked the licenses of the Captains of the steamers Narragansett and Stonington, which came in collision on Long Island Sound some weeks ago, the former going down.... Hon. Lafayette S. Foster, who served as United States Senator from Connecticut for twelve years, 1855 to 1867, has just died at his home in Norwich. Mr. Foster was a direct descendant of Miles Standish.

A Boston dispatch says that more than half the horses in that city, and through the suburbs as well, are suffering to a greater or less degree from a distemper resembling, in a mild form, the epizootic of 1872....Judge Sinnott, of the Marine Court, at New York, is dead. He was an intimate friend of Samuel J. Tilden, and represented him on several occasions during the electoral-count imbroglio of 1876-'77.

The 100th anniversary of the capture of Maj. Andre, the spy, was celebrated at Tarrytown, N. Y., with fitting ceremonies. Not less than 30,000 people were present. Ex-Gov. Tilden presided, and made a brief speech, and Chauncey M. Depew delivered the oration.

THE WEST.

The remains of a mastodon have been unearthed at Paw Paw, Ill....A negro named George Mitchell was hanged at Troy, Ohio, last week for wife-murder....Nine men were instantly killed in the shaft of the Consolidated Imperial mine at Virginia City, Nev. They were being raised to the surface in the cage when the cable broke, precipitating them to the bottom, a distance of 300 feet. Their bodies were terribly mangled.

A body of striking miners at Corning, Ohio, were fired on by the militia and nine of them wounded, several painfully....Half the business part of Las Vegas, New Mexico, has been destroyed by fire....A man named Michler went to the house of his divorced wife, in Milwaukee, shot her through the neck and then killed himself. The woman will probably get well....Dr. Talcott, editor of a Greenback paper at Maryville, Mo., and member of the Missouri Legislature, was shot and killed by some unknown person. He was seated near a window reading, when the assassin fired at his shadow on the curtain.

In a race against time, at Chicago, the little 6-year-old mare Maud S., owned by William H. Vanderbilt, trotted a mile in two minutes, ten and three-quarters seconds. This is the fastest mile ever accomplished by a trotting horse, and beats by half a second St. Julien's record of 2:11¼....Thomas C. Thurston, who shot at D. R. Anthony, of Leavenworth, Kan., several months ago, and who at the time seriously wounded Lucien Baker and John P. Douglas, friends of Mr. Anthony, pleaded guilty, and has been sentenced to eighteen years' hard labor in the Kansas State penitentiary.....One by one of the Western railroads are reducing their passenger rates. Some months ago the Alton, the Illinois Central, and the Rock Island reduced their regular rate to three cents per mile, and 1,000-mile tickets to $25. The Burlington now makes the announcement that, commencing Oct. 1, 1880, it will also reduce local rates on its lines to three cents per mile, and sell 1,000-mile tickets for $25. It is understood that the Northwestern has also decided to make a similar reduction. This action on the part of these roads will compel all other Western lines competing with them to follow suit.

A maiden lady, named Nancy Heywood, was murdered in the town of Rockland, Manitowoc county, Wis. Her throat was cut from ear to ear. Two servant girls have been arrested on suspicion....Green Bay, Wis., has had a fiery visitation. Starting in an old planing mill, near the river, the flames, fanned by a high wind, swept into the best residence portion of the city with great fury. About sixty dwelling houses, some of them the best in the city, were destroyed....Mrs. Hazzard, of Monticello, Ill., has given birth to five babies. Two are living.

Jesse Dent Grant, third son of ex-President Grant, was married at San Francisco, Sept. 21, to Miss Lizzie Chapman, daughter of W. S. Chapman, one of San Francisco's wealthiest merchants....The contract for the extension of the Denver and Rio Grande railway to the Gunnison country has been let, and the line will be completed in seven months.

A stage was recently robbed near Auburn, Col., by highwaymen, who stood up the passengers and rifled their pockets, then tried to blow open the treasure box, but did not succeed. The same men robbed Congressman Page and companion, who were going to Forest Hill in a buggy.

Charles Edwards, of Peoria, Ill., pleaded guilty of seven cases of horse-stealing and two cases of burglary, and has been sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of thirty-two years....The officers of the Wabash Railway Company awarded the contract for the grading, bridging and ironing of the first eighteen miles of a projected air-line railroad from Chicago to Peoria. The company has also given orders for the immediate extension of the Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska railroad from Prairieville, Iowa, to the Missouri river....The Indiana Supreme Court has overruled the petition for a rehearing in the case involving the validity of the constitutional amendments. Consequently the State election will be held in October.

THE SOUTH.

A lawyer named William Means, at Pocahontas, Ark., entered the store of Charles Nichols, purchased a revolver, and, going to where Nichols was sitting, shot him dead without a word.

Memphis has celebrated with much eclat the absence of Yellow Jack. There was a big procession and the city was gayly decorated. There were two large arches, one of which was entirely of cotton bales. There were numerous transparencies, one of the most conspicuous of which was in front of a newspaper office, inscribed as follows: "Solid South—Solid for cotton, corn, trades and manufactures." Among the notable personages present were Gov. Blackburn, of Kentucky; Gov. Marks, of Tennessee; and Gov. Churchill, of Arkansas.

GENERAL.

One of the paying tellers of a Montreal bank left his stall with the door unlocked. The office was crowded with customers at the time, but that fact did not trouble the impudent thief, who, opening the door, pulled out a roll of bills containing $7,070, and quietly left the premises.

Maj. Creary, a Paymaster in the army, is to be dismissed the service for drunkenness, the findings of a court-martial having been approved at Washington.

The members of the expedition headed by Lieut. Fred Schwatka, which sailed from New York, June 1, 1878, for Baffin's bay and King William's Land, for the purpose of seeking further data upon the fate of Sir John Franklin, have arrived at New Bedford, Mass. Though the special object of search—the recovery of the records of the Franklin expedition, which, according to Esquimaux testimony, were known to exist at specified points—has not been attained, the explorers have, nevertheless, obtained many relics of Franklin's party, including the remains of Lieut. Irving. They have, moreover, carried out to the letter the instructions of the promoter of the expedition, "to make it a geographical success." The longest sledge-ride on record, both in regard to time and space, has been achieved in the face of phenomenally cold weather, and the deprivation of customary food. Important rivers and coasts have been discovered, and serious errors on former charts have been corrected. The adventures of the Schwatka expedition add pages of interest to the romance of a relic-exploration, and furnish all that the world is ever likely to know of the fate of Sir John Franklin....Small-pox rages with unabated virulence among the Indians of Ontario, Canada. One tribe is nearly extinct, and others have suffered appalling decimation....At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the National Soldiers' Homes, just ended at Dayton, Ohio, several important changes in officers were decided on. Gov. Brown, of the Dayton Home, and Gov. Hincks, of the Milwaukee branch, will be superseded by Gens. Patrick and Sharpe, both of New York.

WASHINGTON.

The Postoffice Department has issued an order the effect of which will be to exclude from the mails all registered letters containing postal money-orders addressed to agents of lotteries at Louisville and Covington, Ky., and New York city.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has received a report that Deputy Collector Latham, of Southwestern Virginia, with a posse of nine men, had been attacked while in the discharge of his duty by fifty armed moonshiners, fired upon repeatedly, and compelled to retreat.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has prepared a statement showing the number of gallons of distilled spirits produced and consumed in and exported from the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, as compared with the preceding fiscal year. This statement shows the following results:

	1880.	1879.
Produced	90,355,270	71,892,621
Consumed	61,115,523	51,802,714
Exported	16,735,663	14,837,581
Balance in bond	31,363,809	19,912,470

POLITICAL.

The official vote of Vermont for Governor at the recent election foots up as follows: Farnham, Republican, 47,852; Phelps, Democrat, 21,240; Prohibition, 1,579; Farnham's majority, 25,033.

The Maine Greenback State Convention to nominate Presidential Electors met at Portland Sept. 21, with 465 delegates in attendance. S. D. Hobson presented resolutions indorsing the action of the State Committee, recommending fusion with the Democrats. J. B. Chase, amid great excitement, protested. Elliott King moved to accept the report and the resolutions, and to name a joint electoral ticket. Chase made a motion to amend by nominating seven straight Greenbackers. This was received with applause and hisses. The speaker made an appeal for a fair hearing, and argued against fusion. The Rev. Alvah Street, F. M. Plaisted and others advocated fusion, after which the previous question was carried, and a resolution to fuse adopted, although there was considerable opposition. The following electors were then chosen: At Large—Solon Chase and Samuel Watts. District Electors—John J. Turner, Benj. Bunker, Charles R. Whidden, Wm. A. Cromwell, and John P. Donworth. After adjournment of the convention the delegates opposed to a fusion, to the number of seventy-three, headed by Solon Chase, got together and nominated a straight-out Greenback electoral ticket, as follows: Solon Chase, J. J. Turner, C. R. Whidden, J. F. Hilton, Thomas G. Burdan, G. W. Wooster, E. B. Fry.

A dispatch from Augusta, Me., says that all the returns of the State election are in, and the final result is: Davis, 73,640; Plaisted, 73,814. Plaisted's plurality, 174. Although these figures are from the official returns, the official canvass of them is not made until the Legislature meets in January, and only that body takes cognizance of errors in them. The plurality amendment to the constitution was carried by a large majority.

Gen. Grant declines to take part in any political meetings. He recently sent the following telegram to Chairman Jewell: "While I shall do all in my power to aid the Republican cause, I cannot now engage to attend any meetings. I will be in New York about the 10th of October, and will remain until the 20th, during which time I shall visit Boston."

The Greenbackers of Massachusetts held their State Convention at Worcester Sept. 22, and nominated the following ticket: For Governor, Gen. Horace B. Sargeant; Lieutenant Governor, George Dutton; Secretary of State, Jonathan Arnold; Treasurer, Wilbur F. Whitney; Auditor, Charles T. Warner; Attorney General, John M. Raymond; Electors-at-Large, H. B. Rowley and Eugene J. Flaherty. Resolutions prohibiting the use of liquor and tobacco, indorsing Solon Chase's bolt in Maine, and condemning Ben Butler for joining the Democratic party, were voted down.

FOREIGN.

A London dispatch says the steamer Aurora, from Oporto for Southampton, foundered at sea. Fifty persons were drowned.

A London dispatch says "the continental powers seem to be squaring for the next war. It is evident that Russia and Austria must fight for the dominion of the Southern Slav and the possession of the Balkan peninsula. The prospect for an Austro-Italian alliance has been spoiled by premature publicity. There is no natural harmony between those states. France is to blame for the proposal, as she offended Italy in the Tunis affair."....Lord Fitzroy Kelly, Chief Baron of the English Court of Exchequer, and one of the ablest of British jurists, is dead....It is said that the Nihilist leaders in Russia have decided to adopt in future a totally different line of procedure from that which they have heretofore pursued. It has been determined that the movement henceforth shall be conducted in the way of secret political agitation.

A London dispatch announces a heavy and calamitous fall in the pig-iron market....Advices from Afghanistan report everything quiet in the Cabul district. Ayoob Khan has gone back to Herat. The British have resolved to abandon Khyber pass....A Constantinople correspondent says the Porte is using its utmost endeavors to avoid the naval demonstration, as it fears a general insurrection should it take place....Jules Ferry formed a new Cabinet in France, with himself as Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs; Dupre, Minister of Marine, and Carnot, Minister of Public Works. The other Ministers remain unchanged....Todleben, the hero of Sebastopol, and the commander who, assisted by famine and plague, reduced Plevna during the Russo-Turkish war, has resigned the Governorship recently tendered him by the Czar. The old warrior is said to have grown incapable of administrative service.

A dispatch from Lahore, India, says: "By a landslip at Naini Tal, Bengal, eleven British officers, fifteen soldiers and eleven other persons were killed and four injured."....The Sultan informs the powers in a lugubrious strain that, as the naval demonstration is an exercise of armed pressure contrary to his rights and dignity, he casts upon them all responsibility for the agitation among the Mohammedans and the events which may result therefrom.

Theodore Tilton's eldest daughter, Florence, has just been married in London to a gentleman from Louisiana....A cable dispatch says that matters are nearing a crisis at Dulcigno. The Montenegrin army, acting on the advice of one of the powers, is moving on the city and the inhabitants are preparing for resistance. Riza Pasha, the representative of the Turkish Government, has urged the Albanians to submit to the will of Europe, offering to give them 50,000 Turkish pounds and build them a new town, but they have rejected his proposition.

G. F. Grace, the celebrated English cricketer, and brother of the famous W. G. and E. M. Grace, is dead.

Sleeping Heroes.

I do not know a more picturesque evolution in mythology than that by which the Hindoo king of death became in Persia the king who never died. The vedic king of death was Yama, which seems to mean "the declining," the reference being probably to the sun going down into darkness. But the Persian dream dwelt on the radiant glories of the sunset, which pointed the way westward to golden islets and Hesperian gardens. By such dreams, perhaps, man was drawn to some of his earliest migrations. But the sunset lustres correspond with the splendors of sunrise. When, therefore, the Hindoo lord of death, Yama, reappeared as the Persian Jami, he was associated with the dawn as well as the sunset. He was fabled as the first monarch of Persia. It was the golden age when he began his reign; for a long time there was no oppression, injustice, sickness or war. But ultimately this happy age was broken by an evil-doer, and then Jami bade adieu to his country, and went to dwell in a beautiful island in the west, where he still lives, but will some day return to restore the blissful era.

Jami is probably the patriarch of all sleeping heroes: of Epimenides, who slept fifty years, then waked up to save his country; of St. John, who still sleeps at Ephesus, while his counterpart, Ahasuerus, finds no repose; of Boabdil and Sebastian, who still await the bugles which shall recall Moor and Portuguese to struggle again for a dominion awarded by destiny to neither; of Barbarossa, whose red beard rooted in his cavern floor, has sent threads far and wide through the folk-lore of Germany; of the Priest of Hagia Sophia, who bides the day when the Turks shall be expelled from Constantinople; of Tell, who was so wide-awake after his mythical slumber in Switzerland that he emboldened some scholar to resolve him into sunshine; and of Charlemagne, supposed to be still alive, but who must be very restless, considering the variety of localities in which he is said to be sleeping. "A little while after," says Rabelais, "Pantagruel heard news that his father Gargantua had been translated into the Land of the Fairies by Morgue, as heretofore were Ogier and Arthur." The fairy Morgue entertained the Dane Ogier so pleasantly that the pagans seized Jerusalem in his absence; and in connecting a similar catastrophe to his Utopia with the translation of Gargantua, Rabelais would seem to have recognized the necessity of reminding the pious of this region that there were advantages in being occasionally wide-awake. But Mythology had already made the discovery before him, and reported that now and then, in emergencies, the Seven Sleepers sallied forth to be the Seven Champions of Christendom, and that all of these enchanted heroes will wake up at last. In one sense the prophecy has been largely fulfilled: Tennyson has summoned Arthur from Avalon, and Irving has summoned—Jefferson keeps awake—Barbarossa under the droll disguise of Rip Van Winkle. The fairy Poesy is able to break the spell of the enchantress Morgue.—M. D. Conway, in Harper's Magazine.

That Particular Night.

Recently, a man charged with stealing chickens was arraigned before an Arkansas Circuit Court. The proof against him was pretty strong, and when the Prosecuting Attorney arose he showed exactly how the defendant lifted the chickens from the roost. He described the surroundings and the excited haste of the prisoner, until the charged man arose and said:

"Jedge, I reckon you'll let me say a few words." No objection was expressed, and the man continued: "Jest sign me down guilty."

"Do you plead guilty?"

"I reckon I'd jest as well. This feller is determined that I did steal the chickens, an' ruther than dispute his word, fur he seems to be a clever sort of feller, I'll let it go his way."

"The question is, did you steal the chickens?"

"No, Jedge, I was at prar-meetin' on that night, an' can prove it, but ruther than make the young feller feel bad I'll let him have his way."

"You say you were at prayer-meeting on that night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Which night?"

"Why, on the night I stole the chickens."

Ten minutes after his declaration he was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years.

Dizzy Heights.

A French journal contains the following statement of the height of the different highest spires and monuments on the globe:

	Feet.
Towers of the Cathedral of Cologne	480
Spire of the Cathedral at Rouen	450
Tower of St. Nicholas, Hamburg	453
Cupola of St. Peter's at Rome	429
Spire of Strasbourg Cathedral	426
Pyramid of Cheops	411
Cathedral of St. Stephen's, Vienna	408
St. Martin's, Landshul, Bavaria	399
Cathedral of Fribourg, Baden	378
Spire of the Cathedral of Antwerp	370
Dome of St. Mary's, Florence	347
St. Paul's, at London	334
Dome of the Cathedral at Milan	327
Cathedral of Magdebourg	311
Tower of Rathhaus, Beron	264
Trinity Church, New York	258
The Pantheon, at Paris	240
Notre Dame, at Paris	224
The Washington monument is to be	555

Rare.

A Brooklyn butcher has an intelligent German clerk who is trying to learn English by looking up in the dictionary every word he hears but does not understand. A lady customer, in her effort to explain what cut of meat she wanted, and why she wanted it, mentioned that she ate her beef cooked rare. "Rare?" he repeated. "Rare? Vat ish dat? O, yes; I know. Ra-a-re—very seldom."

The Italian Parliament has ordered a monument to Victor Emmanuel at a cost of $1,300,000.

WORTH KNOWING.

How the House Fly, the Wicked Flea and the Mosquito May All be Put to Flight.

[From Harper's Bazar.]

The pyrethrum roseum, or "Persian camomile," is the powdered leaf of a harmless flower growing in Caucasian Asia in great profusion, where for centuries it has been used to rid the natives of insects. With a finely-prepared dust made from these flowers, which can be purchased of almost any reliable druggist at about 70 cents a pound, the house fly, the wicked flea and the mosquito may be put to flight or to rest. In order to enjoy this delicious riddance, it is only necessary to heap up with a little cone one teaspoonful of the drug pyrethrum, touch it with a lighted match and watch the thin blue line of smoke as it rises to the ceiling and is wafted through the air, changing the busy drone of insect life into a weak wail of insect woe. Pretty soon down they come plump on to the table and over your paper spin on their tiny backs and then sheathe their lancets, curl up their hair-like legs, and interest one no more. Up stairs the little ones sleep unmolested, though there are thousands of mosquitoes in the room; the pests are sick unto death, and cling sadly to the walls, too feeble to think of tapping the rich, warm blood that glows in ruddy little limbs just below; the fume of the pyrethrum has settled their business, and while it lingers in the room outsiders are unwilling to make an entry, though the windows are raised and the lattices only half closed. Gauze bars are hot, stuffy things at best, and one must be sadly driven to attempt to sleep under such a cover; then, as we all know, the mosquito always finds his way through, no matter how carefully one may tuck up its folds about the couch.

Smoke from the Persian camomile or its dusty powder we have found most efficacious, and your readers will bless me when once they try it. The purity of the drug must be assured. This can readily be tested. It must have a bright buff color; be light, readily burned, and give a pleasant, tea-like fragrance; one pinch should kill a dozen flies, confined in a bottle, at once. When it fails of these properties it has been adulterated. In common use, in large or breezy rooms, where, from great dilution, it fails to kill, it nevertheless produces on insect life, through its volatilized essential oil or resin, undoubted nausea, vertigo, respiratory spasms, and paralysis. It acts upon them through the minute spiracles, the breathing tubes, that stud the surface of their little bodies, and from the delicate network of veins in their tiny wings. To human beings it is, so far as I can ascertain, entirely innoxious, and not disagreeable. That we—a family of eight persons, infants and adults—have lived for several weeks in an atmosphere of pyrethrum dust and smoke combined, during this present summer, is sufficient proof of my statement. To the skeptic I recommend an interesting experiment: Puff the pyrethrum into a close, warm room, where flies most love to swarm, just after dark, shut the door, and make another visit in thirty minutes. The sight of seeing millions of dead and squirming vermin on the floor will do his heart good—that is, if he is human and not an angel.

Having drafted our plan of battle against these little foes, it becomes proper to speak of the care of the wounded. To cure mosquito stings, I know nothing better than a 20-per-cent. solution in either oil or water of pure carbolic acid. This is to be rubbed well on the painful spot. To bathe one's tingling hands and smarting limbs with this solution gives a cooling, grateful sensation that is hard to describe. Carbolic soap will do almost as well, or an ointment compounded of carbol, camphor and cosmoline.

An Incident.

It is hard, we know, to obey the command to "overcome evil with good." But what has been done can be done, and the story of a woman's goodness overcoming a bad boy, who had severely wounded her, will illustrate it.

She was an English woman, a member of a sisterhood devoted to nursing the sick. The district in which "Sister Dora," as she was called, sought to do good responded to her efforts by petty annoyances and rough persecutions.

The rude, reckless men exhibited their irreligious Protestantism by hatred of the Roman Catholics. The false report that the sisterhood belonged to the Church of Rome—they were members of the Church of England—roused their ire.

Late one evening, as Sister Dora was walking through the town, a boy called out, "There goes one of those Sisters of Misery!" and threw a stone which cut open her forehead.

In the course of a few days this boy was brought into the hospital. He had been severely injured in a coal pit. "That's my man!" exclaimed Sister Dora, recognizing him. She was appointed his nurse, and bestowed upon him more than usual attention. One night she found him crying.

"Sister," he said, with many sobs, "I threw that stone at you."

"Oh," she replied, with gentle voice, "did you think I did not know that? Why, I knew it the minute you came in at the door."

"What!" exclaimed the astonished boy, "you knew me and have been nursing me like this?"

It was the first time he had ever had the slightest experience in receiving good for evil. The impression her conduct made must have been lasting in some way for good upon that boy's mind and heart.—Youth's Companion.

Mirth.

There is a large class of people who deem the business of life far too weighty and momentous to be made light of, who would leave merriment to children and laughter to idiots, and who hold that a joke would be as much out of place on their lips as on a gravestone or in a ledger. Surely it cannot be requisite to a man's being in earnest that he should wear a perpetual frown. Is there less of sincerity in nature during her gambols in spring than during the stiffness and harshness of her wintry gloom? And is it, then, altogether impossible to take up one abode with truth, and to let all sweet, homely feelings grow about it and cluster around it, and to smile upon it as a kind father or mother, and to sport with it, and hold light and merry talk with it, as with a loved brother or sister; and to fondle it, and play with it, as with a child? No otherwise did Socrates and Plato commune with truth; no otherwise Cervantes and Shakspeare.

INDIANA NEWS.

Several South Bend capitalists have formed a company for the construction of a street railway.

A drug clerk of Vincennes took a light into a cellar to draw some spirits of nitre from a carboy, and his head is now swathed in bandages.

The family residence of Holly Austin, eighteen rooms, with contents, three miles northwest of Madison, burned recently. Loss, $4,500; insurance, $2,500.

There have been 179 car-loads of watermelons shipped from Vallonia, Jackson county, this season, the largest number ever shipped in any one season.

Mr. Allen Nichols, a resident of Lawrence county, ran into his house near Fayetteville, speechless, and remained so until next morning, when he died.

Jefferson Davis, of Windfall, Tipton county, while hauling logs near that place, passed on a small bridge, which broke down, precipitating the log on Mr. Davis, killing him instantly.

A little daughter of Charles Lair, of Connersville, was relieved of an alleged catarrh by the extraction of a locust pad an inch long from her nostril, where it had resided for a year.

A son of William Franklin, of Clay township, Owen county, was buried ten days ago. Since then another son and a daughter have died, and two other daughters are not expected to live. The death of each seems to be from natural causes, but no two alike.

A gang of pickpockets surrounded Mrs. Wm. McLane, at the Montgomery County Fair, and snatched her fine gold watch. She, being a large, muscular lady, held fast to the leader of the mob and procured his arrest. The watch, however, was not recovered.

A shooting-match for a beef was being held at the farm-house of a Mr. Meridias, at Maxville, Greene county, when a young man by the name of Newton shot a little girl who passed in front of his aim, the rifle-ball penetrating her bowels, killing her almost instantly.

The official programme for laying the corner-stone of the new State House on the 28th is published. The introductory address will be by Commissioner Thomas A. Morris; oration by Gov. Hendricks; original poem by Mrs. Sarah T. Bolton; laying of the stone by Gov. Williams, and benediction by Bishop Talbott.

Fire was discovered in the rear of John Harper's restaurant, at Marion, the other night, which was soon destroyed. The fire spread to F. M. Holmes' hardware store, and a three-story brick building, adjoining, destroying the hardware store, and greatly damaging the brick building. Total loss, $6,000; insured for $4,000. It is not known how the fire originated.

Father Blake, a traveling evangelist, was adjudged insane at Greensburg last week, and the court ordered that a guardian should be selected. The eccentric old gentleman is wealthy, highly educated, and spends his time driving over the country, painting scriptural injunctions and advice upon fences, unused walls, and in other ways calling the attention of the ungodly to the great cause he espouses.

A circus elephant being transported over one of the Indiana railroads, the other day, in a car next to the tender, became thirsty, and exhausted the locomotive's supply, compelling the engineer to stop and fill up again. The engineer did not submit to fate until the elephant had opened his trunk and fired several bucketfuls of water at him.

A young lady of Rushville was taken quite ill a few days ago, and since that time has passed into a peculiar state. When spoken to she stares at you and seems to partially recognize you, but her pallid and careworn look is one of the most expressive ever seen. When food is placed before her she refuses to eat while anyone is near her, but when alone she will eat as hearty a meal as she ever did; she will read and enjoy herself seemingly as contented as she ever did, if no one is in the room to attract her attention.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$7 00	@10 25
Hogs	5 50	@ 7 50
Cotton	11⅜	@ 12
Flour—Superfine	3 25	@ 4 10
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 05	@ 1 06
Corn—Ungraded	50	@ 52
Oats—Mixed Western	40	@ 43
Rye—Western	95	@ 96
Pork—Mess	15 50	@15 75
Lard	8⅛	@ 8½
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	5 00	@ 5 45
Cows and Heifers	2 40	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	4 25	@ 4 60
Hogs	3 90	@ 5 70
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50	@ 5 75
Good to Choice Spring Ex	4 25	@ 5 00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	92	@ 93
No. 3 Spring	83	@ 84
Corn—No. 2	40	@ 41
Oats—No. 2	30	@ 31
Rye—No. 2	84	@ 85
Barley—No. 2	74	@ 75
Butter—Choice Creamery	29	@ 30
Eggs—Fresh	15	@ 16
Pork—Mess	17 75	@18 00
Lard	7⅞	@ 8
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	97	@ 1 04
No. 2	92	@ 93
Corn—No. 2	39	@ 40
Oats—No 2	30	@ 31
Rye—No. 1	82	@ 83
Barley—No. 2	73	@ 74
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	92	@ 93
Corn—Mixed	38	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	29	@ 30
Rye	85	@ 86
Pork—Mess	16 25	@16 50
Lard	7⅞	@ 8
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	94	@ 97
Corn	44	@ 45
Oats	33	@ 34
Rye	92	@ 93
Pork—Mess	15 75	@16 00
Lard	7⅞	@ 8
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	96	@ 97
No. 2 Red	97	@ 98
Corn—No. 2	43	@ 44
Oats—No. 2	33	@ 34
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	4 75	@ 5 00
Wheat—No. 1 White	98	@ 99
Corn—No. 1	46	@ 48
Oats—Mixed	34	@ 35
Barley (per cental)	1 25	@ 1 85
Pork—Mess	16 50	@16 75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	92	@ 93
Corn	40	@ 41
Oats	30	@ 32
Pork—Clear	15 75	@16 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 50	@ 4 75
Fair	4 00	@ 4 25
Common	3 25	@ 3 50
Hogs	5 10	@ 5 75
Sheep	3 25	@ 4 75

Children CRY FOR Pitcher's Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

MINNESOTA CHIEF

BEST THRESHER ON WHEELS

Is not a Vibrator nor an Apron Machine. Is wonderfully simple and admirably perfect in its threshing and separating qualities. Saves all the grain, and cleans it ready for market. Runs easily, is constructed durably, is finished beautifully, is the most economical, least expensive, and most satisfactory machine in the market. Will handle wet grain as well as dry. Has no equal in threshing flax and timothy, threshing and cleaning both as well and nearly as rapidly as wheat, and requires no change except the sieves. Has more square feet of separating and cleaning surface than any other machine made, and can not be overloaded. Is both over- and under-blast. Our CLOVER HULLING ATTACHMENT is new and very desirable. Does the work more rapidly and better than an exclusively Hulling Machine.

SEPARATORS of the various sizes fitted for Steam or Horse Power, as desired.

An Improved Pitts Power, an Improved Woodbury Power, and the Elward Equalizing Power, all mounted on four wheels, are manufactured by us, and are not surpassed by any in the market.

We are also prepared to furnish first-class Portable Engines with our Separators.

For Price-List and Circulars, address

SEYMOUR, SABIN & CO.

Manufacturers, Stillwater, Minn.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Mfg Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

Book for the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Woman, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhoea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 500 pages, and over 100 illustrations. [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY [illegible]

DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS. Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons.

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 18, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

[illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

[illegible]

From a Druggist.

[illegible]

HENDRICKS ON GARFIELD.

The Vice President De Jure Dissects Gen. Garfield as a Visiting Statesman.

Out of His Own Mouth the Republican Candidate Convicted of Manipulating Election Returns.

Text of Gov. Hendricks' Great Speech at Indianapolis.

MY FELLOW-CITIZENS: When I ate my breakfast this morning I had no thought of addressing my fellow-Democrats and other citizens of the city of Indianapolis this evening. But on reading the Indianapolis Journal I found that the proprietor of that paper had called my personal veracity in question. I have nothing to say to the subordinate writer of that paper; I choose to hold the proprietor of that paper responsible for what appears in it. What I shall say to-night will be mainly in reply to that article. I shall expect the owner of that paper, with whom I am on personally good terms, to be the gentleman to-morrow morning to see to it that this reply is as fully reported in that paper for his readers as his calumny of this morning was. I shall see that a copy of my remarks which I submit to you is presented to that paper for publication. I now challenge, before the citizens of this great city who support that paper, that it shall appear. A month nearly ago I made a speech at Marion, in this State, and in the course of that speech I spoke of the very questionable connection that James A. Garfield, the candidate of the Republican party, had with the great Presidential fraud of 1876-7. I spoke of his connection as one double in its character, and worse than that of any other man now living. I spoke of him in connection with the preparation of the case at New Orleans for his party, and in connection with the fraudulent examination of it at Washington; and in that double respect I considered him more responsible for the great outrage upon the American ballot than any other living man. May I call your attention very briefly to the article as it appeared in the Journal:

"Mr. Hendricks, in his opening speech of the campaign at Marion, used the following language referring to his nomination." Then follows an abstract of my speech that I made: "This is a specific charge of corruption against Gen. Garfield. Assuming, to begin with, that the election of Hayes was fraudulent, an assumption which, as a lawyer, Mr. Hendricks must know is not only unwarrantable but false, he asserts that Gen. Garfield 'had more to do with it than any other man.' Proceeding to specify, Mr. Hendricks asserts that Gen. Garfield went to New Orleans as a partisan, 'without authority of law,' as if any law were necessary to authorize a man to go to New Orleans, and that while there he took charge of the returns from West Feliciana parish, and, 'in one of the inner rooms of Packard's Custom House,' manipulated the returns, and prepared affidavits and interrogatories to make out a case. If this could be substantiated, Gen. Garfield would be disgraced. Unless Mr. Hendricks can substantiate the charge he is disgraced. He offered no proof of the charge in his Marion speech, and has offered none since. He cannot produce any. The charge is unsupported by any evidence worthy of belief. On this point we call attention to the following letter, which we have just received from D. J. M. A. Jewett, formerly of New Orleans, now of White Oaks, N. M."

If I don't this evening substantiate every material charge, I will ask no man to vote against James A. Garfield. Every single charge, the substance of every charge, I will make good to the intelligence of this great audience to-night, and you shall be the jury; and, if I do, then the Journal has said in advance that Garfield is disgraced. What did I say, gentlemen? I said that Garfield went to New Orleans immediately after the election four years ago; that he participated in manipulating the evidence and preparing the case for the Returning Board, and that, upon the evidence which he and others thus prepared, the Returning Board made a return against the men that were elected for the men that were not elected—that is the charge. I wish to dispose of one witness that the Journal introduces first, and I will not occupy much of your time in that task. His name is D. J. M. A. Jewett. He writes a letter from New Mexico. My speech was made here in the central part of Indiana a good while ago, and no response is made upon any of these questions by the Journal until now, and it is suggested upon this letter of Jewett's, written from some place in New Mexico. Isn't it remarkable that Jewett in New Mexico is the only man that can throw light upon this transaction, which took place in the presence of the nation of 45,000,000 of the people? Where are the other visitors of the Republican party that went down and helped Garfield to do that terrible work of iniquity at New Orleans? A dozen of them went down, and they were closely united in all their business. The Journal says that I produced no evidence to support the charge. Oh! you had better read the speech again. In that speech I gave the document and the page of the document where Garfield's own oath convicted him of every charge I made against him. First, a little while about this witness. I beg your pardon, he is not heard of for the first time; he was down in New Orleans, and it seems that was the place where Republicans of his sort did congregate. This witness says that "Gen. Garfield and his associates conducted themselves with rare discretion. For example, Gen. Garfield and myself never met in Louisiana. It is manifest that had he desired to exert any influence in the preparation of the Republican case he would have sought, necessarily, first of all, my own private office." I don't know about that. I don't know whether he would have sought him or not; but in that letter you will observe that Jewett undertakes to say, in sentiment and substance, that Garfield did not call upon him while down there; therefore, he observed great discretion while down there. That I would not question, but I will read you, gentlemen, from this man's own testimony before the committee of Congress. This same man that the Journal cites as authority in this case gave his evidence before the committee, composed of Democrats and Republicans, and in that testimony he gives the reason why he did not see Garfield and the other visiting statesmen. I will read it to you:

"Question—About that time were the visiting statesmen down there? Answer—Yes.

"Q. Did you have anything to do with them? A. No, sir; nothing whatever.

"Q. Why not? A. I did not care to.

"Q. They were members high in the Republican party, and high in the councils of the nation, and you were Secretary of the Republican Election Committee, and were cognizant of all the facts—what was there in the character of this or any circumstances which made a repulsion and kept you and these visiting statesmen apart? A. Nothing that I know of, but my duties did not bring me in contact with those gentlemen. As we always had a Coroner's inquest held over us after every election, I cared to know as little as possible.

"Q. Mr. Butler—You purposely avoided meeting with the visiting statesmen lest you might know too much of what was going on. Is that it? A. Without casting any reflections upon them, yes."

The witness swears that he avoided knowing anything that those visiting statesmen were doing because he did not want to know what was going on there, as he would probably have to answer under investigation afterward. So I will spend no more time upon that witness. Now for Mr. Garfield himself, and he gave his testimony before this same committee under oath:

"Q. Did you visit New Orleans in the month of November, 1876? A. I did.

"Q. What time in the month did you go? A. I think it was about the 14th day of November that we arrived at New Orleans."

The 14th day of November was immediately after the Presidential election of 1876, and he was there with John Sherman, he was there with Kelley, of Pennsylvania, and many others whose names I will not delay you to repeat, and from the one in his testimony he says that they left New Orleans to return to Washington city on the 1st day of December. So you will observe that James A. Garfield was at New Orleans, reaching there about a week after the Presidential election, and staying there eighteen days. What did he do while there? I charge—and the Journal says, if it is supported, he is a disgraced man—I charge that he occupied an inner room of the Custom House, assigned to him, and him alone, and in that room he saw witnesses, black and white, of Louisiana, and he conversed with them alone, and, when their testimony was not made out satisfactorily to him, he suggested interrogatories that should be put to them, and those interrogatories went to the Returning Board, and that Returning Board made a report against the men that were elected. That is what I charge. I say to you I will make it to you to-night by his own evidence. What does the Journal say to me? That I have furnished no respectable evidence, when I have referred by page and document to the sworn testimony of Garfield himself. What did he do? First, gentlemen, I said that they distributed parishes among these visiting statesmen, and that in the distribution of the parishes for investigation and manipulation, the parish of West Feliciana fell to James A. Garfield. I will read what he swore to, and after to-night it shall not be before the intelligence of Indiana what Hendricks said, but the question now shall be what Garfield said. In his answer to a question, he says: "Thereupon, in order to make our work of examination and our knowledge of the case as full as possible, the suggestion was adopted that all the testimony relating to one parish be given to one man, and the testimony relating to another parish should be given to another man. Among the parishes that were contested were the parishes of Feliciana, and I believe that Mr. Sherman assigned these parishes to Mr. Parker and myself, saying that we could divide them between us as we chose. I suggested to Mr. Parker to take his choice. He took East Feliciana; I took West Feliciana."

"Q. What did you take it for?"

I will give the answer of that pregnant question, and, when it is answered, the Journal says that the man that the Republicans have upon their banner for candidate is a disgraced man.

"A. I mean by that to say that I took the copies of all the official papers which were delivered to the Returning Board, touching the election in West Feliciana and for convenience of examining these papers, as I did not reside at the St. Charles Hotel, I occupied a room at the Custom House in the corner of the building."

This is coming close up to Garfield and closer to the Journal.

"I don't know now whose room it was; it was a room not very much used; I think it was one of the private offices, perhaps of the Collector himself."

You recollect who was Collector, don't you? It was Packard that was running for Governor, and that could not hold his office, although he got 1,000 more votes than Hayes, who got the vote of Louisiana.

Gentlemen, what do you say to the proposition which I made in my speech a month ago—that Garfield went to Louisiana as a partisan; that he occupied one of the rooms of the Custom House for the purpose of making up the evidence for the Returning Board'; but we will go a good deal further than that. This question that I make to-night is not to a subordinate writer on the Journal. I repeat, it is to John C. New, owner of the paper, and the Chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Indiana. It is John C. New that I shall brand if he does not place my answer as prominently in his paper to-morrow morning as the article in the Journal this morning.

Where was this room in the Custom House? I said this was an inner room, and propose to prove that by Garfield himself.

"Q. Where did you converse with her, that is a negro woman, Emily Mitchell? A. In a private office in the Custom House.

"Q. One of Gov. Kellogg's rooms? A. No, sir; in one of Mr. Packard's rooms in the Custom House.

"Q. Who was there besides you two? A. I don't think there was anybody else present when she was there.

"Q. Who brought her to the room? A. I can't say; somebody brought her there. I think she had a little child in her arms. She sat down, and I asked her to tell me the story of her husband's death, with all the particulars, and told her that all I wanted to know was the exact truth about it.

"Q. Was there a door-keeper to the room? A. I think there was nobody by at all.

"Q. But was there any door-keeper outside the door? A. That I don't know.

"Q. Do you remember that there was a door-keeper for that room? A. That door communicated with another room; there was no door into the hall; I think that door communicated with the next room, which communicated with the hall."

Was it an inner room or not, gentlemen? That is what Garfield swears to. The Journal says it is not true. That is between Garfield and the Journal, and between them I would not know which to believe.

"Q. So she did go from a hall into that other room before she would get into the room where you were? A. Yes."

I take it that the question of the inner room is a settled question.

"Q. Was that door, leading from the outer door into this, open or shut? A. I don't know.

"Q. Who occupied the outer room at the time? A. There were several Custom House clerks who had desks behind a sort of railing."

A very little more, gentlemen, about these rooms:

"Q. In that inner room was there anybody beside yourself? A. Nobody."

He was asked whether there was anybody in that inner room but himself, and he says no. Not that there was no inner room, but there was nobody in the inner room but himself. Some of the men who were getting up statements about other parishes came in there, but the room was assigned to him. There you have it—an inner room reached only by passing through another room from the public hall, and that inner room was assigned to James A. Garfield, and he occupied it and received the witnesses there, as I will proceed to prove. So the question, What did he do in the inner room? and that question was asked him under oath.

"Q. What did you do? A. I took all those papers, commencing with the protest, and then read them carefully and made a careful brief of their contents, giving the summary of each witness in my own way, as I would if I were a lawyer in the case."

